SAVE AND SELL TO US FILM CANS AND CORES

PROMPT return of Eastman motion-picture film cans and cores is urgently needed. They must be used over and over again, if film production requirements are to be met. The supply of metal and plastics for making new cans and cores has been sharply curtailed by increasing war needs.

Help maintain the supply of motion-picture film by seeing to it that all Eastman cans and cores are kept in good condition, collected, and shipped to the Kodak Park Works, Rochester, N. Y.

LESSON IN ADULTERY

A SPECIMEN of the order of judgment and quality of guidance which now obtains in some areas of the public school system of this hectic era is afforded in an item from the columns of Motion Picture Daily, which reports:

"The sixth performance of the season for high school children of a legitimate stage play was announced yesterday by Alfred Harding, chairman of the central control board of the New York City School Theatre program. A matinee performance of 'Angel Street', June 4th, will be made available to students at 10 cents."

"Angel Street" is a bitter melodrama, laden with shock and psychological twists and turns. It contains one sequence on adultery, an interlewd, as it were. There is, too, a considerable spicing of murder, also a portrayal of a method of driving a victim mad. The play is very well performed, indeed. On Broadway such drama is one thing, and as cultural pabulum for the young, and under educational auspices, it is quite another thing.

SERVICE by ENTERTAINMENT

MR. JAMES SHELLEY HAMILTON of the National Board of Review set out the other day to see what some leading directors would have to say about what they thought the screen should be doing in wartime. Here are the answers he got:

PRESTON STURGES—"I don't think there should be the slightest difference in the type of pictures made. The contemporary picture naturally deals with its time, which means contemporary pictures will now have heroes. . . . I'm certain, however, that a picture laid in 1906 would be just as interesting, and the same goes for a picture laid in the year 1690. . . . "

ERNEST LUBITSCH—"In this present crisis the leaders . . . have to take into consideration not only what the public wants to see but what an audience should see. . . . We must have a sufficient number of escapist pictures . . . which will relieve the defense workers and the soldier on vacation from the present-day grim realities. . . . "

ARCHIE MAYO—" . . . In my humble opinion, I believe motion pictures can best serve our fighting men and our civilians by building up morale to the tune of comedies, which, for a moment, give us contrast to this grim crisis that is upon us. . . . "

Apparently these showmen consider the theatre primarily an institution of entertainment, and service by entertainment.

PROFESSIONAL JOB

"WINNING YOUR WINGS", a ten-minute Victory Film, starring Mr. James Stewart, produced by Warner Brothers and released by the War Activities Committee through Warner exchanges, is a hit, and a success of an order not common among shorts.

This little picture with the big appeal is now playing its first runs in metropolitan areas and is getting more word-of-mouth approval than the features on the same bills.

In contrast with some of the mediocre product that has come to the screen in the name of war effort, this picture, with its keen professional quality and demonstration of the special skills of Hollywood, may be cited to the array of semi-professionals and amateurs variously engaged in war picture making under various government auspices.

MAILING LIST MISHAP

HERE, last week, comment was made on the fact that all businesses, which seemed to include the motion picture, had received, from the Office of Price Administration, forms and demands for extremely exhaustive reports, quarterly, on all manner of detail, conspicuously beyond any prior federal inquiry, including the Department of Internal Revenue.

Now, after asking, Mr. Francis L. Burt, Washington correspondent for the Herald, is informed, he reports: " . . . there has been considerable confusion. . . . Since the motion picture industry is exempt from price control by specific provision of the law, such reports are not desired from film companies. . . . If any motion picture companies have received the forms and notify the OPA that they have received them, a written reply will inform them that they are exempt."

Many such forms and inquiries were received by motion picture corporations, in various branches of the industry.

FASHION GOES WEST

FOR long and ever, Lady Hollywood has been a slave of Paris. She and her acolytes of fashion had to fuss and strive in an endless struggle of anticipation to guess six months ahead what the styles might be when the picture should be released.

Now, somewhat as World War I gave Hollywood world dominance over the screen by shutting down the studios of Britain and the Continent, World War II is making Hollywood the capital of the fashion world.

Grey days and the curse of occupation have fallen on the Rue de la Paix and the Place du Dome in the Paris-that-was, where fashion artists and fashion reporters from New York, and the rest of the world, too, gathered to see and sketch in painful care and panting haste each whimsy, pleat, ruffle, tuck and flounce and curve and angle that Poiret, Cheruit and Worth and the likes of them had decreed for the season.

Now the fashion news is from this side. The other day eleven Hollywood designers brought a group of seventy models to an "American Viewpoint" show at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. The list includes such names as Travis Banton, Jack Houston, Edward Stevenson, Vera West.

Incidentally, it is Hollywood's notion that the girls must use bows for fastenings, now that WPB has taken over zippers for the war. War is certainly hell.

Radio Spots a Customer

THE RADIO industry thinks it would be a fine thing if the motion picture industry branched out to the airwaves with a regular institutional program to advertise its wares.

Seizing upon recent discussions of the subject by the industry's Unity Program committees, and in the new councils of public relations directors, east and west, and comments from individuals high in the industry, the sales staff in National Broadcasting's "new business" promotion division on the Coast is reported very busy whipping up ideas into prospectus shape for submission to big wigs of the film industry.

The radio networks share wholeheartedly, it was indicated, in the recent expression by Colonel H. A. Cole, Texas showman and Allied leader, of his belief that the star values of Hollywood entertainment, now selling soaps, cereals, and whatnots, should also be used to sell the screen. They would like to work out a program suitable for all-industry sponsorship—at a price, of course.

However, the radio men at the same time want to keep as customers the cereal and soap makers who now use Hollywood talent. So the negotiations move softly, and are described officially as being "in nebulous form." To date there have been a series of preliminary discussions between NBC in Hollywood and persons in the film industry, some of them high in both promotion councils. The object, NBC said, is to determine the extent of interest of the industry as a whole, or of a single company, in a network show to be conducted as institutional promotion for screen entertainment.

SOS for Cameramen

CAMERAMEN for the front lines, and the many other varied motion picture activities of the nation's armed services are in heavy demand. Cameramen's unions in California and New York report that the Army Signal Corps, Air Corps and the U. S. Coordinator of Information have all filed urgent requests for the enlistment of skilled motion picture photographers. Additionally, with the Navy and Marine corps, they are training their own recruits at schools in the California studios and in New York at the studio of March of Time.

However, one union agent, W. A. Lang, business agent of the International Photographers of the Motion Picture Industries, Local 644, IATSE in New York reported that while the calls for cameramen were plentiful the actual assignments to service, as civilian specialist or members of the armed forces, had been slow in coming. Over 100 of his union members are waiting, it was reported, with cameras cocked, to do their part for the nation's service.

Tax Footage, Too

DEPUTY county tax assessors around Hollywood have begun their annual canvassing of studios' secured and unsecured property, including negative and positive film footage, for the annual tax rolls of Los Angeles County. The greater the footage in a producers' film vault, the higher the tax. All negative and positive footage in the county limits when the checking started, is liable to taxation, as well as real and personal property.

Studios are liable to county, city and school taxes, plus special levies, such as assessment districts, flood control districts and the like, depending upon the areas in which they are located.

For instance, last year's rate for property located in Tax District No. 1, Los Angeles city, was $5.647 per $100 assessed valuation.

The final tax rate must be set by law by the first Monday of September.

Deeper Dimming

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA'S coast is suffering a "creeping dimout." Within the next two weeks, but gradually, lights are to be shaded, dimmed, and in some instances extinguished. Dimout of the coast from Santamaria to the Mexican border was announced Friday night, May 22d, after a meeting of officials from 50 communities to be affected.

Under the Office of Civilian Defense's publicized intent to avoid disrupting business and the public's peace of mind, gradual application was voted, and specific orders were withheld over the weekend, during which entertainment enterprises operated normally. The order was first enforced Monday night. State highway police detoured some coastal motor traffic; and, in instances, ordered use of parking headlights only.

Tuesday, the Los Angeles police authorized air raid wardens to enforce OCD orders in all sections visible from the ocean. Newspapers printed lists of such places.

The gradual application, plus long education of the public in protective methods, will lessen impact of the dimout on theatre business greatly, it was hoped.

Objection!

INADEQUACIES in the consent decree's arbitration rules were sharply criticized this week by a San Francisco arbitrator. Donovan O. Peters, who heard the fourth San Francisco case, a clearance complaint by the Piedmont theatre, in a letter to J. Noble Braden, executive director of the American Arbitration Association, listed what he believed were the principal shortcomings of the decree.

Mr. Peters asserted that the access to the Appeals Board, and presentation there of new arguments was too easy. The board, he declared, in effect supplants the arbitrator, rather than acts in a true appellate function. It rules, he said, on a transcript, which cannot carry many of the considerations and local factors which an arbitrator takes into account in passing an award. He also declared the arbitration sections of the decree were in need of more careful definition.

Mr. Peters' award, which granted a reduction in clearance to the Piedmont was reversed by the Appeal Board.

Moon Stays On

"THE MOON IS DOWN," John Steinbeck's play about life under the Nazis in Norway, and the story property which went to 20th Century-Fox last month for a record purchase price of $300,000, remained on the boards of New York's Martin Beck theatre this week. Set to close last Saturday, after a relatively brief stay of six weeks, the play continued on for at least another fortnight after the cast agreed to new contracts with Jules Leventhal, the manager, and after Mr. Steinbeck had accepted a 50 per cent cut in royalties.

The author himself was meanwhile occupied with a project for chronicling the drama of the U. S. Army Air Corps through the quadruple media of book, motion picture, radio and television. The Steinbeck writing project, surrounded with military hush-hush, was reported to contemplate a history of the lives of a bomber crew. Mr. Steinbeck, it was said, plans to trace their careers separately until they meet in the cabin of a B-17 bound on an adventurous military mission. That would provide the smash climax.

From the Steinbeck original the story would then be adapted for book, motion picture, radio and television circulation, with Mr. Steinbeck collaborating. He said he would devote full time to the project, not participating in 20th Century-Fox's production of "The Moon Is Down."

War Casualty

AFTER 45 years ballyhooing first run pictures and shows along Broadway with large and ingenious electric designs, the Artcraft Strauss Corporation on June 30th ends sign construction, and must depend for income upon maintenance—if any—of signs allowed to remain, unlit.

The company's latest sign, and probably its last, according to Benjamin Strauss, is that above the Astor theatre, heralding "This Above All," in greatly dimmed letters.

However, with police and military authorities dissatisfied this week with the dimout, Mr. Strauss emphasized that operation of the huge sign was on a day-to-day basis. He added that construction of signs had ended, not because the war-around-New York had decreed semi-darkness, but because metal would not be allowed in new signs henceforth.

How Many Radios

THE United States has 425 radio receiving sets per thousand of population compared with 62 sets per thousand for the Axis countries, the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee was told this week by Frank E. Mullen, vice president of the National Broadcasting Company.

Appearing before the committee to testify on the Sanders bill for reorganization of the FCC, Mr. Mullen, in a series of colored slides exhibited in the darkened committee room, illustrated the broadcasting structure, the placement of stations in the United States and the services rendered by radio.

Comparing American broadcasting with radio abroad, Mr. Mullen told the committee, "A free radio supported by private enterprise, free from Government subsidy or ownership, is one of our democratic bulwarks. A combination of science, art and sound business management has given to the public and American business a national broadcasting service without equal.

"Had it not been for the war we would now find ourselves in one of the most important technical developments in radio history," he said.

"We were on the verge of new services and a new industry through the wider use of the ultra high frequencies in the fields of television, frequency modulation and facsimile. These new services are certain to exert a revolutionary influence upon our social and economic life in years to come and will raise problems vastly greater than any problem which may exist in radio today."

Holding the Audience

RADIO, facing an uncertain and restricted future, this week took comfort from one good item to appear on its home front: it has avoided the customary drop in listeners which usually accompanies the first two weeks of later daylight, arriving in May. The index of C. E. Hooper, Inc., research organization, showed a drop of only half a point from 28.8 per cent in April to 28.3 in May, as contrasted with a drop from 32.8 to 25.5 last year. The total May audience was 11 per cent higher than last year, it was reported.

The National Broadcasting Company announced last week that many commercial programs would remain through the summer, despite the war, which has shortened and eliminated some programs. Among those continuing are "Information, Please," Rudy Vallee-John Barrymore, Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge," "Telephone Hour," "Voice of Firestone," "Cities Service Concert," Fred Waring's "Pleasure Time," "Johnny Presents," "Mr. District Attorney," "Hour of Charm," "Fitch Bandwagon" and "Ellery Queen."

Rationing the Fans

HOLLYWOOD, every day, learns of new streamlinings, new trimmings, new economic requirements necessary for the war effort. Now, even movie fans are to feel the new order in Hollywood, for it has been learned that they will probably have to get along without photographs of their favorite stars. Reason: Need to conserve film, photographic paper, and chemicals, a considerable saving if Hollywood ceases sending out some 20,000 pictures weekly.

The Eastman Kodak Company, largest supply source for photographic materials, in its June issue of Studio Light, a guide for comercial photographers, records the discontinuance of 23 types of sensitized papers, 18 types of film and plates. For the latter, substitutes are suggested; for the paper, none.

The company describes the dropped materials as less essential, and comments that its plants are occupied with production of materials "essential to war."

It also warns commercial photographers: "The metal spool from every roll of Kodak film you develop, must find its way back to Rochester."

Taxes for Circuits

AN OCCUPATIONAL tax calling for $10 for each unit operated by a circuit having no more than five houses within or without the state, and running as high as $150 for each theatre that is linked with a circuit of 800 or more houses within or without the state, is included in a "public policy" bill introduced into the Louisiana Legislature by Representative Max B. Blanchard, New Orleans. The bill also lists a separate schedule of taxation on each seat within a circuit theatre, depending on the number of units. The amount ranges from 4 cents per seat to 60 cents.

Under the declaration of policy, the proposal sets forth, "It is determined and declared by the Legislature of Louisiana that due to the advantages of management and booking, and the more universal coverage and results obtained from their advertising, theatres operated in multiple units enjoy an advantage over independently owned and operated theatres in the matter of taxation in this state to the extent that it is fit and proper that such theatres be separately classified for the purposes of taxation."

Sword and Buskin

WHAT can you do? The Government shortly will have asked that question of everybody, via mailed forms.

But, in more detailed fashion, and specifically for those in the amusement industry, the American Theatre Wing War Service, Inc., in three weeks will issue questionnaires to 20,000 actors, stagehands, mangers, and the like.

STUDIOS LOAD TRUCKS ON TRAINS; CUT LOCATION PLANS

Transportation Priorities New Managers' Worry; No Long Distance Plans

Hollywood has one of its greatest collective headaches in its history, with governmental orders curtailing transportation virtually hamstringing location work.

Some 50 pictures are set for extensive location work in the next three months, and production and transportation department managers are engaged in making extensive surveys into the possibilities of pooling all rubber borne vehicles in order to carry on the work.

That production trends may be influenced in the future by the government-ordered economies appears certain in the event location work is completely curtailed. More process shots will have to be used, and types of stories changed to prelude location work.

The extent to which studios are going to conserve tires was seen in the recent instance of the shipping by rail of a 20th Century-Fox sound truck to location at Phoenix at the Thunderbird Field there. Rather than make the 1,200 mile round trip on the truck's own tires, rail transportation was utilized for possibly the first time.

Twentieth Century-Fox has locations scheduled at Lake Louise, Canada, for "Springtime in the Rockies," in Utah for "My Friend Flicka," in South Dakota and Wyoming for "Sioux City," and in Nevada for "Ox Bow Incident." That is, the studio did until Joseph Eastman, war transportation director, ordered curtailment of tire usage.

MGM has a large location troupe in Northern California for location work on "Ox Train." Eighty actors and technicians were sent from Hollywood by train. Equipment was taken by truck but the vehicles will remain on location to bring it back.

Process Shots for RKO Navy Film

RKO, prevented from taking extensive pictures of the fleet in operation for "The Navy Comes Through," will utilize many feet of process shots. With no ocean locations possible under wartime rules, stock footage is being acquired from various libraries.

That studio is engaged in filming five more Tim Holt westerns on a ranch in San Fernando Valley, necessitating a round trip of 60 miles daily. The rush is to get the films completed before Holt joins the Army.

Pare Lorentz is doing extensive location work in Tennessee and North Carolina, as well as in Detroit and Chicago. His travel, however, is being done by train, with local trucks hired for the camera equipment.

A future headache for the studio will come up in October when "Grand Canyon" is filmed. The problem will be to transport the heavy Technicolor equipment to location. Much of the film will be shot outdoors.

Universal is in an excellent position for location work, most of its westerns and "Deep in the Heart of Texas," a high budget film of Texas in the Reconstruction Period, being taken on its back lot ranch.

When Warners takes its "The Desert Song" to Mexico and Arizona for outdoor shootings, much Technicolor equipment will have to be transported by such methods as are feasible at that time.

The "Now, Voyager" troupe now at Lake Arrowhead is being taken across the lake by boat, rather than by car and bus around the 20 mile circumference.

Columbia has a tremendous problem in its "The Pioneers," to be taken for the most part in Utah. The company and the equipment for the film, which will be shot in Technicolor, must be hauled by train to Cedar City. But the company will work 100 miles inland near the hamlet of Kanabe.

According to Charles Bigelow, production manager at Monogram, that studio has a complete self-sustaining western location ranch at Newhall, some 30 miles from Hollywood.

Prior to the order requiring transportation curtailment, Paramount had taken most of its location shots on "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The Hopalong Cassidy pictures are taken in most part at Dick Dickson's Bar 20 Ranch at Lone Pine, where accommodations are sufficient to house the entire company while shooting. Thus daily trips to and from the ranch are obviated.

Some Coney Island shots are required for "The Crystal Ball" and permission must be obtained from military authorities for shooting at one of the beach amusement parks. However, due to the "dim-out" order given last weekend, there cannot be any night shooting there.

Republic has "Call of the Canyon," "Sombrero Kid," "Commandos," "King of the Royal Mounted Strikes Again," "Frontier Days," and "The Flying Tigers" requiring extensive outdoor shooting coming up in the near future. "Commandos" requires much shooting at one of the beaches, where landing operations are to be filmed. Permission from military authorities must be obtained for this.

The new order on transportation will work a hardship on many actors who will have finished their work on location in two or three hours and then be compelled to wait until the rest of the company is taken back to the studio at the end of the day.

No More Limousines

Several unions, such as the actors', the hairdressers', directors', require first class transportation to and from work. "First class" transportation requires limousines, and should the use of limousines be further curtailed, a new dilemma would be created.

What probably will happen is that all studio location transportation may be by bus.

Hollywood Prepares to Cut Raw Stock; Reduce Output

Curtailment of raw film stock and other scarce materials, with eventual reduction of the number of pictures produced, was started in Hollywood this week, where a War Production Board curtailment order was thought probable within a few weeks. Studio and union officials met Tuesday night to discuss conservation of raw stock and other scarce materials.

Hollywood circles think the WPB may shortly forbid manufacture of films reels and containers.

The Tuesday night meeting, called at the invitation of Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount studio chieftain, and president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, resulted in formation of a committee representing all groups. It is to be known as the Motion Picture Film Conservation Committee for Hollywood, which is to meet weekly.

Conferees were reminded the WPB had decided, several weeks ago, to allow the industry to economize voluntarily. Every facet of the production line was represented. Cooperation was seen forthcoming from directors, cameramen, actors, cutters, and the like, in reducing the number of retakes and protection shots.

It is reported the WPB is emphasizing economy of raw stock; especially after comparing records of film consumption by large and small studios. The larger studios are said to have used inordinate amounts, even in instances where the final footage was the same.

Hollywood thought this week that the appointment of Harold Hopper, as head of the WPB's new photographic division, set production apart from distribution and exhibition.

THEATRE BUILDING STOPPED, MATERIALS TO BE RETURNED

New WPB Order Stops Amusement Construction; in Effect June 6th

Theatre construction has been ended by Government order, except under a few essential conditions, and materials on hand intended for building are to be returned for war use.

Foreshadowing a general tightening up on non-essential activities all along the line, the War Industries Board over the weekend ordered practically all amusement construction halted by June 6th.

The order applies to all types of amusement projects now under way, with the exception only of children's playgrounds, strictly temporary construction, construction costing less than $5,000 and building for which specific authorization has been or is granted.

It was indicated that authorizations for completion would be issued only for theatres in defense areas where the Government is attempting to provide housing, including recreational and amusement facilities, for large numbers of workers crowding into communities without such advanatges.

In announcing its order, the board pointed out that it was forecast a month ago when construction was placed under rigid control, when it was announced that a survey would be made of projects already under construction with a view to stopping them if the material and equipment to be used could be put to more effective use in the war program.

This week, the board said the amusement industry would not be the sole sufferer, but that other kinds of non-essential construction might be halted by subsequent orders.

WPB May Requistion Available Materials

In some instances where construction is stopped, the WPB will requisition the materials and equipment, in other cases it will assist owners to dispose of them by advising builders of essential projects of the availability of such equipment and material.

At the same time, the board served notice that no authorizations would be granted for non-essential construction, even though the applicants had all necessary materials on hand.

"Conservation Order L-41 was issued because the war requirements of the United States have created a shortage of materials for war production and construction," it was explained. "The construction bureau, which administers the order, points out that it is in the national interest to defer all construction which is not essential, directly or indirectly, to the successful prosecution of the war, and which involved the use of labor, material or equipment urgently needed in the war effort.

"In asking for authorization to begin construction prospective builders should appreciate that there is not enough material and equipment for both war production and for less essential use and that material which goes into non-essential building has to be allocated away from ships, planes, tanks, guns, war plants, war housing and other essential production."

WPB ADDS NEW FILM DIVISION

Add divisions of the War Production Board. This week, it's a Motion Picture and Photographic Section, under the board's Durable Goods Branch.

Its function, the board says in a statement, is to "handle problems in connection with the production of motion pictures, equipment for studios and theatres, movie supplies, including films, home movie equipment and supplies, and equipment and supplies for still photography."

Harold Hopper, of Hollywood, described by the board as "in the movie business for 20 years," heads the new section. He is president of the Cinema Mercantile Company, and the Fidelity Securities Corporation, Hollywood. The first company provides sets for films; the second is "an investment company which helps finance the production of movies." Mr. Hopper was formerly vice-president of Majestic Pictures, vice-president of the Darmour organization, and vice-president of Warren Doane Productions.

The halting of amusement building may have been due to the discovery of violations of the original L-41 order, it was rumored. Although definite details were lacking and board officials refused to comment, it was said that surveys had uncovered several construction jobs started in violation of the requirement that permission be secured in advance.

It was reported that the board had initiated surveys of construction in other lines to see whether violations were general, and that additional stop orders might be expected against other industries.

Reports reaching Washington said that the board had been apprised of theatre construction started after April 9 without reference to Washington first. It could not be ascertained, however, whether the owners of the projects comprised circuits or independent exhibitors.

Short, Interstate, Goes to War Board

Paul Short resigned as southern division manager for the Texas Interstate Circuit this week, and was to report Monday in Washington to the War Production Board, where he will assist Christopher J. Dunphy, in liaison duties between the board and the motion picture industry; particularly, in clearing requests by theatres for materials needed in construction and maintenance.

Mr. Short had applied for a Navy commission, and had expected to receive it shortly.

His unexpected appointment, reportedly made at the suggestion of many industry leaders, is said to pay $4,600 per year.

Mr. Short, chief barker of the Texas Variety Club, Tent 17, came to Interstate 12 years ago, from theatre work in Tennessee, Georgia and Florida. He is a native of North Carolina.

The Variety Club tendered Mr. Short a farewell stag party at the Adolphus Hotel, Dallas, Thursday night, May 21st.

Herman Gluckman Appointed to WAC

Herman Gluckman last week was appointed by George Schaefer, national chairman of the film industry's War Activities Committee, to assist the Coordinator, Francis Harmon, in the distribution of the so-called "Victory films." Mr. Gluckman was formerly franchise holder for Republic Pictures in New York and Philadelphia.

Schaefer on Manpower Conservation Committee

Cooperation with the War Production Board's drive to conserve manpower, was pledged last week by George Schaefer, president of RKO, and chairman of the film industry's War Activities Committee.

Mr. Schaefer will serve on the Publicity Co-operation Committee. The request came from W. A. Irwin of the United States Steel Corporation. Acceptances on the Committee have been made by Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Publisher, New York Times; Ben Hibbs, Editor, Saturday Evening Post; Niles Trammell, President, National Broadcasting Company; William Paley, President, Columbia Broadcasting System; and George H. McGraw, Publisher, McGraw-Hill Publications.

J. J. Milstein has completed his service as War Department consultant in distribution of war training films, and has returned to New York from Washington. He is arranging to renew activity in the film industry.

Conferring in Washington this week with War Production Board officials was William K. Hopkins, Columbia's director of industrial relations.

Tippett Joins Alliance

Ralph Tippett has resigned as manager of the Bartlestein circuit's Annetta theatre, Cicero, Ill., to become assistant booker of the Alliance Theatre Corporation, Chicago, where he will work under Pete Panagos, chief booker.

Gets Critic Post

Helen Detzel has taken over the theatre desk of the Cincinnati Times-Star, in Cincinnati, until the return of Groverman Blake, who has joined the Intelligence Department of the Government with the rank of first lieutenant.

DISTRIBUTORS WILL STAND BY UNITY; IGNORE 'ESCAPE' DATE

"Big Five" Let Opportunity for Release from Decree Pass; Lawyers Have Plan

The consenting distributors will stand fast by the Unity sales program as it nears completion.

Although the "escape clause," section XII of the consent decree, becomes effective on Monday, June 1st, each of the five distributor signatories to the decree indicated at mid-week that they will not go into Federal court to seek independent relief from the decree's blocks-of-five and trade show provisions. Legally, under the terms of the "escape clause," they are permitted to do so Monday, inasmuch as the Government has not succeeded in binding the "Little Three," Columbia, United Artists or Universal to a similar sales plan.

The Big Five however are pinning their hopes on the work of the United Motion Picture Industry, and its substitute selling proposal which would divide product into quarterly blocks-of-12. Rather than preparing to petition Federal Judge Henry Goddard at New York for relief from the decree's sales plan, as it was predicted they would do last winter, they are speeding work on the Unity proposals.

Work on the three main facets of the Unity trade practices plan meanwhile was described as "progressing." But spokesmen would not say how soon the selling formula, conciliation and arbitration proposals might be ready for submission to the Department of Justice at Washington.

Legal Phraseology Being Completed

Several committees of lawyers and exhibitor delegates were at work on each of the proposals. Their main task was to cast the principles already agreed upon by the UMPI sub-committees and Committee of the Whole into phraseology suitable for a formal amendment to the consent decree.

Attorneys close to the work expressed the belief that the trade practice program might be submitted to the government in parts, as each is ready.

Describing the sales plan as almost completed one attorney said that he expected it would be sent to Washington, or taken, as soon as it was ready. It is, he said, more urgent that it should be acted upon quickly. The arbitration and conciliation proposals can be worked over for a longer time without disturbing plans for selling product for the new season which starts on September 1st, he remarked.

A committee of distribution attorneys will probably submit the sales proposals in person to Robert Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General, and head of the Department of Justice's motion picture section. They will ask that the government then present it to Judge Henry W. Goddard, who signed the consent decree from the New York district federal bench, for incorporation in the document as a formal amendment.

WANTS PLAN WITH TEETH

The UMPI plan will not solve some of the worse ills and problems of the industry, in the opinion of Edwin Silverman, head of the Essaness Theatres circuit, Chicago. In a conversation recently, he warned that a trade practice code must carry enforcement authority.

"I am opposed to the present UMPI plan," he said, "but am in favor of unity within the industry if there is equity. I do not think there is equity in the present set-up of the plan which is not broad enough by any means. A plan should be adopted that has teeth in it, something to cure such ills that confront us in the business as giveaways and double and triple features. We live in a nation that is rationing sugar, tires and other things, yet we remain the only business with double and triple units."

Preparation of this formal draft of the trade practices plan was begun on Thursday by a committee of home office attorneys representing the five consenting distributors. They will cast the selling plan in proper phraseology as an amendment to the consent decree.

At the same time a group of exhibitor delegates to UMPI met at the office of Howard Levinson, Warner lawyer, to continue work on proposed changes in the arbitration system. The group included Colonel H. A. Cole, Ed Kuykendall, Robert White, Mr. Levinson and Robert Barton, independent exhibitor from Richmond, Va.

The attorneys, meeting in the office of Austin Keough, Paramount general counsel, included J. Robert Rubin, MGM, Joseph Hazen, Warners, Gordon Youngman, RKO and Felix Jenkins, 20th-Fox.

Washington Action Waits on Industry

In Washington, all developments with respect to the new Unity selling plan appeared this week to be centralized in the industry. Department of Justice officials said that no moves had been taken in the matter in Washington.

Not only has the plan not yet been formally submitted for Department scrutiny, but no film industry representatives have even dropped in for a discussion of it since the exhibitor group held an informal conference with Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General on May 16th.

In the absence of any representations from exhibitor groups, department officials said, no move could be made toward determining the attitude to be adopted toward proposals which have not been offered in definitive detail.

Assurance was given, however, that any interest would be heard on the subject when it comes before the department. It will be possible also for dissident groups to fight the plan if they desire to make an issue of it.

At the department it was said that it was not anticipated that failure to secure revision of the consent decree before the present plan expires would offer any serious problem, since it was doubtful if any distributor would adopt any plan out of line with the present set-up, in view of the probability that formal action would be taken in the immediate future.

Objections Sent to Department of Justice

Several objections are reported to have been registered with the department against the Unity plan however. They were said to have come from the New England Exhibitors, Inc., which last week resigned from Allied; the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association and component groups; and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

In New York at the Department of Justice offices it was disclosed that there had been no request as yet to the district court clerk for a place on Judge Goddard's calendar. Nor had any of the distributors been heard from under the "escape clause" by the New York court at midweek. The only motion picture matter on Judge Goddard's calendar was a continuation from May 19th to June 16th of the government's theatre divorcement motion against Paramount and 20th-Centutry Fox.

No Changes in Grounds For Arbitration

Greater flexibility in the classification of arbitration complaints under the decree was the principal suggestion adopted by the arbitration committee meeting with Mr. Levinson. Under one proposal it would be possible for an exhibitor to change his complaint to a more applicable section of the decree, prior to the close of hearings.

No changes in the grounds for arbitration have been suggested. However, the committee is working on a clarification of definitions in certain sections of the decree, notably those concerned with clearance, availability and competition. Suggestions are also under consideration for a reduction of time factors, a speeding up of hearings and appeals and a limitation of record costs.

An important proposal was also advanced to permit an exhibitor receiving an adverse decision to ask the arbitrator for a rehearing prior to a formal move for review by the Appeal Board.

UMPI Studies Possible Changes in Arbitration

administrator of the motion picture system reported that it had not been approached for its advice on proposed changes in decree's arbitration mechanics. It was reported however, by a committee member, that the association and its executive director, J. Noble Braden who was active in drafting the arbitration sections of the decree would be contacted this week.

The UMPI program, and its future extension meanwhile was slated as a major subject on the convention agenda of New Jersey Allied. The group has invited William F. Rodgers, chairman of the UMPI committee of the whole and the chairman of all sub-committees to speak at its meeting in Atlantic City on June 3, 4 and 5.

National Directors Invited to Attend

Most of the members of the national board of directors of Allied, active participants in the unity program, have also been asked to attend the regional association's meeting. It is understood that they will hold informal sessions among themselves, and will also describe the unity program and its accomplishments to date to the New Jersey exhibitors.

M. A. Rosenberg, national Allied president, Abram F. Myers, general counsel, Sidney Samuelson, Jack Kirsch and H. A. Cole are among the national leaders who will attend.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Friday again renewed his exhortations to exhibitors to stand solidly behind the unity movement. "Practically 85 per cent of all the theatre owners of this country regardless of affiliation are in favor of the plan so far," he said.

"I remind those who are interested in a united motion picture industry that the plans now evolved are just the entering wedge and that we must be mindful of the fact that we should go into the set-up of a united motion picture industry cautiously and not in too great a hurry if we are to build it on a sound foundation. It is my opinion that what we have worked out will act as cohesive for the other plans to follow. If there happens to be something in the program that does not cover your every desire let's not lose patience but all of us should work together concertedly for the final goal."

Praises Supporters, Hits Opposition

Mr. Kuykendall paid special tribute to William F. Rodgers of Metro, chairman of the UMPI general committee, Jack Kirsch, and to the other members who have worked for the success of the plan. He sharply criticized opposition to UMPI by the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

"I am much surprised and discouraged at the attitude of a small group of producers who are making every effort to destroy this attempt to unify the industry for the common good. It is very obvious that they are motivated by various selfish interests and are not at all interested in the general welfare of the exhibitors as a whole. I think the theatre owners of this country should know and understand who this group is and make their own decisions as to future relations with this group of producers," Mr. Kuykendall said.

Believes UMPI "Right in Principle"

"This same group of producers has been very active in Washington and among civic organizations generally evading the real issue and creating a false impression among those outside of the industry who do not understand the mechanics of our business. I think in spite of all this that UMPI will survive because it is right in principle and will do much to relieve the many trade relations that are now prevalent and objectionable to exhibitors as a whole."

The MPTOA, Mr. Kuykendall also revealed, will not hold a national convention this year. Instead the board of directors will meet some time during the summer. Transportation priorities and other war travel limitations prompted the move, he said. He will set a time and place for the directors meeting later.

Arkansas Theatre Owners Elect

The Arkansas Theatre Owners, MPTOA affiliate met at Little Rock on Monday and Tuesday. C. C. Mundo, of Little Rock was elected president, at the general session Monday in the Eastman Hotel. Louis Haven, Jr., Forrest City was reelected secretary and Charles Boner, Pine Bluff, was named vice president.

Speakers included Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, Henderson Richey of MGM and Claude Lee, of Paramount.

Essaness Quits Illinois Allied

The Essaness Theatres Corporation of Chicago has resigned from the Allied Theatres of Illinois, withdrawing its 30 houses. The circuit had been a member of the exhibitor group since 1936. Edwin Silverman, head of the circuit, declined to comment on the move. Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, expressed himself as being "extremely sorry that we have lost the members of the Essaness organization." Beyond that he refused to discuss the matter.

More UMPI State Tax Committees

More of the UMPI state tax committees have elected their chairmen according to Leon J. Bamberger, executive secretary.

O. A. Lam, Lam Theatres, Rome, Ga., will be Chairman of the Georgia Committee. Joe A. English, Washoe Theatre, Anaconda, Mont., will be Chairman of the Montana Com.

Samuel D. Schwartz, Warner Bros. Circuit, Philadelphia, has been elected State Chairman for Pennsylvania, where there are two committees, eastern and western. W. H. Lollier, Fox-West Coast Theatres, Los Angeles, has been elected State Chairman in California, where there are two committees, northern and southern.

It has been announced that the sub-committee headed by Jack Kirsch, heretofore known as the Sub-Committee on Point 5, will hereafter be known as the Committee on Intra-industry Relations, a name suggested by Felix Jenkins of Twentieth Century-Fox Corp. and Howard Levinson of Warner Brothers.

6-Point Program for Allied's New Jersey Meeting

Following is a six point program around which exhibitor discussion at the New Jersey Allied convention at the Ambassador Hotel in Atlantic City on June 3, 4 and 5 will center.

1. Wartime cooperation—a. Between distributors and exhibitors through UMPI. b. Between different exhibitor groups. c. Between individual exhibitors. d. Need for strong regional and national associations.
2. High film rentals—a. Facts as to the increase in number of top bracket pictures compared with last year. b. Prosperity of producer-distributors. c. Shrinking box office receipts and poor outlook in view of tire shortage, gas rationing and dim-out regulations. d. Allied's campaign for relief through UMPI.
3. War activities committee—a. Are the exhibitors satisfied with the organization and activities of this body? b. Should exhibitors be consulted through regional associations before commitments are made in their behalf? c. Should not definite steps be taken to insure proper credit to independent exhibitors and leaders in connection with drives? d. Do you favor transferring functions of WAC to UMPI in view of the fact that the latter is composed of authorized representatives of the exhibitor organizations?
4. Conciliation—a. Outline of the UMPI plan for conciliating grievances. b. How it will work in the case of individual complaints. c. How it will work in the case of territorial grievances. d. Important part that exhibitor associations will play in the work.
5. Arbitration—a. Progress of arbitration under the Consent Decree—increase in number of cases filed. b. More liberal policy by Appeal Board in clearance cases. c. Suggestions for reforms in procedure to be worked out by UMPI.
6. Other matters on Allied's agenda—a. Work of committee seeking revision of ASCAP fees. b. 16 m.m. competition. c. Canadian price regulations. d. Resumption of AID surveys.

BRITISH ASK END TO 'PHONY' WAR FILMS, SAYS BERNSTEIN

Former Circuit Operator in England Sent to U. S. as Official Film Liaison

"They don't want 'phony' war stories in England, any more," Sidney Bernstein said Saturday, on his arrival at the Hotel St. Regis, New York, after a trip from London by Clipper. A film adviser to the British Government's Ministry of Information for two years past, he is to be its American "film liaison" for the next three months, between Washington, New York, and Hollywood.

Citing "Target for Tonight" and other like pictures from British studios recently, Mr. Bernstein evidenced these as marks of the change of thought among the British peoples.

"We have suffered, and seen a lot," he said, "and we will not abide pictures which have no relationship to the war. That is, pictures about the war which have no sense of reality.

"We do not bar 'escape' pictures. Indeed, there is plenty of room for 'escape' films in British theatres; our studios are still turning them out; our comedians retain and enlarge their popularity. And you will note the success of American pictures.

"But we have also 'grown up,' so to speak. While I would not be impudent enough to advise American film producers, and have not enough knowledge of the scene here, it seems to me, broadly, and speaking only from my own experience in a country three years at war, that you people are undergoing the 'growing up' pains, in the making of films in wartime, which we have already gone through."

He added: "Our studios, like our factories, in a sense of speaking, have turned to war production."

Seeks "New Developments" In Cooperation

Mr. Bernstein defined his position as "liaison on all film matters relating to United States Government departments, and the United States film industry." Specifically, he will make available to Americans wishing to make films about the war all material compiled by the British Government.

He hopes for some "new developments" in film cooperation between the two countries. He said, however, he was primarily concerned with the making of pictures concerning the war, and then particularly in the non-commercial field.

He cited as example of an anticipated "new development" the shipment of American directors to England, there to review the war in films, as newspaper correspondents review it in dispatches.

He also desires to have British film "units" sent here to capture phases of America at war.

The British Ministry of Information film division has to some extent been parochial in its documentary war short subjects, Mr. Bernstein admitted, adding, however, he had attempted to remedy this, but that more of the American viewpoint was still needed.

By Staff Photographer

SIDNEY BERNSTEIN

Occasionally, he compels the MOI makers of the British shorts, produced by three units, the Crown, Army and R. A. F., to view American short subjects. By doing so, he said, they learn techniques and get a perspective on the American scene.

Documentary Films Not Sole Aim

The program now developing, to make easier American filming of the war in Britain, is not purely documentary, Mr. Bernstein qualified. He remarked that American producers of entertainment films would receive all aid from the MOI, so long as their activities were directed to portrayal of his country's manifold war efforts.

Mr. Bernstein commented that American pictures were doing better than ever in Britain, intimating, in a discussion of the monetary restrictions upon American producers and distributors, that the situation was extremely favorable. He added, however, that his duties would have no relation to the activities of the British Treasury and Board of Trade.

Sees Motion Pictures 'Staple of Entertainment'

Speaking again "only from experience thus far," Mr. Bernstein thinks that what happened in Britain will happen here: the motion picture theatre will remain the staple of entertainment. Whatever restrictions have burdened the cinema in Britain have burdened it less than other amusements, he pointed out.

"There are fewer man-hours required for the operations of theatres," he said. "The theatre in many instances is the only entertainment remaining. The public, additionally, requires information from films now."

This, he remarked, was an additional reason the British no longer had patience with a war story unrelated to the "blitz" which occurred in such fullness.

The Ministry of Information has from the beginning aided American films, as an industry, Mr. Bernstein noted, remarking that the cooperation proceeded to the extent of flying films in bombers to Sweden, so that American films still dominate the screen in that country. This cooperation in bringing American and British culture, via films, to neutral countries, took place with the help of the armed forces in Turkey, Iran, and other countries, Mr. Bernstein added.

American Distributor To Handle Films

The MOI films will be distributed in this country by an American distributor, Mr. Bernstein hopes. He said, however, he would use no "pressure" for this end; the films must "stand on their own." He has endeavored through the two years past to make them do so from an entertainment viewpoint, he said.

He admitted a need for improvement in some of the documentary efforts, but insisted that the quality of the output, as a whole, had been vastly improved since the MOI film units went to work.

He remarked that American distributors had seen entertainment value in short subjects; and cited Warners, Columbia and Fox. The first named distributed "Target for Tonight," "Christmas Under Fire," "London Can Take It;" Columbia distributed "This Is England" and "Squadron 992," and Twentieth Century-Fox sent out "Lightship."

Approach Will Be Objective

He termed his approach "objective," noting that propaganda as such was sedulously avoided, and the necessity for eschewing pressure being carefully impressed upon the British Government's representatives, before their departure for America. Therefore, he will not approach circuits or individual theatre owners for distribution of the MOI shorts; the films must first satisfy an established American distributor, who alone is to have the job, he said.

Mr. Bernstein, "long interested in the film as an art form," resigned the chairmanship of the 35-theatre Granada circuit in July, 1940, and became film adviser to the Ministry of Information, at Alfred Duff Cooper's invitation. He is the British equivalent of the American "dollar a year" man, he said.

He remembers that in his commercial theatre activities, he was the originator of audience research, gaining some renown for the so-called "Bernstein questionnaire."

His experience in commercial activity reminded him, Saturday, of the development of the MOI approach; so "basically different from that of the Nazis or the Italians." The MOI shorts publicize every espect of the country's war effort, he pointed out. Those of the Axis countries dwell upon military might. The MOI shorts never publicize personalities, a rule adhered to in British press treatment of the war. The Axis films build ego.

$174,900 from First 'Gold Rush' Runs

Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," back in circulation after seven years, has grossed $174,900 in its first seven re-engagements, according to United Artists. The first "Gold Rush" was silent; in this one, Mr. Chaplin does a narrative.

The original issue, also released by United Artists in 1925, took in $5,000,000, according to a company spokesman, in domestic and foreign engagements, and topped all the "best sellers" of the old silent days, including: "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," MGM, $4,500,000; "Ben Hur," MGM, $4,000,000; "The Big Parade," MGM, $3,500,000; "The Birth of a Nation," Griffith-UA, $3,500,000; "The Covered Wagon," Paramount, $3,500,000; "The Freshman," Lloyd-Pathe, $2,600,000; "The Kid," Chaplin-First National, $2,500,000; "Ten Commandments," Paramount, $2,500,000; "Sea Hawk," First National, $2,000,000; "Way Down East," Griffith-UA, $2,000,000, and "What Price Glory," Fox, $2,000,000.

Production costs of $125,000 were involved in the new issue, for which Mr. Chaplin compiled a musical score and wrote and spoke the narrative to accompany the silent action. Theatre bookings have been arranged on a 60-40 per cent basis, it is reported, "just like any other UA picture."

At New York's Globe Theatre, a 1,400-seat house, not a first-run, the film, now in its sixth week, drew $100,000 in five weeks, grossing $34,000 the first week.

Other Theatres Report Records

Grosses in other situations to date are as follows:

United Artists Theatre, San Francisco, approximately $14,000 in its first week; Albee, Providence, nearly $12,000 in one week; RKO, New Orleans, where it opened last Thursday, expected to draw $11,000 in its first week; Fulton, Pittsburgh, $10,900, first week; Keith's Baltimore, $17,000 in two weeks, and Orpheum, Kansas City, where it opened over the week-end, expected to gross $10,000 the first week.

The picture is scheduled to open at other first-run houses within the next three weeks in Detroit, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago.

At the Globe, in New York, where the film has "broken all standing records for attendance and receipts," according to UA and the Brandt management, "unprecedented demand for admission to the theatre," made it necessary to institute a new and expanded schedule of showings. In addition to the midnight performance of the comedy, there is an extra showing daily, starting at 2:00 A. M., 3:00 A. M. showings on Sunday, and 4:00 A. M. showings on Saturdays.

Chicago Labor Leaders To Face New York Quiz

Echoes of the Browne-Bioff extortion trial reverberated in Chicago this week, in the report that theatrical labor leaders there have been asked by United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa, to come to New York for questioning.

When George Browne and Willie Bioff went to jail, the investigation into racketeering in the motion picture industry continued. Currently, a second extortion indictment is in the process of disposition, with the scheduled trial June 1st of Louis Kaufman, Newark IATSE local business agent.

Under that indictment, which mentions "more than $1,000,000" extorted from executives of major distributors, Nick Circella, former Chicago IATSE representative, and night club operator, has been jailed.

Mr. Correa is conducting the investigation.

No Decision on 'Star' Fight

How to enforce the agreement between major company advertising directors, to refrain from using stars or other symbols of reviewers in advertising a picture, was again weighed at the weekly meeting of the Eastern Public Relations Committee, in New York, last Thursday, May 21st.

It was reported a legal agreement had been drawn. J. Robert Rubin, Joseph Hazen and Austin Keough, Eastern members of the film industry's lawyers' committee, attended the meeting. They were said to have approved the agreement's form. The final formula was to be drafted and presented to the Public Relations Committee this Thursday.

Also to be studied was a program of long-range public relations for the industry.

Fox Preview at West Point

West Point's first wartime graduating class the host at the Military Academy on the Hudson, Monday afternoon, at the premiere of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point," 20th Century-Fox release. Present at the debut as guests of the academy were more than 75 New York film critics representing the daily and trade press, and national and fan magazines.

A full dress parade of cadets, reviewed by Col. P. E. Gallagher and Cadet Capt. Carl Hinkle, greeted the visitors when they arrived at West Point at 5:00 P.M. The junket transported to the grounds via buses from New York, also was conducted on a tour of the reservation by Captain Donald B. Thurman, a buffet supper was served on the grounds and ten cadets were present to answer all queries relating to the academy's history and traditions.

Following the screening of the film which was held for cadets, officers and the invited guests, a reception was given by the officers and their wives.

The picture, produced by William Perlberg and directed by Henry Hathaway, will open at the Roxy Theatre, New York, on June 4th. George Montgomery, John Sutton and Maureen O'Hara have the stellar roles and featured players include Laird Cregar, John Sheppard, Victor Francen and Harry Davenport. "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" deals with the early history of the academy, after a bitterly contested Act of Congress established it in 1811.

ARMY WARNS BLACKOUTS WILL CONTINUE IN THE EAST

More Stringent Rules for Theatre Lighting Feared; Effect of Rationing Varies

New York's dimout, including that of the Gay and formerly White Way, is still insufficient; it still outlines ships for attack by submarines. Major General T. A. Terry, commanding the Second Corps Area, and other army officers, warned this week that a continuing blackout was in prospect.

Elsewhere along the Eastern seaboard, similar warnings, and similar stricter dimouts are burgeoning.

Meanwhile, in New York's Broadway area, Manhattan's second blackout, last week, for only 20 minutes, failed to diminish theatre grosses. Nor were other theatres in the borough, harmed materially. The experience was a contrast to the previous blackout when more than one million persons jammed Times Square, as if in carnival, and stayed away from theatres there and in their neighborhoods.

Elsewhere in the nation, the theatres are still assaying the effects of dimouts, blackouts, gasoline rationing, restriction on travel, scarcity of rubber, control of the bus and aeroplane lines by the Government.

The New York warnings that the dimout was ineffective, highlighted not merely violations against the banning of illumination directed upward or sideward, but also the strength of lighting shielded according to rule. Major General Terry urged fewer and less powerful bulbs.

Theatres in the Broadway sector were complying by extinguishing marquee and upright lights and some of the bulbs underneath marquees. However, they were subject to varying interpretations of lighting from policemen charged with enforcement of the dimout.

The Manhattan blackout, Friday, May 22nd, forced Broadway throngs into theatres and hotels; and so the former benefited somewhat. Officials warned that a complete blackout of Greater New York, comprising more than 1,000 theatres serving 12,000,000 persons, was to come soon.

Broadway theatres have equipped booths and doormen with luminous signs and buttons, for use in blackouts. In the tests thus far, these have been satisfactory.

Tennessee will undergo a blackout June 9th from 9:00 to 9:30 P.M. This is regarded by exhibitors as a favorable time.

ZUKOR GIVES WAR RECIPE FOR FILMS

Adolph Zukor, visiting Kansas City last week, and discussing the effect of war on pictures, expressed the opinion that films should be dominantly of lighter, entertaining type. The people, he said, are keyed to a high state of excitement. They are assailed from all sides by the news of the war and need relaxation; which they should find in the theatre. Pictures should largely be of the kind, therefore, that will enable them to forget the war, recover their poise, enjoy themselves, and go forth refreshed.

He indicated that if limitations on materials should result in restriction of production of features, this would have effect in improving the quality of pictures produced. Such better pictures should have longer runs, he added. And this factor, together with the public interest in shorts, might eventually tend to reduce the proportion of programs having double features.

Gasoline Rationing Effect Awaited

Gasoline rationing has closed at least one theatre, it is reported—the Esquire in Boston, of the M. & P. circuit. It depended upon the automobile trade.

The effect of rationing upon theatre receipts awaits, in exhibitor opinion, the use of the full gasoline tank on weekends, and, thereafter, the customer's evaluation of needs for his car, among them the need for transportation to the theatre with the best attraction. He may choose a theatre nearer or he may merely walk to his neighborhood house.

Clearance schedules may be altered for the industry as a whole, if national gasoline rationing is enforced.

Film salesmen thus far have been able to visit accounts, on B-3 cards, and have been assured of the possibility of obtaining more gasoline from rationing boards upon presentation of their cases. In New York industry circles, it was reported an effort might be made to have salesmen declared "essential" so they might obtain "X" cards.

Toronto theatres appear unaffected by gasoline rationing. Downtown theatres even report increased business, ascribing it to the office workers' desire to save transportation by attending a show before going home.

California Dimout Effect Discounted

The dimout of 45 coastal communities in California, from Santa Barbara to the Mexican border, is not expected to depress attendance. Exhibitors in the area for the most part prepared for dimout conditions by equipping lobbies with lobby lights designed by Rodney Pantages in cooperation with the Los Angeles Theatre Defense Bureau and approved by the OCD. Areas most likely to be affected importantly are Santa Monica, Ocean Park, Venice, Wilmington, San Pedro, Long Beach, Laguna, San Diego and Coronada which front directly on the sea. OCD officials said the ultimate extent of the dimout inland would be determined shortly but did not expect Los Angeles, Hollywood, Beverly Hills, Westwood, Culver City, to be affected.

Boston Regulations Made More Stringent

Boston's already drastic dimout regulations were this week made more so. No light may be shown which is more than 12 feet above the ground. All lights must be shaded. This means the extinction of theatre marquees as night advertisement, for the duration.

Outdoor theatres in the Albany-Schenectary-Saratoga area have been hit as much as 40 per cent by the gasoline rationing.

Both the Fabian and Warner circuits said that while business in Albany, Troy, Schenectady and Utica was less, it was not attributable to gasoline rationing, and insisted outstanding pictures would probably continue to do good business. The circuit theatres, in general, noted the proximity of houses in business districts to busses and street cars, adding it was too early to reflect the direct effects of gasoline rationing.

Most subsequent runs said their business was decidedly off.

Night baseball, motion picture's summer competitor, is already feeling gasoline rationing.

All-Night Shows Are Success in St. Louis

The Empress Theatre in St. Louis, largest in the Ansell Circuit of second-run houses, has introduced all night shows on Saturday night—the third St. Louis house to arrange programs to meet demands of personnel directors of war plants.

Louis K. Ansell, head of the circuit, said the shows would continue through 5:30 A. M., and persons coming as late as 2:30 A. M. would be able to see a complete performance. Prices will be the same, 30 cents. The Empress is located in the heart of the midtown amusement belt.

The Capitol, downtown second-run house, is running all night shows on Saturday, and Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Company officials pronounce the enterprise a success. The same announcement was applicable to the Missouri, first-run house that has special war worker shows Tuesday nights. Personnel directors of the plants have informed F&M officials in letters that they appreciate the shows.

See Increased Theatre Hours in Columbus

Extended hours for amusement places and recreation centers to accommodate defense workers on second third shifts of Columbus, Ohio, war industries, looms as a possibility, according to Mayor Floyd Green, who discussed the matter with interested parties. The Federation of Labor unanimously agreed to support the movement, "because present closing hours make it impossible for some workers to get much-needed entertainment and relaxation."

Because of the higher operating costs, the plan may not be put into effect immediately, amusement operators say, but it is likely to be inaugurated soon.

Gasoline rations in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, Canada's "Maritime Provinces," have been slashed 60 per

'War Bond Day' at 15,000 Theatres

This Saturday, proclaimed "Movie War Bond Day" by the Governors of New York, Ohio, Kansas, Indiana and Connecticut, marks the launching of the industry's War Bond Drive in 15,000 theatres across the country. Hundreds of special parades, and patriotic ceremonies arranged in various cities by independent and circuit exhibitors, in cooperation with organizations celebrating Decoration Day, called public attention to the efforts of the nation's film theatres in boosting the sale of wartime securities.

A special broadcast, originating in Hollywood, on Friday, May 29th, from 11 to 11:30 P. M., over the Mutual coast-to-coast network, urged radio listeners to make their local movie houses headquarters for bond and stamp purchases. Local broadcasts were arranged by exhibitors on the same day.

2,000,000 Pledge Blanks Mailed

The drive, under auspices of the theatre division of War Activities Committee, will continue for the duration of the war. The campaign committee, of which Si Fabian is director, hopes to raise $100,000,000 in bonds and stamps, through theatres, by the end of the year.

More than 2,000,000 pledge blanks for bond subscriptions were mailed to theatres last week, accompanied by a brochure illustrating advertising accessories available for the drive. These included one-sheet posters, window cards, usher sashes, valances, burgees and Treasury Department posters. National Screen exchanges acted as points of distribution. A short trailer has been made available, without charge, the campaign committee announced, to all showmen who are participating in the drive. Jules Brulatour and Eastman Kodak provided the necessary 500,000 feet of raw film. De Luxe Laboratories contributed the printing at cost, and National Screen Service, through Herman Robbins, president, will distribute the trailers, gratis. The committee suggested that the trailer may be attached to the end of Victory Films or other patriotic subjects.

The committee also reported this week that two national exhibitor organizations, National Allied States Association and Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, have pledged complete cooperation in the campaign.

Film Payroll Purchases In May at $6,000,000

Ted R. Gamble, former Pacific northwest theatre executive and for the past months a consultant to the Treasury Department, verified his new appointment as assistant to Secretary Morgenthau when he arrived in Portland, Ore., over the weekend. Mr. Gamble reported that the May quota of bond sales through industry payroll savings, would reach more than $6,000,000. He expressed appreciation to Oregon and other state theatremen for their "valuable and unselfish assistance" towards swelling war bond sales.

Final plans were formulated for launching the drive in Chicago theatres at a meeting held last Monday at the Congress Hotel. Nearly 100 exhibitors and managers, representing all film houses in the city proper and vicinity, attended. Principal speaker was R. J. McGill of the Treasury Department. Mrs. F. R. Fifield, chairman of the woman's division, told how the 15,000 women under her direction would participate by selling bonds and stamps in lobby booths. W. K. Hollander, head of the publicity committee, outlined plans for the outdoor celebration, which was held on Friday, the day before the drive got under way. At the rally, on LaSalle Street, opposite City Hall, anyone buying a defense stamp of any denomination was given a pass for an outlying theatre, subject only to Federal tax.

Philadelphia, New York Stage Rallies

At midweek, the campaign committee reported that exhibitors in New York and Philadelphia, in competition, were completing plans to stage the most elaborate and most successful, in the way of bond-stamp sales, "preview rallies" of the industry, both held prior to May 30th, opening of the drive. Philadelphia's show was put on Thursday at the Rayburn Plaza. Glen Gray and his Casa Loma orchestra was scheduled to present a free swing session while uniformed members of the Navy League Service were to take bond pledges from the spectators. New York's rally, held on Friday in Duffy (Times) Square was expected to sell bonds and stamps running into seven figures. Representatives from each of the 900 theatres in the city were to be on hand, each holding a placard with the name of his film house, proclaiming to the public that that theatre is participating in the all-out industry drive. Leon Leonidoff, of the Music Hall, staged the theatrical spectacle.

Free Matinees In St. Louis

On June 6th, every film theatre in St. Louis and environs, will give special free matinees to stimulate the sale of bonds and stamps in that area. Admission to the show will be the purchase of either a 25-cent stamp or a bond in any denomination. Union operators, stagehands, service and office workers are donating their services, as are cashiers, managers and assistant managers for these matinees. Women representing the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis will help sell the securities in theatre lobbies.

$1,450,000 for "Dimes" Drive

Total collections in theatres throughout the country during the March of Dimes campaign last January, amounted to $1,450,000, it was disclosed last Friday, following the announcement that half the total was being mailed to the various community organizations benefiting from the drive. The other 50 per cent went to the national headquarters of the National Infantile Paralysis Fund. Nicholas M. Schenck was chairman of the industry campaign.

Mr. Schenck, who was chairman of the recent Army and Navy Emergency Relief theatre campaign, last week urged all exhibitors to return the special trailer to local National Screen exchanges. He also urged theatremen to rush in their reports of collections and the checks.

Patrons of five LaCrosse, Wis., theatres, three operated by the LaCrosse Theatres Company and two by the Welworth circuit, contributed $937.30 to the Army-Navy drive in their city, it was reported. Manager James Dukas of the Grand, in Edwardsville, Pa., announced that $143.47 had been collected for the fund at his theatre.

New Victory Films Ready

Three new Victory Films are ready for release, the War Activities Committee announced over the weekend in New York. They are: "Winning Your Wings," two-reel film on the Air Corps, narrated by Lieut. James Stewart, produced and released by Warner Bros.; "Mr. Gardenia Jones," 13-minute subject made for the USO, produced by MGM and released by United Artists, and "Keep 'Em Rolling," three and a half minute trailer on the war production drive, produced by the Office of Emergency Management and released by Universal.

"Keep 'Em Rolling," contains a Rodgers and Hart war song, sung by Jan Peerce. Carey Wilson wrote the story of "Mr. Gardenia Jones" and the cast includes Ronald Reagan, Laraine Day, Charles Winninger and Fay Bainter.

Warner Sets Service Feature

Warner Bros. announced last week that "A Salute To The Armed Forces," a 60-minute feature combining several Technicolor service shorts, had been set up by Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager. Special main titles have been distributed to the company's exchanges and the picture will be ready for release this week, it was said. Warners have seven service shorts to draw from, all produced with cooperation of various armed units and describing the activities of different branches of the Army, Navy and Marines.

The company also announced that it had received approval from the War Department for the production of "Special Delivery," Technicolor two-reeler dramatizing an air force bombardier attack on a Jap flotilla, and "Sniffer Soldiers," a one-reeler in Technicolor dealing with Fort MacArthur's famed battalion of trained police dogs. Gordon Hollingshead will produce both subjects.

Paramount to Film War Hero's Story

Paramount has announced plans for a film based on the heroic exploits of Dr. Corydon M. Wassell which were told by President Roosevelt in his radio broadcast three weeks ago. Dr. Wassell, former medical missionary to China, was commissioned a lieutenant commander in the Navy after Pearl Harbor. He won the Navy Cross by evacuating nine wounded and helpless men from Java and bringing them safely to Australia. According to present plans, the Navy Relief Society will receive a percentage of the picture's gross, Paramount announced. The film will be a Cecil B. DeMille production.

Col. Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the research council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, announced last week the start of a war department training film on the subject "Identification of U. S. Army Aircraft."

The picture will be photographed in animation combined with aerial photography and will be made at the Walt Disney studios under direction of Ub Iwerks, assisted by Carl Nater as unit manager, and with Andy Anderson in charge of aerial photography. Lieut. Col. Charles S. Stodter of the U. S. Signal Corps will act as War Department liaison officer.

Three new Marine Corps subjects are being scored at Sound Masters studios in New York.

UNIVERSAL, COLUMBIA NEXT TO MEET ON NEW PRODUCT

National Convention Set by Scully June 2nd in N. Y.; Republic Ends Meetings

With more than half the picture companies having held their national and regional sales conventions, two more stepped forward this week in anticipation of annual sales meetings: Columbia and Universal.

Columbia holds its annual meeting June 16th, 17th and 18th, at the Warwick Hotel, New York.

Universal's convention begins Tuesday, June 2nd, at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, and ends Friday.

William Scully, vice-president in charge of sales, will preside at the Universal convention at which 250 from the field and home office are expected. The company's policy has been regional sales conventions; but, whereas some companies have given up a national convention because of the war, Universal precisely because of it switched to a national meeting. It was explained that rail and other travel facilities had so constricted movement that gathering at one time of all the sales force was deemed the most efficient method.

Arrival of the various branch groups in New York was to be sufficiently staggered, so as not to create a special demand upon travel mediums.

Mr. Scully, in a pre-convention statement, predicted the industry would benefit greatly from restricted use of the automobile. The amusements which the automobile fed, and which were competitors to the theatre, will be hampered or eliminated, he ventured; and more Americans will "look to the motion picture as their almost sole source of entertainment."

Sees Need for Longer Runs

He expressed confidence that the product program planned by the company for 1942-43 would fit within the broader program of entertainment which the government is seeking to assure the public for the duration.

"Pictures must be planned to merit longer runs, so that full advantage may be had of the entertainment values of each subject. Furthermore, the exhibitor must cooperate to the fullest in assuring maximum playing time for worthy product by giving such pictures sound showmanship selling campaigns."

The convention will be attended by all Universal home office and studio executives, all district sales managers, all branch managers and their sales forces.

The following will attend annual sales conferences, to be held at the Waldorf Astoria, New York City, beginning Tuesday, June 2, and ending Friday, June 5:

From the home office: J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board; Nate J. Blumberg, president; William A. Scully, vice-president and general sales manager; John J. O'Connor, vice-president and executive assistant to the president; Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president in charge of foreign affairs; Charles D. Prutzman, vice-president and general counsel; Universal treasurer Sam Machnovitch; Universal secretary Peyton Gibson; Universal attorney Adolph Schimel; William J. Heineman, assistant general sales manager; F. J. A. McCarthy, southern and Canadian division manager; Fred Meyers, eastern division manager; E. T. Comersall, western division manager; B. B. Kreisler, featurette manager; Maurice Bergman, eastern advertising and publicity manager; F. T. Murray, manager of branch operation; James J. Jordan, contract sales manager; Andrew J. Sharick, studio sales contact manager; Morris Alin, editor of "Progress"; Herman Stern, non-theatrical film manager; Tom Mead and Joseph O'Brien, Universal newsreel editors.

Also from the home office will be: Walter Barber, Fortunat Baronat, O. C. Binder, George Buhler, R. S. Coyle, H. V. Frampton, Jack Huber, C. A. Kirby, Hank Linet, C. C. Margon, Ed. McAvoy, R. M. Miles, James Miller, J. H. Murphy, Anthony Petti, Carl Reardon, Syd Roye, Alex Schimel, M. Wally, E. F. Walsh and Irving Weiner.

Cliff Work, Universal vice-president and general manager of the studios, will head the studio delegation, which will include Walter Wanger; Dan Kelley, executive assistant in charge of talent, writers and directors; Milton Feld, production executive, and John Joseph, director of exploitation, advertising and publicity.

From Canada will come the executives of Empire Universal Films, among whom will be Haskell Masters, president; Paul Nathan, vice-president; A. W. Perry, general sales manager; Clair Hague, Universal representative; M. J. Isman, manager of the Montreal branch, and Frank Fisher, assistant to Mr. Perry.

Universal's product for 1942-43 will be announced to the convention. Company spokesmen said the program would have as keynotes action comedy, and timeliness.

The Columbia convention at the Warwick Hotel, New York, will be attended as usual by home office, branch, and field sales staffs.

The home office group will include Jack Cohn, vice-president; Montague, Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; Louis Astor and Louis Weinberg, circuit sales heads, and Max Weisfeldt, short subjects sales supervisor.

Division managers will include: Phil Dunas, Midwest; Carl Shalit, Central; Jerome Safron, Western; Nat Cohen, New York; Sam Galanty, Mideast, and Sam Moscow, Southern. Lou Rosenfeld, Canadian general manager, and managers of the Canadian branches also will attend.

Republic Holds Final Regional

Republic concluded its third, final regional sales meeting in Hollywood Thursday, May 21st. Herbert Yates stressed man power's importance, and the delegation of authority to branch managers; authority unhampered by "red tape."

The western division, whose convention it was, highlighted the discussions by presentation of $2,000,000 in contracts closed since May 1st.

Reports from men working smaller situations, while pointing out that they had suffered from the draft and the pull of industries in large centers, held out hope of better business with the induction of women into men's work.

M. J. Siegel, studio head, pointed out that for the first time, it would have its current program complete by July 15th; and that by September it would have ready for the new season's schedule: "Hi, Neighbor," "Ice-Capades Review," "The Commandos," "Hit Parade of 1943," "Heart of the Golden West."

Paramount's final two-day regional sales meeting was held Friday and Saturday, May 22d and 23d, at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco.

Present were: San Francisco—H. Neal East, J. Bettencourt, H. Haustein, D. Spracher, R. McDonnell, J. Hurley; Los Angeles—H. W. Graly, M. R. Clark, S. White, H Haas, C. Roeder, L. Bristol, M. Burles, J Curry, E. Bauerman; Portland—A. R. Anderson, G. Brogger, G. deWaude, L. G. Sang; Seattle—M. Segal, G. Haviland, W. Pennington, R. L. Estill

Warners to Deliver 36

Warners will release 36 pictures this season, it disclosed last week. This is exclusive of three re-issues. It is 25 per cent fewer features than normally released.

It was recalled the company did not specify at the season's beginning the number of pictures to come. The production schedule normally delivered 48 to 50 features per season.

The company said the reduced number was because of holdovers and special dates on certain leading pictures.

The overall result, the company pointed out, is that it will have at least 12 features completed this season, which will be put on the 1942-43 schedule.

The company's advertising outlay is currently 60 per cent more than last year's, S. Charles Einfeld said this week.

The advertising and publicity director, arriving in New York from the studio, added that no set advertising budget was adhered to. A budget is assigned for each picture.

He also announced that $250,000 would be spent for exploitation of "Sergeant York" during its general release run.

Budgets for others were to result from conferences in New York with Harry Warner, Mort Blumenstock, Ben Kalmenson, and Joseph Bernhard.

Mr. Einfeld said he intended, while in New York, to establish an exploitation campaign for "The Constant Nymph," which may be roadshown, he hinted, and for "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "Wings for the Eagle."

The latter will be shown to the trade June 1st, he said.

Goldwyn May Stay Longer with RKO

In Hollywood, last week, Samuel Goldwyn confirmed reports he was negotiating with RKO for a releasing deal extending more than the present one year.

Under the current agreement, Mr. Goldwyn will release "Pride of the Yankees," the still untitled Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour vehicle, and "Spitfire."

Motion picture activities of the Department of Agriculture during the current fiscal year will cost $262,309, of which $133,733 will be for salaries, $50,466 for contractual work and $78,110 for overhead, it was disclosed this week by Acting Secretary Grover B. Hill.

In a report to Senator Henry F. Byrd of Virginia, chairman of a committee investigating non-defense expenditures of the Government, Mr. Hill revealed that the department will spend a total of $823,700 on publicity this year.

In addition to the motion picture work, the department has a number of radio activities, which will cost $174,633, in addition to $21,862 to be spent for the preparation and distribution of electrical transcriptions. The department press service will cost $264,896.

The report showed that 667 employees are engaged either wholly or partially in publicity which, Mr. Hill emphasized, is centered "on the war job of helping farmers and other citizens play their full part in the war program."

Managers Shifted By Essaness Circuit

Several managerial changes have been made in the Essaness circuit, Chicago. Mr. Hope will headline a list of screen, stage and radio celebrities. Donald M. Nelson, War Production Board chief, is expected to be the principal speaker.

Knapp, whose latest picture on Ecuador, "Latitude Zero," was acquired by the motion picture division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, has signed a deal with the latter organization to go to Peru shortly and produce a film on the customs and life of that country. The film division of the Rockefeller-Whitney group is arranging for an early release of "Latitude Zero" to non-theatrical audiences in the United States.

RKO Signs Max Baer

RKO reported from Hollywood this week that it had signed Max Baer to a contract which will give him a month's work with the studio in a top role in "The Navy Comes Through." The company said that Baer turned down an offer guaranteeing him $10,000 to fight Lee Savold on June 15th in Toledo, to appear in the film. The former world's heavyweight champion will not fight in the picture. He has been cast in a comedy role.

Two downtown Denver theatres have switched their operating policy to newsreel and short subject shows. The Senate theatre reopened on May 22nd as the Telenews theatre with Leslie Allen as manager. Fox Intermountain circuit's Rialto plans to shift to a newsreel policy on May 29th.

FCC Accused of Air 'Raids'

Charges that "raids" have been and are constantly being made on the clear channels for broadcasting were laid before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee at Washington last Thursday, with a warning that a further reduction in the number of such frequencies might leave the vast rural population of the country without the broadcasting service which the U. S. Communications Act seeks to assure.

At the last of the hearings to be held this month on the Sanders bill for reorganization of the Federal Communications Commission, Victor Sholis, director of the Clear Channel Broadcasting Service, told the committee that the number of clear channels, originally set at 40, had been "whittled down" to 23 and that efforts were being made constantly to secure further cuts for the benefit of stations having less desirable assignments.

He cited, as an instance, the action of the Commission in breaking down the 850-kilocycle channel of Station KOA, Denver, by permitting a Boston station to operate on the same frequency and, later, a station at Akron, Ohio. Another instance, he said, is the clear channel on which KPO operated, which was assigned to a station in Raleigh, N. C., and another at Lawrence, Mass.

"Although the allocation structure is frozen for the moment," Mr. Sholis declared, "I feel it is still mandatory upon us to think of the future. It is ironic that although American genius has created the finest system of broadcasting in the world, we have failed to spread the pleasures of that broadcasting equitably among all our people."

For some 50,000,000 people living in rural areas, he said, the clear channel stations offer the only satisfactory broadcasting service they can receive. These people have been kept in close touch with the war effort by radio, he pointed out, and it is imperative that they get good service after the war.

Chicago Reel Club Elects

The Reel Fellows Club in Chicago last week elected Harold Wirthwein, second vice president, Ted Meyers, assistant treasurer and Sig Dicker, assistant secretary, to fill vacancies. ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The President started some quick-trigger action, in Hollywood, toward motion picture marquees and motion picture screens when he told, in his broadcast of the evening of Tuesday, April 28th, about the heroic exploits of Army and Navy men in foreign fields of battle.

On Monday night, last, city desks of newspapers in New York received the following item from the home office of Paramount:

"The fabulous heroism of Dr. Corydon M. Wassell, which was recently disclosed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, will be brought to the screen under the guidance of Cecil B. DeMille, it was announced today by Paramount. The Navy Relief will receive a percentage of the picture's gross in return for the screen rights, under an agreement reached in Washington between Paramount's Y. Frank Freeman and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. A large down payment is being made in advance. . . ."

Dr. Wassell is a former medical missionary to China, who was commissioned a Lieutenant Commander in the U. S. Navy after war broke out. He won the Navy Cross by the heroic feat of evacuating nine wounded and helpless men from the interior of Java, running the Japanese blockade and bringing them to safety in an Australian port 1,500 miles away.

President Roosevelt, in a broadcast to the nation on April 28th, told all about it.

The day after the broadcast Paramount and two other Hollywood studios filed with the Producers Association their intention to film the story and it was announced simultaneously that several free lance writers had set to work on screenplays. What nobody knew was that five minutes after the President was off the air, Mr. DeMille and Mr. Freeman had a telephone call into the White House and a wire on the way to the Navy Department in Washington. First under the wire with an application to the Government, Paramount won first hearing and Mr. Freeman closed the deal in Washington after a flying trip from Hollywood a few days later.

In the meantime, Dr. Wassell and all of the nine men whose lives he saved had been contacted by the Navy Department. Special representatives of Paramount in Australia have been in touch with the men rescued by Dr. Wassell, accumulating factual data which will be incorporated in the screenplay.

Mr. DeMille also has another production in the first-run houses: "Reap the Wild Wind."

Harry W. Flannery, former air correspondent for CBS in Berlin, and now similarly holding forth in the Hollywood sector for the same network, tells of his experience in sending a hat out to be cleaned while in Berlin. Flannery was not aware that there just wasn't any cleaning fluid in Berlin. He learned about it when they sent his chapeau back six weeks later, in three pieces—hat, band and lining. They wash 'em.

Ed Klingler, movie editor, is using his Evansville (Ind.) Press columns to locate "a big trap for a big rat." The town wants to use it for the person who stole an Army-Navy Relief collection box from the lobby of the Woodlawn Theatre. The Woodlawn's house manager, estimating the possible amount in the box, paid that sum out of his own pocket to the Army-Navy Fund.

Columbia Picture's press biography of Actor Lloyd Bridges, describes Mr. Bridges as "a man of many interests," adding: "For instance, his two pet dishes are hot fudge sundaes and wiener schnitzel. . . "

Hollywood actress Dona Drake originally changed her name from Rita Novella, then to Una Villon, and Rita Rio, and Rita Shaw, and Dona Drake.

Paramount says she lives in a small house, high on a hill above Stone Canyon Lake, in California, and that she has a blonde cocker dog named 'Jackie', and pair of white rabbits named 'Hug' and 'Kiss', and that she'll stop whatever she's doing promptly at 5 PM to rush home and feed her livestock."

And then there's the biographic research unearthed from the original 'handout' by Paramount on actor Richard Denning, which told how "His mother's idea was that, to be healthy, he should eat a great deal, and the fatter he became the more healthy she considered him.

"In high school other students called him 'Fatty' and kidded him because of his size. For this reason he became self-conscious, avoided his schoolmates and hid under the athletic field stands during gymnasium periods.

"In his senior year he decided to go on a diet. Daily his mother packed a huge lunch for him to eat at school and always he gave it all away, except for an apple or some similar bit of fruit. After his graduation he obtained a summer job in the mountains, digging cesspools, and still adhering to his rigid diet.

"The hard work and diet brought his weight down from 230 to 180 pounds and began to change his outlook on life. Just as summer was ending, he fell into one of the cesspools and broke a leg."

The Canadian Pacific Railway travel folder, describing the Province of Quebec, says: "French Canada is a world in itself, and it is, therefore, not surprising that they (the French-Canadians) have kept up the old customs of their forebears as they have their language. Nevertheless, there is no dearth of such modern institutions as comfortable hotels, excellent transportation facilities, fine golf courses, and —the inevitable moving picture theatre."

Quebec merely has upwards of 180 of these inevitables.

Priorities in War bring some strange items to motion picture theatre box offices.

Houses in Wisconsin are admitting persons upon presentation of phonograph records or golf balls. In Milwaukee, Fox's Shorewood, Parkway, Paradise, Riviera and Layton admitted children and adults to Saturday matinees with two phonograph records. At Sheboygan, Warner's Sheboygan got five records as each admission price. In Marinette, the Fox Theatre passed youngsters presenting two golf balls each.

The newly opened Surf Theatre, in Chicago, operated by Harry and Elmer Balaban, must be awfully anxious to please its patrons. It has effected an idea borrowed from restaurants that give a second cup of coffee without charge. Anyone desiring a second helping of the Surf's film fare may return the next day and see the same program over again without charge.

Standing before the bar of justice, in New York, the other morning, was one Demetries Tsakiris. Demetries said he was a motion picture producer and director, although there's no Demetries Tsakiris mentioned among the 12,000 biographies in the "Who's Who" of QP's Motion Picture Almanac. Anyway, he was before the bar, accused by Assistant District Attorney Harold Sussman of selling bars of platinum, which were not bars of platinum at all, but bars of steel. They cost one Mrs. Ourania Georgopoulous $29,000.

Echoes from the days when they "sold" gold bricks.

The insurance company had gone out to prove that Liebman was injured, not in the theatre, but while doing a handspring on a Worcester lawn. He received a year in jail.

IN BRITISH STUDIOS

By AUBREY FLANAGAN
In London

Talent Groups seek Revision of Methods

Discontent with the Quota position and the general attitude of the Government to production is not the only form of discontent in British studios today. An appreciable body of thought and opinion inclines increasingly to the view that there is much room within the industry itself for an overhauling both of policies and of machinery. In some quarters it is felt that a tendency towards monopoly and trustification exists, coupled with an indifference to first mechanical principles, plus an insufficient link between the Ministries and Services on the one hand and the producers on the other.

The vast majority of established commercial producers, it would seem, are content with the condition. A lesser, but both vigorous and active band of production figures, are not. Among those who have joined forces in seeking a way out of the tangled situation are Noel Coward, Leslie Howard, John and Roy Boulting, Herbert Marshall, Adrian Brunel, Miles Malleson, Michael Redgrave and Bernard Miles.

So bent are these on doing something about it that they have summoned a conference, on a date early in June, to examine the whole production situation. Though so far invitations to the conference have been ignored by the British Film Producers Association, a complete and wholehearted blessing has been given by the Association of Cine Technicians.

The conference aims at bringing into the discussion not only producers and production executives, but no less directors, artistes, technicians, writers, and unskilled studio workers. The Ministry of Information have been invited to send a representative, but it is not known yet whether the invitation has been accepted.

No agenda so far has been set for the Conference, but the main subjects to be discussed will fall under three headings, (A) The right type of film to be made to assist the war effort; (B) Production efficiency; and (C) Collaboration between the Ministries and the Services and the industry.

In many respects it will follow the lines of the round table aimed at by the Technicians Association for a discussion of their memorandum on efficiency in wartime production, and which has been fully reported on in Motion Picture Herald, and which equally has been ignored by the Producers' Association.

First initiative in calling the action group together was taken by John and Roy Boulting, producers of "Pastor Hall" and who are currently making "Thunder Rock" for Metro.

Ideological Theme

Though not essentially a war subject by virtue of its theme, "Thunder Rock," a film with a difference, deals with the philosophical and ideological roots of the human spirit and the social and moral weaknesses which have provoked the conditions of today. Though a controversial and discursive subject, the film, based as it is on the stage play, is being woven by the Boultings into a dramatic pattern, equal roles in which are played by action and spectacle, personality and setting.

"Thunder Rock" itself is far from being the solitary background for the drama, which it was in the play. Already the canvas has shifted about the globe, from Italy, Austria, and Switzerland, to the lighthouse on Thunder Rock itself, and this last week has centered on a town in the Potteries of Britain a century back. The change of scene plus the flashback device, with its variegated costuming should, it is believed, remove any doubts that a philosophical subject can be visually of interest.

Michael Redgrave and James Mason have the leading roles under Roy Boulting's direction, with Barbara Mullen and Lili Palmer in the principle feminine spots. Duncan Sutherland is art director and Mutz Greenbaum in charge of the cameras.

Asquith's Submarine

At the other G.B. studio at Shepherds Bush a more serious note is being struck, with Anthony Asquith directing a submarine drama "We Dive at Dawn." In the hot, greasy surroundings of a full-scale submarine interior, Asquith has completed his fourth week on the film which co-stars John Mills and Eric Portman: Edward Black producing and Maurice Ostrer in charge of production.

Complete realism of undersea conditions is being obtained by the persistence of Asquith in confining all his camera movement to the cramped space of the submarine's hull. Naturally obstacles to the action, such as torpedoes, bulkhead doors, iron ladders, piping and engine fittings are not removed to facilitate the camera viewpoint, but remain in picture, so that from a cinemagoer's angle, the impression of being imprisoned under the sea is said to be exceptionally real.

Two for National

British National continue their wonted and many handed activity with at the moment of reporting, two films on the floor and another planned for launching in the immediate future. More ambitious of the twain currently in production is the (Bud) Flanagan and (Chesney) Allen comedy at Elstree "We'll Smile Again" which John ("Love on the Dole") Baxter is directing, with Gordon Maxwell, the "discovery" of "The Foreman Went to France," in support.

At Hammersmith, Leslie Hiscott is directing "The Lady from Lisbon" with Francis Sullivan, Jane Carr and Martita Hunt.

Almost ready for shooting is Oswald Mitchell, who is to go to work at the month's end on a Max Miller comedy, "Looking for Trouble."

Elsewhere in the British National studios—but for release by Columbia, George Formby's "Much Too Shy" is being cut and made ready for trade show.

'Mission' at Denham

Elsewhere at Denham, and making his second film in immediate succession, is Marcel Hellman, whose "Secret Mission" has followed his "Talk About Jacqueline." Harold French ("Unpublished Story," "The Day Will Dawn" and previously, for Hellman, "Jeannie"), is directing, with Carla Lehmann, one of the British industry's soundest—and most beautiful—latter day stars in the feminine lead, Hugh Williams, and, running to and from the "Thunder Rock" set, James Mason opposite, and Roland Culver, with Michael Wilding.

The film is yet another creation of Anatole de Grunwald, most prolific of contemporary scenarists here, and of Sir Basil Bartlett. It has been adapted from Shaun Terence Young's story, has a theme of espionage, Free France and whatnot, and is composed of equally applied ingredients of drama, romance, comedy, thrill and suspense. Bernie Knowles is director of photography.

On the Light Side

The lighter side of the war is to be exploited by Gainsborough when, at Islington next week, Arthur Askey starts work in what is claimed to be Britain's most ambitious wartime musical, "King Arthur Was a Gentleman." Askey's role is a "straight" one, it is stated, which means probably that he will essay less slapstick than is his wont, in a story which exploits the comedy side of life in the Army. The title takes its inspiration from Arthur's discovery of his greater namesake's sword, Excalibur, and the deeds to which his discovery inspires him.

The cast includes the American swing singer Evelyn Dall, who has the feminine lead, with Jewish drummer-comedian Max Bacon, radio artiste Jack Train—the man with a myriad voices—Anne Shelton, Britain's 1942 Sophie Tucker, and Vera Frances.

BRITISH EXHIBITOR FACTIONS BAR FIXED ADMISSION SCALE

Rates Vary Widely According to Territory and the Conditions of Run

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Exhibitor discussion throughout the country, in local CEA branches and Groups, has justified the forecast in these pages that whatever the future held for theatre admissions there was not likely to be any national scale. Many of the areas have now agreed on the new rates of admission and the result is a pattern of most divergent and different detail.

Not even a minimum admission has been agreed upon, despite the circuit suggestions. Some first-run houses are likely to set the lowest admission at less than one shilling. Despite the circuits' suggestion that nowhere should prices go below sixpence there will remain in various parts of the country picture houses with a minimum admission as slight as 2d. or 3d.

Reasons for this divergence in price are, of course, mainly local. Circumstances differ greatly throughout the country in various areas, with some districts more wealthy in the commercial sense than others. Whereas in the centre of larger provincial cities it will be easy to secure 1/— minimum for first-run houses this would not be possible in backward rural areas, certain mining districts and poor neighborhoods where the wage level is still, despite the superficial prosperity of the times, remarkably low.

It is certain, however, that the public will accept the increased admissions with a good grace.

Circuit Profits Increasing

The entertainment boom, parallel with the absence, so far, of heavy bombing raids, continues. Cinema shares are rocketing and during the past week, with the prospect of increased revenues as a result of higher admissions, share prices of all the circuits have appreciated in varying degree.

A reason, however, over and above the local reason referred to previously, for the independents' unwillingness to accept the circuit scale is the habitual disinclination of many exhibitors to follow the lead of the groups on matters of policy. In local discussions it has been contended that independents do not follow the theatre circuits on programs and policy and there is no reason why they should follow them on the question of admission rates.

In many districts first-run houses of the circuits continue to show unduly long programs, often with attendant frills, music, vaudeville, etc., etc., and it is believed that, whilst they may be justified in a scale starting from 1/— upwards, picture houses which have to compete against these conditions are justified in keeping the price of entertainment to a lower figure.

Most discordant of all the discussions have been those over the question of a minimum admission. The circuits, as reported in these columns, suggested 1/— minimum for first-run houses and on no account a minimum less than 6d. for any theatre. Both policies have been virtually ignored by exhibitors in general.

BRITISH CIRCUIT HEAD RESIGNS

Considerable speculation in industry and financial circles has resulted from the sudden resignation of Sir Ralph Wedgewood as chairman of Associated British Cinemas, Ltd., and Union Cinemas, affiliated company. He has been replaced by A. G. Allen.

It was understood at the time of his election that Sir Ralph's appointment had the approval of the Board of Trade and was related to the British principle that control of large circuits remain in British hands. This followed the acquisition of an interest in the circuit by Warner Brothers.

Max Milder, the American company's managing director in England, remains joint managing director of the circuit, the post to which he was named following the acquisition.

In Edinburgh, for instance, first-run houses have agreed that the minimum price of admission will be 1/3d with a scale graduating up to 2/6d. In Sussex the first-run houses will charge 1/— minimum. Yet in the Manchester area, a wide industrial centre with a varying scale of labor conditions, there has not been a local agreement, because conditions vary according to the area, and the existence of seats at 2d. and 3d. has complicated the whole problem.

Some parts of Cheshire, Devon and Cornwall, and other areas, will set their lowest figure at 9d. The shipbuilding centres of Newcastle and Middlebrough fix it for 8d. The Yorkshire groups will vary their prices according to local needs. And so the pattern is being worked out, complex and variegated.

Tax Rate Involves Admission Change

A notable achievement, since the Chancellor's agreement with the CEA on a revised tax scale, has been the adjustment of one of the increases so as to permit an admission rate of 1/3d. The price is a key price in many British picture houses and the Chancellor's gesture will enable the exhibitor to recoup a penny for himself on the 3d. increase.

A reflection of the situation has been seen this week on the share market, where there has been keen bidding for picture house and certain circuit stocks. Most of the prices for preference and ordinary shares of the various circuits have gone up several points. On the Associated British shares a rise of 1/3d to 12/3d has been noted this week.

Union Cinemas (Union is associated with the ABPC group) first preference shares rose during the week 2/7½d to 12/—. Gaumont-British and Odeon have shared in this new bidding, the former's ordinaries rising 3d. to 9/9d and the latter's ordinaries 3d. to 9/—. PCT (associated with Gaumont-British) showed a keener market value with the preference shares rising 2/— to 25/—.

G B Stockholders Ask Investigation

Meanwhile, the Committee representing critical shareholders of Gaumont-British have this week decided to investigate further the question of G-B control and are asking for elucidation of the situation regarding the Metropolis & Bradford shares, 5,100 of which, with a controlling interest, have recently, it is said, been acquired by J. A. Rank at a suggested figure of £750,000.

The stage is set for a revival in exhibitor-rental circles of discussions, if not indeed a downright dispute, over the question of Sunday bookings. The matter was raised by the CEA in February last and the ball was passed back with a resounding thwack by the KRS. The KRS have once again taken the bat in their hand and sent the ball walloping into CEA headquarters.

The present plan is for the KRS to approach the CEA and ask for a joint and honest discussion of the whole problem. It has been the contention of the renters that the films booked by exhibitors for showing on Sundays and the prices offered are lowering to the prestige of the industry and unjust to the public. That the renters' revenue is suffering in consequence will probably not be mentioned by them; that it is the root of the whole matter is no less probably the case.

Outdated Pictures For Sunday Shows

Despite the protests and counter protests, the truth is that, in general, the Sunday program is composed of old, outdated film, poor entertainment paid for at a rental infinitely below that paid for six day programs.

The distributors seem determined upon changing this, especially in view of the current entertainment boom, particularly at weekends. Exhibitors are fearful of a renter effort to secure a percentage policy for Sunday shows. Saturday and Sunday trading is at present the salvation of the exhibitors and they are likely to put up an intense fight against any interference. Whether the solution will lie in an extension of booking periods, or in the institution of percentages, it is at his juncture difficult to foretell. That it will lead to some hard hitting on both sides would seem to be certain.

Ease Order on Building in New Brunswick

by VICTOR SERVICE

in St. Johns, N. B.

The Dominion Government has granted the appeal of A. I. Garson, of St. Johns, N.B., against an order stopping the reconstruction of a building at Moncton, N.B., into a theatre. The order was the first of its kind. Mr. Garson had been given permission to convert a furniture store and apartments, on three floors, into a theatre, his application coming after the specific ban on all such conversions. He appealed the stoppage order, and after six weeks of inactivity, the work has been resumed, following receipt of governmental permission from Ottawa. When the order came the remodeling had progressed about a third.

The new theatre will be the fourth for Moncton, where business at the current trio has been excellent since the start of the war. Mr. Garson participated in the B. & L. Theatres, with headquarters in St. Johns, but is now out of that circuit. He owns the Garrick, a former stage show house at Halifax, N. S., and which is leased to Famous Players Canadian. The Moncton theatre to seat about 600, will be operated independently by him and will place him in opposition to his Halifax tenants, FPC, who took over the ex-independent Imperial last year. The Capitol and Empress, are in the Odeon lineup, and owned by F. W. Winter, of Moncton, who took them out of FPC last summer.

The war boom has made Moncton one of the busiest centres in the maritime provinces, and has resulted in several of the leading circuits looking over the field there with a view to theatre locations. However, the theatre building ban wrecked such projects.

British Product for Canada Assured

by ED BAKER

in Winnipeg

War has not curtailed film production in England, A. J. Laurie of Toronto, general manager of Esquire Films, Limited, distributor of British films in Canada said this week in Winnipeg.

Among the new films which will be shown in Canada soon are "Mr. V.", starring Leslie Howard; "Ships With Wings," the story of the Ark Royal; and a new Formby feature, "It Turned Out Nice Again."

The war theme predominates in most films under production. Leslie Howard is completing "The First Of The Few," biography of R. J. Mitchell, inventor of the Spitfire. Eric Portman, star of "49th Parallel," will be seen in "We Shall Rise Again," based on the Free Belgian newspaper produced during the Nazi occupation.

Other films with war themes are "One of Our Aircraft Is Missing," "Let The People Sing," "These Our Strangers," "Sabotage At Sea" and "Mr. Bunting at War."

The first Technicolor feature to be produced since the outbreak of the war is one starring Wilfred Lawson and is based on the life of the composer, Handel.

Newspaper Urges Forced Film Attendance for War Nerves

Compulsory attendance at motion picture theatres is being advocated by the Dartmouth, N. S., Daily Patriot, as "a sure cure" for war worries. The two local theatres, Dundas and Mayfair, were commended not only for their "comfort, beauty and picture programs", but on the ground that they are "health clinics" in this time of heavy mental stress because of war conditions.

With the possibility of submarine, surface and undersea attacks cited editorially as providing exceptional damaging wear-and-tear on nerves and mind, doctors of Dartmouth were advised to send their patients to the two theatres regularly, and to go themselves, as an example to the public. It was recommended that each person not only in Dartmouth, but through Canada, should be forced to see a picture program at least once or twice a week, in order to assure mental and nervous resistance to war worries.

It was pointed out that the newspaper was not furnishing free advertising for the theatres, as business in both the Dartmouth houses was at capacity. Seat rationing was urged, and with everybody participating, as a health action. Manager Ivan Haley, of the Dundas and Mayfair, was credited for having donated the use of the two theatres for war welfare and charities to greater extent than any other two theatres through the dominion. The people of Dartmouth were urged to "run, not walk", to the nearest theatre. It was said that it is impossible to "follow the sequence of screen events and entertain private worries at the same time". Whereas worries prevail when one reads, golfs, fishes, watches sports events, etc.

Canada Oil Ban Hitting Theatres

Theatres in Canada are viewing with some alarm the order of last week by the Ministry of Munitions and Supply, banning further use of oil furnaces. Clarification of the order's effect upon theatres was awaited. Affected by the order in Toronto are the Oakwood and Village theatres operated by Famous Players Canadian.

The Ministry also ordered theatres in Western Ontario to switch from natural gas heating to coal. Conversion of furnaces to use of coal is reported hampered by lack of parts.

Reopening Mobile House

B. W. (Bert) Bickert will reopen the Lyric theatre, old vaudeville-motion picture combination house of Mobile, Ala., and dark for 10 years. Mr. Bickert will be an independent operator with extensive renovation under way in the 1500-seat theatre on Conti Street in the heart of the city. It was last operated by Saenger Theatres, Inc.

Cameron Acquires House

P. G. Cameron, operator of the Airway and Peak theatres in Dallas, has acquired the Grove theatre there. Claude Kennell, former manager of the Gateway, moves over to the Grove to take charge following its purchase from Roy Starting. Mr. Starting continues operation of two other theatres, the Urban and Texan.

Opening Aero Theatre

As an added recreational project for its war industry employees, the Glenn L. Martin Company, plane manufacturers, will open the Aero theatre, part of a new recreation center near the plant on May 31st. It will seat 700. Edward Perotka will be manager.

Quarberg to Wanger

Lincoln Quarberg who handled trade paper contacts for Universal's West Coast publicity department, has joined the Walter Wanger unit at Universal and will do publicity there.

Universal Exchange Promotes

The Universal exchange in Philadelphia has promoted Alex Cooperman, from the office staff to booker.

Adds to Personnel

Personnel of the Warner Bros. Atlanta branch, also headquarters for Ralph McCoy, district sales manager, has been expanded with the addition of P. A. Blankenship as student salesman, Manny Goodman in the booking department, James Young as supervisor of checkers, Marlene Shirley in the contract department, Doris Brown in the cashier's department, Lucy Cash as clerk, Betty Chamers as secretary to Mr. Young, and Dick Harris and Charles Bower in the shipping department. Mike Hogan has joined the exchange as office manager, succeeding W. C. Hames, who is leaving for Army service.

Discuss Fund-Raising Plans

A proposal to place its fund-raising activities on a national basis in order to get greater service to those in need of financial aid, was made at the Motion Picture Associates luncheon-meeting held last week in New York at the Hotel Astor. Joseph J. Lee, 20th Century-Fox exchange sales manager, made the suggestion. If the proposal is accepted by the governing body of the organization, it will not be put into effect until after the present service drives have been completed. Additional funds to carry on benevolent work of the group would be sought from all circuits and film companies, it was said.

Warner Manager Honored

Jack Swartout, former manager of Warner's American Theatre, Troy, was feted at the Hendrick Hudson Hotel in that city Monday night by 150 industry and civic leaders. Mr. Swartout has become manager of the New Family Theatre in Batavia, N. Y. No successor has yet been named. Speakers at the dinner were Mayor Frank J. Hogan of Troy and Charles A. Smakwitz, assistant zone manager for the Warner circuit.

In Albany Parade

Exhibitor groups and the local Variety Club in Albany participated in that city's Memorial Day parade on Saturday, by presenting floats in the line of march. The floats graphically illustrated for curbstone spectators what the motion picture industry and exhibitors are doing in the nation's war effort, particularly through bond sales and relief drives.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER

Hollywood Editor

Esteemed Editor:

Although none of them are as yet of a mind to authorize quotes, a number of independent producers accustomed to delivering two, three or four pictures a year, and counted upon to do so in 1942-43, are confiding to intimates that one will be enough if the $25,000 ceiling on individual earnings, or its equivalent is established.

Practice is for producers in this category, which includes some of the best, to obtain bank financing for each picture, ranging in amount from $500,000 upward, recovering production cost and netting profit from distribution and exhibition under various arrangements.

Unless it were a very sorry venture indeed, one such trip to the bank would yield such a producer more profit than he could retain under the $25,000 ceiling restriction.

It is reasoned that a second trip to the bank would have to be considered as undertaken wholly as in the interests of the Treasury Department, to which all profits would accrue by virtually direct line, and, although there may be some among the independents whose patriotism is of an intensity to prompt them to such enterprise, it is perhaps not to be expected that these will be putting Secretary Morgenthau, even vicariously, into the essentially hazardous business of motion picture production for profit.

Several of the independents faced with these considerations have announced a number of pictures for production within the 1942-43 season.

They always do.

They do not always deliver all the pictures they announce, under normal conditions.

They do not commonly explain, or even note, their failure to do so.

The pictures just don't materialize and that is that.

Indications are that that is to be that in many more instances this year than formerly.

Two pictures to see when they come your way are "Mrs. Miniver" and "Ten Gentlemen from West Point."

"Mrs. Miniver" translates the war into terms of here, now and us, all of us, without pointing, shouting or scolding.

"Ten Gentlemen from West Point" puts guts into the tradition that America breeds great fighting men, showing how, where and why.

Both are fine entertainment.

They are unalike in all save one particular. Both inform potently on matters vital now.

Together they demonstrate with inspiring conclusiveness the industry's awareness of its opportunity in crisis and abililty to meet it.

Two undertakings in progress hereabouts relate to your annual polling of exhibitors with respect to their selections of young talent as Stars of Tomorrow.

Columbia studio has made up a series of reels, composed of screen tests and clips from completed pictures, showing thirteen of its young players at their best, or worst, as the case may be.

These are being screened for studio producers, directors and executives, and are to be routed through the Columbia exchanges around the country for exhibition to exchange staffs, exhibitors and such press people as may be interested.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has in preparation a feature picture entitled "Now We Are Twenty-one" which will present that studio's numerous young players in a seven-ply story under direction of seven of the plant's young directors.

Young talent is by way of having its inning.

Reasons, of course, abound.

Exhibitor selections designated in your next Stars of Tomorrow poll are quite likely to find themselves made stars overnight.

At long last intelligence is being applied to that marginal detail of the rubber conservation problem which pertains to the journeyings of the press contingent to and from places of preview.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences is at work upon a map of Los Angeles County which will show, when survey of the residence locations of journalists is completed, the location of the theatre at which pictures may be previewed with minimum wear upon the tires and motors of the 350-odd correspondents whose obligation it is to attend.

Studios have been fumbling with the problem for months.

The Academy, which doesn't habitually handle previews, met up with it for the first time a fortnight back in the placing of its first monthly previewing of short subjects.

The Academy's doing something about it. —W. R. W.

Edgar Kennedy, star of RKO's short subject series, "The Average Man," was signed by the studio on May 19th for his 14th year.

"White Cargo" Starts

Into production this week went "White Cargo", one-time stage shocker by Leon Gordon, with Hedy Lamarr and Walter Pidgeon portraying the dusky enchantress and the sodden Englishman. At all times a problem script, the MGM version has done away with the forbidden miscegenation factor by making the heroine an Egyptian-Portuguese. How the presentation of an Englishman romantic in his cups on a rubber plantation in West Africa may turn out to fit into the pattern of international diplomacy and public sentiment by the time the film comes to screen is of course necessarily a question answerable only then.

The week of production breaks down like this:

Brandts Charged with Times Sq. Monopoly

Suit Filed by Independent Operator Charges Conspiracy to Restrain Trade

The charge that Harry and William Brandt, New York independent circuit owners, with Max A. Cohen conspired to create a motion picture theatre monopoly along 42d Street at Times Square in violation of state laws, was made in an anti-trust suit filed Monday in the New York Supreme Court by J. J. Theatres, Inc., operator of the Times Theatre. The suit accuses the eight major distributors, Mr. Cohen, the Brandt brothers and their theatre companies which operate the Selwyn, Liberty, Harris and New Amsterdam theatres.

The action seeks unspecified damages and an injunction to restrain alleged violation of Section 340 of the General Business Law which makes a monopoly unlawful and Section 580 of the Penal Code which prohibits any conspiracy to interfere with another person's business.

The alleged monopoly is claimed to have started in 1938 when the Brandts and Cohen entered a pooling arrangement which resulted in the defendants securing first runs on 42d Street for their four houses on all major product through the elimination of the previous sharp competition between them, according to the complaint. At that time and up to March 15, 1940, the suit continued, the Times theatre had been playing first run Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO and Warner product on the street, day and date with the Stanley theatre.

Through the device of having the Brandts and Cohen acquire the Stanley in 1940, plaintiff asserts, and diverting all local first run films from it to the defendants' other theatres the major companies were given an excuse for gradually refusing first run films to the Times. The complaint alleges that the gradual diversion of product has resulted in the Times following the Brandt-Cohen theatres by seven to thirty days with a consequent annual decrease in gross from $125,000 to $75,000. All major distributors are named defendants because they are charged with collaborating with Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO and Warners in the alleged conspiracy.

Schad Appealing Dismissal

A notice of appeal from the Federal court dismissal of the $750,000 anti-trust suit brought by Harry J. Schad, Reading, Pa., exhibitor, was to be filed this week in Philadelphia.

Federal Judge J. Cullen Ganey, who dismissed the action, gave his formal opinion last Friday after having indicated on Thursday that he intended to take such action.

The owner of a theatre cannot prevent a lessee of the house from releasing a distributor from his contracts, Judge Ganey ruled. "It would establish a strong doctrine," he said in a 12-page opinion, "to hold that the plaintiff (Schad) has some intangible right which could prevent Warner, its lessee, from agreeing to release 20th Century-Fox of its obligations."

The suit, which sought $750,000 damages, charged Warners, 20th Century-Fox and the Warner and Wilmer & Vincent circuits with having conspired to have 20th Century-Fox give the Astor theatre's 50 per cent franchise to Wilmer & Vincent's Embassy and Ritz after the Warner lease on the Astor had expired and the house returned to Schad. The Embassy and Ritz had previously held the other 50 per cent of the 20th Century-Fox franchise.

Judge Ganey ruled that the fact that the public could see all 20th Century-Fox product at the Embassy and Ritz and could not see any at the Astor "is not a consideration that the Sherman Act was to remedy." He also pointed out that Schad did not complain when other distributors sold away from the Astor after the operation of the house was returned to him.

The court held that the Reading situation was a business deal, not a conspiracy, and even if it were to be deemed in restraint of trade, "it certainly is not such a restraint as is condemned by the Act." Moreover, Judge Ganey ruled that Warners had a right to stay in business in Reading and even if the circuit leases another house there from Wilmer & Vincent, "I cannot see that Warners did anything more than was requisite for the assurance of a motion picture house to display its products."

Variety Clubs Honor Goetz and Jessel

The Cincinnati Variety Club, on Monday, will tender a farewell dinner to Joe Goetz, assistant division manager of RKO in Cincinnati, who has been commissioned second lieutenant in the Air Service Command, and is leaving June 8th for Miami Beach, Fla., to start training. The committee in charge of the dinner consists of Arthur Frudenfeld, Maurice White, Andrew Niedenthal and William Devaney.

Cincinnati Variety will hold its annual outdoor dance and frolic at the Summit Hills Country Club, on June 22, proceeds going to local charities.

In Pittsburgh, last week, Variety Post 589, American Legion, presented a Distinguished Service Certificate to George Jessel on the stage of the Nixon Theatre for his visits to the Veterans Hospital, and other service.

Cohn Heads Jewish Drive

Ira Cohn, manager of the Twentieth Century-Fox exchange in Pittsburgh, has been made chairman of the Motion Picture and Amusement Division of the United Jewish Fund Drive, and will be assisted by co-chairmen M. A. Silver and Perry Nathan, David Barnholtz, Harry Feinstein, Joseph Feldman, Samuel Fineberg, Archie Fineman, William Finkel, Mark Goldman, Saul Gottlieb, Herbert Greenblatt, Arthur Levy, Morris Roth, Michael Shapiro, Ben Steerman, and Jerome Wechsler.

"Suicide Squadron," Republic: held a second week at the Woods, Chicago, and Criterion,, New York.

Reports on grosses for the week include: "My Gal Sal," Roxy, New York, which drew an estimated $36,800 last Thursday to Sunday, during its fifth week, maintaining a boxoffice record at that house. Only two other pictures remained for five weeks at the Roxy, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and "A Yank in the R.A.F.," both 20th Century-Fox releases.

In its first four days at the Radio City Music Hall, "Tortilla Flat" played to 83,193 persons and chalked up an estimated $61,000, the largest non-holiday weekend business of the year at that theatre.

Drawing an estimated $8,300 last Saturday and Sunday, "This Above All," 20th Century-Fox, at the Astor, recorded its second week at that house on Monday night.

Paramount's "This Gun for Hire," at the Paramount Theatre, grossed an estimated $25,000 for last Saturday and Sunday and was expected to hit about $55,000 at the end of its second week on Monday night.

"In This Our Life," at the Strand, drew an estimated $24,000 last Friday through Sunday. "Ships With Wings," United Artists, at the Rivoli, grossed an estimated $7,000, Saturday and Sunday, and "Suicide Squadron," Republic, ended its second week on Monday at the Criterion with an estimated $10,000. The picture grossed $15,000 during its first week.

TELEVISION IS CUT TO BONE; RADIO PARTS TO BE POOLED

NBC, Columbia Stations in New York Cut Schedules; WPB Gets Pooling Plan

Television this week gave up its hopes of expansion, or even maintaining status quo, for the duration. On Friday at New York both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System announced they were reducing operations of their stations, WNBT and WCBW, to four hours weekly.

The action of the two eastern seaboard pioneers in commercial television followed a ruling by the Federal Communications Commission two weeks ago which permitted commercial television stations to cut their minimum operating hours from 15 to four as a wartime conservation measure.

In statements officials of both networks explained that they were taking advantage of the FCC ruling in order to conserve irreplaceable equipment, and to release members of engineering and production staffs for war work.

CBS will reduce its programs from 15 to four hours weekly on June 1st. The station, WCBW, will be on the air over Channel 2 from 8 to 10 P.M. on Thursdays and Fridays with programs of general interest. They will include news, quizes, round tables and Red Cross instruction.

NBC Continues Air Raid Warden Programs

Niles Trammell, president of NBC, in announcing curtailment of WNBT's programs to four hours said the station would reduce to six hours a week on Monday, May 25th for five weeks. At the end of this period it will be on the air for four hours a week. Programs will consist exclusively of defense training subjects for air raid wardens and civilians. For the initial five-week period WNBT will be on the air Monday, Tuesday and Wednesdays from 7 to 10:30 P.M., intermittently.

Mr. Trammell said the decision conformed with the desire of the FCC to "prevent recession of this new art to a purely experimental or laboratory stage, and to keep it alive, ready to flourish as a public service after the war emergency."

The DuMont television station at New York has been off the air for some time, with the exception of sporadic test transmissions. It is reported that executives have abandoned all plans for further program work. Erection of a DuMont station at Washington, from available equipment is is also reported to have been deferred.

Similar curtailment of television activity for the duration is expected also from the Don Lee stations in Los Angeles, the General Electric outlet at Schenectady and the Balaban & Katz station in Chicago. The naval training school at the latter station will not be curtailed, however.

Both New York stations started full 15-hour commercial operation on July 1, 1941. WNBT was the only station to secure commercial sponsors or issue an advertising rate card.

OPA CLARIFIES STATUS OF SET PRODUCER

The Office of Price Administration, at Washington, ruled last Thursday that factory branches of radio receiver and phonograph manufacturers which act as wholesalers are not to be covered by the provisions of the price schedules for those products but are to be treated in the same manner as other distributors.

The ruling was made on application of General Electric Company, which protested that such branches were not connected with the production end of the business.

Radio Replacement Parts to be Pooled

War Production Board approval of a plan for a cooperative pool of replacement equipment for the broadcast industry was recommended over the weekend by the U. S. Defense Communications Board, at Washington with indications that it would be found acceptable to Donald Nelson's WPB.

The plan provides for the setting up of 17 regional conservation districts, each to be headed by an administrator and two assistants who will be selected by the broadcasters in the district, who will check inventories of replacement parts, supervise their distribution and see that efficient operation of all stations is maintained.

In each district an inventory will be kept of the replacement parts available for exchange between broadcasters in the area, and an all-over inventory will be maintained in Washington as the basis for exchanging parts between stations in different districts.

The program will be administered by the Federal Communications Commission under the rules, regulations, orders and policies of the War Production Board. The regional administrators will receive no compensation from the Federal Government, and expenses of their operations will be met by the stations in their districts on a pro-rata basis.

Inventory and New Materials Checked

The program provides for a detailed inventory of all equipment on hand at all domestic broadcast stations, an establishment of the requirements for replacement from stock and from new material by one-year periods, and the securing of an allocation of the new material and necessary priorities from the WPB to satisfy current and future requirements.

A detailed check is to be made of the technical performance of all stations to establish that they are operating in a manner to give maximum life of equipment consistent with good service. It is recommended that the standards of good engineering practice of the FCC be amended if it can be shown that a worthwhile improvement in the life of equipment will be accomplished.

All material in the hands of broadcasters will remain in their possession until such time as it may be needed at other stations.

900 Radio Stations Urged to Cooperate

Stations will be limited in the holding of parts to the minimum specified by the manufacturers, and no spare equipment will be taken from a station whose equipment just fulfills the minimum requirements, but a station not having the minimum required spare parts will not be given supplies to increase the inventory above what it had on hand January 1, 1942.

Any equipment more than the established minimum requirement will be considered in excess of the requirements and subject to redistribution to other stations.

The original holder of equipment is to be paid the then current market price of such equipment, plus delivery charges, when material is transferred from one station to another. All transactions will be on a C.O.D. or credit basis as determined by the seller.

"Such a plan could operate only with the full cooperation of the broadcasters and this cooperation is assured by the fact that it originated with the broadcasters themselves and was prepared and submitted to the DCB by the domestic broadcasting committee of the board," it was pointed out in an announcement of the recommendation to the WPB. "It is believed that its operation should go a long way to relieve the priorities problems now confronting the 900-odd broadcasting stations in repair and maintenance materials."

Radio Orders Will Hold

Restrictions on the construction of new broadcasting stations will be adhered to strictly, it was warned this week by Chairman James L. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission.

The recently-announced policy of permitting no construction not absolutely essential permits of no deviations for applicants who may have secured all the materials they will require or who may have expended considerable money on preliminary work, Mr. Fly said.

The chairman disclosed, however, that consideration was being given to the plight of low-powered stations finding difficulty in securing operators who can meet the FCC regulations and that a relaxation of the rules might be issued in the near future. He said the competition for operators was keen among the large stations, manufacturers, the Army and Navy and "even the FCC," leaving the small stations in a difficult position.

"I expect to make no exceptions except those that are clearly indicated on the face of the rule itself," Mr. Fly emphasized. "I would strongly advise applicants not to waste their time, energies and money in endeavoring to pursue applications which run counter to the rules.

"The best we can hope to do in the broadcast field is to consolidate our position, and endeavor to keep the present broadcast structure on a firm and enduring footing for the period of the war."

All Sides Appeal to AAA's High Court

Three Cases Brought by Distributor, Intervenor, Defeated Complainant

Three additional arbitration decisions were carried to the Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration system at New York this week. A review of recent awards was sought in the three moves by a distributor, intervenor and defeated complainant.

At New York, the intervenor in the 24th case appealed the award by which Roscoe S. Conkling, arbitrator, granted some run to the Waverly Playhouse in Greenwich Village. The Rugoff and Becker circuit's Art theatre on 8th Street, named as an interested party to the complaint, sought a review by the Appeal Board, RKO, Warner Brothers and 20th Century-Fox.

Caroline Pierriello, operator of the Playhouse in Clyde, N. Y., on Friday appealed the decision of William E. Barrett, who dismissed her case, the tenth from Buffalo. The five consenting distributors and the Schine Capitol at Newark, N. Y., and Ohman Brothers theatre at Lyons, N. Y., were named in the action.

RKO, a defendant distributor in the fifth New Orleans case, some run action by the Lakeview theatre, entered an appeal on Thursday. A decision by T. W. Bethea had directed RKO and Warners to license pictures to the suburban New Orleans theatre. RKO appealed on the ground that Mr. Bethea exceeded his authority under Section VI by ordering the distributor to sell a specific run, namely first New Orleans suburban.

Buffalo

An award at Buffalo in the tribunal's thirteenth complaint granted clearance reductions to the State theatre, operated by Murray Briskin at Waterloo, N.Y. Nathan Rovner, arbitrator, directed all five consenting distributors to grant not more than 30 days clearance to the Geneva and Regent theatres, Geneva, N. Y., ahead of the State and not more than 10 days over the State to the Strand in Seneca Falls.

In no event, the award further stipulated, is the availability to the State in Waterloo to be later or earlier than 30 days after first run in Geneva. Costs were divided equally among all parties.

Boston

At Boston the 9th action, filed by the Camelot Theatre Corporation seeking some run for the Art theatre in Springfield, Mass., from Paramount was withdrawn last week. A stipulated agreement was reached between the parties involved.

Garrett S. Hoag has been appointed arbitrator in the 10th Boston case, clearance demand by the Princess Amusement Corporation, operating the Middleboro theatre, Middleboro, Mass.

A new St. Louis complaint, the tribunal's 11th and the complainant's second, was filed on Friday by Victor Thein, operator of the Palm theatre, St. Louis neighborhood house. A clearance demand, it cites Loew's and the independent Will Rogers theatre. Mr. Thein asks the application of a reasonable clearance for the Will Rogers, asserting that the prior theatre delays availability unreasonably.

Mr. Thein won a prior clearance demand against Paramount and 20th Century-Fox, and the St. Louis Amusement Company. The case was carried to the Appeal Board, which upheld Mr. Thein and granted a further cut in the margin held by the Aubert over the Palm.

The clearance complaint of Adolph Rosecan, owner of the Princess, South St. Louis subsequent-run house, against Warners, RKO, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox was scheduled to resume Wednesday, May 27th. It is the 9th St. Louis case.

Testimony introduced by the complainant at two sessions last week said he had to wait as long as three months before pictures were made available. Mr. Rosecan said he has agreements with the four distributors that he is to play 14 days after the Cinderella, owned by the Wehrenberg-Kaimann chain, and the Gravois, part of the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company chain. However, it is with the Cinderella that he has had the most difficulty, he asserted, for the Gravois plays their pictures on time, but the Cinderella frequently waits several weeks and sometimes two months before playing them. Both chains have intervened.

Cincinnati

A specific run demand was filed at Cincinnati Friday against the five consenting distributors, United Artists, Universal and Columbia by the Alpine-Belle Theatre Company, operator of the Alpine theatre in Belle, W. Va. The Black Diamond Theatre Company is named as interested party.

The complaint, the tribunal's seventh, charges that the Alpine has been the only theatre in Belle for ten years. The Black Diamond company, it is asserted, began construction of a new theatre in the town recently. The Alpine asserts that in consequence it has been unable to license product of the major distributors for three months. The Alpine charges an agreement with the circuit to give first run to the new Belle theatre when it is completed.

Chicago

The 17th Chicago case, a clearance complaint filed by the Y & W Management Corporation in behalf of their Palace Theatre, Gary, Indiana, against 20th-Fox, RKO and four Warner Bros. and Balaban & Katz South Side theatres, was withdrawn due to improper complaint. Malkin, Glick & Malkin, attorneys for the complainant, who took over the case following their successful completion of the Wheaton Theatre case say that a new suit will shortly be instituted.

Thomas C. McConnel, who has heard three clearance cases here, has resigned from the Chicago Motion Picture Tribunal panel due to pressure of his law business.

Hearings on the Times Theatre, Danville, Ill., case No. 16, were resumed and completed last week. The testimony is now under consideration by the arbitrator, Wilbur Giffen. He dismissed Paramount on the grounds that he had no jurisdiction under Section XVII over an affiliated distributor.

The Freeport Theatre, Freeport, Ill., case, scheduled to be resumed on May 23, has been postponed until June 13 due to previous commitments of the arbitrator, Arthur J. Goldberg.

Kansas City

J. E. Pennington, owner of the Cozy theatre, Topeka, has intervened in the clearance complaint of Simon Galitzki, for the Coed theatre.

Mexico Studios Producing At Capacity

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS

in Mexico City

For the first time in several years Mexican studios have had to form a waiting list for producers anxious to use their facilities. Several important productions, among them Mexico's first feature picture in color, "Que Lindo es Michoacan" ("Michoacan the Beautiful") cannot be started until the autumn.

"Michoacan" is to be a scenic story of the middle western state of that name. It will be produced by the Rodriguez group which has several successful pictures to its credit.

Present indications are that the domestic producers will end 1942 with about 80 pictures, a new record.

Motion picture workers in Mexico, including some players and directors, are planning consumers' cooperative societies as a means of coping with the steadily increasing prices of food and other necessities. The first amusement cooperative of this kind was started in Mexico recently by the business and talent staffs of Station XEFO, owned by the Party of the Mexican Revolution, supporters of the present Federal Government. Several labor unions in Mexico also have consumers' cooperatives.

The Government censors established a precedent when they ordered withdrawn from exhibition a film they had approved. This picture, "Flor de Fango" ("Mud Flower"), was barred after it had been shown, because the censors had received so many complaints.

This was the first time the censors ever banned a picture after they had approved its exhibition and indicates that authorization for exhibition does not prevent them from cancelling the exhibition permit if the film arouses public resentment.

A. J. Michel Leaves 20th Century-Fox

A. J. Michel, financial executive at 20th Century-Fox, has resigned from the film company to open his own office as a financial and tax consultant.

Mr. Michel was formerly comptroller of Paramount Pictures, Inc. Ten years ago he moved to 20th Century-Fox to serve as financial consultant for the late Sidney R. Kent.

New Film Salesmen's Group

Film salesmen of Charlotte, N. C., have formed a fraternal and benevolent organization in that city known as Film Salesmen's Association. Hank D. Hearn is chairman of the board; Roger Mitchell, vice-chairman; George Roscoe, secretary, and Olin Mock and J. E. Holston, co-treasurers. Monthly luncheons are to be held, at which matters pertaining to the industry in general and the Charlotte territory in particular will be discussed.

Rejoins Checking Staff

H. B. Paul has rejoined the Warner Bros. film checking organization as supervisor of the Denver and Salt Lake City territories. His headquarters will be in Denver. Supervision of the Minneapolis and Milwaukee areas will be handled by A. K. Evidon.

"Desert Song" in Color

Warner Bros. announced this week that "The Desert Song" would be in color, and that most of the scenes would be filmed on location in Arizona and New Mexico.

MEET DEANY JONES AND HIS GIRL!

Deany Jones saw there was a job to be done long before December 7th — and that's why he enlisted. When the bombs at Pearl Harbor woke up all America, Deany was there ready to drop canned heat on the Japs. As he shot down his third plane, the third bud on his girl's gardenia plant back home burst into flower.

The romance of Deany and his sweetheart, the story of Deany and his great adventure is called MR. GARDENIA JONES. It has all the humanness that adds real showmanship stature to your show. But it has a lot more—for it tells why Deany's morale was so high that he met the big test like every American soldier, sailor and Marine wants to meet it.

U.S.O. needs $32,000,000 at once. You can help them get it by showing MR. GARDENIA JONES immediately. It's a top-notch short subject—with big feature star value . . . and it's swell entertainment for a great cause.

Office Workers Guild, CIO, Win RKO Election

The Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, C.I.O., stepped forward another marker Friday, May 22nd, by winning a collective bargaining agency election at the RKO home office, in New York.

The union, the C.I.O.'s only foothold in the film industry, already has won such elections, under National Labor Relations Board sponsorship, at the home offices of Loew's, Columbia, Twentieth-Century Fox, and Fox Movietone News, claiming to represent 1,500 clerical workers in the motion picture industry. It now seeks a bargaining agency election at National Screen Service, and is pressing for a contract at the offices where it has won elections.

The vote Friday was 194 to 46. Of 261 eligible, 240 voted.

The Screen Publicists Guild, union of advertising and publicity workers in the New York offices of the major distributors, and which has been discussing C.I.O. affiliation, will shortly lose its president, Joseph Gould, of United Artists. He enters the Army June 4th, as a second lieutenant in the infantry.

Final briefs were submitted Friday, May 22nd, in the suit by Loew's, in New York Federal Court, to restrain the city's projectionists' local, 306, from compelling distributors to refuse film deliveries to theatres not employing Local 306 members. Federal Judge Henry Goddard on that day reserved decision on the union's motion for dismissal.

IATSE Convention Opens June 1st

Theatrical union interest centered this week on the biennial convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, at Columbus, Ohio, which opens next Monday.

Criticisms of Richard Walsh's presidency are anticipated and an election was seen a possibility. Mr. Walsh, president, is serving out the unexpired four-year term of George E. Browne, now in jail for eight years as an extortionist. Mr. Walsh was elected by the international executive board in November.

In Columbus this week, planning the convention, were Mr. Walsh; James Brennan, fifth vice-president; Louis Krouse, secretary-treasurer; William Scanlon, trustee; and others.

The delegates will be asked, as a chief point of business, to approve the changes in the constitution, drawn up some time ago and mailed for study to the locals.

Possibility that the membership lists might be opened to many non-members, as a result of the war's drain upon manpower, was seen this week. Alliance spokesmen admitted in New York this might be done, but added it was not in the immediate future. It was not known whether this subject would be discussed at the convention.

Next Monday, also, after repeated postponements, the extortion trial of Louis Kaufman, business agent of the Newark IATSE local, was to start in New York federal court. He was indicted with Nick Circella, Chicago IATSE representative, for extorting "more than $1,000,000" from distributors. Named as co-conspirators, but not as defendants, were Browne, and Willie Bioff, in jail now as result of previous trial. Circella pleaded guilty, and was jailed.

Walter N. Greaza, assistant secretary of Actors Equity, has succeeded Thomas Phillips as executive secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists. The appointment is for three months.

"ONCE IS ENOUGH" CHILDREN TOLD

Young patrons of Springfield, Mass., theatres were warned editorially last week by the Springfield Union that their habit of sitting through two showings of a double bill film program is good neither for them nor for the theatre managers. Fifty per cent of child patrons on Saturdays and Sundays sit through more than one show, a check by the Motion Picture Council and Springfield parent-teacher groups showed, the newspaper reported.

"Too long a stay indoors and the deep impression made on the mind of a young person by a repeated showing of a program is ordinarily the reverse of good, however high grade the pictures may be", the editorial commented, adding "under the present booking system each program includes two grades of pictures, and one of them is anything but beneficial as a rule.

"The theatre managers would be glad to see this habit of repeating done away with", the paper said. It urged intermissions to clear the house between programs largely patronized by children.

Frank P. Liuzzi was re-elected president of the Philadelphia musicians' union, Local 77. Ralph Kirsch was elected vice-president, succeeding Romeo Cella, one of the three other defeated presidential candidates. All other incumbent candidates were returned to office, including A. Rex Riccardi, secretary; Harry Kammerer, assistant secretary; Joseph Bossle, Jr., treasurer, and James Perri, sergeant-at-arms. The officers will serve for two years instead of one year, under a recent revision of the constitution.

Mr. Riccardi, secretary of the Philadelphia local, was last week elected president of the Conference of Pennsylvania and Delaware Locals of the Musicians' Union, representing 30 AFM locals. J. W. Gootee, of Chester, Pa., was elected vice-president. The annual conference was held in Chester, which was again selected as the site for the 1943 conference.

Floods Damage Five Comerford Theatres

Floods in northeastern Pennsvlvania over the weekend damaged five Comerford circuit theatres. Charles A. Ryan, the circuit's construction engineer, placed damage cost at $25,000. Theatres affected were the Granada, Olyphant; the Irving, Carbondale; the Majestic, Carbondale; the Lyric, Honesdale; the Ritz, Hawley. The Lyric will not open for at least a week. Express Lines Film Delivery Service reported deliveries without interruption to all theatres still operating.

The Venus theatre, Richmond, Va., was badly damaged by fire recently. Stage decorations and sound equipment were destroyed and ceilings damaged. The house is owned by Neighborhood Theatres, Inc.

The Davis Square theatre, West Somerville, Mass., was damaged by fire last week. The theatre, once a church, was the scene of another 10 years ago.

Ayres in Army; Films Back in Theatres

Balaban and Katz and other exhibitors have done an about face on their attitude toward the showing of "Dr. Kildare's Victory" in their theatres. They announced last week that bookings, cancelled when the Ayres publicity first broke in the newspapers, would be resumed in all of their theatres. The circuit was one of the first to withdraw the picture, among many others, several weeks ago. Ayres, meanwhile, has gone into the Army Medical Corps.

FOREIGN MANAGER FOR 20TH-FOX

LAUDY LAWRENCE

Laudy Lawrence, vice-president and executive coordinator of United Artists since November, has been named director of foreign distribution for 20th Century-Fox. He will be assisted by Irving Maas of the company's foreign department. The appointment was made by Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution at 20th Century-Fox.

Mr. Lawrence fills the post left by the death of Walter J. Hutchinson last month. Mr. Maas has been acting head of the 20th-Fox foreign department.

The new foreign head began his film career at Paris in 1925 as European representative for MGM. Subsequently he was made the company's managing director for Continental Europe, serving in that post until 1941. Returning to the United States he became an assistant to David O. Selznick. Last November he joined United Artists as an executive aide and supervisor of its foreign operations.

Arthur W. Kelly, vice president and treasurer of United Artists has resumed direct supervision of the company's foreign operations it is reported. Walter Gould, assistant under Mr. Lawrence, will be given wider authority in the department on his return from South America.

Bryson To Have Larger MPPDA Washington Staff

The Washington staff of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will be enlarged, the office announced last week, following a meeting of the executive committee. The increase is a consequence of more work because of manifold contacts with the Government's agencies in the war effort. The Washington legal staff is under Jack Bryson. The enlarged staff will handle all relations between the Government and the industry.

MPPDA Urges Relief from Mexican Tariffs

Elimination of discriminatory Mexican tariffs and taxes is essential if the motion picture industry is to fulfill its task of fighting Axis propaganda in Latin America, it was claimed last week by Carl E. Milliken of the MPPDA, appearing before the Committee for Reciprocity Information at hearings on the proposed reciprocal trade agreements with Mexico and Bolivia, at Washington.

Mr. Milliken asserted that not only were our pictures laboring under tariff rates and duties not applied to films from other countries entering Mexico, but there was on foot an effort to secure a requirement that all United States pictures be dubbed in Spanish after importation but before exhibition.

He told the committee that "Mexican Spanish" would not be acceptable in the other Latin American countries, and the proposed law would be an additional burden on the distributors.

Films Can Fight Axis Propaganda

"We believe the motion picture can be properly regarded as one of the essential services of the war effort," Mr. Milliken said. "It is essential for the maintenance of morale; the extension and presentation of motion pictures in other countries is important because it maintains a feeling of contact on their part with this country, but it is especially important in Latin America as an alternative to the presentation of Axis propaganda which is continually sought to be introduced in all the countries south of us."

Mr. Milliken explained that dictators feared American pictures, and had demonstrated that fear by banning them from 32 countries or colonies under Axis domination.

"War began in Europe against the American movie long before it began against us as a nation," he said.

The industry's representative explained that at one time 40 per cent of its revenue came from abroad, but developments of the past decade—the banning of pictures in one country after another, depreciation of foreign exchange and the freezing of funds—had reduced the normal return by 70 per cent.

16% of Rentals Returned from Mexico

He said that the cost of marketing films in the U. S. was estimated at from 25 to 28 per cent of the production cost. In Mexico, however, he said, the industry "gets back only 16 per cent of the rentals" because of the barriers against its pictures.

He urged that in the negotiation of the Mexican agreement, the State Department press for elimination of internal taxes which militate against American pictures and for a reduction of the tariff, which requires American pictures to pay two and one-half times what is paid by Spanish films entering the country from Argentina.

Best of all, from the standpoint of the industry, he concluded, would be the abolishment of tariffs both ways.

RKO Profits in 1941 Were $538,692 Net

Radio Keith Orpheum Pictures Corporation on May 21st reported a consolidated net profit for 1941 of $538,692, after all charges, taxes and allocation of $530,000 for contingencies. It compared with a consolidated loss of $988,191 for the preceding year, with provision of $794,600 for contingencies.

RKO originally set its annual meeting of stockholders at the corporation offices in Dover, Del., on June 3rd. The meeting, however, was postponed at mid-week. It will be the first in ten years, none having been called during the company's reorganization or during the term of directors appointed by federal court.

Operations of RKO theatres during the year resulted in a profit of $1,148,205 compared with $803,953 in 1940. Returns for the first quarter of 1942 were substantially better than last year.

The picture company's operations in the United States and Canada resulted in a net consolidated loss of $594,270. Results of film company operations for the first quarter of 1942 were described as "less satisfactory" than for the same period in 1941. George J. Schaefer, president, in his annual report to the stockholders remarked, "Difficulties of operations in the domestic market have resulted largely from the uncertainties inherent in distributing motion pictures under the provisions of the consent decree." Wartime conditions depriving the company of foreign markets have also adversely affected its position, he said.

New Selling Method Delays Amortization

Among the difficulties of decree distribution cited by Mr. Schaefer were a delay in amortization of picture costs until six to nine months after release. "This constitutes a substantial deferment," he said. Also, he observed, decree selling requires the company to maintain approximately 10 completed pictures on its prerelease inventory.

The parent company advanced substantial amounts of cash to the picture company during the year to meet working capital needs, he said. Also it secured a revolving fund credit of $4,500,000 from banks, pledging motion pictures.

RKO added $135,929 last year to its reserve against foreign losses for contingencies in the Far East. All reserves for foreign investments total $1,394,070 against aggregate investments of $3,075,678.

From refinancing of Keith-Albee-Orpheum during the period RKO received a common dividend of $200,000 from the theatre subsidiary. The latter reduced its new funded debt through refinancing by $600,000.

Total income for the year was $53,250,725. Total expenses amounted to $49,925,007, of which amortization of film costs and expenses was $12,414,757; operating and general expenses were $27,128,544, and royalties and participations, $10,381,705.

Total assets amounted to $70,105,231. Current and working assets aggregated $20,326,324, of which $6,298,202 was cash and $11,056,807 in inventories. Current liabilities amounted to $9,315,219.

On Wednesday, from New York headquarters, RKO issued its quarterly statement for the 13 weeks ended April 4, 1942, reporting a net profit of $439,268, after all charges, as against $643,926 for the same quarter in 1941, and comparing as follows:

	13 Wks. ended April 4, '42	13 Wks. ended April 5, '41
Profit from operations, before items listed below	$1,174,931.92	$1,265,933.30
Depreciation	320,762.99	332,633.35
	$ 854,168.93	$ 933,299.95
Provision for income taxes	401,785.75	216,180,13
	$452,383.18	$ 717,119.82
Dividend declared during the 1942 period and accrued during the 1941 period on preferred stock of a subsidiary company in the hands of the public	13,114.50	73,193.75
Net profit after all charges	$ 439,268.68	$ 643.926.07

Garrett Van Wanger, RKO comptroller, said that the provision for Federal income taxes is based on a 40 per cent rate for 1942 as compared with a 24 per cent rate for 1941. No provision was made for Federal excess profits tax as "the company does not appear to be liable in this respect."

The above figures are in part estimated and subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year.

BOOK REVIEW

RIVERS TO THE SEA. An American novel by Lucien Hubbard. 313 pages; cloth. Simon & Schuster, New York. $2.50.

When Lucien Hubbard was a little boy in the '80's living out on the Ohio river, he used to stand at night looking over at the lights of Cincinnati and at the steamboats passing up and down in pageants of glory. His own adventures ahead in journalism and in the motion picture were in an undreamed world ahead. He grew up out in that great middle country of the rivers and grew rich in its historic lore and the dynamic frontier tradition.

Always Mr. Hubbard has been intending to some day "do a book about it." Now it is done, a rollicking piece of glamorous fiction that is history-with-action, too.

Simon & Schuster's jacket says: "It is in a sense an escapist book since it transports the reader into another world—the world of 1811 and life on the river." As the HERALD remarked the other day that word "escapist" which used to be a hissing in the voice of the film critics is a praise word now, even, it seems, among the literati.

Mr. Hubbard's novel is his first work in this medium. It is based on the life of Nicholas Roosevelt, and tells tales of tumultuous young Pittsburgh, the keelboatmen, river pirates, Natchez-under-the-Hill, gamblers, bagnios and darksome beauties, and the Lower River, and of course the old New Orleans.

Mr. Hubbard you will be remembering for his work in Hollywood production for Paramount, Warners, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox. He might have had a commission, but quite a while ago he joined up as a factory worker at the Douglas Aircraft plant in Los Angeles. That, he seemed to think, was more immediately real.—T. R.

Raise Greenberg Fund

David A. Levy, Universal New York branch manager, is raising a fund to care for the widow and infant daughter of Rube Greenberg, Irvington, N. J., exhibitor, who was killed in an accident in the Hudson Tubes, April 26th. The fund already amounts to $1,800 and will be continued.

Chicago Reviewers Pass on 34

Members of the Better Films Council of Chicago reviewed a total of 34 films between April 10th and May 15th, according to their latest bulletin, classifying 9 as family entertainment and 25 as mature fare.

Those in the family group are "Born to Sing," "Drums of the Congo," "Hay Foot," "Joe Smith, American," "The Jungle Book," "Sing Your Worries Away," "Tuttles of Tahiti," "The Vanishing Virginian," and "What's Cookin'."

In the "mature group" are "A Date With The Falcon," "Affairs of Jimmy Valentine," "Almost Married," "Among The Living," "Brooklyn Orchid," "Dangerously They Live," "Design For Scandal," "The Fleet's In," "The Invaders," "Joan of Paris," "The Lady Is Willing," "The Lady Has Plans," "The Male Animal," "The Man Who Returned To Life," "Martin Eden," "The Men In Her Life," "Mayor of 44th Street," "Mystery of Marie Roget," "Nazi Agent," "The Night Before The Divorce," "Saboteur," "Shanghai Gesture," "The Spoilers," "Two Yanks In Trinidad," and "The Woman of the Year."

The MGM cartoon, "The First Swallow of Capistrano" was highly commended.

Columbia

ADVENTURES OF MARTIN EDEN: Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor—A good Jack London story which received good comments from our customers. Glenn Ford does a good job in his role. Played on a double bill with "Brooklyn Orchid." Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 11-16.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

CANAL ZONE: Chester Morris, John Hubbard—People enjoyed this on same program with "Twin Beds." Not much action but has plenty of flying. Fills out a nice program. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 30-May 9.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

LADIES IN RETIREMENT: Ida Lupino, Louis Hayward—A spook picture with plenty of comedy. Ida Lupino certainly gives you the willies. Patrons enjoyed it. Running time, 93 minutes. Played April 23-29.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

LONE STAR VIGILANTES, THE: Bill Elliott, Tex Ritter—Fair western. Fair business.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOOM TOWN: Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy—We played this late but it still did more business than anything we have played in a long time. A lot of our regulars had seen it before but came to see it again. That is the type of picture they like. If there still are some theatres who have not played tbis they are passing up sure money. Played May 4-5.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Maine—A dandy. Pleased as near 100 per cent as any picture in a long time. Business comparatively excellent. Running time, 101 minutes. Played March 8-10.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Swell. I believe it is the best of the Hardy pictures. Step on it and it won't let you down. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 10-12. —K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S CRISIS: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—In our opinion, not up to the usual Kildare standard, although it is fair entertainment. Ayres' conscientious objecting did not seem to affect the box office. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 30-May 1.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Can. Mining community patronage.

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.: Robert Young, Hedy Lamarr—It is too long, too slow, miscast, for any but our better people to see. I like only entertainment on my screen.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

HONKY TONK: Clark Gable, Lana Turner—This is a story of the last best west of the gambling period. Plenty of action and good entertainment and Miss Turner looking very lovely, not up to the entertainment value of "Boom Town." However, would recommend this for a spot like mine. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sackatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—No business, but only a fair feature, so no reason to expect anything else.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner, Van Heflin—Seems like our patrons are passing up top pictures like this one for cheaper ones with more action. Yet this had plenty of action, a grand cast and lots of glamor. That Heflin gent certainly gave the stars a run for their money in this. And who wouldn't go for Lana Turner? Those who came liked it very much. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

KATHLEEN: Shirley Temple, Herbert Marshall—Nice business on one day showing. Well liked by all.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

MAISIE WAS A LADY: Ann Sotbern Lew Ayres—The "Maisie" series is always well received here and this was was as good or better than its predecessors. Pleased all who saw it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 7-8.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Can. Mining community patronage.

MR. AND MRS. NORTH: Gracie Allen, William Post, Jr.—Just a program picture wbich failed to draw. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Our first Tarzan picture. Had only a fair draw but it seemed to please. Maybe the next one will do all right by us.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Min. Rural patronage.

UNHOLY PARTNERS: Edward G. Robinson, Edward Arnold—Poorest weekend in some time. Fair show.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

Republic

REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR: Fay McKenzie, Don Barry—A very good action picture which is a credit to Republic studios. Title is timely so play it while it's hot. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SINGING HILL, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Only fair for Autry, but it did staisfactory business on a single-bill. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 20-22.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck—Good picture and good business. Some of my customers said that it was not up to Gary Cooper's standard and that the action bogged down in the middle of the show. Personally, I liked it. Running time, 111 minutes. Played May 10-11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CITIZEN KANE: Orson Welles—Nobody liked this and said so. We took in just enough to pay for it so considered ourselves very lucky.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesvile, Minn. Rural patronage.

GAY FALCON, THE: George Sanders, Wendy Barrie—George Sanders very good in this type of detective story. Allen Jenkins provides enough comedy to keep interest up. Played May 11-13.—Nick Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

JOAN OF PARIS: Michele Morgan, Paul Henried—Direction, acting and photography are all excellent and those that came commented on it very favorably. It has everything except good drawing power. Attendance was somewhat below average. It is too bad because a lot who stayed away would have liked it. The new players speak English with very little accent. Some very thrilling moments are included in it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played May 14.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

LITTLE FOXES, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—To begin with, the advertising showed characters in costumes of a past era. This is the same as though we were to advise our people openly not to attend. Secondly, this is no picture for a small town. Running time, 115 minutes. Played May 3-4.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING: Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy—Very good draw and, of course, those who came thought it very good. Made a profit on this showing.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING: Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy, Fibber and Molly McGee—A rain storm on opening day put a stop to local farm work so every radio fan in the district turned out for this show. Business was near-record proportions. They came out of curiosity and the picture didn't let them down. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

VALLEY OF THE SUN: Lucille James, James Craig—A well-mounted western that pleased the action fans. Running time, 84 minutes. Played April 23-25. —Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CADET GIRL: Carole Landis, George Montgomery—Fair on double feature. Some said they liked it.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

CONFIRM OR DENY: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett—As we knew it would, this flopped here. Any picture that has any dealings with war is just wasted here. We can't get our patrons in to see them and if we were smart we'd never play them.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—Good draw. Fair western. Guess everyone here who can read had read this story and decided to see the 20th Century-Fox version of it.—Al Aliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

RISE AND SHINE: Jack Oakie, Walter Brennan—Did well by us even though football has gone and been forgotten. We liked it.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

ROXIE HART: Ginger Rogers, George Montgomery—Ran this with "Helzapoppin" and, of course, had a very good crowd. After a somewhat disappointing beginning, this settles down to one of the funniest trial scenes ever filmed. I couldn't have played a double feature with more hilarity in it. Ginger Rogers does an outstanding job of a peculiar role. I should think any audience would like it. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 15-16.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SMALL TOWN DEB: Jane Withers, Cobina Wright, Jr.—Once again Jane did her best with what they gave her, but even her best couldn't make anything out of a Class "C" picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 8-9.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

SONG OF THE ISLANDS: Betty Grable, Victor Mature—This is a fine musical show in color and business was satisfactory. Play it as soon as possible.

SONG OF THE ISLANDS: Betty Grable, Victor Mature—A beautiful and entertaining picture. Business was above average for recent weeks. Give it your best days. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 3-5.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

SWAMP WATER: W. Huston, Walter Brennan, Ann Baxter—This was a thriller and pleased our weekend crowd nearly 100 per cent. Business was off on account of bad rural roads but it did a pretty fair business anyway. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WEEKEND IN HAVANA: Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, John Payne—Good musical in color. Nice draw. No kicks.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

YANK IN THE R.A.F.: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Good picture that didn't do the outstanding business expected from the local and national build-up it received. But business good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 16-18.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

BROOKLYN ORCHID: Ralph Byrd, Virginia Vale—Hal Roach streamliner which is a swell added feature for any program. It is funny and gets plenty of laughs. Running time, 52 minutes. Played May 11-16.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

NIAGARA FALLS: Marjorie Woodworth, Tom Brown—A streamliner which is nice light comedy. It is just the thing for an added feature to round out a short show. Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts are together again in this and they are still funny. Running time, 43 minutes. Played April 23-29.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

TWIN BEDS: George Brent, Joan Bennett—Good comedy, but had a little too much repetition. Mischa Auer steals the show. Patrons laughed from beginning to end. Played week and a half. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 30-May 9.—Robert Berezin, Elgin Theatre, Ottawa, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Universal

BACK STREET: Charles Boyer, Margaret Sulavan—Well acted and dialogue recorded perfectly but this type of picture simply will not go over in this community. The reason—moves too slowly—our fans like a little action in their entertainment. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 14-15.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Can. Mining community patronage.

BACK STREET: Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullavan—Played this late but it was enjoyed by my adult audience. It did not do the business that I had expected as Boyer is not popular here. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 2.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

BAD LANDS OF DAKOTA: Ann Rutherford, Robert Stack—One of the better class westerns than just the ordinary mill run of horse operas. Give us more of this type. Running time, 73 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Nick Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

HELLZAPOPPIN: Olsen & Johnson, Martha Raye—Played this with "Roxie Hart" mainly through a quirk in booking and, of course, we had a very good crowd. This is the craziest picture ever made and had my bunch in an unroar from beginning to end. Afterward a few claimed they did not like it but they were in the minority. If you had heard the laughter you would have been surprised at its volume. Personally I got a big kick out of it but I suppose some of you will have troubles because your crowd won't get a lot of its humor. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 15-16.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

NICE GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone—This is the second Durbin to play in this location. It was enjoyed better than "It Started With Eve." Comments all good. Running time, 103 minutes. Played April 27-29.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NORTH TO THE KLONDIKE: Brod Crawford, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Poor, half done, and that's giving is credit. No business. A good title and cast but just a big disappointment for those who saw it.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT: Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt—This would have been more effective as a straight drama. However, we had no complaints and business was no worse than usual. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 6-7.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

KINGS ROW: Ann Sheridan, Robert Cummings, Ronald Reagan—By all means, play it. One of the best this season. Acting tops by all. Ann Sheridan shows she's at home in either a musical or drama. Her first really big part. Running time, 127 minutes. Played May 4-6.—Nick Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

MALTESE FALCON, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor—A better class of mystery thriller that failed to do business, possibly because of excessive length. Running time, 100 minutes. Played April 13-15.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW: Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman—A blues-blitzer. No extra business but those who came had a real good time. Running time, 79 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 4—Billy Gilbert and his little Chinese friend entertained our audience with the story of Billy's tour. Comedy by Gilbert cannot be equaled. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Paramount

RKO Radio

JUNGLE JAUNT: Sportscope—Cute scenes of live animals the crowd seemed to enjoy. Running time. 10 minutes.—W. V. Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

WHEN AIR RAIDS STRIKE: March of Time—Interesting, instructive and timely. Was well received. Running time, 18 minutes.—Delmar C. Fox. Fox The-

Twentieth Century-Fox

PLAYTIME IN HAWAII: Sports Review—America's beautiful playground in Hawaii, with all its sport—fishing, aquaplaning, outrigger-canoe racing, and its easy way of living is definitely an extraordinary feature that will be enjoyed by all, as it was here. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison Theatre, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

United Artists

BATTLE FOR OIL, THE: World in Action—This is an outstanding subject in a series that has proved to be every bit as good as the "March of Time." Our patrons look forward to seeing them. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Can. Mining community patronage.

Universal

BAGDAD DADDY: Musical—Mediocre entertainment. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Sask., Can. Rural and small town patronage.

BLACKSMITH DENTIST: Stranger Than Fiction—Good. Running time, 9 minutes.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

JINGLES BELLES: Musical with Gloria Jean—Excellent. It's been a long time since my customers have shown so much appreciation for a short subject. Running time, 18 minutes.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MENACE OF THE RISING SUN: Two Reel Special—On the order of "March of Time" and just as good. Running time, 20 minutes.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

RHYTHM REVEL: Musical—Although this short subject has no outstanding stars, it was well received here. The usual brand of comedy, plus a little music, all tend to lighten everyone's troubles, and who can ask for more? We need more and more of this type of good clean fun! Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, New Jersey State Prison Theatre, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

IN THE COURTS

ASCAP Loses Move for BMI Suit Appeal

Application by ASCAP for permission to appeal to the N. Y. Court of Appeals from a denial by lower courts of its motion to dismiss the test suit filed against it by BMI and the Edward B. Marks Music Corp. was unanimously denied last week by the Appellate Division of the N. Y. Supreme Court. The only recourse left to ASCAP is a motion directly to the Court of Appeals for leave to review.

Suit was filed last year by BMI to determine the radio rights to songs in cases when the publishing house joins BMI while the composers remain members of ASCAP. The Supreme Court has refused to dismiss the BMI complaint for legal insufficiency and has ordered ASCAP to file its answer.

Discontinue Harris Action

Dismissal of the plagiarism suit of Madge Christie against Sam H. Harris, George Kaufman and Edna Ferber was ordered last week by Federal Judge Edward Conger, in New York, after trial. Judge Conger ruled that there was no similarity between plaintiff's play, "Through the Looking Glass," and the defendants' Broadway production, "Stage Door."

Argument Over Theatre

Damages of $25,000 are sought in a suit filed in the Federal Court at St. Louis against Sam Komm, operator of the New Merry Widow Theatre, South Side subsequent run house. A. Sydney and Henry R. Johnson, former operators of the house, are the plaintiffs. They charge Komm forced them to sell their business to him through false representations.

Court Refuses to End Stockholders' "Bioff Suit"

Holding that the ten year statute of limitations for conspiracies applied, N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Charles B. McLoughlin last week denied an application of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., to dismiss parts of the complaint filed by stockholders against it and its directors and officers as barred by the lapse of time. The suit is one of a series brought to compel repayment by company officials of all monies extorted by Willie Bioff and George E. Browne.

The court also refused to dismiss a second cause of action which claimed misrepresentation on the part of Warner officials in making payments. The defendants had attacked the second cause of action as insufficient in law. The opinion by the court pointed out that the complaint asserted that the stockholders had no knowledge of the payments until the criminal trial of Browne and Bioff. For the purposes of the motion, the allegations of the complaint must be accepted as true, the court said.

Monogram Pictures Corp., Pathe Pictures, Ltd., and W. Ray Johnson and William Gell, presidents of the two companies, were named defendants Monday in a breach of contract suit for $225,000 damages, filed in the Federal Court, New York, by Arthur Levey. Plaintiff seeks commissions allegedly due him for arranging a distribution contract between the two companies.

According to the complainant, Monogram, in August, 1936, promised to pay him five per cent of any monies earned if he would bring about a deal for the distribution of Monogram product in the United Kingdom by Pathe. In February, 1937, a contract was signed which gave Pathe distribution rights on Monogram until the end of 1942, the complaint states. Monogram is charged with refusing to continue commission payments after April 30, 1941, although $50,000 back commissions and $175,000 in estimated future payments are allegedly still due under the contract.

Withhold Paramount Decision

New York Supreme Court Justice Benvenga, last Friday, reserved decision on the motion to dimiss the suit of Jessie Remsay, as assignee of Campbell and Connelly, Ltd., against Paramount.

The plaintiff charged that Paramount obtained rights to the song, "Memphis Blues," from Mercer Morris, Inc., but alleges that the predecessor of that company, Joe Morris Music Co., sold the licensing rights to the plaintiff.

Sues Paramount

A plagiarism suit for an injunction and an accounting against Paramount Pictures and Famous Music Corp. was filed this week in the Federal Court, New York, by Emmerich Kalman. The plaintiff claims that the song, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," which was sung by Mary Martin in the film of the same title infringes upon the plaintiff's composition "Heut' Nacht Hab' Ich" written by him in 1930.

Allegheny Fair Cancelled

One of America's largest outdoor fairs usually strong competition for theatres during the first week of September, the annual Allegheny County Fair, will be suspended for the duration of the war, it was announced this week by George Kelly, county parks director of Pittsburgh. More than $10,000 had already been allotted for preliminary expenditures for this year's fair. Army units are now using part of South Park where the Fair was held.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE JOINER

Find the manager who is a member of a large number of organizations and you'll find a successful showman. One shouldn't have to look too far for him, because the average showman is by nature a "joiner". He is a member of the Rotary, Lions, Elks or Kiwanis Clubs; he is a member, and, more often than not, an officer, of the local Chamber of Commerce. Sometimes, he takes up politics in a small way, running for the City Council or the Board of Education, or taking some official post that requires a lot of hard work and a lot of the time nobody else thinks he can spare. Then, of course, he is a member of his church, a lodge or two, and a country club.

That's all important stuff because the man who establishes himself as a permanent member of his community, and an active one to boot, will justify the position he holds as purveyor of his community's entertainment—in itself a big responsibility.

A few years ago it was impossible for a circuit manager to become active in the community. Furthermore, it was discouraged. In those days, it was customary to shift a man around so often that his family was always a jump or two behind him, he no sooner made friends in one place than he was transferred to another. So district, division and zone managers and supervisors told their men to keep their noses to the grindstones and sell the theatres—not themselves.

In this connection, a letter from Round Tabler Frank Templin, of the Princess Theatre, Kendallville, Ind., says: "Too few managers have the okay from their superiors to make the outside contacts so necessary to help put this business where it should stand in the eyes of the public. They are near-sighted".

Before we're interrupted by objections, we'll answer them with Mr. Templin's assistance. No, the manager does not have to be in the theatre every night. He does not have to stay until the last patron is out of the house; nor must he see that the show is put out for the delivery truck, or see that all the exits are closed. Here's Templin on that angle: "No good manager need lock the front door at night after the show, if he surrounds himself with the proper help. That same effort, unlocking another door to the theatre, will pay greater returns, when the manager does the unlocking, and there are plenty of doors yet to be unlocked".

These are words of wisdom, indeed, and they can be almost universally applied. Kendallville has 5,431 people—a small town, you might say. But the same thing applies to cities of 54,000 and 540,000, according to showmen in such metropoli.

Nothing we have said contradicts that other primary principle of good management—to be on the floor when patrons enter the theatre and when they leave it. An occasional night off for a lodge meeting or to fulfill the duties of a city councilman or to attend a vestry meeting in the church is just as essential to the success of the theatre as the presence of the manager on the floor, in the opinion of some of this country's smartest showmen. So, if the manager surrounds himself with proper assistance, he may leave his theatre and indulge in these external activities with a clear conscience and a knowledge that he is serving his employer better off the premises than on them.

We Can Do It Again

In the past few months, we showmen have been asked to make collections in our theatres for the Red Cross, for Army and Navy Emergency Relief and twice for the U.S.O. Beginning this week, we are going to start selling War Stamps and Bonds in every one of our theatres.

We're doing it not only because it's our duty but because it is just a small part of what we can do to aid the nation's war effort. We're doing it so that after the holocaust we'll still have the right to practise the art of showmanship.

Think about it. Do you think there is such a thing as what we call a showman in Germany today?

On the Spot Selling

Ability to adapt today's news to selling tomorrow's shows is a sure test of a good showman. Lloyd H. Rollins of the Mayfair, Bridgeton, Me., has met the challenge. Before sugar rationing had taken effect, he was on the spot with small envelopes for restaurants to use for each diner's portion of sugar. His next show was advertised on them.

There's an example of a stunt in good taste and, at the same time, timely enough so that the advertising medium itself attracted the attention of the prospective patron.

In the same class is the coup executed by Warner Bros.' home office publicity department this week, unveiling a tablet to George M. Cohan at the Savoy Theatre in New York where he made his metropolitan debut. The papers all carried "Yankee Doodle Dandy" in their stories about the event—but they had to because it was on the plaque.

Showmen Aid War Effort

Although the campaign to sell War Stamps and Bonds in the nation's theatres was not scheduled to begin until Saturday, May 30th, thousands of showmen throughout the country "jumped the gun" and have already sold hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of War Stamps and Bonds. It is estimated by Arthur Mayer of the War Activities Committee that one-third of all the theatres in the country were already selling War Stamps and Bonds before the campaign was officially under way.

Yet, the war activities of showmen are by no means confined to the sale of War Bonds and Stamps; on the contrary: the country's showmen are heavily engaged in war activities of all kinds. Here are a few of the entries submitted for the Quigley War Showmanship Award.

Jack Hamilton, manager of Schine's Scotia Theatre, Scotia, N. Y., which recently opened its doors for the first time, played the WAC short, "Fighting Fire Bombs," and arranged with the local Fire Department to put a display in the lobby showing how to extinguish a bomb. "It was very interesting," says Jack, "and the patrons went for it in a big way."

Bob Collins, manager of the State Theatre, Modesto, Calif., has inaugurated a "Buy War Stamps" jingle contest, open to all children. Each Saturday prizes of War Stamps are awarded to the winners. Sears Roebuck and Co. furnish the prizes and a window display on the contest.

The tremendous lobby of Loew's State, Cleveland, was utilized by Ed Fisher for a display of Red Cross equipment including uniforms, manuals describing the organization's work and various types of First Aid equipment.

Newton Brunson of the Rialto, Phoenix, Ariz., an old Legionnaire, knows the value of a sendoff for the boys joining the Army. He promoted the city fathers to give each boy a box containing cigarettes, gum, a comb, tooth paste and brush, soap, pencil, post card, etc.

With 300 Army Signal Corps men already in Athens, Georgia, and 2,000 Naval students arriving next month, Frank Bickerstaff, city manager for Lucas & Jenkins, spoke to the unit commanders and as a result this sign was posted in the theatre lobbies.

A typical naval recruit was selected for honors on the stage of the St. George Theatre, Staten Island, N. Y. He was feted throughout a day in a program arranged by Edgar Goth, director of advertising and publicity of the Fabian Theatres on Staten Island. Quite an affair was made of this day with 250 sailors invited to attend. Coffee, cigarettes, doughnuts, soda, floral decorations, etc., were promoted for the men. The typical recruit was supplied with a "date," was taken to meet the Borough President and was publicly congratulated on the stage of the theatre by the officer in charge.

Noting how many light globes were thrown away when the metal could still be used, Louis Charninsky, manager of the Capitol, Dallas, Tex., placed boxes in the lobby in which old globes could be deposited. Naturally, the theatre deposited a great many but the pile acted as a come-on for the many patrons.

The Orpheum Theatre in Philadelphia, managed by R. Lee Kline, keeps copy urging the purchase of War Stamps and Bonds on its marquee at all times. In addition, the Red Cross or the U.S.O. is also given a marquee spot.

The method for making collections for the various drives such as Army and Navy Emergency Relief, U.S.O. or Red Cross is often a matter for considerable discussion among managers. Boyd F. Scott, manager of the Broadway Theatre, Lubbock, Texas, finds that music puts patrons in the right mood for these collections. The Star Spangled Banner trailer is used in advance and the audience participates in the singing. Following that the Navy Relief trailer was shown and while the ushers made the collections a military march was played.

Clayton Cornell, manager of Schine's State Theatre, Tupper Lake, N. Y., is also a leader in the movement to give boys joining the Army a big sendoff. Clayt is general chairman of the organization in charge of this work. Another movement sponsored by the group of which he is the head contemplates furnishing to each home with a member of the family in the service a shield for display in the window with as many stars on it as there are members of the family in the armed forces. Also planned is erection of a plaque listing the names of all local men in the armed forces. Clayt is also interested in obtaining god-fathers and god-mothers for each of the boys for the purpose of exchanging letters for the duration. In addition to all this Clayt's organization is conducting a drive to have as many stores and homes as possible pledge themselves to display the flag every day for the duration of the war.

Loew's Poli in Waterbury, Conn., managed by Ed Fitzpatrick, is all out in the war effort. Fitz borrowed a machine from a penny arcade; for each 25 cents worth of stamps purchased, a patron was allowed three cracks at a revolving Jap. To open

BUY WAR SAVINGS BONDS AND STAMPS

That's Artie Cohn of Warner Bros.' Roosevelt Theatre, Philadelphia, standing beside a huge picture of General MacArthur. This week, Artie added a Victory Booth for the sale of War Bonds.

the drive Memorial Day, Fitz arranged with the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars for representation in the annual parade. Ushers of all Waterbury theatres were to march in the parade in full uniform, carrying banners announcing the sale of War Stamps and Bonds in all houses. Radio stations will broadcast news of the drive and also a ceremony at the reviewing stand where the Mayor is to purchase the first Stamp. Six good window displays have been lined up plugging the sale of Stamps and Bonds. When any patron purchases a large enough number of stamps, the bandleader appearing on the stage that week will give away an autographed record or piece of sheet music. Employees' stamp purchases will be recorded in the lobby on a board under the heading, "Loew employees do their part." Under construction is a giant display board with headlines simulating a newspaper: "Allies Retake Bataan and Corregidor; Singapore Recaptured." Underneath copy reads, "If you want to see these headlines come true, buy War Stamps and Bonds today."

Russian War Relief Show

Going all out for the new war effort, City Manager Bud Silverman at the Schine Riviera, in Rochester, N. Y., arranged a benefit to aid the Russian War Relief in connection with the opening of "Our Russian Front," which played simultaneously at six of the Schine theatres there.

A committee was formed of the leading citizens, who in turn contacted all local organizations to aid in the selling of tickets. The campaign opened with a preview of the picture to prominent localities representing civic organizations, Board of Education, etc. Tickets were sold from public booths in prominent spots in all leading department stores, hotel lobbies, Chamber of Commerce, Rochester Civic Club, Women's Contemporary Club.

The local dailies carried 1,400 lines of free publicity with special columns devoted entirely to the picture and the cause for which it was being shown. Radio coverage included two free announcements two weeks in advance of playdates run in conjunction with the leading department stores, while news commentators devoted time for picture plugs. School tieups included special announcements, which were made to students at the University of Rochester by one of the history professors, and announcements were made in the assembly halls of the grade schools and high schools throughout the city.

Electricity Donated

Rochester Gas & Electricity company contributed as their share free power and electricity for the special show and 10,000 special heralds were promoted and distributed in churches, libraries and club houses. Restaurants in the business and residential sections carried copy on all their menus.

Frank Bickerstaff, city manager for Lucas and Jenkins in Athens, Ga., has printed small cards with copy reading: "War takes money. America needs yours! This 25 cents will buy 12 bullets. Use it to buy a 25 cent War Stamp at this box office. A quarter was inserted in slots on the card and whenever a quarter was given a patron in change he got it this way. "Bick" reports many stamps sold in this way.

Arthur Mayer at the Rialto Theatre in New York reports that he has had his cashiers giving Stamps in change for some time.

City Manager Clyde Smith of the Malco Theatre in Hot Springs, Ark., got publicity in all the papers when all of the Malco employees in the city signed personal pledges to buy War Stamps and Bonds. Not only did the papers publicize what the Hot Springs employees were doing in that respect but it reported that throughout the states in which Malco has theatres that employees have pledged themselves to purchase War Stamps and Bonds.

Syd Poppay, manager of Warner's Majestic Theatre, Gettysburg, Pa., sold "Captain of the Clouds" with model planes hanging from his marquee and a large sign admonishing patrons to buy defense bonds. In fact, government institutional copy relating to defense bonds and stamps is incorporated on all heralds. For "The Bugle Sounds," he arranged for the ROTC unit at Gettysburg College to parade to the theatre. A parade was also promoted for "Kathleen," school children marching and carrying banners reading: "Welcome Shirley Temple to Gettysburg."

War Showmanship Award Rulings

The Quigley War Showmanship Award is in addition to the regular Quigley Awards. It is neither inclusive nor exclusive of the other awards.

The Award will be made on the basis of the performances in service by the theatre to the war effort. It will be made to what the judges decide is the best contribution to the theatre's showmanship.

A single idea may be confined to a window, contest, newspaper or program publicity, street, stunt, lobby display, ad or ad series, newspaper section, radio tie-in, etc.

A single promotion may include more than one slant, providing all slants relate to the original idea. Thus, a single contest promotion may be carried in newspapers, on the radio, in windows, ads, lobby, etc.

Where entrants choose to submit a complete campaign, the single idea or promotion for Awards consideration must be marked accordingly.

No fancy entries are necessary. Costly and time-using "Gingerbread" decorations are not encouraged. Showmanship only counts.

Evidence proving authenticity of each entry must be submitted, such as photos, tear sheets, programs, heralds, ads, letters, etc.

Street Ballyhoo Aids Krolick on "Gold Dust"

Obtaining a mule from the city stables, Art Krolick at the Century, in Rochester for his street bally on "The Gold Rush," promoted all the equipment necessary for gold prospecting and tied it to the animal's back for realism. The men led the mule about town, one dressed as Chaplin and the other as a prospector, and distributed lucky stage money, mustaches, masks and coloring contest heralds. The coloring contest heralds were also distributed at five and dime chain stores with winners' offerings posted in the theatre lobby.

Miniature Chaplin souvenir hats were sold on candy stand two weeks in advance of the showing and also distributed free to children prior to the opening. For his radio tieup, Krolick offers guest tickets to those listeners who recognized titles of songs after one or two bars had been played.

Emerson Invites Mothers To "The Fleet's In"

Through the cooperation of the local Navy Recruiting office and the Omaha World-Herald, Ted Emerson at the Omaha ahead of "The Fleet's In" extended an invitation to all mothers whose sons had joined the Navy since the Pearl Harbor episode to be guests of the management on the opening night. This brought extra publicity breaks and art in the papers and built a lot of goodwill for the theatre.

For his street bally, Ted used a lad dressed in sailor uniform with a girl on each arm, the three walking through crowded sections talking and laughing. As folks would turn to look at them, they were greeted by a sign on the backs of each with copy: "The Fleet's In." The entire house staff was dressed in sailor outfits a week in advance and during the run, while a juke box in front of the theatre played "Anchors Aweigh."

School Board Comes Through For Nelson on "Clouds"

Reporting the event as the first time that Jack Nelson at the Capitol, in North Bay, Ontario, could crack the local School Board to have the teachers announce to all school children his opening of "Captains of the Clouds," the Round Tabler succeeded in getting his message before all students. Jack was further successful in having the commander of the local Military Camp announce the opening to a parade of some 12,000 soldiers.

Various merchants plugged the date on their radio programs in addition to devoting their windows to appropriate tiein displays. Arrangements were also made for a special nurses' matinee, which was duly publicized. One of the highlights was the publication of a special edition of the Daily Nugget, which featured stories, art stills, etc., on the picture.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

THIS ABOVE ALL (Twentieth Century-Fox): Since Joan Fontaine dons a uniform as a member of the WAAF, a recruiting office may be set up in the lobby for various "women in uniform" organizations. A search could be held for the best looking local girl in uniform through the cooperation of the American Red Cross, American Women's Voluntary Services and other groups. Another way to cash in on the "Woman in War" angle would be to locate the woman who has done the most outstanding work in any of the voluntary war activities in your community. Since the picture was made from one of the current best sellers, bookstore tieins may be had through the Grosset & Dunlap promotion of its special edition.

THIS GUN FOR HIRE (Paramount): In its New York engagement this was sold to crime and mystery story fans. For a lobby museum, cooperation of the Crime Prevention Bureau of the local police department for a display of guns taken from convicted criminals can be obtained on the "Crime doesn't pay" angle. A series of three-day teaser ads is available, as are mats on a three-day contest for newspaper coverage which includes cuts of famous movie characters who offered their guns for hire. For juvenile attention, paper guns with picture copy may be used.

THEY ALL KISSED THE BRIDE (Columbia): The title suggests June brides, wedding bells and rice. Merchant cooperation may be sought through a tieup with a furniture store to set up a window display of a bride's "victory" apartment—with furnishings using a minimum of essential war materials. For a street ballyhoo an auto bedecked with old shoes, ribbon streamers, and cans appropriately lettered can tour the town. If gas rationing proscribes this, use a tandem bicycle. A newspaper contest, showing stills of brides and grooms from previous pictures, may offer guest tickets to those correctly identifying the set. A "Kiss the Axis Good-bye" booth in the lobby, with attractive girls on hand to sell War Stamps and Bonds for kisses, would sell the picture and bonds, too.

SUICIDE SQUADRON (Republic): This offers music store tieins, since a number of scenes take place in concert halls throughout the country. Aviator contests and model airplane contests are available; photos of ace aviators may be procured from newspaper morgues, one each day with a line or two of biography, prizes to be awarded to those identifying the flyer. A set of 35 fashion stills can be obtained from Republic exchanges, showing Sally Gray in sports outfits, street dresses, evening gowns and negligees.

IN THIS OUR LIFE (Warner Brothers): Bette Davis, Academy kudos and the box-office values of the rest of the cast, Olivia de Havilland, George Brent, Charles Coburn, Frank Craven and Billie Burke can be exploited. For selling the picture as a poignant drama, the newspaper ads feature cuts of the two feminine stars with catchlines such as "Born Sisters, Sworn Enemies". Since the current Ladies' Home Journal features a story by Miss Davis titled "Could Your Husband Take It?", a contest could be planted offering guest tickets to the best letters, for and against her stand, contest blanks to be inserted in the current issue of the Journal. It can be adapted as a lobby contest, blowing up the article. Radio coverage could include feminine commentators and local career women in a discussion on Miss Davis' views on modern marriage.

Pollock Promotes Dorsey For Personal Appearance

Since Tommy Dorsey was in town for the University prom ahead of Les Pollock's opening of "Ship Ahoy" at Loew's Theatre, the enterprising theatreman arranged for the maestro to make a personal appearance at the theatre. Dorsey's records were played over the public address system at the ball park, Pollock also arranging for a picture plug during the seventh inning.

A console record player was promoted by Les and used out front ahead and during the run of the picture featuring the Dorsey recordings and a lifesize blowup of the musician was planted in front of the theatre calling attention to the personal appearance. For newspaper coverage, Les planted a contest with autographed Dorsey records awarded as prizes.

Thompson Overprints Papers

Securing 1,000 copies of his weekly paper, Albert B. Thompson, manager of the Park and Ritz Theatres, in North Vernon, Ind., overprinted the first page with copy "Hellzapoppin in North Vernon" as a teaser stunt ahead of his opening for that picture. In addition a two-column ad was placed on the front page.

Doubles Contest Held In Sydney for "Dawn"

The fact that Paulette Goddard was nominated the "Streamlined Venus" by American artists was used as the basis of a contest held ahead of "Hold Back the Dawn" by Mel Lawton and Hermann Flynn at the Prince Edward Theatre, in Sydney, Australia. Photos of the star together with her measurements were run in cooperating papers, to aid in the search for her Australian counterpart. The winner was awarded a cash prize and an all-expense paid trip to Melbourne. Interest was kept alive by the reproduction in newspapers of photos of the contestants.

Ahead of "Birth of the Blues," the theatremen also staged a radio contest in an effort to locate the best local blues singer. The station cooperating also plugged Crosby recordings, after each of which a picture plug was injected. Prizes were awarded to winners of each week's competitions, the final judging taking place at a leading hotel.

School Cooperation Sought By Leighton for "Animal"

Contacting heads of Franklin and Marshall College and the State Teachers College, Bert Leighton at the Grand, in Lancaster, Pa., secured permission to have the pressbook covers of "The Male Animal" placed on their bulletin boards along with playdates, and copy to the effect that the setting for the picture is a midwestern university. Special window displays of Westmore cosmetics with posters carrying copy "How to Attract the Male Animal" were featured.

For his engagement of "Mister V," Bert distributed title gummed stickers to all stores for window use, and placed stills mounted on pressbook covers at schools and in prominent stores.

Animated Lobby Helps Lee Exploit "Dumbo"

Round Tabler Fred Lee of the Capitol Theatre, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., made a definite play for adult as well as children patronage for "Dumbo" by running ads on the Inquiring Photographer style, using names and quotes from adults who saw the picture.

Lee also arranged an outstanding animated display in the lobby when he managed to borrow an animated Mickey Mouse and elephant from a local department store and arranged lucky number bag contest and display with distributor of Victor Records on hit tunes of film. Displays were set up in all the music stores as well as 5-and-10-cent store music counters.

Notaro's Recorded Program

For the stage engagement of Tommy Tucker and His Band at the Columbia Theatre, in Sharon, Pa., Pat Notaro landed four half-hour recorded programs over WPIC with plugs for his appearance. On the opening day, Notaro also promoted backstage interviews and broadcast the first 15 minutes of the program with plenty of plugs for the show.

Tompkins Features Mother's Day Party

Having proved such a definite success last year, Chick Tompkins at the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind., again staged a Mother's Day party at his theatre to which all local mothers over 70 were invited. Advertising well in advance Chick offered free transportation and also promoted flowers which were presented to each of the 101 mothers who were on hand for the festivities.

Tompkins also devoted the front page of his program to a tribute to mothers and also secured the cooperation of a local hospital which supplied nurses to go with each bus to pick up the women. The nurses also stayed in attendance during the show in case of an emergency.

Cartoon Coloring Contest Nets Harris Full Page Ad

Cartoon coloring contest employing all of the well known cartoon characters and obtaining a merchant sponsor for each one netted Ed Harris, manager of the Glendale, Glendale, Calif., a full page of publicity absolutely gratis.

The whole stunt was tied up to the war effort by awarding War Stamps to the winners of the contest. There were eight ads on the cooperative page, each featuring a different cartoon character; those included were Donald Duck, Mickey Mouse, the Goof, Bugs Bunny and Popeye. The figures were large enough so the kids could color them. Copy in each of the ads tied up with the cartoon characters.

Utilizes Empty Store Window

Ahead of "Gone With the Wind" at the Capitol Theatre, in Steubenville, Ohio, M. G. Felder promoted use of empty store windows adjacent to the theatre and displayed scene stills from the picture.

King's "Cowboy" Ballyhoo

To sell "Ride 'em Cowboy" at the Ritz Theatre, in McGehee, Ark., C. B. King dressed one of his staff in cowboy attire and had him cover the area with appropriate back banner. Two other members of the staff distributed circulars house-to-house in the surrounding area.

Yovan Promotes Co-op Page

Reporting on the activities of his assistant, Zeva Yovan, Manager Sam Gilman at Loew's, in Harrisburg, sends along tearsheet of a full page of co-op ads promoted in advance of "The Jungle Book." In addition, Yovan also landed a break on the front page of the Sunday edition of one of the dailies, while cooperating merchants came through with window displays.

Rogers' Mother's Day Contest

In connection with the opening of "Courtship of Andy Hardy" at Loew's Granada, in Cleveland, Carl Rogers offered a typical Mother contest ahead of Mother's Day, in which 14 local merchants participated. Each store was provided with ballots which were distributed to customers, space being provided for the name and address of holder's choice. Each store in addition displayed cards announcing the contest and picture credit and came through with a cash award which was presented to the winner.

Cocks Ties "Fantasia" to Music Appreciation Week

Harvey Cocks of the Paramount Theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind., took advantage of Music Appreciation Week as a means of tieing in with the local music societies for an effective campaign for his engagement of "Fantasia."

Special screenings were held for the leaders of the local music societies and those of the surrounding communities. Through the cooperation of the superintendent of the high school system a special children's matinee was arranged for the Saturday following the opening. "Fantasia" records were rotated in the music classes of the 24 grade schools before and during the engagement.

The News-Sentinel Boys' Carrier Band which led the Midwest in War Savings Stamps sales for carrier boys were guests at the special children's screening. At the conclusion of the performance the entire band assembled on the Paramount stage where local representatives of the Post Office and Treasury Department awarded special certificates of merit to winners for their efforts in the War Bond Drive.

Old Model Car Bally Aids on "Virginian"

George R. Peters, Loew's Colonial Theatre, Reading, Pa., for his promotion of "The Vanishing Virginian," promoted an old Ford, with driver made up to represent a "Southern colonel," and used it three days in advance and three days current, touring downtown streets, stopping at schools during recess periods and at factories at lunch times and changes of shifts. A "walking book" was used during the same period. Sidewalk stencils also proved effective aids.

Book marks were enclosed in monthly mailing lists of the Book Mart and Berkshire News Company, and were also distributed in book stores, circulating and public libraries. An advance screening was held for the local Motion Picture Forum, at which were present representatives of various women's organizations, the mayor, principals and English teachers of the high schools and other civic groups.

Greenway Features Contest For "Playmates" Opening

To usher in his campaign on "Playmates" at Poli's Palace, in Hartford, Fred Greenway concentrated on a newspaper contest ticket awards to those submitting the best 50-word essay on "Why I Like Kay Kyser's Style of Music." Since the picture opened a week before Easter, a local merchant was promoted for a layette to be presented as a gift from Kyser to the first baby born on Easter Sunday. Other contests that were featured included an anagram stunt over Station WTHT, whereby guest tickets were awarded to those submitting most words out of the title. The Station also held a memory contest offering tickets to the picture to those correctly identifying tunes played.

For his street bally, Greenway dressed an usher in the traditional cap and gown with appropriate theatre copy and had him parade main streets three days ahead. The entire house staff was also dressed in keeping. For school cooperation, a cash prize was given to the student presenting the best charcoal drawing of Kay Kyser.

Summer Selling As Usual But New Ideas This Year

Summer selling continues as usual despite rationing of refrigerants, conservation of power and a ban on new cooling systems.

Theatremen across the country are planning on lobby flower shows, tieups with local dairies for a cow-milking stunt on the stage, amateur shows, etc. Other items of interest include booking of sports shorts, such as golf, fishing, tennis, etc. Dance contests might be held on the stage one a week with a search for the most popular team. Merchants could be promoted in this connection for prizes to be awarded to the winners. A contest for the best "cool" slogan could be featured with a promoted prize given to the winner, and as a teaser, a female member of the staff might be dressed in a bathing suit and planted in a cooperating store window with photo of the house cooling plant as a background, and copy, "Cool as a lake breeze". The girl could snap pictures of persons who pause to look at the display and post a number of the pictures in the lobby of the theatre the following day, giving free admissions to those identifying themselves.

In Madison, Wis., at the Capitol Theatre, Marlowe Conner has already printed up some 5,000 stickers of a size to fit inside of match books with copy reading: "It's hot for the Japs, but it's cool for you at the Capitol Theatre. See your movies comfortably cool."

For his lobby display, Marlowe is featuring an igloo with catchline: "Eskimotion Picture Igloo. Comfortably Air Conditioned." The Round Tabler is also using the catchline for sig cuts. Other items in his campaign include advance and current trailers, window cards, bumper strips, etc.

With so much publicity given to the wearing of cotton this season, Wilbur Eckard, at Schine's Theatre, in Ashland, Ohio, comes through with the suggestion that a Cotton Fashion Show might be held on stage, with cooperating merchant supplying models and clothes. In addition to dresses, bathing suits can be modeled; in any event a complete women's outfit could be promoted for a door prize. Since the cotton industry has spent a young fortune on publicizing their fabrics, the merchants in town should be glad to capitalize on this publicity by getting some local goodwill with a show at the theatre.

Since replacement of cooling systems now in theatres is well nigh impossible for the duration, the RKO Theatres have issued instructions to their mechanics to keep them in top notch condition and to give the plants a thorough overhauling. Engineers have already been engaged these past few weeks in checking and repair work.

RKO's "Cool" Ad Slugs

At Gloversville, Seymour Morris, head of the Schine advertising and publicity department has issued a special manual: "Keep Cool, America", which contains suggestions for the theatremen to adapt to their situations.

For merchants co-op pages, the Schiners are working up a special page with a masthead "Keep Cool Gloversville". The various stores in town advertise cool dresses, hats, shoes, etc., while stories are also planted on this page regarding the theatres' cooling plant.

To sell the mothers, since many kids will be unable to go away this summer, copy is carried in ads, programs, heralds, etc., to the effect that the mothers can properly take care of their children and keep them off the hot streets by having them attend the theatre. All cashiers answer the 'phone with: "Good evening, this is Schine's Cool Blank Theatre."

It is also suggested that managers concentrate each week on some type of worker, contacting the factories with bulletins and cards, telling them not to dress up, but to come to the movies "just as you are" and enjoy the show in cool comfort. Special ads are being made up along these lines. Concentrating on the juvenile angle, posting around the city playgrounds is not neglected with different contests planned for which guest tickets are offered.

WARNERS TRUMPET "YANKEE DOODLE" TO BROADWAY

Treasury War Bond Sales Increased by $5,000,000; Scale Top Is $25,000

Warner Brothers opened "Yankee Doodle Dandy" at the Hollywood Theatre in New York on Friday with a fanfare and brilliance that was in sharp contrast to the dimout of a Broadway in wartime.

Without benefit of kleig lights or outside displays, banned by Army dimout orders, the premiere brought out prominent leaders of society, of theatrical, military and civic life, and a few others who could afford to buy War Bonds in amounts from $25 to $25,000, required as admission prices for the evening. The premiere was held under the auspices of the U. S. Treasury Department.

There were Army bands in the lobby, and placed inside, too, were microphones carrying descriptions of the proceedings over Station WMCA. But the lights were missing on both the outside and around much of the inner lobby—a typical wartime premiere.

Lucy Monroe sang "The Star Spangled Banner" in the center of a patriotic display. And on the screen and sound speaker, Warners brought back the songs and life of George M. Cohan, flag waver, morale builder and song and dance man of World War I. In the picture, starring James Cagney, Warners again introduced "Over There," "Grand Old Flag," "Yankee Doodle Boy" and others of the Cohan war song hits to a United States battling in a new and greater war.

Called $5,000,000 Premiere

The opening itself was unique as the first $5,000,000 premiere of a motion picture. Admission was only by the purchase of War Bonds in face value amounts ranging from $25,000 to $25 per seat. The New York War Savings Staff of the Treasury Department sponsored the opening, and a full week in advance a sellout of $5,500,000 worth of bonds was reported.

Positions in the loge, and choice orchestra seats, sold for a $25,000 bond. Other orchestra seats were scaled from $12,500 to $1,000 in bonds. Balcony seats were graded accordingly.

The biggest individual salesman and buyer of War Bonds was Herman Chopak, textile executive, who was desponsible for purchases of more than $1,000,000. Among other big buyers were Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Alvin and Irwin Untermyer, H. M. Warner, Major Albert Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eaton, Hiram Bloomingdale, Lady Mendl, Mrs. K. Wellington Koo, former Governor Alfred E. Smith, Mrs. William Greve, Stephen Ames.

Unions and organizations purchasing blocks included ILGWU Local 62, Musicians Local 802, ILGWU International, True Sisters, Jewish Federation of Women, Paper Box Makers Local 299, United Hatters-Cap and Millinery Workers, Bakery Factory Workers Local 50, Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, Textile Workers of America, International Fur and Leather Workers Union, ILGWU Local 22, United Retail and Wholesalers Union, Brewery Workers Union.

The premiere brought to New York a coast contingent including Lieut.-Col. J. L. Warner; S. Charles Einfeld; Hal B. Wallis, executive producer; William Cagney, associate producer; James Cagney, star; his sister, Jeanne Cagney, who plays Josie Cohan; Jimmy Starr, of the Los Angeles Herald-Express; Edwin L. Schallert, of the Los Angeles Times, and Louella Parsons.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" represents a negative investment of approximately $2,000,000.

Release plans beyond the twice daily roadshowing at the Hollywood, on an 83 cents to $2.20 scale, have not been completed. It is expected, however, that Warners will open "Yankee Doodle Dandy" early in the new season at key spots on an advanced price policy similar to that followed on "Sergeant York." The picture is to be sold separately by Warners, probably on the 50 per cent policy established by "Sergeant York" in the year of pre-release bookings which followed its Broadway debut.

Theatre Bills Die in N. Y.

Governor Herbert H. Lehman, New York, completed legislative action on 1942 bills last Sunday, among them two theatrical measures, both of which were vetoed without accompanying memorandum and cleared his desk for probable acceptance of a high position in the Federal government.

One, by Senator William T. Condon of Yonkers, would have repealed sections of the present law respecting fees charged by theatrical employment agencies. The five per cent flat fee would have been abolished and in its stead, each theatrical employment agency would have set up a schedule of fees subject to the approval of the License Commissioner in New York City or appropriate authority in other communities. The schedule of fees, to be posted in offices of each agency, would have been effective within 14 days of their posting except if the License Commissioner disapproved.

The other measure, a more serious subject, respected an amendment passed by the legislature to the State laws of 1940, which set the maximum ticket broker service "or scalp" charge as 75 cents above the printed premium price of any motion picture, legitimate theatre or sporting event ticket. The amendment, fought bitterly by sports editors of New York City newspapers, would have made an exemption only in cases where the owners or operators of theatres would not permit return of unsold tickets for redemption or credit. The bill had finally been passed under Assembly Rules Committee sponsorship.

Sidney Replaces Nayfack As MGM Studio Executive

Louis K. Sidney has succeeded Nicholas Nayfack on the MGM studio executive staff. Mr. Sidney had been an associate producer. Mr. Nayfack, an officer in the Navy, was to report for active duty at Washington shortly.

RKO Casts "Gildersleeve"

Harold Peary, the "Great Gildersleeve" of radio, has been assigned by RKO producer Tim Whelan to an important role in "Sweet and Hot," musical film starring Victor Mature. Mapy Cortes, Puerto Rican player, and Marcy McGuire, 16-year-old Chicago singer will also play in the picture.

Holleb, Ohio Censor

Kenneth C. Ray, director of education in charge of the Ohio censor board, appointed Lou Holleb as film inspector to check pictures throughout the State and to see that they have been passed by the board. Mr. Holleb's appointment was announced last week. He formerly operated the New Theatre in Columbus.

Cockerill Honored

Walter Cockerill, maintenance man at the Marks theatre, Oshawa, Quebec, was honored this week for his 25 years with the house, during an intermission in the performance. He was given an inscribed signet ring.

Mullen Joins 20th-Fox

Joseph Mullen, formerly with Warner Bros., has joined Twentieth Century-Fox and will be manager of the company's office in Mexico.

Ten Gentlemen from West Point

(Twentieth Century-Fox—Block 11)

Historical Melodrama with a Wallop

The story of the saving of West Point from the politicians in the wake of the Revolutionary War is told with all the color and vigor of a Grant or Custer among cronies in this thumping contribution to the archives of pictures-for-today. It opens in the halls of Congress and ends on the plains of Indiana, following at no time any of the worn trails of melodrama, historical or otherwise. It packs at least three jolts for any audience of American men, women and children, anywhere.

Like few films, but most good ones, this William Perlberg production cuts new lanes of travel for its punches, which Director Henry Hathaway delivers in steady succession with increasing power and unfaltering realism. The expected doesn't happen and the unexpected does, but it happens with all the logic and naturalness of life as it was lived in those years and, in the places where force prevails, still is. The job is probably Director Hathaway's all time best.

The period is some 15 or 20 years after the close of the Revolutionary War when a faction in Congress opposes retention of West Point as a military academy. A class of volunteer cadets is put through all the rigors of arbitrary discipline which an embittered commander can devise, in hope of enforcing their resignations and thus proving the academy a failure, but ten of them survive, and the academy endures to produce a succession of heroes—Lee, Grant, Custer, Pershing, MacArthur among them—for the nation.

In the handling of the brutality administered by the commanding officer, all of it just inside army regulations of discipline, producer, director and screenplaywright Richard Maibaum maintain a delicate balance of forces which puts the observers to severe emotional test without for a moment shocking him or easing his anxiety as to outcome. A game of Indian la crosse and a military punishment called "riding the cannon" are sequences without parallel in previous productions. A conflict with Indians, at the finish, is handled with none of the time-tarnished procedures. There is momentary resort to what qualifies generally as slapstick, for relief, but no more than is needed.

Performances of Laird Cregar as the post commandant, George Montgomery and John Sutton as rival cadets, Maureen O'Hara as the girl in the case, and Ward Bond as an army regular, are of the best, though the picture is powerful without respect to the high quality of their portrayals.

Previewed for the trade press at the Fox Wilshire theatre, Beverly Hills, where an audience which had just witnessed and enjoyed "My Gal Sal" gave unmistakable evidence of enjoying the previewed film to the full, winding up with a burst of applause for the West Point heroes whose portraits, flashed on the screen in the fadeout, close the picture with a wallop.—William R. Weaver.

Bambi

(Disney-RKO)

A New Disney

In "Bambi" Walt Disney is moving away from the world of fantasy where elephants fly, to a world of nature approached with the simplicity and charm of children. He has chosen the story, by Felix Salten, of the coming of age of a faun, setting it in a forest of breath-taking beauty, peopled by friendly animals. The only enemy is man, who shoots for sport and menaces their homes with fire.

It is a simpler, and yet more sophisticated story, which Perce Pearce has evolved, and the quiet dignity of the telling should appeal to all ages. There is humor and delight, as always, in the small, personalized animals, but there is power, too, in the majesty of the "princes" of the forest and in the vicious struggle of Bambi with a stag who threatens his mate.

Technically, "Bambi" surpasses Disney's previous creations, an advance which has come to be expected in each succeeding effort of this craftsman. The coloring is often muted with splendid, almost photographic effect, yet masterful suffusions of brilliant reds dominate some dramatic climaxes. The music, written by Frank Churchill and Edward H. Plumb, is more effective where it supplements the scene than in featured songs, although "Love Is a Song" makes a tuneful appeal. Both music and color are used to greater effect than ever before as dramatic aids.

The Disney cunning still creates irresistible characters like "Thumper," the rabbit whose lively curiosity and naive frankness run counter to his father's precepts. There is also "Flower," the self-conscious skunk, and a world-weary owl. Through these Bambi learns the child's world of the forest, sliding on frozen ponds and chasing butterflies. From his mother he learns to fear men, and with her death leaves childhood for an adolescent world of growing responsibilities. The story ends as it began, with the forest people gathering for a look at the new "prince," as Bambi becomes a father.

The lesson of the story is clear, but not overstressed. Something of the kindness man has learned to show the forest animals might have been portrayed. As it is, some fathers are going to have a hard time explaining their yearly hunting trips.

But above all, "Bambi" is entertainment, in its fascinating beauty of scene and sound, in the straight-forward telling of its story and in the charm it holds for all who have not outgrown the fancy of childhood. Also, it points new directions for this newest of screen media, a subordination of the "cuteness" which has seemed the greatest danger in cartoon features and a consequent increase in power and dramatic beauty.

Previewed at a screening for professional critics who chuckled often at the antics, commented audibly on the visual beauty, and clapped at the close.—E. A. CUNNINGHAM.

The Magnificent Dope

(Twentieth Century-Fox—Block II)

Farce

Dishing up a large dose of hilarity, "The Magnificent Dope," formerly titled "The Magnificent Jerk," is a burlesque on those schools which purport to teach introverts how to make friends and influence people. With an excellent script which blends dialogue and situation comedy, fine directorial pacing and some grand acting, the picture virtually tore down the preview house and elicited from a neighborhood audience, unaware previously of the nature of the film, a surprising amount of handclapping at its conclusion.

For marquee strength there is Henry Fonda, Lynn Bari, Don Ameche and Edward Everett Horton. Ameche enacts the role of a hail-fellow-well-met individual who has a national string of personality schools which are going bankrupt. Miss Bari plays his publicity director sweetheart who evolves a plan to give $500 and a free scholarship to the "most unsuccessful person in the nation." Fonda is the Vermont youth who "spends the summers renting boats on a lake and the winters waiting for the summers." He wins the prize and takes the course only because he has fallen in love with Miss Bari, she being unaware of his feelings. After complications of riotous proportions, the climax comes as a whirlwind.

The screenplay by George Seaton, who adapted the original story by Joseph Schrank, is a refreshing piece of cinema writing. Walter Lang's direction leaves nothing to be desired, making the most of every opportunity to evoke laughter. William Perlberg is down as associate producer.

It will be noted that although the word "dope" is used in the title, "jerk" is substituted in the dialogue. Also to be noted is that MGM in 1938 purchased the screen rights to Dale Carnegie's "How to Meet People and Make Friends" and several months ago announced the casting of Red Skelton.

Preshown to the trade press and a paying audience at the Fox Uptown Theatre, Los Angeles, where response was, as noted above, vigorously favorable.—VANCE KING.

Miss Annie Rooney

(UA-Small)

Shirley Temple Adolesces

It's an adolescent Shirley Temple, hep to the jive of today's 'teen-age population, but earnest, wholesome and natural at bottom, whom Producer Edward Small presents to the customers in this comedy-drama of New York and now. The picture resembles in no particular the star's current "Kathleen," nor any of her earlier films, and it packs a lot of entertainment for the family audience without following any of the worn grooves.

The production goes into exhibition on the wings of copious and far-reaching publicity obtained for it by publicist Al Vaughn and makes good the implied promise of the widespread magazine buildup given it.

UNITED ARTISTS RELEASES "SHIPS WITH WINGS"

United Artists last week released "Ships with Wings", the naval drama produced by the Ealing Studios in London. A review from London appeared in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on December 20, 1942. The reviewer said, in part, that "many of the sequences were shot on the 'Ark Royal' and the intimacy of the glimpses of the life and routines on the vessel, plus the dramatic gusto of the actual flying itself, make tip-top entertainment, with a flavour of actuality".

The film features John Clements, Leslie Banks, Jane Baxter and Ann Todd. Running time is 91 minutes.

The screenplay by George Bruce presents Miss Temple as a motherless daughter of a well meaning but over-venturesome father whose eagerness to make millions keeps the little family broke. She meets a son of wealth, mixes with his aristocratic family and friends under circumstances which bring embarrassment and heartbreak, but is made happy when her father blunders into success.

Habits and speech of the jitterbug world enliven the early portions of the picture and the stuff of which homespun amusement is made comes later and logically. It is not laid on with a trowel, but neither is it drawn too fine for wholesale consumption.

Direction by Edwin L. Marin keeps the enterprise within the bounds of credibility, but gives the actors plenty of room for broad characterization.

William Gargan as the father and Guy Kibbee as the grandfather can spread it on thickly enough for all hands on occasion. Dickie Moore, Peggy Ryan and Roland Dupree give capital performances as young folk in the star's orbit.

Previewed at the studio to a press turnout of perhaps sixty persons who manifested approval throughout and applauded at the finish.

It Happened in Flatbush

(Twentieth Century-Fox—Block II)

"Dem Lovely Bums," as they are picturesquely known in Dodgerville, otherwise known as Brooklyn, inspired "It Happened in Flatbush." The story is fictional, says the subtitle, but anything can happen and usually does. The manager of the Brooklyn baseball team has resigned and speculation is rife over the identity of his successor. Sara Allgood, elderly owner of the team, says that her choice is Lloyd Nolan, who cost Brooklyn a pennant seven years before.

Nolan arrives in Brooklyn only to find that the owner is dead—her heirs are represented principally by Carole Landis. He has an uphill fight to persuade her to let him have money to build up the team. From there on it follows the familiar pattern of romances—she becomes infuriated when he fails to appear for an engagement but the end of the picture finds them arm in arm. The baseball part of the story also follows familiar outlines. The star player, a pitcher, is put on the mound at the crucial moment of the ninth inning of a game which decides the pennant race. He gets two strikes on the batter and then pitches three balls—of course, the sixth pitch is a strike and the game is won.

Her Cardboard Lover

Sophisticated Comedy

This undertaking in the zone of sophisticated comedy ranges from boudoir frivolity, such as used to be called Continental, to knockabout brawling such as has always been called slapstick. It excels in neither department and serves chiefly as a means of presenting Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor and George Sanders to their fans.

The scene is a fashionable resort town, presumably in Florida, where a young songwriter becomes enamoured of a girl of means who employs him to pose as her lover while preventing her, forcibly if necessary, from rushing to a suitor whose penchant for philandering is an issue between them. He discharges his duty so successfully that, after enough comedy sequences to fill up running time requirements, she discovers that she has fallen in love with him instead.

The narrative derives from a play by Jacques Deval, translated and titled by Valerie Wyngate, then revised by P. G. Wodehouse, the final script emanating from Deval and three collaborators, John Collier, Anthony Veiller and William H. Wright. It is perhaps a circumstance outside their control that the pattern of the plot has been used so often and variously that freshness is gone from it.

The principals are penalized by miscasting.

Production is by J. Walter Ruben and direction by George Cukor.

Whatever of piquancy may have characterized the original play has been blunted by conditioning to modern screen standards, which does not, however, extend to the point of making the picture suitable for juvenile entertainment.

Previewed at the Village theatre, Westwood, which is located on the edge of the campus of a university and therefore attended by many students, quite a number of whom laughed fairly often at what they saw on the screen.—W.R.W.

Thru Different Eyes

(Twentieth Century-Fox—Block 11)

Murder Mystery

Producer Sol M. Wurtzel has tried viewing a murder through the eyes of the district attorney and his wife, as a domestic tragedy for a Thin-Man-twenty-years-after. The sleuth, getting a little paunchy and feeling the weight of his public office, spends most of his time on the telephone, learning the answers from his younger and nimbler assistants. But his wife still shows a lot of energy and enterprise, the usual annoyance at the interference of crime in her happy home and the same penchant for meddling.

The case consists, from the beginning, of one murder, two conflicting confessions and the conviction of a third person. It moves rather tediously to the final apprehesion of the killer. The narrative technique—a series of flashbacks from a classroom in criminal law, where the district attorney is relating the case to illustrate "circumstantial evidence"—gives Frank Craven opportunity for a likable portrayal of a genial incompetent, but leaves little room for sustained action or suspense. June Walker, as his wife, wins through by persistence and intuition, forcing a confession accidentally where a house-wifely third degree had failed, and even entering the classroom in the final moments of the lecture to take the bows.

Director Thomas Z. Loring has purposefully avoided any suggestion of a thriller but has not managed to hold interest through the problem, characterization or domestic comedy.

Maisie Gets Her Man

Comedy

The course of its character acutely reminiscent of the "Jollity Building" series of articles in the New Yorker Magazine, "Maisie Gets Her Man" is a group of anti-climactic incidents of which the Wilson Collison-created "Maisie," portrayed by Ann Sothern, is the central figure. Interpolated is a group of "telephone Indians" headed by Red Skelton, Leo Gorcey, Allan Jenkins, Donald Meek, Lloyd Corrigan, Walter Catlett, Rags Ragland and others.

The screenplay by Betty Reinhardt and Mary C. McCall, Jr., based on an original story by Miss Reinhardt and Ethel Hill, gives the players, whose other cinematic endeavors have met with favor, little opportunity.

Miss Southern, as usual, is the whole show, but even she had difficulty with the script. Some of the episodes are very funny, according to the preview audience, and, others had the customers "sitting on their hands."

Roy Del Ruth directed the J. Walter Ruben production, the main theme of which is the adventures which befall "Maisie" as she attempts to aid an amateur vaudevillian with whom she falls in love.

Stardust on the Sage

Gene Autry in the Saddle

This is another Republic picture starring America's No. 1 Boxoffice Champion of Westerns, Gene Autry, which gives showmen ample opportunity to exploit the Autry wares for their many Western film fans.

With associate producer Harry Grey, and director William Morgan chiefly responsible for this Autry vehicle, "Stardust on the Sage" combines action, romance, music and comedy into a chef d'oeuvre any theatreman will be glad to dish up to his patrons. Autry is ably assisted by Bill Henry, Louise Currie, as the ingenue, and Edith Fellows, who suddenly has grown from a captious youngster into an eye-filling juvenile who can warble a tune with the best of them.

There are a number of good songs, "When the Roses Bloom Again," "Goodnight Sweetheart," "You'll Be Sorry," "I'll Never Let You Go," "Wouldn't You Like to Know," and the ever-popular musical saga of the West, "Home on the Range." Some of the more critical Western fans may think the music slows up the action, but the women in the audience will enjoy Gene's serenading and Edith Fellows' pleasing young voice.

As a background for the Autry charms, the plot of the picture is a little on the thin side, involving Gene's efforts as a rough-riding cattleman, to dissuade his fellow-ranchers from investing their money in the Rawhide Mining Company. Once Bill Henry and Louise Currie, the latter as Autry's heart interest, aided and abetted by Edith Fellows, persuade Gene that the hydraulic mine will bring prosperity to the town, he goes all-out to help them raise money for the enterprise. The greed and treachery of Pearson, the mine's manager, interferes with Gene's efforts and provides the basis for the rootin' tootin' shootin' sequences in the film. There could have been more of these to enhance the action, but the potpourri provides opportunity for Gene to display his adroitness as a rider, roper and fighter. Smiley Burnette, as Frog, helps the comedy scenes along.

Previewed at Republic's home office projection room before a trade press and National Board of Review audience.—J. E. SAMUELSON.

The Postman Didn't Ring

(Twentieth Century-Fox—Block 11)

Comedy-Drama

A clever idea has been well developed in this picture. A mail sack, stolen more than fifty years ago, is suddenly recovered and brought to the attention of the postal authorities, who undertake to deliver the contents despite the delay. Among the interested parties is a young lady who is a professional stamp collector. On her way with a postal inspector to purchase a stamp when he delivers one of the delayed letters, he tells her of some of the contents of the sack. From there on the narrative concentrates on one letter addressed to the owner of a small village supply store who is a friend of the farmers in the community.

The missive brings the storekeeper stock in the town bank which a powerful family thought they owned completely. They attempt a court test of the validity of the stock and several other charges but the farmers' benefactor makes a stirring speech which convinces judge and jury and the case ends with victory for him. Romance ensues between the new bank owner and the stamp collector.

In spite of the method of narration and choice of story, interest is sustained by tight dialogue and direction.

There is no star or even an outstanding player since the scene shifts to such an extent that no opportunity for continuous appearance is afforded. Brenda Joyce appears in more scenes than anyone else and Richard Travis has the leading role for the last two-thirds of the film.

Ralph Dietrich produced and Harold Schuster directed. Mortimer Braus wrote the screenplay and is also credited with the original story in collaboration with Leon Ware.

Previewed in a projection room before an audience consisting mostly of reviewers and home office officials, the picture was received without comment.—R.A.W.

ANNOUNCING

The New Victory Carbons

Designed to Conserve Copper for War Needs

Winning this war is the first objective of every American. The will for Victory includes taking in stride whatever sacrifice or inconvenience may be occasioned by the demands of our war effort.

Government curtailment of copper necessitates reducing the thickness of copper coating on "National" copper coated high intensity projector carbons. This may result in a slightly longer spindle on the carbons, and in the case of the 7 mm — 6 mm combination, may result in some reduction in screen illumination, although there will still be sufficient light for satisfactory projection.

Fortunately, the culmination of research work on the 8 mm — 7 mm trim makes it possible to burn these new carbons, even with the thinner copper plating, and to obtain even more light with the same current formerly used (within limits of the new maximum). Savings as high as 30% in carbon consumption can be had for the same amount of light on the screen if the present light level is satisfactory. When using power sources designed for "Suprex" type lamps similar savings can be made, while retaining the same screen illumination as formerly, by shifting from 7 mm — 6 mm trims to the new 8 mm — 7 mm. To accomplish this may require enlarging present carbon holders, which can be done with little effort.

Operation at reduced arc current may also, in some instances, necessitate readjustment of the feed ratio of the projection lamps in order to maintain correct position of the carbons with a minimum of manual adjustment.

The trade-mark on these new Victory carbons is imprinted in white, instead of the familiar blue. Maximum allowable arc current is also stamped on each carbon. It is important that this current limitation be observed.

The words "National," "Suprex" and "Orotip" are trade-marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

MARKET NOTES

News reports concerning equipment and materials, and those who make them

Wartime Guide Booklet

A BOOKLET entitled "The Theatreman's Wartime Guide," containing 64 pages of information on wartime restrictions, care of equipment, the use of substitute materials, and instructions on how to meet equipment emergencies, besides a series of posters on the wartime duties of theatre staffs, has been issued by the Strong Electric Corporation, Toledo, manufacturers of arc lamps, rectifiers and reflectors.

Plastic Door Plates

THE USE OF Formica laminated plastic for push and kick plates in place of metal is featured in a bulletin issued by the Formica Insulation Company of Cincinnati. The bulletin points out that door plates of this material not only provide color in a variety of shades, but are non-porous, do not absorb stains or react chemically with any ordinary liquid. Formica will not chip or crack under regular usage, and it requires no polishing to maintain its luster.

These plates are an eighth of an inch thick, the edges are beveled, and countersunk screw holes are provided. Colors usually available immediately from stock are tan, a brownish shade, grey, and pearl, the latter having mother-of-pearl pattern.

Repair Budget Plan

A NEW BUDGET plan for major repairs on projection equipment has been announced by the National Theatre Supply Company. The plan covers major repairs on projector mechanisms, projection lamps and magazines, regrinding and surface-treating of projector lenses, replacement of screens, and supplying of lubricants, fire-extinguishing devices, and vacuum tubes.

The plan is announced as one designed to further economy, safety and maximum performance during the period of wartime restrictions.

National has also instituted a service for the straightening and repairing of aluminum reels. In welding the cracks in broken reels, it is announced, additional material is used to strengthen the reel so that the crack is not likely to break again.

Blackout Lamp Changes

CHANGES IN the specifications of a special filament lamp for blackouts are announced by the manufacturer, the Wabash Appliance Corporation of Brooklyn, N. Y. These silver-lined lamps were placed on the market in January, and the specification changes, it is stated, are based on tests made since then.

The most important change cited is in the color of the light from blue and red to a deep orange recommended by the Office of Civilian Defense. Other changes affect the size, which is smaller; the wattage, it is now 15 watts; and the coating, which has become a heavy black silicate to prevent light leakage. Also, the former built-in reflector has been eliminated.

The orange light now provided is said to permit occupants of a room to see each other plainly, also doors, furniture and windows. The lamp fits standard sockets.

Plastic Glass Strengthener

A SYNTHETIC plastic coating for glass has been acquired for distribution in the theatre field by the National Theatre Supply Company. Called the Hamlin Shatter Resistant Film, it is designed to eliminate the danger of injury to patrons and theatre personnel as a result of flying fragments of glass due to an air raid or an explosion.

The coating is highly transparent. It appears as a watery liquid and is sprayed or

We suggest that those who didn't buy them write us about their lamp problems. We will try to help keep present equipment in service until the BIG JOB is done and lamps can be purchased new. Meanwhile, we will continue to render the best possible parts and repair service.

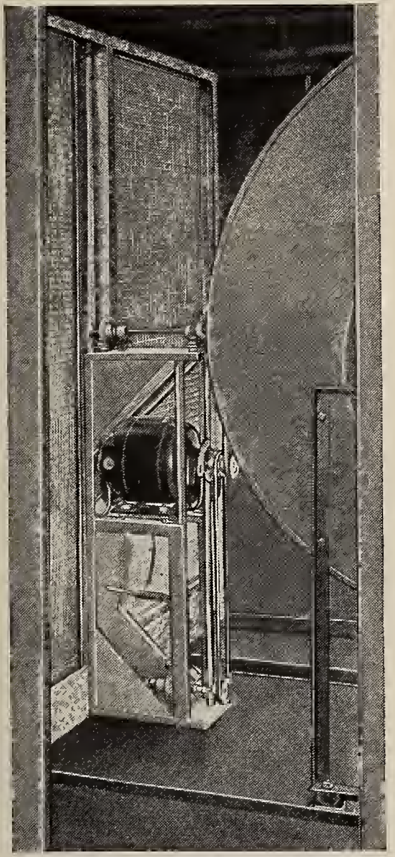
brushed on the glass. It can be applied to all theatre windows and the inside of display frame glass and also to the glass of entrance doors, and it is stated that 500 square feet of glass can usually be covered by a gallon. The coating can be washed with cold water and is said to stand prolonged exposure to the weather without discoloration.

Feature Display Slides

SEVERAL HUNDRED titles are listed in a bulletin from the National Studios, New York, as feature films on which 8x10 stills and advertising cards, blowups, and transparencies are now available. The transparencies are for display by an automatic display mechanism also available from this concern. The automatic device shows from ten to twenty slides on its own screen, changing a slide every ten seconds.



Pump and roto-atomizer stand of the evaporative cooling equipment of the S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation, New York. In the design of this equipment a float valve controls the water supply in the base of the evaporative mat section. This water is forced direct to the roto-atomizer spray disc by means of a bronze housed centrifugal pump in which the shaft is made of stainless steel. The roto-atomizer disc distributes water evenly over the evaporative filter mat. S. O. S. filter mats are made of fibre chemically treated to eliminate odors, etc. The assembly has adjustment features to maintain uniform operation. The cabinets are formed of automobile body steel, coated on the inside and outside with a rust-resistant red oxide primer. The evaporating section is built of heavy, copper-bearing galvanized iron. Air distribution is controlled by directional grilles.

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors concerning theatre remodeling possible during the war—and much can be done to rehabilitate a theatre without violating either the rules or the spirit of the national effort.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch is helpful. It is of course understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of licensed architects and Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.

ISSUE OF MAY 30, 1942 VOLUME 147, NUMBER 9

Wartime Carbons with Thinner Copper Coating

NEW PROJECTION carbons, both positive and negative, using a thinner coating of copper, are announced by the National Carbon Company as these columns go to press. They are called "Victory" carbons, and the label specifies that they are "designed to conserve copper for war needs."

The positive diameters remain the same; suprex trims are to use 7-mm. negatives instead of 6.5-mm., which have been discontinued for the duration.

Some equipment and operating adjustments will have to be made for the use of the carbons, and a number of these are pointed out in the manufacturer's announcement, which is reprinted, almost in its entirety below:

Lamps Using 8-mm. Positive

"These lamps will use the 8-mm. x 12 or 14-inch suprex positive with the 7-mm. x 9-inch 'Orotip' C negative for the entire operating range of 56-65 amperes. After months of intensive research work, an improved 8-mm. suprex positive carbon was recently placed on the market and distribution has reached a large number of theatres. All 8-mm. 'Victory' type positives will be of this improved type, except for the thinner copper coat. Theatres now using this improved carbon will obtain the same screen light and carbon life at corresponding current values from the 'Victory' type carbons, but will not be able to operate at more than 65 amperes arc current.

"Theatres still using the old 8-mm. suprex positives will realize a marked improvement in both screen light and carbon life from the introduction of the 'Victory' carbons. At corresponding values of arc current, approximately 20% more screen light will be obtained with a slight saving in carbon life. The maximum screen light from the old carbon will be supplied by these 'Victory' carbons at 5 amperes less arc current with a saving of about 25% in carbon consumption.

"From 56 to 60 amperes, these new carbons, like the type they supersede, give steady light when operated from a low-voltage power source designed for suprex type lamps. If the power supply is of the type designed for Hi-Lo lamps, with 70-85 terminal voltage, these new carbons may show some unsteadiness at arc current below 60 amperes. This can be overcome by using a by-pass resistance on the generator series field to reduce the terminal voltage to 60.

"If the arc is operated directly from a d.c. power supply, with voltage reduced to arc value entirely by ballast resistance, it is necessary that an arc current of not less than 60 amperes be maintained to avoid unsteady operation.

Lamps with Adjustable Feed Ratio Using 7-mm. Positive

"The 6-mm. x 9-inch 'Orotip' C negative will be used with the 7-mm. x 12 or 14-inch suprex positive in these lamps. The operating range is 42-45 amperes. Since the maximum arc current for the 'Victory' carbons in this size is 45 amperes, theatres which have been using higher arc current will encounter some reduction in screen light. The light and carbon life, however, will be equal to that obtained from carbons formerly supplied at coresonding values of arc current. Since the ratio of burning rate between positive and negative carbons changes with change of arc current, adjustment of the feed ratio will have to be made when lamps previously operated about 45 amperes arc current are reduced to that value.

Lamps with Fixed Feed Ratio Using 7-mm. Positive

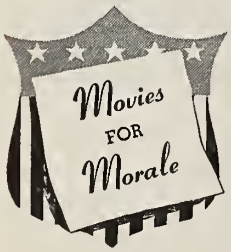
"The feed ratio on lamps of this type is designed for operation at 50 amperes arc current. Reduction of the arc current to the 45 ampere limit of the 'Victory' type 7-mm. suprex positive carbon necessitates the use of a 7-mm. 'Orotip' C negative to obtain a burning ratio corresponding to that of the feeding mechanism. Since the negative carbon holder is designed for a 6-mm. carbon, it must be reamed out or replaced with a new holder of suitable diameter to accommodate the 7-mm. thin coated carbon. Light obtained at corresponding values of arc current, within the operating range of 42-45 amperes, will be the same as from carbons formerly supplied and the same is true of positive carbon life. Negative carbon life will be greater due to increased diameter of the negative carbon.

One-Kilowatt Lamps

"These lamps [d.c.] use the 7-mm. x 12 or 14-inch suprex positive with a 6-mm. x 9-inch 'Orotip' C negative. Since the operating range of these lamps, 40-42 amperes arc current, is below the maximum capacity of the trim used, no reduction of screen light or carbon life will follow the introduction of the 'Victory' carbons.

"The 'Victory' type carbon for 96-cycle, a.c. high-intensity lamps, is a new 7-mm. x 9-inch high intensity a.c. carbon, to be used in both holders. The current range is 52-66 amperes."

Paste-On Propaganda



Something of a one-man campaign publicizing the service of motion pictures to the nation in wartime has been started by Joe Hornstein, prominent New York theatre supply dealer. He has had 100,000 labels made up, some a couple of inches wide (of the type shown here in reduced size), others half as big, carrying, on a national shield in red, white and blue, the nicely alliterative legend, "Movies for Morale," and these he is pasting on all the letters and envelopes of his daily mail.

More than that: He has sent batches of the labels to Government officials, to organizations, to friends. He was in a store the other day buying some haberdashery; when he left, "Movies for Morale" were urged upon subsequent customers from every counter.

Such labels are cheap, avers Mr. Hornstein, suggesting that other dealers, and film distributors, exhibitors and industry organizations do the same thing, throughout the country.

Every one a red-head. And these are only one detail of the sixteen copper-topped girls comprising the ushering staff of the J. P. Harris theatre, new Pittsburgh house of the Harris Amusement Company, named after the originator of the "nickelodeon." A bit of this history, and the new theatre, are described in the following pages.

Conservation Urgent

Realization of the immediate need for conservation was strongly urged at the May 22nd meeting in New York of the Atlantic Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. Attended by many more than regular members of the Eastern group, the meeting had as its main announced feature the paper published elsewhere in this issue, elaborating upon the "ten points" issued some weeks ago by Richard F. Walsh, IA president, for conservation of projection equipment and supplies; but the seriousness of the situation with which this paper was prepared to deal, was even more pointedly emphasized by Joseph D. Basson, present on behalf of Mr. Walsh, who warned in an extemporaneous talk that if the theatre business did not realize the immediate need for strict conservation, a "third of our theatres might have to close," as a result of Government order to that effect or further restrictions.

"The Government might consider," he said, "600 seats in a town having about a thousand seats, sufficient for the purposes of civilian morale in that town."

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers, incidentally, will continue throughout the war its practice of holding two conventions each year, according to Sylvan Harris, editor of the SMPE Journal. The second 1942 convention will be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania in New York, October 27, 28 and 29.

Parabolic Screen

Reports from Hollywood indicate a highly successful demonstration in the Pantages theatre of the "Retiscope" screen. The screen is curved horizontally and vertically. That's putting it in simplest terms; the surface is contoured parabolically with relation to the angle of incidence of the light, the purpose being to eliminate, or at least make unnoticeable, distortion at wide viewing angles.

Its fibre glass surfacing is the newest feature of the Pantages screen. The designer, Otto Hehn, obtained a couple of years ago an installation for demonstration purposes of a screen having similar contours and function, at the Fox theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. That demonstration also was pretty convincing, according to comment of projectionists and others at the time. The screen then used had a coated fabric surface, however. Mr. Hehn's development has definitely been taken over by the Sparks Withington Corporation of Jackson, Mich., and the marketing of it is now in immediate prospect.

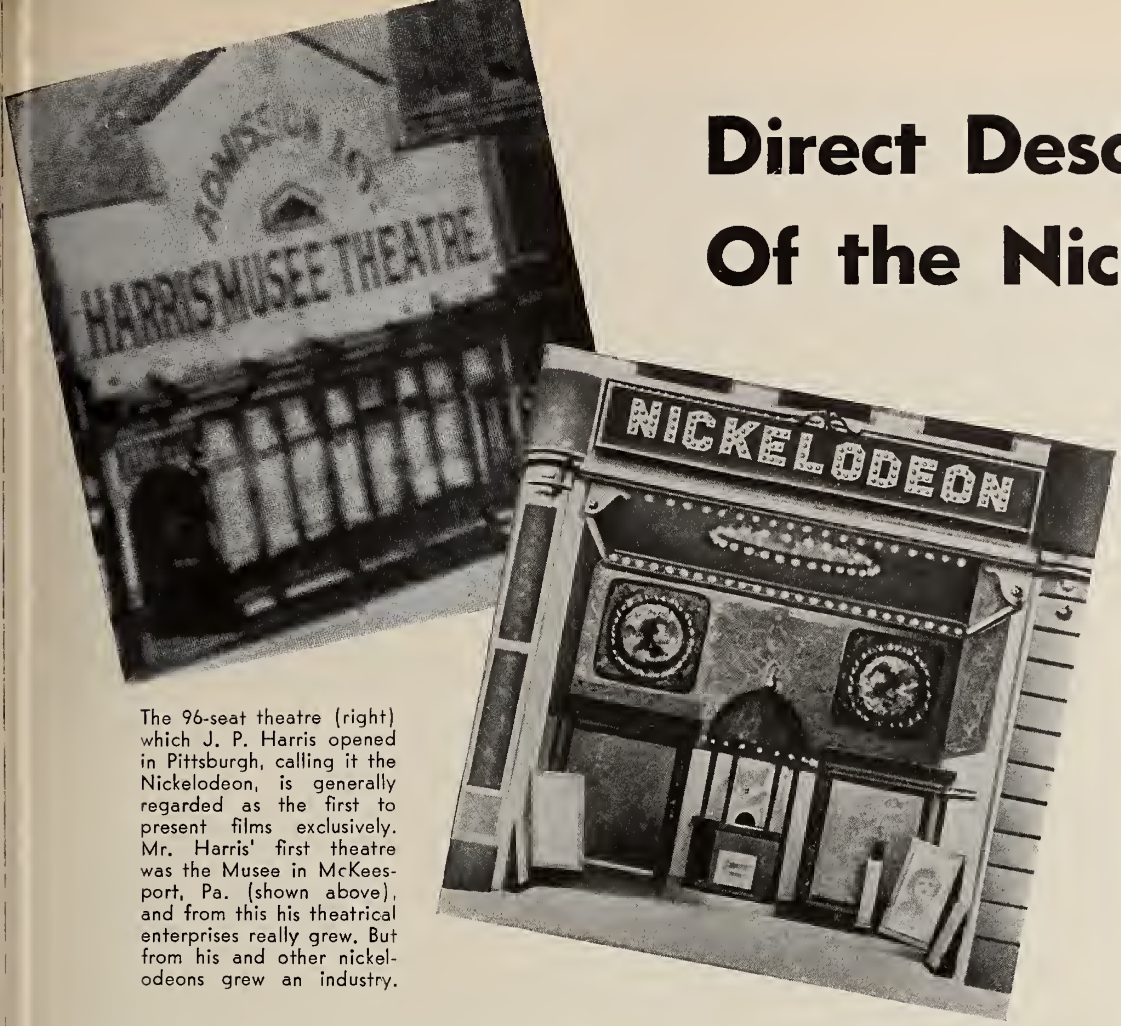
Direct Descendant Of the Nickelodeon



The 96-seat theatre (right) which J. P. Harris opened in Pittsburgh, calling it the Nickelodeon, is generally regarded as the first to present films exclusively. Mr. Harris' first theatre was the Musee in McKeesport, Pa. (shown above), and from this his theatrical enterprises really grew. But from his and other nickelodeons grew an industry.

Describing the new J. P. Harris theatre in Pittsburgh and some of its antecedents that make film theatre history

CALLED BY the important Harris circuit in Pennsylvania and Ohio, "the flagship of our theatrical group," the J. P. Harris theatre in Pittsburgh, revealed in May as a notable example of the modern exhibition plant, derives added interest from its peculiar association with theatre history.

This newest property of the Harris Amusement Company bears the name of the late J. P. Harris, who may be called, with all the accuracy possible in such matters, the first operator of a theatre exclusively presenting motion picture entertainment. He coined the word "nickelodeon" as the name of his first all-film theatre; it became the term by which motion picture theatres generally were identified from 1905 to the early 'teens. Thus the Harris circuit founded by him, which has remained a family enterprise, remarkably reflects, in its own growth that now achieves a sort of culmination in the J. P. Harris theatre, the whole course of film theatre development.

J. P. HARRIS

Before the idea of a theatre devoted to "moving picture shows," or the word for them, occurred to J. P. Harris, he was exhibiting films in a theatre which was the only place at which Pittsburgh people could see the innovation—if, indeed, many of them wanted to, or had even heard of it. For this was in 1897, and the actual invention of motion pictures was but a few years old. It is testimony enough of the rapid development of motion pictures, once they reached the screen show stage of commercialization, that by 1905 an experienced showman could see in them entertainment values meriting a theatre of their own. In that year J. P. Harris and his brother-in-law, Harry Davis, partners in the theatre which was already combining pictures with variety shows and miscellaneous entertainment, rented a store room on Pittsburgh's Smithfield Street, installed therein 96 second-hand "opera chairs," a white-washed piece of canvas, and the necessary projection equipment—such as it was—together with a phonograph. The phonograph, an invention itself not much older than the pictures that moved in silence, was intended to supply some accompanying sound which might render less obvious the absurd failure of the actors to make their moving lips heard.

A theatre of so bold departure from all that had been called a theatre demanded a special kind of name. About this Messrs.

INNER LOBBY WHICH OPENS UPON MAIN FOYER-LOUNGE.

Harris and Davis thought hard. They had decided to charge only 5c per admission (for how could one ask more?). The word "nickel" inevitably associated itself with the venture. And so they eventually tacked it on to the Greek word for theatre—odeon—which gave them Nickelodeon as the name for their film-show theatre. It remains the name of a specific period in motion picture history.

The phenomenal growth of motion pictures as the "popular theatre" perhaps was forecast in the immediate success of the Harris-Davis Nickelodeon in Pittsburgh. Despite their awkward silence and manifold crudities, those moving pictures had something. Shows consisted in only a couple of reels of film, each performance lasting about 15 minutes. But the Nickelodeon kept open from 8 a. m. to midnight, daily, and the turnover on its 96 seats was terrific—potentially amounting to 6,000 admissions a day, and often realizing that amount.

One here is minded to ask the reader to reflect upon the motion picture art of today, the sort of entertainment it brings to hamlet and city everywhere—then consider the kind of fare that the motion picture industry grew up on. Our first nickelodeon gives us an example: its opening program offered two one-reelers—"Poor but Honest" and "The Baffled Burglar." And many years were to pass before "Quo Vadis," "Caliban" and "The Birth of a Nation"!

Yet on the simple diet of the time the J. P. Harris theatre enterprises grew prosperous. From 1898 on Mr. Harris had extended his vaudeville operations. Motion pictures brought him a new medium of popular entertainment to exploit, and the present circuit—representing a resumption of family interest in showbusiness after a short period of affiliated operation—has essentially stemmed from the first motion picture theatre.

The circuit is now headed by a brother of J. P., Frank J. Harris, with John H. Harris, son of the founder, in immediate charge of operations.

The new theatre heading this group of film theatres seats 2,500. It is spacious in plan, with liberal foyer and lounge facilities, and styled luxuriously in a modern ornamental treatment by John and Drew Eberson, New York theatre architects. The interior, from outer lobby through a large foyer-lounge to the auditorium, is carried out in what the designers call "South American coloring"—various shades of red and green, mostly pastel.

The front, which is necessarily narrow, is a simple series of vertical panels finished in Carrara glass providing a cream ground against which red vertical stripings are set, and a porcelean enamel vertical sign is shaped and colored to form an integral part of the front scheme, all of which terminates above the entrance at a triangular marquee with five-mile silhouette attraction boards.

The theatre property is situated in the middle of a downtown business block, and entrance is through two lobbies beyond the vestibule, into a large foyer called the "Eleanor Lounge," in honor of Eleanor Davis Harris, widow of the founder. Here is hung an oil painting of Mr. Harris.

The first lobby has a full-length display case on one side, while the opposite wall is largely covered by a mirror, wrought in continuous sections. Entrance into this lobby is through Herculite glass doors, inside of which begins the carpeting (a Bigelow-Sanford Wilton) that is carried throughout the theatre, so that the interior of the theatre is brought, in effect, out to the street, counterbalancing the influence of the distance between the vestibule and the theatre-proper.

The inner lobby, which also features a broad mirror, is finished in plaster tinted in the shades of the general color scheme, which are also used in the Formica doors leading to the "Eleanor Lounge" foyer. The latter is treated as a general lounge in a grand manner, with modern murals dominating the wall treatment. Woodwork and doors are birch, and a row of standee gates spanning the foyer are also birch.

The auditorium materials consist in fabric over rock wool for the side walls, and plaster, ornamented in paint, for the ceiling. Illumination is by both urn and disc style bracket luminaires. Seating (by American) is distributed through two floors which include a loge section.

The J. P. Harris theatre is completely air-conditioned, with cooling by direct expansion coils supplied by York compressors. Projectors are Simplex, projection lamps are Brenkert high-intensity, the sound system is RCA Photophone.

Lighting and Maintaining Front and Lobby Area in Wartime

By JOHN J. SEFING

● Offering—besides suggestions for the care of marquees, signs and floors—devices for dim-out attraction display and screening of the doors

JOHN J. SEFING

AS A RESULT of new war regulations, all theatre display signs, together with all commercial and public outdoor lighting, located near designated strategic coastwise zones, must be darkened for the duration. The main purpose of these dim-out restrictions is to cut down to the absolute minimum any reflected light that would project a background silhouetting buildings and defining the coastline.

Normally, the marquee adds color and life to a theatre, besides providing an effective structure for attraction advertising displays; but in wartime it must of necessity lose its brilliance in restricted areas—and even be entirely darkened. Nevertheless, a marquee cannot be completely neglected or haphazardly maintained, for it still must serve a protective purpose structurally, and it remains of some help in showmanship if proper precautions are taken. Where nightly dim-outs are in effect, the soffit or ceiling of the marquee could still be lighted (authorities are likely to approve a scheme that still answers their purposes), with subdued lights that would allow patrons to enter or leave the theatre safely, and still not be objectionable by "spilling" the light over a large area in front of the theatre. If the present lighting under the marquee is of high wattage, it should be reduced so as barely to illuminate the area directly under the marquee. The lights can be alternated with an equal amount of medium blue bulbs and an equal number of white bulbs to give the proper subdued lighting.

DIM-LIGHTING DISPLAYS

In case many large-sized display cases are used, especially the ones that extend beyond the overhead marquee line, blue lights should be substituted for the present bright white lights. Where white fluorescent lamps are used in display cases they can be easily replaced with blue tubes that will give a soft, pleasing light without glare and still be partially effective for advertising purposes.

During nightly dim-outs a single row of attraction lighting could be used on all sides of the marquee providing it be not of too great intensity and that the row of lamps be properly shielded at the top with a movable hood that could be easily removed or put in place.

ATTRACTION BOARD SHIELD

The hood thus used in shielding the attraction lighting should extend at least 18 inches from the face of the marquee, and run the full width on all sides. This hood could be made of light-gauge metal properly finished and reinforced, or of plywood adequately treated against the weather. Bracket hangars for attaching the hood should be of metal permanently fastened with large screws to the marquee face or they could be shaped like a large "U" so as to be slipped over the top edge of the marquee and then be set in place with ordinary wood or machine screws. In hanging the shield, care should be taken that it slants about 6° from the horizontal so that the rays of light are deflected downward toward the area under the marquee. This angle also serves the purpose of easily shedding rain and snow off the top. In order to make such a hood inconspicuous, it should be painted the same color as the face of the marquee.

If shielding of the marquee lighting is done properly there should be no objection to using a single row of attraction letters on the marquee face during a dim-out; however, the local or Federal defense authorities should give their approval, as the proximity of the theatre to the shoreline or strategic defense areas will have a direct bearing on what can be done.

SCREENING LOBBY LIGHT

For the prevention of light infiltrating from the lighted lobby through the vestibule entrance doors to the outside, several methods can be used. Nearly all vestibule entrance doors are made of about 90% plate glass which will readily allow the passage of light from the lobby to the outside. The prevention of leakage of light from the lobby to the outside will be of more value during total blackouts than in dim-outs; nevertheless, provision should be made now to be adequately prepared in case an emergency should arise.

One way of completely isolating the lobby lighting from the vestibule is to install a pair of light-weight flame-proofed curtains across the entire width of the entrance doors, this curtain to be similar in operation to the screen close-in curtain. In other words, a light-duty track (it could be of wood, if necessary) should be fastened to the lobby ceiling about two feet away from the entrance doors, and a pair of curtains hung to this track by means of cord and carriers working inside the track. A small valance installed on both sides of this track at the ceiling would hide from view the rough material. (See drawings on page 16)

The curtain should have slits in the material at the center of each set of doors, with about an 18-inch overlap, to allow the passage of the patrons and still prevent the passage of light from the lobby to the outside. At one end of this curtain, on the side next to the lobby, a cord for opening or closing the pair of curtains manually should be provided.

What must be kept in mind is that with this arrangement, and especially with a wide lobby, the curtains will of necessity bunch about 18 inches at each side when they are opened. This condition will not be so objectionable if the jambs of the end doors are located about 18 inches from the wall. Tie-backs could be provided at the sides of the lobby for holding each curtain out of the way when not in use. The curtain ought to match the decoration of the lobby, of course—it should be of the same or a harmonizing color.

Another method is to have a light-weight flame-proofed curtain at the doors, the track laid out on a diameter equal to the width of the set of doors, and the curtain having a slit with about an 18-inch overlap at the center. The tracks can be fastened directly to the lobby ceiling if it is not too high; or it can be suspended from the ceiling and a valance of cloth or of compoboard be installed around the hangers or brackets. Advertising facilities could be applied, or the cloth or board be made the same color as the lobby. To open, the curtain could be parted manually and folded against the jambs of the doors. In closing the curtains around the door, the operation would be reversed.

Such a set-up for blacking-out the entrance doors could be installed at each set of doors in the lobby, or only at the doors mostly used; however, if only one or two such curtains are installed at the doors, the glass in the rest of the doors must be removed and plywood or masonite installed in its place. The better arrangement would be to have these particular curtains installed at each set of doors. In this way there would be no possibility of leakage of light when any of the doors were opened.

TICKET SELLING PROVISIONS

When and if actual blackout is required, the box office should receive considerable attention. In most theatres the ticket booth is located in the center of the vestibule, near the side-walls or at one corner facing the street. Now, when total blackouts are ordered, even though an actual air raid is not threatening, the ticket seller cannot very well remain in this vulnerable location, selling tickets to patrons. Under the circumstances, a better place for the ticket booth is the lobby, which would appear to offer reasonable protection to the ticket seller as well as to the patrons; also, this location would minimize the chance for leakage of light to the outside. To meet such requirements it would be best to have a movable ticket booth handy that could be rolled inside the lobby.

A suitable movable ticket booth can be made entirely of wood, only half the size of the regular booth, with necessary shelves, ticket registers, a light that can be plugged into a convenient receptacle in the lobby, and roller castors on the bottom for easy moving. The sides of the ticket booth could be finished in plywood having a mahogany or walnut finish. With this arrangement, operation of the theatre could go on even under prolonged blackouts.

MARQUEE AND SIGN CARE

Wartime conditions are strange to us, and there are many items that contribute to the safety and comfort of patrons that are easily overlooked. The theatre business has very grave responsibilities in the protection of patrons, and it is of course entirely willing to assume them to gain public confidence. Nevertheless, the fact that certain portions of the theatre are not in normal operation due to wartime restrictions, blackouts, dim-outs and so on, does not necessarily mean that they are not deteriorating and do not need regular maintenance.

Let's take, for instance, the marquee. In dim-out areas especially it is easy to ignore it. But wartime restrictions on its lighting do not restrict deterioration. All metal parts should be checked thoroughly, especially the supporting or reinforcing iron beams and iron tie-rods that many theatre marquees have for suspension. The upright or vertical marquee signs should also be checked carefully, and if in bad or hazardous condition, should be entirely removed from the face of the building. Marquees and signs, even when in only fair structural condition, might get by in normal times, but under present conditions care should be taken that sudden jars or movements, due to possible gun-fire, bombings, etc., would not send them quickly crashing to the sidewalk.

WARTIME MARQUEE REPAIR

In case the present marquee roof is covered with metal that is in very bad condition and cannot be replaced with new metal, it should be entirely removed and a new roof laid of wood sheathing and 5-ply roofing felt paper. Small pieces of this removed metal, if in good condition, can be used for repairing the rain gutters and leaders on the theatre building.

The face of the marquee, as well as the ceiling, should be kept constantly in good condition by scraping small rust spots and repainting where necessary. The main idea now is to conserve and maintain the entire marquee, even though it may not be in normal use, so that later on expensive repairs or the replacement of completely new attraction boards will not be necessary.

For that matter, all iron supporting or reinforcing members throughout the theatre that are exposed to view should be checked carefully now for structural weaknesses or needed repairs. Iron supporting members on top and around all entrance as well as exit doors, should be made structurally safe and rigid so that they cannot be easily jarred out of place, thus binding the doors, which might have to be used in a sudden emergency caused by enemy raids or sabotage explosions.

Systematic checkups should be made of steel members supporting a gridiron over the stage, of all skylights, iron beams under the balcony, roof trusses, beams or girders, especially when they are exposed in the hung ceiling. Careful maintenance of the structural steel supports will make the theatre a safer place, better able to withstand the dangerous strains and stresses as the direct result of any heavy bombings or blasts.

PAINTING STEEL

It is a well known fact that steel is usually more perishable than wood, as well as more expensive, and it is mostly used where its strength is essential to stability. As a result, the protection of steel from corrosion by periodic painting is of prime importance. This is the main reason that all steel bridges are given a new painting every so often. In painting of steel the surface to be painted must be absolutely clean and free of dirt and scale. It should be carefully

TWO METHODS OF PREVENTING LIGHT LEAKAGE FROM LOBBY TO STREET

The paint for use on structural steel should be tough and elastic, with good adhesion properties, and be to a large degree waterproof. Two coats of this paint should always be applied, and three coats make a better job. When paint is applied to steel members it nearly always dries thin on the edges, angles, bolt and rivet heads; hence, it is very good practice to apply a partial or striping coat, after the first full coat, covering all bolt and rivet heads, angles and edges, and the surface about one inch back from the edges. When this striping coat becomes dry, then the second full coat should be applied. About one week should elapse between the application of the first and second coats of paint.

If any cavities or loose masonry are found at the bearing points, they should be filled in solid with cement—but first be certain that all contact-surfaces are thickly painted to keep out dampness.

The kind of paint to be used for structural steel is what is commonly known as "true red lead." This red lead paint should have at least 94% of "true red lead." It can be had in paste form, similar to white lead, containing about 6% of raw linseed oil. In case the paint must be mixed on the job, the common practice is to mix 28 pounds of the red lead—dry pigment—to one gallon of linseed oil. In some cases, finely ground "graphite" in linseed oil is used for painting metal or steel. This mixture is easily applied as it flows well, and it is less expensive than the red lead, and if properly made will give good results.

STEEL PAINT MIXTURE

Lampblack or bone black can also be mixed with this graphite advantageously. In the past, on some jobs, oxide of iron mixed in linseed oil was also used to cover steel and it gave satisfactory results. A preparation of asphaltum can be used as a varnish, either alone or in combination, which will do a fairly satisfactory job.

In figuring just how much paint will have to be used for any particular job, it is safe to calculate on the basis of about 400 square feet to the gallon for one coat. It should be remembered, however, that varnish paints will cover less area than oil paint.

ROOF BOMB-FIRE-PROOFING

A part of the theatre that is of course especially vulnerable to enemy bombings is the roof. As should be known by now, incendiary bombs, when they land and explode, generate heat of about 5,000° F., which will easily burn through all ordinary roofs. Careful consideration should be given this fact, particularly in view of the assembly of people in the auditorium. The trick is to prevent such bombs from penetrating the roof, and to isolate them in such a way that they will burn themselves out without doing any damage. Covering the entire roof with heavy sand bags, or even with from two to four inches of loose sand, is out of the question, for few theatre roofs are strong enough to carry the additional load. The best way, it would seem, would be to lay on the roof a composition cement having the ability to resist heat of 5,000° F., and at the same time having the strength readily to absorb the impact of the falling bombs. This particular composition should be light in weight—not over two pounds to the square foot—and porous enough not to conduct the heat to the roof structure underneath. Also, it should be obtained in powder form so that it could be mixed like ordinary cement and be easily applied; or if pre-cast at the factory, be in slabs that could be conveniently handled and set in place on the roof with fireproof cement to seal the joints.

A composition of this sort could serve two purposes—to protect in wartime the exposed roof against incendiary bombs; and in normal times to insulate the roof against transmission of solar heat and outside cold air to the theatre interior. Also, out of this special composition, pails or other receptacles could be pre-cast at the factory, about 18 inches square and 22 inches high, and with proper covers, in which to carry away incendiary bombs; then in normal times these pails could be used as ordinary sand urns. Some enterprising manufacturer might well put on the market just such an incendiary bomb-fire resisting composition cement, while it certainly could be made up to order.

ENTRANCE WALK AND FLOOR

Dim-outs and blackouts advise an immediate check of conditions at the sidewalk and floor of the vestibule. A broken or uneven sidewalk or floor at the entrance to the theatre can be a serious hazard to the public under present dim-out lighting. In normal times the area directly in front of the theatre is illuminated with such brilliancy at night that a pin could be easily seen on the sidewalk; however, under dim-out lighting, a broken spot or uneven area is likely to appear as one flat surface, which might cause an unsuspecting patron a bad fall and serious injury.

Another thing that might result from a broken or uneven sidewalk is a general pile-up of patrons at the entrance in case one person should fall during an emergency air-raid alarm or complete blackout. Accordingly, the sidewalk and floor at the entrance should be checked carefully, and if in bad condition, should be repaired. A few pointers here on what can and should be done in the preparation and laying of concrete sidewalks and floors may therefore be helpful.

Only a very good grade of artificial cement should be used, such as "Portland cement." This cement requires relatively little water in making a good mortar. When this cement is mixed with sand, in the proportion of 3 to 1, not more than from 9% to 12% — by weight — of water will be necessary.

¶ Suggesting—now that we have "Refreshment Bars" for candy counters and beverage services—a "Nibble Nook" for the automatic candy vender.

LOCATIONS FOR automatic candy machines of maximum effectiveness are not always difficult to find in theatres for the following reasons: (1) they must be where they will attract attention, (2) they should not create objectional noises when the machines are being operated, (3) illumination in and around the machines must not throw any light into the auditorium, and (4) there should be as much harmony as possible between interior decoration and candy machine design.

A decorative lighting and acoustic scheme for a candy machine alcove is illustrated here. This scheme calls for a three-machine unit, but of course it could also be adapted to less or more than three machines with the same details.

The alcove requires a recess of approximately 2 feet beyond line A, as shown in the accompanying Plan and Section drawings; and a slanting projection of approximately 18 inches average, forming wings in front of the alcove. These wing areas and the ceiling call for highly absorbent acoustic material to be applied.

Note that the wings project more towards the top, to create a maximum of acoustically treated area. This is done so as to have a minimum wing projection with maximum acoustic treatment, and to utilize the least amount of floor space. This acoustical feature is developed into an architectural design. The lighting is entirely indirect and therefore will not disturb screen or auditorium lighting.

The candy machines are entirely recessed for a maximum of concealment, yet they are accessible and removable. To eliminate an undesirable elongated verticality of the machine design, a removable Flexglass-covered apron is placed at the bottom and in front of the machines. This apron is easily removed, being placed in fixed wooden guide cleats. The candy storage usually found at the bottom of such vending machines is easily accessible with this scheme.

Because of the provisions made for lighting, acoustics and decorative effect, it is possible to place such a candy alcove in more places than would be ordinarily feasible. The lighting and decorative effect would attract people to the machines if the nook were placed in other than the most prominent locations. The acoustical provisions, moreover, would make it practicable to locate it in even narrow standee area behind the last row of seats. It would be equally desirable, however, to take advantage of the acoustical treatment even if the alcove were placed in the foyer.

It is advisable to eliminate all other lighting devices for at least a 10-foot area around the alcove to make the alcove lighting predominate. It is also necessary to have a carpeted floor in front of the alcove for further noise reduction.

The immediate ceiling area in front of the alcove may or may not be treated acoustically. The acoustic design of the rest of the theatre would most likely determine the treatment, if any, in this area. Treatment in front of the alcove, however, would make the acoustic design of the alcove even more efficient. There is no such thing as introducing too much sound absorption in this immediate area.

If rock wool blanket is used, it should be 1 inch think and be contained in a cotton covering and also re-inforced with wire netting. The fabric covering to be used over the rock wool should be of a weave, color and pattern to fit the decorative scheme. Another covering for the rock wool is sheet metal that is perforated for sound absorption, but it may not be available now. Still another material is perforated hardboard, such as Acousti-Celotex, but of course, it could be bent to curves, so its use would be confined to flat areas.

Fabric covering in such a location may be difficult to keep clean and unmutilated; it therefore might be considered a temporary covering. The use of the fabric covering is only questionable on the wall portions; it may be used without hesitation on the ceiling, where it would not be subject to abuse and hand marks.

Other architectural layouts may be developed to accomplish the same results as the one illustrated here. Whatever the design, care must be taken to provide similar or even a greater amount of acoustical treatment, and to use indirect lighting.

A slightly deeper recess, of about 3½ feet, would enable one to use a more simple form which would not require the slanting projecting wing walls shown.

The color of the lighting should be selected to create a flattering tone on the merchandise to be sold. Blues, greens and purples should be avoided. The indirect lighting cove at the top of the candy machines could also serve to back-illuminate the transluscent plastic letters shown on the top of the machines (letters such as those made by Wagner Sign Service, in 10-inch and 4-inch sizes). The strip lighting can be by either fluorescent or filament lamps.

ATTRACTION advertising at the point of sale—the theatre where the attraction is being presented—is showing increasing evidence of the new attention being given it as a result of the development of new devices for just such advertising.

Today we are seeing more of an effort to make front advertising dynamic and distinctive, and the same thing is beginning to be true of interior displays. The manager now has more to work with, and his new devices in turn stimulate his creative showmanship.

For example, the eye-filling display conceived by Allen Karf, manager of the Uptown theatre in Kansas City, pictured on this page. His marquee provides three sides which he has used with a variety of luminous letters and floodlighted banners to make a three-paneled effect, adding other material across the entrance.

The marquee of the Warren theatre well illustrates the advantages of three sizes of silhouette letters in a display using Adler equipment. It especially indicates the legibility obtained with panels large enough to provide liberal "white space."

In the lobby of the Montclare theatre is pictured the use of Wagner 4-inch plastic letters and interior panel, with one line mounted on the panel, and two clipped to the edges, and all lighted from the single panel.

The marquee of the Stuart in Lincoln, Neb., shows a distinctive disposition of display space, and the copy illustrated indicates how effectively the arrangement lends itself to highlighting of the principal program value—in this case a certain star. This display uses 10-inch with 24-inch Adler letters on Adler panels.

Care should be taken that too much water is not used as it drowns the cement, retards the setting and weakens the mixture. Also too little water can weaken and even spoil the cement mortar. By using hot water the mortar will set faster, and in cold weather mixing about 2 pounds of carbonate of soda to a gallon of hot water in this mortar will prevent freezing. The water used in mixing should be free from oil and alkalies or other organic and foreign matter.

In mixing the mortar, the proportion of cement, sand and coarse aggregate generally used are from 1:2½:5, to 1:3:6. The finish should be at least 1 inch thick, of equal parts sand and cement, and the sidewalk or floor at least 4 inches thick.

When it is necessary to mix by hand, the mixing should be done on some water-tight platform or flooring, and the mortar turned together at least six times until the mixture is alike in color and appearance. Shovels or hoes can be used in mixing. First the sand should be spread out, and upon this the cement; then the two are mixed thoroughly together. Enough water should be added to make a thin mortar and then spread out again. The gravel, if used should then be added, but first it must be thoroughly wet (if originally dry). Care should be taken that the mortar or concrete is not re-mixed with water after it has partly set.

When suspended or old work is resumed, the concrete previously placed should be roughened, cleansed, thoroughly wetted, and then slushed with a mortar of 1 part cement to 1 or 2 parts sand.

BLACK PAINT FROM PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

YOUR OLD, worn-out phonograph records make "the most efficient black paint known to science." The management of the Griffith circuit in Oklahoma, headed by Al C. Griffith, is the source of that statement. And this is how the paint is made:

You simply smash the record into small pieces, drop the fragments into a can and pour denatured alcohol over them. Cover the container loosely and let the record pieces soak for from 24 to 36 hours. They will thus make a thick black paste. To thin the paste to the consistency desired for painting, you merely add alcohol. It is applied with an ordinary paint brush.

Paint made this way dries very quickly; a second coat, avers the Griffith communication, can be applied almost immediately. Also it is pointed out that it is extremely easy to remove the paint; rubbing it with denatured alcohol does the trick in a jiffy.

WARTIME CONSERVATION IN THEATRE PROJECTION

A paper prepared by the Projection Practice Subcommittee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and submitted to the press for publication in the interests of effective economy of projection equipment and supplies

IN COLLABORATION with the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, Richard Walsh, president of the IATSE, recently announced a ten-point program designed to conserve vital materials needed for military purposes; to salvage such materials; and, by reducing waste to a minimum, enable the motion picture theaters to carry on during the present emergency.

The 10-Point Program is as follows:

(1) Keep your projection rooms and equipment clean. Dirt causes wear and tear.

(2) Lubricate properly all equipment. Follow the manufacturer's instructions.

(3) Make only necessary replacements to conserve spare parts.

(4) Burn carbons at minimum current specified by manufacturer. Use carbon savers where available.

(5) Clean lenses of optical systems with soft tissue and protect condensers and reflectors.

(6) Service regularly all electric current distribution points, such as: motors, generators, bus bars, fuses, switches, resistors, and condensers.

(7) Allow sufficient warming-up period for all vacuum tubes. Burn tubes at specified ratings of equipment manufacturers.

(8) Inspect, thread, and rewind film very carefully. Keep it clean.

(9) Handle reels and film containers with care; these can not be replaced.

(10) Do Not Throw Anything Away.

Keep all worn out parts and metal coated carbon stubs; collect copper and other carbon drippings. Keep all burned out or broken vacuum tubes and incandescent lamps. You will receive instructions as to the proper disposal of this salvaged material.

The Projection Practice Sub-Committee of the SMPE Theatre Engineering Committee is wholeheartedly in agreement with the ten points and their aims and purposes. However, the Committee feels that the value of the ten points would be greatly enhanced if the projectionists of the country were informed more in detail of the ways and means of accomplishing the ten points. There is much beneath the surface in each of the points, and to bring out clearly all the details underlying the wordings of the points, the Projection Practice Sub-Committee has prepared the following elaboration of the ten-point program. Each of the following sections was prepared by a member of the Projection Practice Sub-Committee and the separate contributions were then correlated to present a clear picture of the great amount of detail that underlies each of the ten points:

CLEANLINESS

(1) Keep Projection Rooms and Equipment Clean. Dirt Causes Wear and Tear.—Dirt has been the cause of serious film fires in preventing the proper operation of the automatic fire-shutter or in clogging the fire-valve rollers. It makes them susceptible to wear and renders them useless for the purpose intended.

Dirt may cause the stoppage of sound reproduction by accumulating on the various movable contacts or on the vacuum-tube contacts in the sound equipment.

It may cause losses in screen illumination, when deposited on the projection arc reflector or condensers, and has resulted in the rapid deterioration of carbon contacts with communicated damage to the adjacent parts of the lamp mechanism.

Dirt on the gear-teeth and shafts of the projector, combining with the lubricating oil, acts like a grinding compound, causing excessive wear and shortening the effective life of the gears and bearings.

On fuse-clips it causes high-resistance contacts and the generation of heat, which may sometimes cause the fuse to blow.

Make sure that the lamp house and all parts are kept thoroughly clean both inside and outside. The carbon ash, drippings, etc., should be removed regularly once a day, especially from the shafts, bushings, and gears of the arc control operating parts.

The arc exhaust dampers and ducts should frequently be cleaned thoroughly of carbon ash, dust, etc. Any blockage, no matter how small, will affect the proper burning of the carbons, cause pitting of the mirrors, and produce a gradual accumulation of ash within the lamp house. If there is a filter in the air-supply system, make sure it is in efficient working order. Care should be taken to prevent dust and dirt from blowing into the projection room through any windows if left open.

To get the most out of motor-generators, they should be kept clean, and all dirt should be removed before sparking becomes disastrous. Increased brush life as well as increased commutator life will be the direct result. Dirt on commutators causes arcing and pitting, shortening their life and increasing maintenance costs. The contacting surface of each commutator brush should be periodically examined so that commutator and bearing wear is held to a minimum. If the generator is on a concrete floor, care should be taken in sweeping, so that abrasive dust from the concrete will not get into the bearings. The exhibitor who is interested in keeping his projection maintenance costs low should extend to the projection room the same services used in cleaning the auditorium and other parts of the theatre. The projection room floor, walls, and ceiling should be of such materials that they will not "dust off." If the floor is of exposed cement, it should be kept well painted with "dust-proof" or "sealer" paint, and should be mopped frequently. A supply of lintless cloths for cleaning should be made available, as well as other cleaning facilities such as carbon tetrachloride, brooms and dust pan, metal waste can, and the like. In fact, these should be standard equipment of the projection room.

A stiff-bristled tooth-brush is useful for keeping the sprockets and idler rollers clean. The space between the fire-valve rollers and the castings in which they are mounted can easily be cleaned by inserting a narrow strip of film and drawing it back and forth to dislodge the dirt.—J. J. HOPKINS.

LUBRICATION

(2) Lubricate Equipment Properly.—Follow the manufacturer's instructions, and use only the grade of oil recommended by the manufacturer. The importance of lubrication of projection equipment cannot be overemphasized. Now that metals and oil have become important in our country's war program, we must regard the lubrication problem from the conservation viewpoint as well as the operating.

The following rules should be strictly adhered to:

(1) Do not lubricate the mechanism while it is in motion. Doing so is hazardous both to the mechanism and to the projectionist.

(2) Do not over-lubricate. Excessive lubrication is costly and wasteful. It also impairs the quality of the sound and the picture. Only small oil cans that dispense small quantities of oil at a time should be used.

(3) Cleanliness in conjunction with lubrication is an important matter, since excess oil deposits promote the collection of dirt, dust, and grit on the vital parts of the projection equipment.

(a) Should the fire rollers become coated with oil, they will collect dust and grit, which will scratch the emulsion on the film. Such marring and destruction of films is very costly, and definitely does not contribute to our war effort.

(b) Deposits of oil, grease, and grit on the film strippers cause wearing of the sprockets and damage to the sprocket-holes of the film.

(c) Excessive oil on take-up devices causes them to slip, resulting in film mutilation by pile-up or sprocket breakage.

(d) All containers of oil should be kept carefully covered, and oil cans should be cleaned before being refilled.

—M. GESSIN.

REPLACEMENTS

(3) Make Only Necessary Replacements.—Due to the difficulty of obtaining replacement parts, it will be necessary to make the present parts last longer. The projectionist must assume greater responsibility in his care of the apparatus he operates. This means a daily inspection of the various items of the apparatus to insure to the utmost degree continuous, efficient operation. To a large extent this can be accomplished by systematic care to eliminate abnormal wear.

The projector mechanism has many precision-made parts. To reduce replacements and repairs to a minimum, the projectionist should keep his eyes constantly open for signs of uneven or jerky motion of the mechanism, and his ears attuned to any unusual noises during operation. A good practice is to turn the projector over by hand before the start of each day's show to see whether it revolves freely or not. If it seems to bind, the switch must not be thrown or serious damage may result. With the projector idle, try by hand the meshing of the teeth of the main drive gear, the lower sprocket pinion gear, and the intermediate gear. When the teeth on any or all of these gears show signs of rapid wear they should be realigned, otherwise new gears will shortly have to be installed.

At least once a week check the synchronizing marks on the vertical shaft gear, the intermediate gear, and on the intermittent movement flywheel to see whether they are in their proper operating relation. Watch the intermittent. Any slack that may develop between the star and the cam, or in cam and flywheel shafts, should be removed and every visible screw should be tightened at least once a month. This will avoid much future trouble.

Intermittent Sprocket Movement

Care should be taken when removing the intermittent sprocket, movement, or any other delicate part, not to strike the hard surface of the mechanism housing, as the good parts may be burred or jarred out of perfect alignment.

When the intermittent sprocket or starwheel shows undue wear, tension on the pad or film guide should be checked and the spring compressed or released until the desired tension on both sides of the shoe is obtained. Too much tension wears the sprockets and may damage the film.

The pad rollers should be adjusted by the simple method of placing two thicknesses of standard 35-mm film on the sprocket held tightly over the teeth. The surfaces of the roller should be allowed barely to touch the film, and then the arm is tightened in this position. The rollers should be in line with the sprocket-teeth; that is, the teeth should operate in the recess formed in the rollers. A good practice is to wash the sprocket-teeth at least twice a week with a stiff-haired brush dipped in kerosene, and at least once a month the entire mechanism should be thoroughly cleaned with kerosene to remove all injurious foreign bodies.

Always, when making repairs, or installing gears, make sure beforehand that the proper procedure is thoroughly understood and that guide marks are inscribed by hand on the parts or that the factory guide marks match in order to have perfect alignment. Proper tools should be available before starting any such work.

On some mechanisms the stripper plates and sprockets may be reversed when they show undue wear, but such reversing should be done very carefully and after some thought, as in some cases more harm can be done than good

In the care and maintenance of the sound-head, practically the same precautions should be followed as indicated for the upkeep of the projector mechanism. The many electrical connections should be frequently checked and tightened. When a rotary stabilizer is used the roller should be left open at all times except when film is running in the projector.

Maintenance and Adjustments

The following list should prove helpful in the care and maintenance of the upper and lower magazines:

Tighten all screws.

Check the bushings, shafts, and reel locks.

Watch the upper magazine tension. Excessive tension causes fast wearing of the upper feed sprocket.

Keep the upper friction spring and collars clean and lubricated. Avoid jerky upper magazine feed.

When readjusting the take-ups, place a heavily loaded reel in the lower magazine. Start the motor, and, beginning with no tension, gradually tighten until the reel picks up and revolves slowly from any position in which it is stopped. Give an extra half-turn to the adjusting knob and lock it.

Do not wait for take-up belts to break. Change belts every thirty days, and allow oil-soaked leather belts to dry thoroughly. Carefully examine removed belts for breaks, bad spots, etc.

Ventilating fans in rectifiers require periodic inspection and lubrication from one to two times a year. The rectifier should be located in a well ventilated, cool spot. A free flow of air should be maintained. Avoid placing rectifiers too close to other equipment or by placing materials on top of them.

Bulb Rectifiers

In bulb-type rectifiers, the bulb sockets and clips should be inspected to make sure they are clean and not corroded or pitted. Sandpaper may be used to remove corrosion in order to make good contact. The bulbs should be secure in their sockets, and should be checked every few weeks. The various connections should also be checked.

The power input to the rectifier should correspond to the transformer rating. Voltages should be kept as close as possible to the recommended values. Variations over 10 per cent should be corrected.

A few precautions in the care and maintenance of rewinders, reels, splicers, and electrical change-overs will prove helpful in prolonging the useful life of the equipment.

Rewinder alignment should be checked. Aluminum reels should be handled with care, as new ones are not available.

Realign the splicer and check the cutting blades.

Once a month, check the change-overs and the foot-switches for proper contact and alignment.

—John J. Sefing.

CARBON USAGE

(4) Burn Carbons at Minimum Current Specified by Manufacturer. Use Carbon Savers Where Available.—It is suggested that motion picture theatres operate projection lamps at or near the minimum arc current recommended for the trim in use if the resulting reduction in screen illumination below that at maximum recommended current can be safely tolerated. The general adoption of this suggestion should result in a considerable power and carbon saving, and for those theatres using copper-coated carbons, a substantial reduction in copper consumption.

It is felt that this suggested reduction in operating current, while bringing the level of screen illumination below recommended practice in many instances, will still permit acceptable projection of motion pictures and, for the duration of the war, is justified by the substantial saving of power and essential materials which can be accomplished in this manner.

Check ammeters and voltmeters in projector arc circuits to be certain they are accurate, before making any alterations in your present operations.

Check into the availability of reliable carbon savers on the market at the present time that will operate satisfactorily in your lamps. Be sure to use most economical carbon combination and length of carbons available for your lamps. Avoid striking an arc too soon. —E. R. Geib.

LENSES AND REFLECTORS

(5) Clean Lenses Properly and Protect Condensers and Reflectors.—Lenses, condensers, and reflectors should be cleaned with special lens tissue or soft cloth. Avoid the use of abrasive cleaning materials or cloths containing fibers that scratch. Condensers and reflectors should be cleaned only when thoroughly cool, as any sudden cool draft may damage the optical system.

Projection optical systems should be cleaned every day before the show. Do not turn the mirror around in its holder, as in a very short time the entire surface will be pitted. Do not attempt to remove pits forcibly. Check the mirror-retaining clips for the proper holding tension; when too tight, the mirror may crack due to expansion.

Port glasses should be cleaned daily.

Treated lenses should be cleaned in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions. Keep oil from reaching the lens element. These instructions pertain to both sound and projection optical systems. Care should be taken to prevent chipping.

—Henry Behr.

MOTORS AND GENERATORS

(6) Service Regularly All Electric Distribution Points.—Motors, Generators:

Friction is the greatest cause of wear and tear on all rotating equipment. Anything that can be done to reduce friction will tend to increase the life of all such equipment. It is, therefore, impossible to place too much emphasis on cleanliness of the equipment as well as of the surroundings of such equipment.

In order to prevent dust and dirt from dropping or being blown into the unit itself, all walls as well as the floor and ceiling of the motor-generator room should be painted and cleaned regularly. Lubrication of the unit should be done in accordance with the instructions of the manufacturer and a chart should be kept of such lubrication to show the regularity of such service. Bearings should be drained at regular intervals of not more than six months and refilled with a good grade of oil, of a viscosity recommended by the manufacturer.

Brush contact should always be good and the tension should be kept at the minimum that will not allow sparking. Brushes should be staggered so as to allow even wear across the entire width of the commutator. Never use brushes other than the grade recommended by the manufacturer.

Keep all slots in undercut commutators clean by the use of a wooden stick of the proper width, and never use oil on any commutator. If necessary to use an abrasive on the commutator, clean both brushes and commutator thoroughly afterward. Keep the shaft and couplings in proper alignment. Blow out all dust and dirt from the windings of the unit with a blower.

Alignment of the motor and generator shafts should be checked and the couplings kept tight. Misalignment and looseness cause vibration, increased wear, and replacements.

Bus Bars, Fuses, and Switches: These do not ordinarily wear out; they generally burn out, and do so because they are not kept clean. Dirt or corrosion causes resistance to electric current, and resistance causes heating; the heat causes additional resistance and a vicious circle is thus built up which eventually destroys the unit. Good contact, therefore, is the first requisite of extended life of these units, and good contact is maintained by cleanliness and tight connections. Go over all switchboard connections regularly with proper tools, and if refillable-type fuses are used make sure that all contacts within the fuse itself are clean and tight.

The numerous a-c and d-c switches throughout the projection room should be inspected at least once a month. The panels should be opened and every nut and bolt, switch, and fuse-holder should be cleaned and tightened.

Resistors: Resistors do not ordinarily wear out if they are properly selected for the duty they are to perform. These units need no special service except to be kept clean, and all connections to them be kept tight. It is suggested that not less than once every six months they be freed of all dirt and dust by the use of a blower. Resistors should be properly placed and adequately ventilated to prevent overheating.

CUT CARBON COSTS 10% TO 25%

Droll processed carbons provide a milled male end and a drilled female end. You simply join two of them and clip with a sleeve of pure copper, which matches exactly the copper coating on the carbon and which is consumed without altering light quality or intensity. When a carbon is burned to about 3" it is fitted onto the next carbon. No dirt, delay, work, or machine to buy. Burn every inch of every carbon.

Available in: Negatives, 6 mm x 9", 6.5 mm x 9", 7 mm x 9", and Positives, 6 mm x 12", 7 mm x 12" x 14", 8 mm x 12" x 14". Also High Intensity 13.6 mm x 22" (machined for adapters) which provide 20 minutes more burning time per trim.

Shipped f.o.b. Chicago at regular carbon list prices plus 75c per hundred for milling, drilling and clips; less 5%, 10 days.

stats should be checked. The cover should be removed periodically, and the bolted connections to the resistor material checked. Rectifiers should not be operated above the recommended rating. Once a year, or oftener if necessary, blow out the accumulated dirt and lint in the rectifier stacks. This will insure proper ventilation and cooling. —CHARLES HORSTMAN.

VACUUM TUBES

(7) Allow Sufficient Warming-Up for Vacuum Tubes. Burn Tubes at Specified Ratings.—It is important that amplifier and rectifier tubes be pre-heated and become stabilized at operating temperatures before the sound system is operated. Usually a fifteen-minute period is sufficient for this purpose. Certain types of tubes, particularly rectifiers, require a pre-heating period to allow the electron emission to become stabilized so that all parts of the filament are liberating electrons before the plate voltage is applied to the tube. If the plate voltage is applied before sufficient electrons have been emitted, the surface of the filament may be damaged, or part of the filament may be burned away at one spot.

Many of the larger tubes have spiral extension springs to take up the slack of the filament resulting from expansion and elongation due to the heating. Sufficient pre-heating time should be allowed to permit the filament to assume its normal operating position before applying the plate voltage.

Mercury-vapor tubes must be pre-heated to drive the mercury from the filament and plate elements of the tube before applying the anode voltage. This usually requires three to five minutes, depending upon the location of the mercury in the tube and whether or not the tube had previously been pre-heated. Tubes of this type should have an initial pre-heating period of five to fifteen minutes and then used for two or three days. They can then be stored in a vertical position for future use.

Tubes should be operated at the voltage ratings specified by the manufacturer. An accurate meter should be used in making these measurements. A majority of installations are provided with a 110-to 120-volt switch to adjust the primary input voltage. If the amplifier or unit is not equipped with a switch of this type, the voltage may be adjusted by moving the tap on the primary of the power transformer. Operating the tubes on line voltages above the normal value will not add anything to the output of the tubes but will only decrease their life. Operating the tubes below their normal rated voltages also shortens tube life.

—ADOLPH GOODMAN.

THREADING; REWINDING

(8) Inspect, Thread, and Rewind Film Carefully. Keep It Clean.—Film should at all times be carefully handled. It should be kept away from all sources of heat, except the normal heat during projection. The regulations against smoking should be obeyed.

Film should under no circumstances be left lying exposed on benches or elsewhere, but should be immediately placed in metal containers or cabinet after use.

Film should be inspected each time before it goes through the machine. The only way that film can be properly inspected is by slowly winding the film by hand. Inspection should cover tears, splices, and defects in sprocket-holes. Do not use bent reels. Use fresh film cement for making all splices.

Film should be carefully threaded through the machine. It should be in proper place on every roller, gate, and sprocket. Excess slack at top and bottom of machines should be taken up before the machine is started. Magazine doors should be closed as soon as the film is threaded and should be kept closed during the entire operation.

—E. R. MORIN.

REELS AND CONTAINERS

(9) Handle Reels and Film Containers with Care; They Can Not Be Replaced.—A bracket or rack should be erected on which to keep all empty reels instead of allowing them to lie on the floor or elsewhere where they may be damaged.

Film-storage cabinets and shipping cases should be kept clean. Bent reels should be saved, as manufacturers are making arrangements to straighten such reels.

After putting reels into the film cabinet, the compartment door should be closed by hand. It should not be allowed to snap back into place by its own weight. Care should be taken that ends of film do not stick out. —E. R. MORIN.

SALVAGING

(10) Do Not Throw Anything Away.—Because of acute shortages of many materials, and the difficulty of obtaining replacements for theatre equipment, all broken and worn out parts should be saved.

Save all gears made from steel, bronze, brass, or other material. Sprockets, pad-rollers, blades and jaws of old switches, copper wire, arc-lamp jaws, and other metal parts should be accumulated for disposition at some future date.

Do not throw away a transformer or motor of any kind. The copper can be reclaimed and the cores can be used again. There are some manufacturing concerns who will not ship a new transformer unless the old one is returned.

Broken aluminum reels and other aluminum parts should be welded or otherwise repaired. If the part cannot be mended, save the aluminum.

Reel and trailer cans should be returned to the firm exchanges.

Trailers and sections of film not in use also should be returned to the exchanges, who will then forward the film to film reclaiming companies.

The country needs copper. Remove and

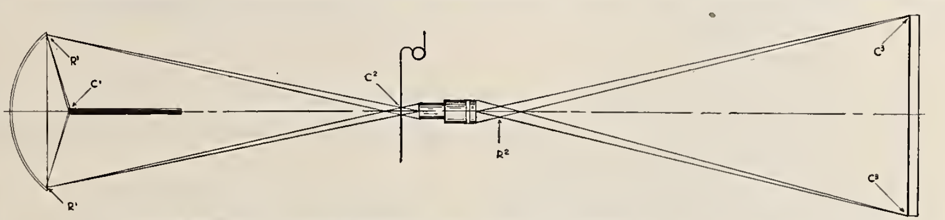
Determining the Efficiency Of Your Reflector-Lens System

By CHARLES E. SHULTZ

¶ Concluding the article, "Making Sure You Get All Possible Projection Light for Your Money," begun in the May 2nd Issue.

[With wartime restrictions limiting the availability of equipment and supplies, efficiency in projection takes on added meaning. The purpose of the author, a member of the firm of Heyer-Shultz, Inc., and director of its research laboratory, is to provide the projectionist with accurate means of checking picture illumination. In the May 2nd installment he dealt with reflectors and lenses; here he discusses the entire optical system.—THE EDITOR.]



Diagrammatic representation of the entire projection optical system.

THE OPTICAL system is composed of the reflector and lens systems, which merge at the film line.

The drawing shows the entire system. Light produced at the positive carbon C^1 falls upon the reflecting surface R^1 and is imaged at the film line C^2. The lens images the film C^2 and the reflected image of the positive crater C^1 on screen at points C^3.

The image of the reflecting surface is found at point R^2, which is known as the point of aerial image.

The point of aerial image is found to sharply focus the reflecting surface when the beam is intercepted at point R^2. This is the proper place to set a front shutter so it cuts the beam at its smallest point.

The F speed of the entire system is equal to the slowest component part. Therefore, to determine the speed of your projection optical system, compute separately the speed of your reflector and the speed of your lens as described. The speed of the slower equals the speed of your entire system.

The greatest F speed for any reflector arc manufactured today is F/2.2. There are also projection lenses available with a speed of F/2.0.

As we have seen that the speed of the entire system is equal to the slowest component, F/2.2 is the fastest system available. The following table has been compiled using F/2.2 as 100% (this figure is based only on relative aperture). The table below demonstrates the relative comparison of this maximum value of F/2.2 with other speeds.

Table I

F 2.2 = 100%
F 2.3 = 91%
F 2.4 = 84%
F 2.5 = 78%
F 2.6 = 72%
F 2.7 = 66%
F 2.8 = 61%
F 2.9 = 57%
F 3.0 = 54%
F 3.1 = 50%
F 3.2 = 47%

An accompanying table (Table 2) gives the potential light projection capacity of various arcs through an F 2.2 system, in which the reflector and lens are in new condition and are clean. These figures represent screen lumens available for four types of F 2.2 lenses. The four types are:

1. F 2.2 system with uncoated 6-element lens.
2. F 2.2 system with coated 6-element lens.
3. F 2.2 system with uncoated 4-element lens.
4. F 2.2 system with coated 4-element lens.

It is assumed that the efficiency of the uncoated 6-element lens is 88% of the uncoated 4-element lens.

TABLE 2.—POTENTIAL LIGHT PROJECTION CAPACITY

			Maximum screen lumens without shutter for F/2.2 system
Type Arc	Carbons	Recommended Arc Power	Uncoated 6-element lens	Coated 6-element lens	Uncoated 4-element lens	Coated 4-element lens
A. C. One Kilowatt	7 mm. Suprex	66A—22V	4517	5737	5513	6616
D. C. One Kilowatt	7 mm. Suprex Pos. 6 mm. Orotip "C" Neg.	40A—27½V	4517	5737	5513	6616
Suprex	7 mm. Suprex Pos. 6 mm. Suprex Neg.	42A—32V	4964	6304	5641	6769
Suprex	7 mm. Suprex Pos. 6 mm. Suprex Neg.	50A—36V	6656	8453	7564	9077
Suprex	8 mm. Suprex Pos. 6.5 or 7 mm. Suprex Neg.	65A—36V	8122	10315	9230	11076

It is also assumed that a coated 4-element lens is 20% more efficient than the same lens uncoated.

A coated 6-element lens is 27% more efficient than the same lens uncoated.

All of the values given are screen lumens measured without projector shutter in operation.

If you are in doubt about the number of elements in your lens or its type, the manufacturer of the lens can supply you with this information.

GETTING TOP EFFICIENCY

To determine the correct value for an efficient system composed of equipment identical to that of yours, proceed as follows:

1. Select from Table 1 the carbons and arc power which correspond to your system.
2. Determine the F/speed of your entire system as previously described and find its efficiency ratio in Table 1.
3. Measure the width and height of your screen.
4. Determine the efficiency of your projector shutter by taking photometric readings first with the shutter in operation, and then without using it. Reduce these values to a decimal relationship. For example, if you found your screen had 32 foot-candles of light incident upon it without the shutter in operation, and 16 foot-candles when the shutter was in operation, the decimal efficiency of the shutter would be 16 divided by 32, or 0.5.

By the use of these results the following equation will give you the average number of foot-candles that should be incident upon your size screen with your present equipment, providing that it is delivering maximum efficiency.

Let:

s = Efficiency of shutter expressed as a decimal.
H = Height of screen in feet.
W = Width of screen in feet.

Q = Percent efficiency of your system as compared to an $F/2.2$ system as shown in Table 1.

C = Average foot-candles incident upon screen.

Then:

For purposes of demonstration let us assume arbitrary values and substitute in the equation. Let—s = .5 which is the decimal efficiency of shutter as described.

L = 9230 screen lumens (as shown in Table 2 for a 65-ampere, 36-volt suprex arc with 8 mm. positive, and 7 mm. negative in an $F/2.2$ system with uncoated 4-element lens.

H = 13.3 feet — height of screen.

W = 18.3 feet — width of screen.

Q = 84% or .84 — the efficiency of an $F/2.4$ system as shown in Table 1, compared to an $F/2.2$ system.

C = Unknown — Average foot-candles which should be incident upon screen with above conditions.

Substituting in the equation:

C = 15.926, average foot-candles with shutter in operation.

CHECKING CONDITIONS

With this known standard figure for comparison, a photometric reading of the light incident upon your screen with the shutter in operation, compared with the figures obtained by the use of the above equation, will give you an accurate comparison of the output of your projection system with that of recommended maximum standards. If you find your equipment is sub-standard, the following points should be investigated:

1. Are all optical components clean?
2. Is the optical alignment between the reflector and lens correct?
3. Is the arc power correct for the carbons used?
4. Is the reflector perfectly focused?
5. Are you using the proper size of carbons for your screen size?
6. Do you have optical glass in your projection ports?

Detailed information may be obtained by writing to the manufacturers of each of the several pieces that make up your complete equipment. It is essential that you obtain and study their suggestions to accomplish maximum results. Most manufacturers have available special bulletins regarding their specific products. Such a library of special data can be of invaluable service in the efficient maintenance of all of your equipment.

From this article it may be seen that several things are of utmost importance to efficient operation so vital in the conservation of power and carbons. Let us review them:

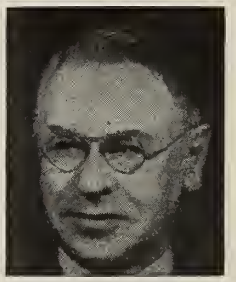
1. Absolute cleanliness of all optical parts at all times. Reflectors should be cleaned with Bon-Ami powder, or its equivalent, twice weekly and should be dusted at the end of each reel with a clean dry cloth. The front and back of the lens should be cleaned daily.
2. Perfect optical alignment between reflector, aperture, and lens.
3. Correct carbons and arc power for the size screen used.
4. Perfect focus of the reflector at the aperture.
5. Have present lenses coated if possible.
6. Eliminate glass of any kind at projection ports. The loss through optical glass in the port even when set absolutely perpendicular to the projection axis is 6% when perfectly clean. The loss may be as high as 25% when the port glass is covered with dust, which is sure to settle in a very short time.
7. Save all copper drippings from the arc and peel all copper coating from carbon stubs.

F. H. RICHARDSON'S

COMMENT on PROJECTION

Suggesting Solutions For Out-of-Focus Effect

IN THE LAST issue of BETTER THEATRES I published a problem experienced at a small theatre in the Bronx, New York, where the management was having difficulty in finding the cause and remedy of an out-of-focus effect. Two projectionists have sent in their solutions. First let's hear Brother Lee C. Fultz, chief projectionist of Jarodsky Enterprises, operating the Lincoln theater in Paris, Ill. He says:



F. H. R.

"Although this is the first time I have written you I enjoy your comments on projection in BETTER THEATRES each month. In the May 2nd issue you told of a Bronx theatre which was having difficulty with an out-of-focus effect on the right side of the screen. The letter did not say whether this effect occurred on one or both projectors and that of course makes a difference; however, I have experienced a similar result some time ago when I was forced to use an emergency mechanism because of a broken gear in the regular equipment.

"Having some brass shim stock on hand, I cut a strip to fit behind the film track on one side. This shim I installed behind the track only to find the trouble aggravated. I removed the shim and installed it behind the other track — and bingo! everything was perfect. Of course the proper thickness of shim and which track to put it behind can only be determined by experiment. This may or may not help others who have been having trouble. I give it to you for whatever it is worth to those in trouble.

"I have been projecting for the past twenty-four years. The Lincoln theatre where I now am has equipment which includes Super Simplex mechanisms with Super Cinephor objective lenses; Peerless Magnarc lamps and RCA sound. Our projection distance is 107 feet, the picture being 18 feet.

"I am quite proud of the results obtained and many patrons have taken the trouble to tell me our results are equal to or better than those they have seen in larger theatres in this and other states. We try to keep all equipment clean and in first-class condition."

It is always interesting to hear from a new man, or rather one who has not written to us before, and we thank Brother Fultz for the interest he has shown in the other fellow's problem.

And now we'll listen to Garnett Stancil, of Centerville, Ala.:

"I was particularly interested in the Bronx theatre's trouble since I have experienced this sort of trouble many times in the past, especially with inferior lenses at a heavy angle of projection — and a few times with the best of lenses and at almost no angle!

"While I do not know what is causing this particular trouble, I believe the remedy I always used will be of some help in this case, although it will reduce somewhat the amount of light passed through the projection lenses. First, make sure the separating rings are allowing the lens to fit snugly and flat, then if the trouble persists block off the offending area as follows:

"Dismantle the lens and insert a thin cardboard washer between threaded holder ring and the lens, having opening in cardboard as large as possible, but still overlapping lens sufficiently to stop light rays opposite the side that out-of-focus appears on. Then re-assemble and put it in the projector and rotate the lens until the opposite spot is found. That is, have the mask on the side opposite the out-of-focus image on the screen.

"If the projectionist who is experiencing this trouble wishes to try this remedy of masking before taking the lens out of the projector, he can do so by holding a piece of cardboard in front of the lens on the side opposite the screen. If he is using a Series 2 lens, the loss of light through the above masking will be slight, but with half sizes and series No. 1 he will have to be very careful because light loss will be much greater.

"Of course the masking could be done with black lacquer, but it would soon peel off from heat, since lacquer won't stay on glass very well after drying. It has a tendency to peel off in one chunk."

Well, there are two cures for out-of-focus effect which may fit situations like that encountered by our recent Bronx correspondent. I hope one of them does the trick.

He Says to Blame Ourselves, Not the S.R.P.

Mr. Solberg looking for trouble and finding it.

GLENN SOLBERG, projectionist at the Grand Terrace theatre in Crookston, Minn., and one of my consistent "Bluebook School" students from whom I have not heard for some time, now submits (along with a tale of woe about some recent sound troubles which would be of no interest to others) his "theory" of handling cues. He writes:

"About print make-up and cues—everyone seems to have a different theory. Here's mine. I think the present set-up is fine. It is just like anything else in this old world of ours. All it requires is a little observation and thought. Of course there will always be a few wise guys in this business, just as there are in any other; however, I think if most projectionists would stop and think a moment before they got out the scissors to make a nice big cue for themselves, they would probably realize that they are not the last man on the circuit and there are still a few more runs in the old print.

"Yes, I think the present print make-up is fine. But let's look in our own back yard. That's where the whole trouble lies. If our projection equipment (especially drives) were standardized as much as the prints are, our troubles would be over. We would all use the same C. O. and S. M. cues—also the same start frame. There you is! Simple, ain't it?

"I am sending along a snapshot of yours truly taken in the 'factory.' I believe it is self-explanatory. This is truly the way one gets after shooting shadows with deluxe prints for eleven years. Still I haven't taken up cutting out paper dolls yet, so things could be worse!"

A Thank-You Note From the Hawaiian Sector

I LIKE to hear from the projectionists who are now scattered over the four corners of the earth, doing their bit to see to it that the rest of us do not come under the heel of the "heels." Here's a note that I reprint here by way of conveying the thanks of the writer of it, Albert Cook, who is now located down where grass skirts were famous until Pearl Harbor blew them off. Private Cook was two days out when that event took place. His outfit was sent back to the United States for the time being, but now he writes:

"I thought I had written you since arriving at the Hawaiian Islands, but perhaps my letter got lost somewhere. We didn't quite make the Philippines, but I guess it doesn't make much difference where we go as long as we can help lick the Slant-eyes and the Heils (spelled with double-e).

"Since coming here I have had the opportunity quite frequently to visit Honolulu, Waikiki Beach and other places, which I find quite interesting, though of course it would be better during peace times. I found out about the letter I wrote being published in BETTER THEATRES and have since received many letters from projectionists all over the U. S. A. I wish you would, through your column, thank all these men. Letters from home mean much more than I can tell.

"Incidentally, my former employer had the article republished in our local paper. Since I still hope to get back in the theatre business, I am looking forward to the time when this mess is all cleaned up."

And we all say Amen to that, Brother Cook.

Proposed: Travelling Projection Inspectors

"BY WRITING THIS," begins a letter from Lester Van Buskirk of the Maltz theatre at Alpena, Mich., "I may get some darned strong answers back, but just the same I have an idea the thing would work. We all know that the Exchanges have been receiving prints damaged by cue marks scratched on and made by other methods that go to help destroying a print. Why would it not be possible for every exchange in each state to appoint one or two good men—yes, men that know their projectors and the care of film from A to Z—these men to get paid by each exchange to have a route that would cover all the theatres in the state?

"I know it would take a long time to cover all theatres, but in due time it could be done and I believe one man could reach each theatre in his territory once or maybe twice each year. The purpose would be to have them talk to the projectionists on damage to prints. Let them have the authority to make out a report on the condition of the projectors from top to bottom, the condition of the projection room, and on all concerning it. Part of the duties would also be to give good advice to those projectionists who need it. Let the route men stress to the projectionist the damage he is doing by scratching on cues, by using too much oil on projector heads, etc.

"Many questions would arise, one of which would be: How could such a man enter a projection room without a union card? I believe this could be taken care of, however, for I believe the unions would be glad to co-operate by giving a special card if necessary.

"The cost of, say, two men in a state would be at least $120 a week; however, I believe a close check up would show the damage done to prints to amount to at least that plus a whole lot more.

"Yes, there is the war, with its restrictions on tires, gas, etc. Maybe that is the hardest part to answer, but I still think it is a swell idea and I would like to get your reaction concerning it."

Well, Brother Van Buskirk, I believe you have something there. Whether it could be promoted into an actuality or not is something else again. As a general rule I have found exchanges to be more or less hard-of-hearing and it would be quite a job, in my opinion, to persuade them to go into the matter in such an elaborate manner.

As to the agent being able to get into the projection room, I feel sure that that could be arranged without too much difficulty; and as far as gas, tires, etc., are concerned—well, theatres should be easily within walking distance from a train, bus stop or street car line, for theatres are not generally placed out in the wilds.

In my estimation the greatest difficulty would be to persuade the film distributors to regard the problem as peculiarly their own. After all, a good deal of agitation has been carried on over the mutilation evil, the need for better exchange inspection and so on, yet the condition persists —though it has definitely improved.

When and Why Replace Intermittent Sprocket

J. L. MCINTIRE of St. Louis, writes:

"I take the liberty of addressing you for the reason that for many long years you have been a 'father' to all projectionists of this and other countries, through the medium of your invaluable Handbook and the also invaluable department in Better Theatres. I do not in the least exaggerate when I say that by working for the improvement of motion picture projection, you have helped to make motion pictures more popular through the years you have served it.

"And now I will get down to the reason for this letter, I of course want your help. First, I am having difficulty in convincing my superiors that new parts are needed up here in the projection room. Will you tell me in what manner I may make certain that an intermittent sprocket should be discarded and a new one installed?

"Second, do you regard a wire five years old as safe and efficient in conveying currents? That is to say, would it offer resistance enough, compared with a new one, to justify replacement?"

I thank you most cordially for the good opinion you have of my work during past years. Now as to your first question: In the Sixth Edition of the Bluebook of Projection, page 220, I believe you will find the answer. It reads:

"The constant friction of film against metal wears the metal away. Worn intermittent sprocket teeth not only produce an unsteady picture, but tear film sprocket holes. Therefore the intermittent sprockets should be examined after each fifty hours of operation. Use a magnifying glass to discover the flaws that frequently cannot be seen by the naked eye. If there is any visible undercutting in the form of a small notch at the base of the working side of the teeth, the sprocket should be replaced at once. If no notch shows, but the teeth are appreciably reduced in width at their base, they are equally useless and harmful."

If the teeth are found to be in good condition they still might be out of adjustment. There must be accurate adjustment to permit no perceptible movement of the intermittent sprocket. Test by rocking it back and forth with your finger while the movement is on the lock. Adjustment must not be too close or it will bind when the projector mechanism flywheel is turned. Adjustment is correct when the flywheel rotates freely and there is no lost rotary motion in the intermittent sprocket when the movement is on the lock. The intermittent movement may be adjusted when the mechanism is either hot or cold.

Your second query, in its present form, cannot be answered. It would depend entirely upon how much current the wire had been handling in a specified period of time. A wire of copper loses nothing in carrying capacity if it at no time becomes over-heated or over-loaded—however, take particular note of that at no time.

Many of you will remember the informative contribution made to these columns in the March issue, by Sgt. E. R. King, a projectionist of Sydney, Australia, now in the Royal Australian Air Force, who told us of projection conditions and administrative methods in Australia. Sgt. King had called on me while on visit to this country, to which he had come from Canada, where he had been in training. Now he has sent the above snapshot of himself in fighting togs, taken somewhere in Great Britain. As to the trip across the Atlantic, he says in a letter that it was "uneventful" except that "we did run into an Atlantic gale, but it speeded up our arrival by a day, so we had no hard feelings."

Circus, Quarantine, a Dog, A Cat and Sprocket Idlers

EVERYTHING happens to me! My full-grown daughter went back to childhood days a few weeks ago, first going to the circus down in New York, then coming home with Scarlet Fever, which pinned us all in the house for three weeks. Then friends, feeling sorry for us and unable to come in to keep us from feeling lonesome, sent us—item: one perfectly good Fox Terrier pup, which is rapidly growing into a Great Dane; and, item: one perfectly good grey kitten. The mut sits on the cat, and the cat takes refuge in my hair. At present the mut is chewing my leg, while kitty is tickling my ear, so I'll pick out an easy question to answer.

A chap who wishes his name and address withheld writes, "Please do not mark me down as an ignoramus, but I have had an argument with my boss, so will you tell us at what exact distance the idler should be from the sprocket?"

Well, the answer is in the Bluebook, but here goes: As you know (and so, I hope, does your boss) the function of holding the film close to the face of the various sprockets is performed by sprocket idlers, consisting either of one or two rollers per sprocket or a thin steel shoe. Whether it is a shoe, or one or more rollers (some projectors have two rollers to each sprocket, some only one), the rule is that the distance from the face of the roller or shoe to the face of the sprocket must be approximately one and one half times the thickness of the film. It is important that each end of the sprocket idler be exactly the same distance from the sprocket face, since any variation will cause the film to pull sidewise, away from and off the sprocket teeth.

The Answer Is: We're Here to Help

AN UNUSUAL sort of inquiry came in the mails the other day. But a mighty easy one to answer. The only trouble is that I haven't been able to decipher the man's name. This will serve as his answer, and a sort of reaffirmation of my function in these columns. The letter reads:

"May I offer sincere, though rather late, congratulations on the really splendid work you have been and still are doing? I must confess that I have been 'agin' you until now and it was only through an accident that I am now converted.

"Through the past years I have always maintained that projection is a thing that could only be learned by practical experience—and that practical experience would teach one all he needed to know. Because of this I have neglected reading much of anything outside of mystery thrillers. However, recently a friend dropped in and quite by accident left a copy of your Bluebook on my table when he left. I glanced through it, then I glanced again—and again and again. I had thought up to that time that I was pretty good, but I soon discovered that there was scarcely a page in the entire book that could not stump me—and I don't like to be stumped!

"I am digging into that book and digging hard. I hope, when I am through, to be able to really know projection. Aside from the apology to your good self, the reason for this letter is this: May I come to you for assistance when I do get stumped? May I send you answers to questions which I shall ask myself as sort of an examination? I realize I am asking a lot, but it is all your fault for putting out a book which, now that I have got into it, I cannot keep my nose out of."

By golly, that is an apology! I am, of course, here to help the projectionist and I will be more than glad to help with questions.

Uncle Sam A Good Teacher and Provider

IF JACK PRATER, late resident of Palouse, Wash., stopped writing, we would feel there was something radically wrong, not only with the Army and Navy, but with the whole of these United States. Jack has been one of our standbys since the old "Bluebook School" days and we appreciate his keeping in touch with us even though his present activities are a far cry from projecting pictures in Palouse. In a letter just received Jack says, in part:

"I have finally stopped moving long enough to have an address again. I will be here for the next three months and I would certainly like to hear from some of the boys in the theatre world, because it is about the only way I can keep in contact with show business in these times. Tell the boys to address me: Jack Prater, Radio Technician 2nd class, Radio Training School, Oklahoma A. & M. College, Stillwater, Okla. (Aggie Hall No. 2).

"After wanting to study electrical engineering for sixteen years without being able to arrange it, I am 'in,' and at one of the finest colleges in the country. The course is short, but we cover a lot of territory because we attend classes eight hours every day, and have two and one-half hours of compulsory study every night on top of that. No time for loafing, but it suits me, especially since we have from Saturday noon till 7:30 p.m. Sunday each week.

"This is a queer place for a bunch of sailors, but we are getting our basic mathematics and engineering work where it can best be taught—then to another school for more advanced and specialized work.

"Doubt if I'll get a chance to visit many theatres while here, but I still have projection in my blood. Just hope I can do a better job than ever when I get back."

Conservation In Projection

save the copper coating from old copper-covered carbon stubs. Save all the copper drippings from copper-coated projector carbons. Provide a metal pail in which to store the copper drippings and the copper plating.

Do not throw out used or defective vacuum-tubes of any kind. There are many valuable metals used in the manufacture of these tubes. Cooperate with the sound engineer in conserving all tubes, and other replacement parts.

Copper wire, rubber-covered cable, and cable plugs will be among the articles hard to obtain. Conserve all your available stock. Fix up all cables and plugs in use at the present time. Save all the old pieces.

Provide a box and some space in which to store all defective or burned out electric light bulbs. Each bulb is made of material that the country needs for manufacturing new products.

Keep the accumulation of metal parts by placing metals of one kind in one box or pail and metals of another kind in another box. This will assist in keeping the different metals separated and facilitate in disposing of them when instructions for disposal are received.

—ADOLPH GOODMAN.

AMERICAN WAR BIRDS HAVE KEEN EYES

SEVERAL years ago, at the request of U. S. Army officials, Bausch & Lomb developed a special anti-glare glass for use in bright over-cloud flying. This glass, known as Ray-Ban, has the remarkable property of filtering out excess glare-producing light, at the same time transmitting most of the light useful for seeing. Army, Navy and airline pilots—as well as target shooters and motorists—have welcomed the cool, comfortable, keen vision that Ray-Ban affords.

So, again, and in still another way, Bausch & Lomb gives aid to America's all-out for Victory. Its other contributions, more obvious, include gun-fire control equipment—rangefinders, binoculars, aerial height finders. Behind the scenes, but of no less importance, are the instruments of industrial research and production—metallographic equipment, spectrographs, toolmakers' microscopes, contour-measuring projectors. Bauch & Lomb eye-wear products—eye examination instruments, spectacle lenses and frames—keep a nation of workers at top visual efficiency.

THIS contribution to our series of Cinemaids is a double-feature, presenting both an usherette and a cashier of the same theatre, Warners' Hippodrome in Cleveland, managed by Dick Wright. At left is Miss June Cooper, usherette and also Mr. Wright's secretary. She's a Scotch-Irish brunette hailing from Ashtabula, Ohio. Smiling through her ticket window below is Miss Marge Evans, also of brunette persuasion (at least so far), and also (though we have only the Evans to go by) off the Celtic tree; but she's a native Clevelander.

THE HARD OF HEARING NEED MORALE BUILDING, TOO!

The theatres of America are doing a grand job in keeping up the spirits of the people... in providing the rest and recreation needed so much today.

But there is one group of people often overlooked. They are the hard-of-hearing, usually the older folks in every community. You need their patronage more than ever now that the young men are leaving home. And they need the recreation that you can supply.

You can attract the hard-of-hearing to your theatre by installing RCA hearing aids.

Handy and easy to install, these RCA aids quicky pay for themselves in increased patronage, in good will, and in publicity.

Ask your RCA Photophone representative to give you complete details. Or write RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Camden, N. J.

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 147, No. 10 June 6, 1942

The Project of A. MacLeish

MR. ARCHIBALD MAC LEISH, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, in a recent public address sharply criticized the American motion picture industry for its failure to adopt a policy which would embrace the formulation and direction of public opinion. He insists that there is no distinction between entertainment on one side and the formulation and direction of public opinion on the other. He would have the entertainment screen undertake the editorial function of the press and the classroom responsibility of the school and college. Presumably, also, the screen would be expected to share the mission of the pulpit.

Mr. MacLeish's utterance is a familiar echo. It has for some time been receiving wide and emphatic urging from persons who, while paying verbal homage to the democratic ideal, are at the same time very busy with schemes to regiment and shackle public opinion to the end that a uniformity of opinion will obtain and that opinion, of course, will be theirs. What these persons inevitably fail to understand is that they are perhaps unconsciously using as a working model the system of the Nazi and the Fascist.

The issue raised by Mr. MacLeish is entirely lacking in novelty. It already has received widespread discussion and debate. And upon it the American motion picture industry has declared its position.

AS to the crisis now facing the nation, the industry has dedicated its resources in a most thoroughgoing manner—from the script to the screen. It is contributing in every proper and possible way to the winning of the war. It has long been conscious of the enemy influences that are to be combatted and it has been years since it commenced to deal in its legitimate sphere of dramatic treatment with these influences. The exhibitors, without reserve, have made screen time available for messages to a people at war from its government. Public morale has received the beneficial influence of entertainment which affords the diversion and relaxation necessary to a people laboring under the stress of wartime conditions. Public morale also has received the heartening stimulus of the sharply patriotic subjects that have been presented.

But it has not resigned its function as a producer and purveyor of entertainment and assumed that of the propagandist, the political leader and the educator. It has not undertaken to formulate and direct public opinion. That is where Mr. MacLeish comes in.

Now it seems abundantly clear that, if the screen is to become the conveyor of a "message", the question immediately arises as to whose message is to be conveyed. This perhaps presents no problem at all to Mr. MacLeish because it seems obvious that he is not going to all this trouble to get the messages of, say, Herbert Hoover, Father Divine or Beatrice Fairfax conveyed to the American public via the sixteen thousand theatre screens. The suspicion lingers that Mr. MacLeish would expect the MacLeish viewpoint to be heard. But what assurance has the industry that immediately the MacLeish viewpoint is presented it will not be called upon to furnish the same footage, leading lady, cast production budget, etc., for Mr. Hoover, Father Divine and Miss Fairfax?

THE question that challenges serious attention in connection with Mr. MacLeish's attack upon the industry is whether he was speaking as A. MacLeish, poet, writer, "advanced" political and social thinker and, incidentally, Librarian of Congress, or whether he was speaking as director of the Office of Facts and Figures.

The Office of Facts and Figures is a department of the executive office of the President. It is understood to be intended to afford to the public facts and figures useful to the purpose of the prosecution of the war. Presumably, a function of the department is wartime propaganda. Obviously, as a department of the executive office of the President it has wide powers.

The views of the director of the Office of Facts and Figures in reference to what he expects of the motion picture industry have been made known. If he continues content to rely upon the democratic process of persuasion, we shall be hearing again and again from Mr. MacLeish on the subject of the screen's business, because nothing in the way of a metamorphosis comparable with his blueprint for the entertainment motion picture is going to transpire.

But again, lacking executive interference, Mr. MacLeish may tire of the process of persuasion and resort to the use of what is now popularly known in Washington as "directives". Directives employed in the conduct of the normal business of this government at war are an inevitable and necessary means of getting things done.

DIRECTIVES, however, addressed to the makers of the nation's entertainment, the writers of editorials and the authors of books, would ring down the curtain on various essentials of the democratic way of life.

We recognize the right of Mr. MacLeish and his collaborators to argue for and insist upon their viewpoint. We trust that the day shall not arrive when, clothed with wartime powers, they shall substitute directives for argument and insistence. Thus, if our trust is not misplaced, time and experience will solve the problem—if there is one—in the American way.

War Insurance

AN INSURANCE program whereby theatre and other property owners can secure war policies to compensate them from direct damage of real and personal property from enemy attack or action of our own forces in resisting enemy attack, will be put into effect July 1st by the U. S. Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Theatres will be able to buy the insurance at rates of 15 cents per $100 for fire resistive construction and 20 cents per $100 for ordinary construction, and rates on studios, apparently covered with other manufacturing plants, will be, respectively 20 and 30 cents per $100.

The policies will be issued for a 12-month period. They will cover only damage to buildings and contents, but not including money, securities or deeds. They will not cover blackout, sabotage, capture, seizure, pillage, looting, use and occupancy, rent, rental value or other indirect loss or consequential damage.

The insurance will be written through the fire insurance companies, which are to be the Government's agents, and applications are to be submitted to local agencies and brokers.

They're in the Army

JOHN HAY WHITNEY and Arthur M. Loew are in the army now. Mr. Whitney is getting a captain's commission, Mr. Loew, a major's.

A statement issued to the press, on Tuesday, from the home office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in New York, said that Mr. Loew, first vice-president in charge of foreign operations at MGM, was called at the request of Brigadier General F. H. Osborn, chief of the Special Service Branch of the War Department. Major Loew was to report for duty on Thursday for a confidential assignment. MGM said it would probably utilize his foreign and aviation experience and be related to the distribution of motion pictures as a morale service for U. S. troops overseas.

Nicholas Schenck, president of Loew's, in announcing a leave of absence for Mr. Loew said that Morton A. Spring and Henry F. Krecke would be an administrative committee for the foreign department.

John Hay Whitney's commission as a Captain in the Army Air Intelligence was disclosed in New York. Mr. Whitney, who has headed the motion picture section of Nelson Rockefeller's Office of Inter-American Affairs since October, 1940, was scheduled to report for duty in a month. First he is to complete a mission to Mexico. No successor has been mentioned.

Captain Whitney, former president of Pioneer Pictures, ex-board chairman of Selznick International, first angel for "Gone With the Wind," and a large holder of Technicolor stock, trained for military service at the business men's military camp conducted by the Army at Plattsburg in the summer of 1940. There he was messmate of screen press agent Lynn Farnol, now Major Farnol, of the Air Corps public relations staff.

Parades for Bonds

WAR HEROES will parade in 21 key cities between June 8th and July 5th, under plans being drawn up by the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry. The plan is sponsored by the U. S. Treasury Department to stimulate public morale and the sale of War Bonds.

The first will be next Monday, noon, at Times Square, New York, to be followed with a demonstration in Madison Square Garden that evening.

Chairman of the program is Spyros Skouras, president of Twentieth Century-Fox.

Hollywood seeks to repeat the success of of its "Victory Caravan" with a new and larger personal appearance invasion of the hinterlands by its top stars. Plans agreed upon by the Hollywood Victory Committee and the Treasury Department call for tours, together and singly, of 30 top-ranking stars.

War Unites Newsreels

A CONSOLIDATED newsreel will shortly be on its way to foreign countries under the auspices of the five newsreel distributors in the U. S. A weekly international release will be prepared from the best footage of each of the Paramount, Pathe, Movietone, News of the Day and Universal reels and shipped to Europe, Africa, the Near East and Orient by United Newsreel Corporation.

The company was incorporated at Albany last week with an authorized capital stock of $10,000 in $100 par value shares. The duration of the incorporation papers was set at June 1, 1947. The directors were listed as Roger C. Clement, also the filing attorney, of 1501 Broadway, Franklin S. Irby, 444 West 56th Street and Joseph Rosthal, 1540 Broadway, New York City. They are home office attorneys, respectively, at Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and Loew's, Inc.

Ned Buddy was appointed editor and general manager by United Newsreel this week. Its offices will be at 625 Madison Avenue, New York in the Pathe Building. It is reported that arrangements have been made to use Pathe newsreel facilities. Mr. Buddy was formerly in charge of Paramount-DuMont television activities in Hollywood. Previously he was European newsreel representative for Paramount.

Date of the first release has not been set, but is expected to be within a few weeks.

$1 for War Films

ONE DOLLAR per day per subject is Paramount's proposal to insure the widest possible distribution of the "Victory Shorts" which the industry is making at the request of Lowell Mellett, Coordinator of Government Films.

Neil F. Agnew, sales manager, presented the plan to the War Activities Committee on Wednesday. It was the first specific suggestion from a distributor as to what who would pay to whom for the Victory films. Mr. Mellett asked the industry to distribute them at a nominal rental.

The plan, Mr. Agnew said, would remove price obstacles for every theatre in the United States and dispense with the necessity for price arbitration or any other unwieldly machinery, "the operation of which would tend to minimize the complete success of the victory film campaign."

Any money from these nominal rentals, above the mere cost of production and prints, and without distribution charges, would be turned over to the WAC for any worthy war charity which the committee designated, according to Mr. Agnew's proposal.

Lining Up Censors

THE MEN who will censor films to be exported and imported were under consideration at mid-week in Washington. At that time high secrecy surrounded the identities of the appointees.

Under the plans of the Office of Censorship, review boards will be in New York and Los Angeles. They are to be small.

Currently, films for export have been approved by the Office's representatives and those of the U. S. Customs. The Board of Economic Warfare ruled this week that it would hereafter license films for export after their review by the New York and Los Angeles boards.

In Washington this week conferring with Byron Price, Director of Censorship, was Watterson R. Rothacker, Hollywood vice-president of Quigley Publishing Company. His visit was reported to have connection with the appointment of review board heads.

1000 Shares for Willkie

WENDELL L. WILLKIE held 1,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock when he joined Fox as chairman of the board of directors on April 9th, last, his stock-holding report to the Government disclosed, according to the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

In its final summary for March, which contained no current reports on transactions in film stocks, the SEC also disclosed that Spyros P. Skouras, who became president of Twentieth Century-Fox, also on April 9th, held 5,250 shares of the company's common.

Best in "War Shorts"

By way of encouragement and recognition to Production, Motion Picture Herald will present, at the year's end, the exhibitor's opinion of the best that shall have been done in the making of special pictures for the nation's cause, in that category which has come to be known as "war shorts".

At the appropriate time, and in the same fashion as the showmen of the nation are polled for the institutionally-established "Ten Best Money Makers", they will be asked for their evaluations of the pictures in which Government is collaborating, or is inspiring, to tell and teach a nation engaged in the total business of total war.

The judgment to be rendered will be, then, the judgment of those persons who do their voting in theatre attention and on the basis of its inescapably impartial opinions.

RKO Financing

FIRST ANNUAL meeting of RKO stockholders in more than ten years, scheduled for Dover, Del., Wednesday morning was postponed because of a lack of a quorum. J. Miller Walker, secretary, said the stockholders would meet again at 11 A.M. on June 10th in the Prentice Hall, Inc., offices at Dover.

On the eve of the meeting several of the companys' large stockholders asked for a postponement. George Schaefer, president, said the meeting, the first since the company emerged from court reorganization, would be held according to the by-laws. Sufficient stock was not represented on Wednesday morning, however. Atlas Corporation, according to the Wall Street Journal, now holds 44 per cent of preferred and 40 per cent of common stock, with RCA and the Rockefeller interests holding other large blocks.

Meanwhile reports of steps to obtain new financing for production were heard on Wall Street and Broadway. The names of Joseph P. Kennedy, Jules Stein of the Music Corporation of America and executive interests in both RCA and Atlas Corporation were mentioned as possible bidders for RKO control. RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., the producing subsidiary, was said by the Wall Street Journal to be seeking about $3,000,000 of new money to build a product backlog.

Unless it was forthcoming through present management, it was said, stockholder interests would be ready to demand executive changes at the meeting in Dover next week.

No Priority Violations

NO VIOLATIONS by film theatres of War Production Board orders halting construction and repair work have been reported a WPB spokesman said Tuesday.

There has been some misunderstanding of the orders, and varied interpretations by exhibitors in the middle of repair or other building work but no WPB prosecutions impend, the WPB source indicated.

From another Washington office, on a corridor in the Department of Justice, came word that Government investigators were quietly checking many construction projects, including theatres, throughout the country. FBI operatives, it was said, have already compiled dockets on a number of building operations whose essential nature, and observance of $5,000 cost ceilings had been questioned. Amusement buildings were positively included, it was added.

That Product Cut

THAT heralded reduction in prints and pictures, reported in Hollywood to be imminent as a result of moves for strict conservation of materials was the topic of leading executives of the major film companies at a meeting in New York Tuesday. The meeting was in anticipation of the expected WPB order curtailing the use of raw stock.

Bearing on raw stock conservation was a patent issued in Washington this week to Leon Jean Baptiste Guyard, of Paris, France, and assigned to the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corporation.

The patent is No. 2,283,202. It proposes imbedding of a narrow, continuous ribbon of glass fibers in the film along perforations.

PRIORITY RELIEF PROMISED FOR EMERGENCY REPAIRS

WPB Sets Up Machinery To Handle Emergency Calls for Equipment

Emergency relief for any exhibitor who finds himself forced to curtail operations because of priority restrictions on motion picture equipment, or curbs on repairs, or who otherwise faces a breakdown of operations, is promised by the War Production Board in Washington.

Regional offices of the WPB, now being organized in 13 key cities, have been authorized to receive complaints from exhibitors and to act on them where a swift ruling is essential to maintain theatre operations.

They will issue special priority ratings for repair material or replacement equipment in cases when the ordinary procedure of an appeal to the WPB amusements division in Washington would cause an extended or serious shutdown in theatre operation.

Exhibitors who are forced to close their theatres because of circumstances beyond their control, or who face a shutdown unless some critical material is obtained at once may apply to the regional WPB offices for a special ruling. On proof that their case is a bona fide emergency they will receive permission, and a priority order, to buy the minimum material or equipment needed to keep screens alight.

Only genuine emergencies, such as caused by fire or by mechanical breakdown of irreplaceable equipment will be considered in the regional offices at present, it was made clear by a WPB source in Washington.

Other requests for special allotments of critical materials or restricted equipment, or for an exception to the orders forbidding construction and repair to theatres must continue to be filed at Washington with the Amusements Division of the WPB. Christopher Dunphy is head of the section.

Paul Short to Assist Dunphy

Paul Short, on leave from the Interstate Circuit in Dallas on Monday arrived in Washington to become assistant to Mr. Dunphy. He will handle motion picture theatre applications.

Emergency requests may be filed with the administrator of each of the regional offices by wire, mail or telephone, it was indicated by the War Production Board headquarters in Washington. The regional offices mark the first step in efforts to bring the administration of the WPB orders to business, rather than requiring business men to flock to an already overcrowded Washington for interpretations of the rulings.

The offices are located as follows:

New York, Chanin building; Kansas City, Mutual Interstate building; Denver, 708 Kittredge building; Boston, 17 Court street; Chicago, 20 North Wacker Drive; Philadelphia, Broad Street Station building; Cleveland, Union Commerce building; Detroit, 326 Midland building; Atlanta, 16 Candler building, and Dallas, Fidelity building.

Three other WPB offices will be opened in Seattle, San Francisco and Minneapolis.

Requests to regional offices for a special emergency priority rating will be investigated immediately by the field staffs and a digest of the facts wired to the repair and maintenance section of the WPB in Washington for clearance. This Washington division will check with the amusements division headed by Mr. Dunphy and if approval is granted a priority rating will be telegraphed back to the field office at once. Routine paper work can follow subsequently.

Several thousand applications from theatres for special rulings or building material allotments are now pending before the WPB, it is reported from Washington. Most of these are for a relatively small amount of critical material, it was said. Fire damage is understood to be the reason for a majority of the requests for repair permits. Theatre fire loss is ordinarily at its highest toward the end of the heating season just concluded.

Commenting on procedure, and the necessity for drastic curtailment of all building, repair, or equipment replacement that is not absolutely non-essential Mr. Dunphy remarked that theatre operators shared with householders and every other business in the United States a major war duty to conserve every possible scrap of useful, or critical material.

Metal scrap must be hoarded constantly. Theatre managers should save old wire, copper drippings, broken fixtures, and every other item in their plant inventory which can possibly be repaired or salvaged, he pointed out.

In addition to preparing their theatres for blackouts and air raid emergencies, the WPB spokesman advised theatre managers to search their cellars, tool chests, and store rooms for every single scrap of metal or equipment. Also he urged theatre men to insist on the greatest possible diligence on the part of booth staff, engineers, electricians and maintenance employes. All repairs should be made as quickly as possible and equipment guarded against excessive wear.

WPB WILL ASSIST BUSINESS IN FIELD

The War Production Board plans to take administration of its industrial controls to business, rather than to require business to come to Washington every time a new problem crops up. To accomplish this, the Board is setting up 13 regional offices in key cities across the continent, to provide a focal point in each region for all WPB business.

These regional offices will be organized to handle all types of business, and will receive and assist producers and exhibitors who have problems. Members of the industry are being advised by Christopher J. Dunphy, head of the film section of the special services branch, to take their emergency problems to the local offices, to save the time and expense that otherwise would be consumed in travel to Washington.

The establishment of the regional offices, it was explained, is the initial step toward a decentralization of WPB activities which eventually will take from Washington everything but administrative and policy-making activities.

Studios order Strict Economy

Hollywood, production center of the motion picture industry, this week began diligent attempts, through joint committees and the management of every studio to cut out waste and eke the utmost from every resource. Long prodigal in the use of material and money it appeared that the cinema capital would find the first hitches in its belt pinched. But there were evidences of a determination notwithstanding.

The Motion Picture Film Conservation Committee gathered last week from all producing and labor organizations in Hollywood on the call of Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, turned its attention at once to a detailed conservation program.

Film stock itself will be the first material to which the committee will lend its conservation attentions. It is drafting a program which will bind every studio worker to an effort to eliminate waste.

M. C. Levee, of the Artists Managers Guild, was elected chairman of the committee at its organization meeting last week. Val Burton, Screen Wrtiers Guild, is secretary, and Ben Goetz, production executive vice chairman. Mr. Levee called for immediate action and a fact finding subcommittee meeting over the weekend listed a four part film saving proposal.

It called for the use of mechanical means to save film in handling; full use of every foot, with no scraps and careful salvage; better rehearsal and preparation before photographing to eliminate extra takes; and the study of all existing conservation practices.

WAR, DECREE GIVE IMPETUS TO COOPERATIVE BUYING

Transportation Curbs and Changes in Selling Bring Group Booking Expansion

Independent exhibitors are again focusing attentive interest on cooperative film buying and booking arrangements. Wartime curbs on travel to exchange centers and increasing localization of selling practice under the consent decree are prompting an expansion of the activities of many established buying combines.

In other areas, where cooperative film purchasing agencies have never gained a foothold, correspondents report increasing conversation among independents on the subject of common film purchasing. Several new cooperatives, or film purchasing agencies, in widely scattered cities, report rapid increases in membership recently.

Other cooperatives which in the past have confined their activities to buying and/or booking film for exhibitor members are also turning to the equipment field. With a market restricted by priorities these agencies are scouring the field for new and reconditioned equipment for many of their members.

Booking services are also increasing their representation among independents in a number of important exchange centers, particularly in the east. Many independents in small towns, distant from the exchange center, are solving the problem of transportation by securing their film supply through an agent or cooperative service. Others who buy their own pictures are booking through exchange center agencies.

Memberships Reported Increasing Rapidly

Although cooperatives, once fairly numerous, have been on the wane for the past ten years many proponents of the system of buying en masse for many independent theatres say there are definite signs of an increase in the movement. War travel curbs, the small block selling of the consent decree and rising prices have prompted many small town exhibitors to look to buying agents in the exchange center in the hope of reducing travel costs, saving time, and gaining a better deal through joint buying power.

Distributor representatives differed in their estimates of the extent of cooperatives. Several admitted that established groups were adding to their membership. Another spokesman said that he knew of a few buying representatives, but the majority said it was their opinion, based on observation in the field, that the cooperatives were chiefly a convenience. They expressed doubt that the average member received any better price or product deals through cooperative affiliation.

Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, now headed by Fred De Lodder, remains one of the oldest and most effective of the true cooperatives. It was founded in the 20's by J. C. Ritter, Ray Moon, Henderson Richey and other independent theatre leaders to meet the threat of subsequent run intrusion by the large first run circuit operations.

WHAT IS A COOPERATIVE?

Definitions of cooperative motion picture buying combines differ widely. Only a few so-called mutual buying and booking agencies are true cooperatives.

Best example of the actual cooperative organization is one of the oldest: Cooperative Theatres of Michigan. It was founded from the nucleus of an exhibitors association and grew to a solidity in which it handles film rental payments and other financial details for members. Profits and savings defray operating expenses or are turned back to the member theatres. Several cooperatives in the Canadian maritime provinces also follow the same pattern.

The majority of the combines generally designated as cooperatives, however, are in fact either commercial buying and booking agencies, extensions of circuit buying arrangements, or a form of circuit operation. A number of partnership circuit arrangements, or stock affiliation buying groups are classed generally by distributors as cooperatives. The prime objective of all is to use combined buying power to the advantage of members.

Membership now numbers over 110 theatres, all of whom both buy and book through the organization. The Coop office even handles the payment of film rentals by distributors, receiving checks from each theatre and then disbursing proportionately to the distributors from a central fund.

In other cities, including New York, a large amount of so called cooperative purchasing is handled through agents, or experienced film buyers. They are paid for their services in a variety of ways. In some groups theatres pay a flat weekly fee for buying and booking services. In others a percentage deal, 10 per cent of rental in one instance, is made with the buying agent.

In New York the Brandt theatre interests are generally considered by exchange managers and salesmen the largest cooperative purchasing combine. Harry Brandt buys and books for about 105 theatres in the Metropolitan area.

Island Theatre Circuit, headed by Frank Moscato, buys and books for about 24 theatres. Most are located on Long Island. About 15 New Jersey theatres are represented in the exchanges by Associated Theatres of New Jersey.

Exchange men estimate that approximately 250 of the theatres in the New York area are buying through film cooperatives or are purchasing or booking through an agent.

Other active cooperatives throughout the country have been sponsored by Milton Mooney in Cleveland, who represents about 70 houses; Sidney Samuelson in Philadelphia, Arthur Howard of Buffalo, Alex Manta in Chicago, Mark Wolf and a consolidation of Indianapolis agencies representing over 60 midwest houses.

Smaller circuits, and a few large ones, in several exchange centers are also making their experienced buyers and bookers available, at a fee, to non-competitive theatres in sections remote from the exchange city.

Travel Rationing Boosts Affiliated in Philadelphia

As a result of the automobile, tire and gasoline rationing, the buying and booking service of the Affiliated Theatres, Inc., Philadelphia, is rapidly expanding. Since the beginning of the year, the Affiliated combine had added almost a dozen theatres and recently David E. Milgram, president of the corporation, announced the names of three more theatres in the territory that would avail themselves of the service. They were Ben Schindler's Ace Theatre, Wilmington, Del., and Joseph Conway's Brookline Theatre, Brookline, Pa., and the Ritz theatre, St. Clair, Pa., operated by Stanley Peters.

Two more theatres in upstate Pennsylvania signed last week with Affiliated. The new houses, making a total of 32 theatres in the Affiliated combine, are the Fox theatre, Duncannon and the West Shore, New Cumberland.

As a result of the fast expansion of the circuit, Sol Criss, office manager, said arrangements were being made to transfer the main offices of the Affiliated service from the Avenue Theatre Building to a central city site.

Although identifying itself as an independent circuit, the chain is primarily concerned in buying and booking of pictures, rather than in the operation of the theatres. Mr. Milgram, who heads the company, is actually the owner of two Philadelphia theatres, including the Rialto theatre in Germantown.

Service Used by Upstate Owners

Virtually all the theatres availing themselves of Affiliated's circuit service are in upstate Pennsylvania. Separate offices for Affiliated are maintained in Philadelphia. Since the tire and gasoline restrictions makes it impractical for many upstate exhibitors to journey to Philadelphia each week for their product, the circuit's service is now meeting with immediate response. Affiliated expects to expand considerably as the travel situation becomes acute.

The only large-scale buying and booking service set up in Philadelphia, the local exchanges view Affiliated's expansion with much apprehension. Other independent chains of houses in the Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey area have been continually serviced from Philadelphia offices since the circuit heads all operate one or more houses directly within the city proper. In such a category are Ben Amsterdam's Atlantic Theatres circuit in Southern New Jersey; William C. Hunt's theatres in Trenton, N. J., and the South Jersey seashore resorts; Lewen Pizor's houses in upstate Pennsylvania, A. M. Ellis' theatres both in Philadelphia and the Camden,

While Affiliated's service is concerned solely with buying and booking, a co-operative plan to purchase equipment and accessories has been discussed by Eastern Pennsylvania Allied.

Three Groups Active In St. Louis Area

Three independent cooperative booking and buying groups have been functioning effectively in the St. Louis area for several years.

Outstanding in this group is the Wehrenberg-Kaimann unit. Fred Wehrenberg, pioneer exhibitor and president of the MPTO of Greater St. Louis, combined his 14 subsequent run houses with 11 of Clarence Kaimann's two years ago. Mr. Wehrenberg's houses are in South St. Louis and Mr. Kaimann's in North St. Louis. Their cooperation only extends to buying and booking, but occasionally includes purchase of equipment and accessories.

Another St. Louis co-op is the Ansell Group of three houses which buys and books film for the two Schucart theatres in the city, Norside and Esquire, and for the independent Will Rogers, Uptown and Avalon theatres. Louis K. Ansell, head of the Ansell Circuit, does the booking and buying. He does not buy accessories or equipment for the other theatres.

A third in the area is the Harris Booking Agency, conducted by Jack Harris, who buys and books film for nine independents in Illinois and Missouri. These are the Main, at Altamont, Ill.; Hayton at Carterville, Ill.; Vista at Centralia, Mo.; Mars at Martinsville, Ill.; Roxy at Mounts, Ill.; Majestic at Oran, Mo.; Algenan at Risco, Mo.; Lincoln at Paris, Ill., and State at Alton, Ill.

Twenty Theatres in Winnipeg Combine

In Winnipeg, Man., there is only one co-operative or buying combine, the Western Theatres, Ltd., 300 New Hargrave Bldg. J. Miles is the film buyer and Ken Beach his assistant. They buy film for 20 theatres, all in Winnipeg, and one in Portage La Prairie, Man. They also purchase equipment and accessories for member theatres.

J. Miles, the chief at Western Theatres, Ltd., said they were more like a corporation than a cooperative. Mr. Miles is chief buyer also. The film exchanges class Western Theatres as an independent.

Cooperatives Very Strong In Maritime Provinces

At St. Johns, N. B., in a territory in which the cooperative movement has been cutting a wider swath than probably anywhere else in recent years, one film renting and equipment buying unit has been organized among independent exhibitors. This organization was completed late in 1941, and participating are theatremen located in the provinces of Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, and with the island colony of Newfoundland, also included within the territorial scope.

Chief organizers of the Maritime Independent Cooperative Exchange, based at St. Johns, N. B., were A. J. Mason, of Springhill, N. S., and J. E. Butler, of Moncton, N. B. The former is a veteran exhibitor, and has operated the Capitol at Springhill for many years. Butler, a former Empire-Universal exchange manager at St. John, has been operating the Imperial at Moncton, the past six years. Singularly, since the establishment of the cooperative, the Imperial, after 30 years of operation as a purely independent house, entered the Famous Players Canadian chain.

Mr. Mason is president of the cooperative. He toured the maritime provinces in behalf of its formation, and since then has been contacting independent exhibitors for affiliations. of Nova Scotia, and current chairman of a conciliation or arbitration board set up to hear and adjust controveries between exhibitors and distributors, in that province.

Buys Films in Omaha For Flat Charge

There is no cooperative booking or film buying group in the Nebraska-western Iowa area at the present time. Nearest to it is the service conducted by Oscar Hanson, former salesman and exhibitor, who operates in Omaha as a booker for various independent theatres in Nebraska and western Iowa. He represents about 25 houses on a flat fee basis and for this fee attends screenings, does their booking for them and handles similar details.

Mr. Hanson may work with individual exhibitors when they are dealing for product, but there is no co-operative buying. Each of his customers is a separate account.

Three Buying Agencies Active in Chicago

Film buying combines are of limited extent in Chicago and there has not been a buying group of any great power since the dissolution of the James E. Coston Booking Circuit in 1932, when Mr. Coston, now Midwest Zone Manager for Warner Theatres, numbered over 100 theatres in his combine.

At present there are three men, Jack Rose, Si Griever and Lou Reinheimer, all located in Chicago, who buy film for several houses. Of these Mr. Reinheimer is the only one who buys the same product for his entire group and could be called a cooperative buying agency in that territory. Twelve houses comprise his group consisting of his own circuit, the State, Parkway, Ridge and Roseland theatres, Roseland, Ill., and Calumet theatre, Hammond, Ind.; the V. T. Lynch circuit of three houses, Tiffin and Alamo, Chicago, and York, Elmhurst, Ill., and the Joseph Stern Circuit of four Chicago houses, the Colony, Highway, Marquette and Chelten theatres.

Jack Rose, besides his duties as secretary-treasurer and film buyer of the Indiana-Illinois Theatres circuit, retains several houses from his former Rose Booking Circuit, a buying combine that followed Coston's outfit. Mr. Rose had been associated with Mr. Coston and started his own booking office when Mr. Coston went with the Warner Theatre Management Corporation. These houses are booked on a fee basis and each deal is an individual case, according to the requirements of the house in question and one theatre is not used as a wedge with others to gain a better price. This is also true of the houses booked by Si Griever.

Mr. Rose buys for the Montclare, Elm, Palace, 18th Street, Linden, Englewood, Owl and New Rex theatres, Chicago, while Mr. Griever buys for and books the Essex, Crystal, Holden, Times, Lynn, Lyric, Normal, Wabash, Rio, Rosewood and Terrace theatres, Chicago, and the Lakes, Antioch; Lyric, Earlville; Crystal, Geneva; Colony, McHenry; Miller, Woodstock; Tone, St. Anne, and Roxy, Toluca, all in Illinois, among others.

None of the trio mentioned buys equipment or accessories for any of the theatres they buy film for.

Organization Attempts Fail in West, South

In the Minneapolis territory, independent co-operative booking was active up to about 15 years ago, when the project was abandoned after fair success.

More recently, Northwest Allied tried to work out something of the same nature during the period when consenting majors were refusing to sell in Minnesota in protest to the Minnesota anti-block-of-five law, now declared unconstitutional. These efforts, however, apparently got nowhere and were abandoned.

Southeastern independents attempted to organize a joint buying combine at Atlanta soon after the consent decree selling system started. George Jones headed a group of about 50 theatres, banded together under the title Exhibitors Booking Office. It was disbanded after three months when a number of the members broke ranks in an effort to negotiate better individual deals.

Other efforts have been launched in the Florida and Georgia area to form a cooperative. These, too, have run up against opposition from distributors and favored bargaining position held by some distributors from some companies, according to M. C. Moore, former president of the SETOA.

Pacific Northwest Has Many Buying Agents

Only in the Northwest territory is cooperative buying in evidence on the Pacific Coast, stronghold of circuits.

According to Portland film observers there are about half a dozen film purchasers in the section who buy both films and equipment for other, non-affiliated houses. Most of their customers are located out of the exchange city.

W. G. (Bill) Ripley of Columbia Theatre, Longview, Wash., is booking and buying for Columbia and Roxy in Longview, and the Kelso theatre in Kelso, Wash.

W. B. McCurdy of the J. J. Parker Theatres, Portland, Ore., is booking and buying for Broadway-United Artists, and Mayfair Theatres in Portland. They also operate the United Artists at Pendleton, Ore., and Liberty Theatre at Astoria, Ore.

Ted Gamble is the head of the Capitol theatre and Bagdad theatre in Portland; also two houses at Hood River, Ore. While Mr. Gamble is at present in Washington, D. C., he has five brothers who take care of the operation of these four houses.

Mr. Phil Carlin and his wife operate and book for Taylor Street, Bluebird Theatres, and the Lincoln theatre in Portland.

In all of the above spots these exhibitors also purchase equipment and accessories.

Mr. LeRoy Johnson, manager of Jensen Von Herberg, buys for the Liberty, Seattle, and Rainier theatre at Renton, Wash., and other houses.

IATSE 'REVOLT' BLOCKED BY WALSH REELECTION MOVE

Alliance President Offers Constitutional Reform and Immediate Balloting

by FRED OESTREICHER
in Columbus

With 1,000 delegates tensed for a battle over administration, and the "reform" element rampant over the convention hall, the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees opened its 37th convention this week at Columbus, Ohio, on Monday.

At the very outset, Richard Walsh, president, whose regime was under attack as an implied "hangover" from the regime of George Browne and Willie Bioff, dropped a bomb into the session by announcing he and other incumbents would stand for reelection, immediately, if possible, waiving any "technical or legal" right they might have to the unexpired term.

Whether there should be elections was the hotly debated point, up to that time. Mr. Walsh was elected in December by the IATSE board to fill out for two years George Browne's unexpired term. Mr. Browne is serving eight years for extortion, after conviction in New York Federal Court.

Mr. Walsh's service of the Browne tenure was expected, up to three weeks before the convention, to continue without interruption; but for two factors. One was the change in the constitution, proposed by Mr. Walsh's administration. This suggested the presidential term be two years; although it did not suggest elections at this week's convention. The second was the drumming of sentiment for elections and a new regime by Vincent Jacobi and supporters. Mr. Jacobi is business agent of the New York stagehands' local 1.

Mr. Walsh Tuesday asked convention approval of the amendment enforcing a two year term. The move was a surprise.

Defense of Browne Regime Charged

Tuesday also, the delegates studied Mr. Walsh's report, and were reported to be regarding it as attempt to vindicate in some degree the Browne regime.

That night, the board met in secret session, to outline Thursday's nomination, and plans for Friday's elections.

A chief speaker Tuesday afternoon was William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, parent union.

Mr. Walsh's specific statement, in advising that he would stand for reelection, read in part:

"Being motivated solely by sincerity to again place our organization on a basis that will allow no opportunity for exploitation or a veering from biennial gatherings, I earnestly petition the delegates here in attendance to revoke the present four-year term provisions and revert to the election of officers every two years.

REPORT CALLS BROWNE "VICTIM"

In his report to the IATSE convention in Columbus this week, Richard Walsh, president, referred to the regime of George Browne, whom he replaced, as follows:

"Inasmuch as our former president had served the International in a wholly satisfactory manner in various official capacities for many years, it must be assumed that he became the victim of circumstances beyond his control. If he was cognizant of the acts being perpetrated by his appointees, possibly he was left with the alternative of remaining silent or paying the supreme penalty. The difficulty of having to make a choice between the two, with the latter a price beyond recall, should be readily apparent and is a distinct throwback to the adage of self-preservation. Taking the human side, I am certain it is a decision that would be relished by no one."

"The present time calls for the sacrifice of personal ambition and of selfish goals. Leadership is not a responsibility to be taken lightly and inasmuch as it is my firm belief that the organization stands to benefit by the adoption of this proposed amendment, I feel that it is my bounden duty as your president to recommend such action. The members of the official family are likewise unanimously in accord that the best interests of the International will be served by the election of officers at every regular convention. . . ."

The fight by Mr. Jacobi for an election, and for himself as presidential nominee, began with the introduction Monday of a resolution, signed by between 50 and 100 delegates, asking recall of all incumbents, and for an election not later than two days after the resolution's adoption.

The resolution cited the Brown-Bioff administration as bringing "nothing but disgrace and disaster"; that no executive board member "ever raised his voice" although they were duty bound "to know and protest"; that they still desired to retain their office and their appointee, Mr. Walsh; that the "shocking disclosures" at the Browne-Bioff trial had led the public to believe they and their associates typified the membership of the IATSE; and that the public confidence and good name of the IATSE could be restored only by "a thorough housecleaning."

The resolutions committee took this under advisement Monday. Action on it was expected Wednesday. However, observers regarded the Walsh notice of intent to gain reelection as a master stroke, nullifying the surprise of the resolution.

It was said a simple majority vote was sufficient for adoption of the Jacobi inspired resolution. For adoption of the constitutinal changes, a two-thirds vote was necessary.

Mr. Jacobi said over the weekend that 90 per cent of the delegates wanted to see "a complete cleanup."

Other constitutional amendments proposed by the Walsh regime included one barring men with criminal records from holding office, and another compelling the president to secure approval of the board for appointments of executives. These have been under study, along with the many other details of the proposed constitutional changes, for several months by the locals.

Stressing the Browne-Bioff alleged influence in the current regime, Mr. Jacobi asserted Monday:

"If our officials knew of the Bioff-Browne activities, then it is obvious why they should be removed; and if they were so ignorant that they did not know of the shady dealings, then they are not intelligent enough to head an international labor union."

A third contender for the presidency was William Bennett, of the Washington stagehands' local, 22.

Committees Named; Conservation Stressed

The meeting opened Monday at Columbus Memorial Hall, with a welcome by Mayor Floyd Green. Temporary chairman was Robert Greer, president of the city's local, 386, who then gave the gavel to Mr. Walsh. Appointed that day were five committees, on grievance, auditing and finance, the president's report, resolutions, and special problems. Other welcomers that day were Paul M. Herbert, secretary of the Ohio State Federation of Labor; and Larry Buck, president of Local 12.

Conservation of materials and equipment used in projection was stressed at district meetings of delegates over the weekend. Guest speaker at these metings was P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of the International Projector Corporation, who urged locals to appoint educational committees to discuss technical problems.

Mr. Walsh in his summary of accompilshments, on Tuesday noted the increased drain of manpower, and that some locals were faced with more work than they could handle. He urged adoption of temporary wartime membership cards which would be recognized as emergency cards only.

CIO Calls for Home Office Elections

The CIO's Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, representing clerical workers in the RKO, Loew's, Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox New York home offices, last week petitioned the National Labor Relations Board for certification as the collective bargaining agency for such workers in Paramount and Famous Music Corporation, a subsidiary. Approximately 400 are employed by those companies in New York, the union claimed.

ALLIED MEETING DEBATES RENTALS, WAR ACTIVITIES

Delegates to N. J. Unit Favor Coordination of War Work Under UMPI

by BOB WILE
in Atlantic City

Solemn warnings against increased rentals in the face of the wartime problems facing the independent exhibitor, and a strong sentiment for the coordination of industry war work under the United Motion Picture Industry committee highlighted the opening, Wednesday, of Allied of New Jersey's annual convention at Atlantic City.

Delegates at the three-day meeting heard full explanations of the workings of the Unity plan now being prepared as an amendment to the consent decree; a defense of present arbitration procedure by J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association; and a promise from John Paine, manager of ASCAP, that exhibitors, in the future, would be given every consideration in the arrangement of music license payments.

The meeting, attended by top sales executives of major distributors and by exhibitor leaders from other sections, was to conclude Friday night with a testimonial dinner to Colonel H. A. Cole, former national president of Allied.

Harry Lowenstein, president of New Jersey Allied, announced at the outset that annual elections had been advanced from Friday to the Thursday sessions. Wednesday evening convention indications were that the entire present slate would be reelected.

Tells Average Cost of Arbitration

Mr. Braden, discussing the costs of arbitration, revealed a number of figures recently compiled by the AAA from the records of the Motion Picture Arbitration System.

The average costs of 65 cases in which awards have been made by arbitrators amounted to $37.57 for the complaining exhibitor, $27.67 to intervening exhibitors and $70.76 to the defendant distributors. In 22 cases carried to the Appeal Board at New York average costs rose, Mr. Braden disclosed, to $144.86 for the complainant, $111.37 for the intervenor and $222.87 for the distributors.

The costs were understood to have included all filing fees, transcript costs and other expenses, exclusive of the legal fees of attorneys.

Mr. Braden told the convention that nearly ten per cent of all arbitration cases involved New Jersey complainants. Of the total of nineteen Jersey actions filed either at New York or Philadelphia, five were withdrawn, presuming the exhibitor had won some concession, eight awards were made and six are still pending, Mr. Braden reported.

ASCAP, Mr. Paine intimated, will give every consideration to cases where theatre receipts have declined. He admitted that the past ASCAP policy in this regard had been "unfortunate" and agreed with exhibitors that some fee scales might be "arbitrary." "Lawyers have been removed and business men are now in charge" of the national music organization, he said. "It seeks to give exhibitors a square deal."

A report from the national Allied committee discussing revision of ASCAP per seat payment of music fees was to be delivered to an executive session of the regional meeting.

Prominent during discussions in executive sessions and open meetings was the question of coordinated industry war work. Cooperation between exhibitors and distributors through the United Motion Picture Industry, and between various exhibitor groups, and individual theatre men was termed vital.

Organization Would Implement WAC

A strong regional and national organization is needed to implement the work of the War Activities Committee, according to several convention spokesmen.

A second problem thoroughly debated was the question of high rentals. Although a perennial topic at exhibitor conventions, delegates at Atlantic City declared that the question was acute this year. They cited an increase in the number of top bracket and special pictures compared with a year ago and warned that the prosperity of producer-distributors was countered by shrinking box office receipts and a poor outlook today for exhibitors in view of tire shortages, gasoline restrictions and dimout regulations.

The UMPI plan was outlined by several speakers. They explained how it would work and the application of machinery for settling individual and territorial grievances.

Following Mr. Braden's speech the group was to discuss suggestions for reforms in arbitration procedure and the plans of UMPI's trade practices committee to work out more liberal rules and policy for the Appeals Board.

The resumption of surveys by the Allied Information Department was urged by a number of delegates. The division, formerly headed by Sidney Samuelson, was dropped last year when the decree became effective.

Price Control, 16 mm Problems Discussed

Other topics which were set for discussion on Thursday and Friday included increasing 16 mm competition and the price regulation system now in effect in Canada.

Among those present were William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro Goldwyn Mayer and chairman of the UMPI general committee; William Sussman, eastern sales manager for 20th Century-Fox; Joseph J. Lee, 20th-Fox New York branch manager, and H. M. Richey of MGM.

Exhibitor delegates from national and other regionals included Abram Myers, general counsel of Allied; M. A. Rosenberg of Pittsburgh, national president, who was toastmaster for the dinner Friday night honoring Colonel Cole; Harry Brandt, New York ITOA head, and Dr. J. B. Fishman, Joseph F. Reed, Maxwell Alderman, Barney Calechman and Joseph Shulman from Connecticut Allied.

Leon Bamberger, executive secretary of the United Motion Picture Industry, also attended.

Francis Harmon, vice chairman of the War Activities Committee, was scheduled to discuss the committee's work and the distribution of Victory Films on Friday.

ALLIED OF ILLINOIS FIGHTS FOR UNITY

Representatives of 90 theatres in the Chicago sector on Wednesday voted unanimous approval of the Unity program at a meeting of Allied of Illinois at the Congress Hotel. The exhibitors directed Jack Kirsch, president of the unit, to present their views to Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions.

The consent decree system of selling in blocks of five has worked a hardship on the small independent exhibitor, the resolution of approval said, adding that members of the unit were willing to give the new Unity plan of 12 picture sales a year's trial in order to compare it with the present and previous systems.

Paramount Stockholders Suit to Start June 16

N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Carroll G. Walter, on Tuesday, fixed June 16th as the date to hear the minority stockholders' suit against Paramount Pictures, Inc., and its officers and directors, first of a series of trials to test stockholders' effort to force repayment by film company officials of monies paid under extortion to former IATSE leaders, George E. Browne and Willie Bioff. Other actions now awaiting trial are against Twentieth Century-Fox, Warners and Loew's.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT ASKED TO MAINTAIN 'FREE MARKET'

Society of Independent Producers Takes Anti-Unity Case to Government

Independent producers of Hollywood, organized in the Society of Independent M. P. Producers, and bitterly opposed to increasing feature sales under the consent decree from the present permissible blocks-of-five to the 'Unity' Program's proposed blocks-of-12, took their fight to the Department of Justice, at Washington, on Tuesday, insisting that the Federal Government maintain "a free selling market for films."

They termed any kind of group selling without prior screening "retrogressive," and declared that it would be "incredible" for the Government now to take a backward step and countenance "any sort of group selling without advance trade screening for every motion picture." The decree as now operating provides for compulsory advance screening of all pictures in each block of five offered; the Unity plan would allow seven of 12 offered to be sold virtually "sight unseen."

The independent producers' attack on Unity selling was launched on April 14, 1942, and brought criticism of exhibitors and exhibitor organizations favoring the blocks-of-12 method. Tuesday's petition to the Government was in the form of a letter to Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold at the Department of Justice, and signed by Loyd Wright, president of the Society of Independent Producers; John C. Flinn, secretary; and members of the executive committee: Roy Disney, Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Walter F. Wanger and Mr. Wright. Other members of the organization include Charles Chaplin, Walt Disney, Samuel Goldwyn, Alexander Korda, Mary Pickford, Hunt Stromberg and Orson Welles.

Proposed Changes Called 'Retrogressive'

"In view of the government's signal success in abolishing certain phases of block booking by the consent degree, the incredibility of its countenancing any retrogressive, substitution sales scheme for the present five-picture group plan," was pointed out to Mr. Arnold by the independent producers.

The letter was handed to Mr. Arnold by John Flinn, as executive secretary of the Society.

"On the contrary," declared the producers, "the protection of the public, the exhibitor and the producer against any kind of group selling is what the situation demands. Let each feature picture be sold on its individual merits, after its content is known to the prospective buyer through obligatory trade showings."

Reviewing the history of the film trust case which led to the consent decree "and now sees a provision of the decree on distribution policy becoming inoperative," the producers, "who seek an open market for their pictures," declared:

"In a very specific sense, the members of this Society are in a unique and highly vulnerable position with regard to such pending changes. Their individual operations identify them as entrepreneurs, or originators and creators of entertainment. As the marketing of films is an indispensable function of their activities, their very existence is dependent upon the maintenance of free competition within the motion picture industry.

"It is partly for their protection, and the protection of other independent producers, that the anti-monopoly suit is pending, although currently suspended by the terms of the consent decree."

The letter quoted a section of the Government's original bill of anti-trust complaint which points out that block booking, "among other evils, tends to arbitrarily fill up and consume an exhibitor's screen time, thus preventing him from securing other pictures through other distributors." Commenting on this the letter said, in part, "But the evils of block booking do not stop with exhibition. The practice has exerted a poisonous influence also in the production field."

The producers presented figures based on trade reports obtained directly from the companies involved, that the five defendant distributing organizations had 61 completed productions awaiting screening on May 23, 1942. Paramount was shown as having 18 features finished, MGM as having 15 completed, 20th Century-Fox, 11; Warner Brothers, 11, and RKO, six completed pictures.

"These facts," the producers declared, "completely dispose of the argument that the distributor-producers cannot finance sufficient production to maintain the practice of trade showing all feature films before offering them for exhibition."

Government awaits Unity Plan 'Without Prejudice'

The blocks-of-twelve sales plan of the United Motion Picture Industry remained in legal committee at midweek, still in process of being cast in the mold of legal phraseology proper to an amendment to the consent decree. However, the six attorneys, representing both distributor and exhibitor members of UMPI, were reported to have completed their separate drafts of the plan. A joint session of the committee was scheduled tentatively before the weekend.

In Washington, meanwhile, Robert L. Wright, special assistant to the Attorney General and head of the Department of Justice's motion picture anti-trust unit, said he had not received any formal copy of the proposed decree changes. The Government, he said, had no comment or preconceived notions on the plan. The initiative, he made clear, still rests with the consenting distributors and the unity movement committees.

Practically all of the groups which have spoken in public opposition to the selling plan have also gone on record with letters to the Department of Justice, it was indicated. These will be considered when the plan is officially submitted. But Mr. Wright, replying to a direct question, said he saw no necessity for preliminary hearings by the Department.

In New York it was reported likely that the plan would be taken directly, within a week, to Judge Henry W. Goddard in New York district Federal court. He signed the consent decree. The unity proposal, one spokesman close to the committee predicted, would be presented to the court as a suggested amendment. This, he said, would be done with Department of Justice acquiescence and without Government comment on the proposals until they come up for court hearing.

The "escape clause", Section XII of the decree, became effective on Monday, June 1st. On that date the consenting distributors were automatically freed of the obligation to trade-show or sell in blocks-of-five after September 1st. The Government did not seek an extension of the clauses, which lapsed inasmuch as successful prosecution against the Little Three had not been completed. It was understood that the Government, generally satisfied with preliminary reports on the substitute "unity" selling plan, was willing to wait until it was ready for court examination.

On June 16th Mr. Wright and other U. S. film attorneys will be in New York for a hearing before Judge Goddard on the Government's divorcement proceedings against Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox. It was considered possible that Judge Goddard would listen to the unity sales amendment at about the same time.

WASHINGTON SPEEDS UP DRAFTING OF FILMS FOR WAR

Closer Coordination Between Hollywood and Capital Indicated in Plans

Official Washington, geared to a 24-hour-a-day work schedule, settling to all-out victory efforts, gave signs this week that Government was turning closer attention to the screen in wartime.

At least half a dozen separate U. S. agencies concerned with the war are fostering large-scale "emergency" motion picture programs, most of them with rapidly expanding staffs.

A number of the projects are highly secretive and concerned with what are described to inquirers as confidential military, economic or diplomatic problems.

Other agencies are conducting their film work with fanfare, and extensive accompanying publicity. Still other units are working in far-off corners of Washington or New York or Hollywood with comparative quietness.

The over-all supervision of the Government film program centers in the hands of Lowell Mellett, Coordinator of Government Films. With Arch Mercey, and staff, Mr. Mellett is charged with the coordination of film activities of all government agencies, and with establishing liaison with Hollywood. He has announced the intention of giving the commercial—Hollywood—motion picture industry full opportunity to contribute "all talents" to the war effort.

The prime method of doing this, Mr. Mellett told the industry during a recent visit to Hollywood, is through the maintenance of an uninterrupted supply of motion pictures to the entertainment screen. Additionally, he outlined special tasks of information and morale to be accomplished by the production of short subjects and some special features.

All of the major producers have now assumed production assignments for 26 of these pictures.

Industry to Devise "Own System of Selling"

Mr. Mercey in Washington was asked this week about methods of selling the pictures, which are to be distributed commercially by the industry. He replied that it was the coordinator's policy to act merely as an advisory agency. It is up to the industry to work out its own system of selling and producing the Government-suggested titles, he declared.

Distributors have announced that by agreement the pictures will be sold at reduced cost, to insure widest possible distribution. But the exact selling terms of the 26 specials, and whether they will be incorporated into distributors' regular short subject programs has not been clearly stated to date.

"Hollywood is rapidly getting into gear," Mr. Mercey remarked. "Industry figures on the coast are showing increasing interest in the subjects suggested by the Government," he added, predicting that the theatrical film industry would find an important source in the war effort for informative short product.

The coordinator's sole function, he added, is to advise on subjects which might be helpful to the war effort, and to gather facts with which they can be made. Also, from the various Government agencies, Mr. Mellett is gathering story suggestions which might be of use to Hollywood.

While theatrical distribution of the government inspired films will be through established industry channels Mr. Mercey said that a separate government distribution system was being organized to handle 16 mm non-theatrical circulation. Paul C. Reed, director of visual education for the Rochester, N. Y. public schools system has joined the Mellett office and will supervise the utilization of existing 16 mm facilities. Dr. Edgar Dale, also an advisor to Mr. Mellett, will consult on the 16 mm program it was reported.

OEM Production Plans Increase

The Office of Emergency Management film service, supervised by Robert Horton, director of information for the OEM, is the official U. S. producing agency for the coordinator. It is planning continued expansion of its film program. The film unit was formerly headed by Mr. Mercey.

In its two year history the OEM film unit has produced over 35 pictures on assignment from various government agencies. At least eight of them have been distributed theatrically by the industry under the auspices of the War Activities Committee. Philip Martin is head of the production staff at New York which made the pictures.

A series of three minute "community sing" trailers are the next OEM films to be released to the public. Featuring "patriotic and morale building" songs the pictures boost war bond sales and an all out effort by defense workers. The first, "Keep Em Rolling", with music by Rodgers and Hart, will be distributed by the War Activities Committee.

Additionally the OEM unit schedules about 26 pictures, on fortnightly release, for next year. These are destined for both theatrical and non-theatrical exhibition. The first full length picture produced by the OEM film unit, a 60 minute "screen white paper", on the causes of the war, will be completed by the end of June. It was made at the request of Mr. Mellett from a script written by Samuel Spewack.

Army Air Corps Has Film Plans

An extensive motion picture program is soon to be launched by the Army Air Corps it was revealed recently in Hollywood. Jack L. Warner, head of the Warner studio last week was commissioned a Lieutenant Colonel and assigned to the air corps public relations staff, detailed to Los Angeles. He will supervise the air corps theatrical motion picture program.

The Air Corps photographic section, headed by Colonel Minton W. Kaye, and the public relations branch under Colonel Arthur Ennis will supervise the film program. Allyn Butterfield, former editor of Pathe News and a former producer is industry liaison for the new air corps film section, it was reported. For the past ten months Mr. Butterfield has handled newsreel contacts for the department.

A four part program for the air corps motion picture staff is planned. It will embrace closer cooperation with the industry in the production of feature pictures, short subjects and newsreels. Confidential tactical material will be filmed at the flying front by Colonel Kaye's staff, which will include 20 or more film camera crews specially trained for air work. Sequences which can be cleared by the military censor eventually will be released to newsreels. Additionally the Air Corps will make its own specialized training films and hopes to compile a detailed motion picture record of aviation's part in the war.

Home Front Coverage Promised Newsreels

Increasing opportunity to cover all aspects of the war effort on the home front were promised the newsreels in Washington this week by a ruling in the procurement division of the War Department. It will permit, for the first time, extensive camera coverage, by pool and by assignment from all companies, of accomplishments on the production front.

Arrangements are now being completed, it was reported through, Lieutenant Colonel A. Robert Ginsburgh of the procurement branch to grant entry under army auspices to gun factories, tank works, vast new aircraft plants, arsenals and other defense plants. For the first time newsreels will be permitted to film, at unidentified locations, long lines of tanks, guns, jeeps and other equipment flowing at record breaking rates. Claude Collins handled the negotiations for the newsreels.

Women at work in shell loading plants, the swift movement of material to the fighting forces and demonstrations of chemical and mobile warfare will be arranged by the army for the first time since pre-war manouvers.

Newsreel spokesmen, grateful for the relaxation of rules to permit better coverage of the home front, at the same time expressed the hope that they would be granted fuller privileges on the fighting fronts. They pointed out that Pearl Harbor and Marshall Island were the only battle sequences issued to date. Both newspapers and still photographic services, they declared, have been granted special privileges not afforded the newsreels on the fighting fronts.

THEATRES MUST STAY OPEN KUYKENDALL WARNS

MPTOA Head Hits Decree; Warns of Disaster in Continuing High Rentals

"Keep the theatres operating." This is the real contribution the motion picture industry may make to the nation, according to Edward Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who this week declared the obligation to keep theatres open, overshadowed "all of the campaigns, drives, collections, and showings of Government films, however important and urgent."

"But it is not going to be easy to keep the local theatres operating, under war conditions, as we are just beginning to learn," he added.

Mr. Kuykendall's statement also treated of the "infamous consent decree selling system"; the distress of small town theatres; the necessity of fair dealing in rental adjustments; the production of a verified boxoffice record as an argument in conference between exhibitors and distributors; the impending "drastic government regulation of business"; the sacrifices coming, "necessary—and unnecessary"; and helplessness of unorganized exhibitors in community affairs. Also covered were the need for cooperation between organizations; the corollary need for a "permanent, constructive national organization"; the current termination of important sections of the consent decree; the principles of conciliation; the differences between arbitration and conciliation; "organized conciliation"; and the worth of mediation.

Declares 'Burden' Carried by Exhibitors

Mr. Kuykendall criticized the "high prices demanded and secured" under the "infamous selling system" of the consent decree. He said such prices not only surprised exhibitors; they surprised "possibly some distributors."

And he added: "All of this we knew was inevitable under the consent decree selling system, which we strongly opposed from the beginning. The burden of carrying this inefficient and uneconomical, hand-to-mouth method of licensing pictures is being carried entirely by exhibitors—the excessive costs of operating it plus the handsome profits reported by the producers are coming out of the pockets of the theatre operators, nowhere else but."

The small town theatre is currently faced with a "desperate" problem, caused by removal of its customers to the army or to heavy industry, Mr. Kuykendall noted. Additionally, he remarked, priorities, rationing, and other restrictions are "beginning to fold up small business and stores in these small towns . . . which adds to the grim picture of distress."

The population shift, he thinks, is "quite likely to be permanent even after the war ends."

SEES MEDIATION FINAL SOLUTION

Conciliation, or mediation, will complement arbitration in settling most of the disputes which still plague the industry, according to Edward Kuykendall, MPTOA president.

"Mediation," he said, "can prevent a large part of the expensive lawsuits, reprisals and ill-will that still burdens our business in spite of the consent decree, and can at least try to solve such troublesome and persistent problems as unfair zoning and releasing systems; overbuying to deprive a competitor of product; cutrate competition between theatres, including giveaways, lotteries, cutrate admissions, and double and triple features; unethical advertising; unfair non-theatrical competition, etc., etc."

All of which, in the opinion of the MPTOA president, points the necessity of fair dealing for the operators of theatres in small towns, if they are to avoid bankruptcy. There must be no adherence, he pleaded, to hidebound "precedent" by distributors. He added:

"If the distributor holds out for past price levels regardless of a big drop in possible box office receipts, the theatre cannot stay open; no exhibitor can run his theatre very long at a loss. The distributors must adjust their demands to fit the changed conditions in these spots or they will wind up getting no revenue at all from these towns, and with the responsibility of depriving the people in these small towns of motion picture entertainment at the time when it is most needed."

Price Reduction 'Formula' Unfair

The MPTOA head said it was "unfair and impractical" to expect reduction of prices by formula. "Each situation must be handled by its merits," he advised, and he cautioned against allowing theatres whose business has held up, to gain adjustments by "misrepresentation or fraudulent complaining."

He warned the distributor who would force a theatre out of business that the result would be the "wrath of people in the community who are thus deprived of their only inexpensive morale building relaxation for the duration of the war."

Mr. Kuykendall thinks the "acid test" for rental adjustment is the "actual business done at the boxoffice, whatever the theoretical reasons may be"; and he commented:

"The verified returns on the distributor's own percentage pictures is one conclusive indication of this. If the need is genuine, no situation should be difficult to analyze by anyone who wants to be fair and just. But everyone must bear in mind at all times that our No. 1 war job is to keep all the theatres operating. The country needs them as never before."

Rental adjustments and hard conditions bring to the distributor the problem of what to charge for top pictures, Mr. Kuykendall admitted, remarking that "most theatres" nevertheless "play these pictures at no profit" and asking why less pretentious pictures, which earn money for the theatres, should be forced to "carry the high cost super-dupers on their backs."

Predicts Government Regulation of Industry

Of the impending, to Mr. Kuykendall, regulation of business by the Government, he remarked, "Theatre operation and the continued functioning of this inter-dependent motion picture industry will rapidly become more difficult and precarious from now on. All business enterprises are being disrupted, shoved around, wiped out and unexpectedly upset by the Government's war activities and program. We can't escape unscathed, though the Washington authorities are sympathetic and don't want to hurt us unnecessarily."

Population shifts, conscription, rationing, to Mr. Kuykendall, are "only the beginning of what we can expect as the war goes on." Many measures, he noted, are not specifically aimed at the industry, but will affect it directly.

He suggested that sacrifices necessary will be made cheerfully; but that "we don't want to get pushed around when it is not necessary just because some official is ignorant of our business, and there is no one to suggest a better and less destructive way to achieve the same necessary result."

The corollary, as he sees it, is that "it is only by representation in a national exhibitor organization" that the theatre owners' interests are protected.

The moral that holds in the foregoing, holds in the relations between exhibitor organizations, regional and national, one sector of the industry and another, Mr. Kuykendall noted.

He added: "We think a national exhibitor organization is not the agency to fight other exhibitors, nor to provide jobs for promoters, nor to interfere in the affairs of state exhibitor association members, nor to promise phony benefits to small exhibitors."

Noting the termination of the selling provisions of the decree Monday, Mr. Kuykendall remarked upon the necessity for a new selling system to be agreed upon between the five distributors in the decree and the Department of Justice, and the Federal Court.

UNIVERSAL ANNOUNCES 55 FOR SEASON; 14 WESTERNS

Program To Include Five From Wanger, Koster, Hitchcock, Hawks

Universal Pictures, Inc., will release 73 pictures during the 1942-43 season, it was announced at the annual sales convention held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, from Tuesday through Friday.

The new season's picture lineup will feature an unprecedented number of high budget productions, William A. Scully vice-president and sales manager told the company's branch manager and salesmen. Over 200 district and branch managers and salesmen attended the convention.

Mr. Scully Wednesday announced 55 feature productions, five of them designed as special releases, 14 Westerns, 67 short subjects four serials and 52 issues of Universal Newsreel.

Color Planned for Two Specials

The five special productions, he said, will include two by Walter Wanger and one each from Alfred Hitchcock, Howard Hawks and Henry Koster. Two of these will be in color. They are Mr. Wanger's "Arabian Nights" and Mr. Koster's "Phantom of the Opera."

Productions by William A. Seiter, Bruce Manning, Dwight Taylor and additional releases from Howard Hawks, Walter Wanger and Henry Koster will figure prominently in the 1942-43 schedule. Citing star assignments Mr. Scully said that Abbott and Costello would make three pictures, Deanna Durbin two, and Olsen and Johnson a sequel to "Hellzapoppin."

John Joseph, director of Universal advertising and exploitation, announced the advertising budget would increase 25 per cent over this year. He said there would be more national newspaper campaigns and an increase in cooperative expenditure with exhibitors.

The shorts program listed 52 Newsreels, 13 two-reel name band musicals, 6 Color Classics, 6 Swing Symphonies, 10 Walter Lantz cartoons, 15 Person-Oddities, 15 Variety Views, and two specials, "Eagle Versus Dragon" and "Roar, Navy, Roar."

The four serials are: "Junior G-Men of the Air," 12 chapters, starring the Dead End Kids and the Little Tough Guys; "Overland Mail," 15 chapters, with Lon Chaney, Helen Parrish, Don Terry and Noah Beery, Jr.; "Don Winslow of the Coast Guard," 12 chapters, and "Adventures of Smilin' Jack," 13 chapters.

"U's" Foreign Business Up, Reports Seidelman

An increase of better than 60 per cent in Universal business in Great Britain and nearly 50 per cent in Australia during the past year was cited by Joseph H. Seidelman, Universal vice-president in charge of foreign affairs, "as striking proof of the vital part played by motion picture entertainment in the life of the public during war time emergency."

By Cosmo-Sileo

Studio executives arrive in New York for the Universal sales convention. Cliff Work, left, vice-president and studio general manager, and Milton Feld, right, production executive, are met by J. J. O'Connor, vice-president and executive assistant to the president, and Fred Meyers, eastern division sales manager.

Since the 1941 convention, Universal has had to suspend operations in Batavia, Philippines, Japan, Shanghai and Singapore, said Mr. Seidelman, adding that a number of the men who operated the Universal branches in those lands are now in U. S. Government service utilizing their knowledge of the affairs and languages of these countries.

Studio Reports Full Schedule Completed

Clifford Work, vice president and general manager of the studios on Tuesday told the convention that camera-work had been completed on all productions scheduled for release this season. The studio, he said, is far ahead of previous production schedules.

Prominent among the productions which Universal will release between now and Septemmer 1st when the new season starts are "Broadway" with Pat O'Brien and George Raft; the Andrews Sisters, Joe E. Lewis and the Harry James band in "Private Buckaroo"; a Gregory La Cava production, "Lady in a Jam," starring Irene Dunne; Robert Stack and Brod Crawford in "Deep in the Heart of Texas"; Abbott and Costello in "Pardon My Sarong" and the Walter Wanger production "Eagle Squadron."

The current 1941-42 season will bring delivery by Universal of 47 features, 14 action pictures, four serials and 70 short subjects the convention delegates were told by home office sales heads.

Gross business for Universal has advanced 23 per cent over the corresponding period last year, Mr. Scully told the sales force. He attributed the increase to improved picture quality, better playing time and increasingly lengthy holdovers. A 15 per cent increase in the number of exhibitor accounts on the Universal books was also cited by Mr. Scully.

Total collections to date, based on checks reaching the headquarters for the industry's Army and Navy Emergency Relief Drive, amounted to $675,000, according to Si Fabian, treasurer of the campaign.

Among the remittances received Monday in New York were: Skouras Theatre Corp., $34,509, plus $1,000 contribution from the company; Endicott Circuit, Brooklyn, $1,112; Fox Detroit Theatre, $3,660; Black Hills Amusement Co., Deadwood, S. Mr. Fabian this week urged all exhibitors to "hurry those checks." The trailer should be returned to the National Screen exchange from which it was received.

Followers of the late politico Huey Long in Louisiana will hear of no complaints against the darkening of outside spotlights. They have lost their fight to continue shining a spotlight from the twentieth floor of the Louisiana Capitol Building, at Baton Rouge, down on the ten-foot bronze statue of "the Kingfish" over his tomb on the Capitol grounds. The light that shone each night for these seven years is out for the duration, after a brisk battle in the state legislative halls which the late Senator once dominated.

Two weeks ago a group of young Americans in the R.A.F. gathered at the American Eagle Club in London, while the British Broadcasting Company made a recording of their singing, chatting and messages to their families in the United States. One of those flyers was Flight Sergeant Bud Fox of Flushing, Long Island.

The recording of that get-together was scheduled to be broadcast in this country by WOR-Mutual last Saturday. A few days before, a BBC representative in the U. S. phoned Mrs. Fox to tell her that her son would be on the air Saturday.

Then the mother of the American flyer revealed that she had just received another message about her son from the British government—telling her that Bud was reported missing in action and probably killed.

Grosso, whose shining service seven years ago earned him a gold watch engraved: "To Paollo Grosso 1885-1935 from Friends at Steinway Hall," said that George Cohan was one of his special customers for more than reasons than one—including the fact that Cohan gave him his biggest tip, five dollars.

Paramount Pictures, which for years has boasted loudly of the beauty of the legs of its female stars—Marlene Dietrich's 'million-dollar' legs, for instance—this week established a bold precedent with the announcement and unblushing admission that Virginia Dale "must be relied on to sell the sex" in Irving Berlin's "Holiday Inn," because the "gams" of the co-star, Marjorie Reynolds, are not the best for stills.

He sent a story to the newspapers this week telling how the Capitol management had drawn plans for a huge 'awning' to be drawn from the roof of the Capitol clear across the street to a roof on the opposite side, enabling the Great White Way to blaze in full light and yet make its illumination invisible from above, to airplanes or ships at sea. The ambitious Mr. Serkowich didn't explain how the lights were to be confined from shining from under the sides of his 'awning.' But he did mention to the editors, just in passing, that the unveiling had been intended for the premiere of George Raft's new picture, entitled "Broadway."

This Is The Army, Inc., Protects Copyright

This Is The Army, Inc., will handle the affairs of the musical show of that name, Irving Berlin's revival in modern dress of "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" of World War One. The corporation was announced in New York Tuesday.

Chief concern of the firm will be copyright, it was said. The Army produces the show, but a Government agency cannot grant itself a copyright. Hence the firm, a charitable organization, will protect material for the show, now in rehearsal and scheduled for opening at the Broadway Theatre July 4th.

Tickets for the opening night will cost from $2.20 to $27.50. Normal evening performances will cost from $1.10 to $4.40; matinees on Saturday and Sunday will be $1.10 to $2.75.

It is expected the show's weekly gross, with nine performances, will amount to $47,000.

All actors, and 50 musicians, come from the Army. Mr. Berlin's services are gratis. All royalties from his songs in the show and those from screen rights will go to Army Relief.

"Holiday Inn" Premiere For Army-Navy Relief

Stanton Griffis, chairman of the special events committee for the Navy Relief Society, has announced the appointment of Jules Stein, president of Music Corporation of America, as chairman of a committee which will handle the world premiere of Paramount's "Holiday Inn" at the New York Paramount. The opening will be held August 4th and proceeds will go to Navy Relief. The film is an Irving Berlin production co-starring Bing Crosby and Fred Astaire. The benefit premiere is the only prerelease engagement now scheduled for this production, according to the company.

More than 30 leading coast-to-coast radio network programs have lined up for a series of salutes to George M. Cohan, as a tribute from the theatrical profession to the famous song-and-dance man, coincident with his film biography premiere, "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the Warner Bros. production.

Eddie Cantor paid tribute to Mr. Cohan on his NBC program last Wednesday night, with Gracie Allen singing "Mary" as one of the musical numbers. Mr. Cantor also arranged for similar salutes from about 15 more radio headliners, including Fred Allen, Fibber McGee and Molly and Jack Benny.

Kupper, Moon, Buxbaum in New Fox Posts

Further executive realignments and promotions were effected this week in the distribution and promotion-advertising divisions by the management of Twentieth Century-Fox Film, at its home office, and involving William J. Kupper, Ray Moon, Harry Buxbaum, Joseph Lee, Morris Sanders, Charles Goetz, Charles Schlaifer and Frank Moneyhun.

Mr. Kupper became executive assistant in domestic sales to Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution. He had been western division manager.

No successor was named immediately to his former post, but Harry Ballance, southern division manager, was reported to be a candidate.

Mr. Moon was made special home office representative, and assistant to William C. Gehring, central division manager. Until recently, Mr. Moon had been with Mutual Theatres of Michigan, and previously with Cooperative Theatres of Detroit, and with the Universal branch there, as manager.

Mr. Buxbaum was appointed home office representative. He had been branch manager in New York City.

Joseph Lee, that branch's sales manager, succeeds Mr. Buxbaum.

Morris Sanders, its office manager, is now sales manager for New York State, Long Island, and New Jersey.

Charles Goetz went from the home office casting department Monday to take the sales managership, at the exchange, of New York City and Brooklyn.

Charles Schlaifer this week became advertising manager at the home office, under Hal Horne. He had been advertising and publicity director for the United Artists Theatre, San Francisco, for approximately nine years past. Recently, he had been a Samuel Goldwyn exploitation representative.

Frank Moneyhun has been placed in charge of a special exhibitor sales promotion service. Under A. M. Botsford, Mr. Horne's immediate predecessor, who has gone to the studio as special representative for distribution, Mr. Moneyhun had been advertising manager.

To be honored with a luncheon in New York Thursday were three Fox employees who completed 25 years with the company. They are Morris Goodman, Julia Wolpin, John O'Connor.

In New Haven, at the Shubert, "Fantasia" was held over for a total of 10 days.

"This Above All," at the Astor, grossed an estimated $8,500 last Saturday and Sunday and completed the week Tuesday with an estimated $19,000 expected. The figure applied to seats purchased for performances over the next four weeks. The film played to capacity both last Saturday and Sunday, with all available standing room sold out both nights, the company reported.

RECORD SET AS INDUSTRY STARTS $100,000,000 DRIVE

Street rallies launch the bond sales drive in New York (top), Boston (above) and Chicago (right). America's motion picture theatres, 15,000 strong united in the War Bond and Stamp Campaign this week, under auspices of the theatre division of the War Activities Committee and the Treasury Department, and demonstrated for the second time in a month, their ability as one of the nation's top media of fund raising for war support.

Three weeks ago, theatres throughout the country, raised in house collections $675,000 for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief drive, with an estimated grand total expected to reach more than $2,600,000 when all returns are in.

Over the weekend, in New York City, Philadelphia, Chicago, Albany, Birmingham, Louisville, Toledo, Indianapolis and other key cities, war bond rallies, parades and civic demonstrations held coincidentally with Memorial Day exercises, were organized by leading theatremen to launch the War Bond drive. Every phase of showmanship was employed by exhibitors to help the sale of securities for Uncle Sam's war chest, with record sales reported as the initial impetus to the $100,000,000 total exhibitors hope to raise before the end of the year.

New York Rally Nets $503,000

Basing estimates on early reports from the rest of the country and the results achieved in New York's 800 participating theatres, Si Fabian, campaign director, announced in New York on Monday that the weekend total might exceed his advance estimate of $7,000,000.

In New York City, $503,000 was obtained during the two-hour rally in Times Square at noon last Friday, which luanched that city's theatre drive for war bond and stamp sales. Approximately 25,000 jammed the square to observe the proceedings, of which Private Burgess Meredith and Monroe W. Greenthal, campaign committee member for WAC, served as masters of ceremony. Screen stars Paul Muni, Martha Scott, Jean Arthur, Lynn Overman and Joe E. Lewis addressed the gathering while 50 members of the American Women's Volunteer Service circulated through the crowd and sold bonds and stamps.

Most of the large sales at the rally were made to film executives, with the largest single purchase $150,000, made by Nicholas M. Schenck, of MGM, who bought three $50,000 bonds. Other purchasers included: Leopold Friedman, $50,000; David Bernstein, $25,000; J. Robert Rubin, $10,000; C. C. Moskowitz, $10,000; Arthur Mayer, $10,000 and Joseph Vogel, $5,000.

Hundreds of employees from film company home offices who were given an extra half-hour for lunch to attend the demonstration, were among those who participated in the bond-stamp purchases. Ruth Herbst, a member of the AWVS, sold a $1,000 bond to Morris Dorfman, a New Yorker who came to observe the rally and stayed to pay for his bond, in cash.

Top-ranking orchestras including Benny Goodman's, Jimmy Dorsey's, Don Albert's WHN orchestra and RKO's Dixieland Jazz Band played while a number of jitterbugs danced to the music of their "swing" favorites, lending a carnival air to the demonstration, which was broadcast over New York stations WHN and WNEW.

New York theatres, according to a committee announcement, greeted the campaign opening over the weekend with a regular "bargain-counter rush of buying." Many houses, underestimating the stock of war stamps that would be needed over Sunday, found themselves sold out before Sunday noon, after a "gold-rush business" on Saturday, it was said. Loew's reported average sale around $100 a day in stamps, per theatre, about $15,000 for the weekend in all the circuit's New York houses, or at the rate of $50,000 per week.

Chicago Theatres Give Ticket Premiums

Chicago's motion picture theatres got off to a flying start in their War Bonds and Stamps selling campaign, last Friday noon, when a huge rally and outdoor show was staged on LaSalle street, opposite the City Hall. Approximately 14,000 free tickets, to be used at any of the city's hundreds of neighborhood theatres, were given to purchasers of war stamps during the rally, from 11:20 a.m. to 12:00 noon. A ticket was given with each stamp purchase and $3,500 worth of stamps were sold.

Using a U.S. Treasury Department "bond wagon" for a stage, Bob Chester's orchestra furnished the musical program and among the stars who appeared from time to time were Ellen Drew, Bonnie Baker, Kitty Carlisle, Buddy Ebsen and Dean Murphy, master of ceremonies. Miss Drew, stopping off between trains, dropped in on John Balaban, who promptly whisked her over to the "bond wagon." The show was climaxed by the appearance of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who administered a pledge to 500 volunteer captains of a corps of salesladies mobilized to handle theatre lobby booths and then proclaimed Memorial Day as Movie Stamp Day in Chicago, reading his official proclamation on a coast-to-coast CBS radio hook-up.

Balaban, Kirsch Participate

John Balaban appeared with the mayor during the broadcast portion of the program, voicing the all-out efforts to be made by the motion picture industry. Other speakers were Norman Collins, state administrator of the Illinois War Savings Staff, and Jack Kirsch, president of the Allied Theatres of Illinois and Chairman of the War Activities Committee in Chicago.

The street celebration was conceived by William K. Hollander, field publicity man of the War Activities Committee, and publicized by Ed Seguin and Archie Herezoff, of the Balaban & Katz publicity staff. Charlie Cottle, manager of the Roosevelt Theatre, stage-managed the show.

Reyburn Plaza, in Philadelphia, was the scene last Thursday afternoon of that city's inauguration of the war bond drive in theatres. A parade, with thousands of observers and hundreds of participants, preceded the Plaza program. Speakers at the rally included Ted Schlanger, of Warners' theatres, and local industry co-chairman for the campaign; Mrs. Edna Carroll, State Censor chief; Major Benjamin Ludow of the Treasury Department; and Mayor Bernard Samuel. Dave Milgram, Jay Emanuel, Abe Einstein and Sam Schwartz were among the city's industry leaders who were present.

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin opened the theatre drive in Boston, at a rally on Boston Commons at which $51,000 worth of bonds and stamps were sold. Among the stage and screen stars who appeared were Ray Bolger, Ranny Weeks, Ethel Barrymore, Constance Moore and Benay Venuta, Samuel Pinanski and Nathan Yamins are directing the State-wide campaign.

St. Louis' campaign had an auspicious start at a luncheon meeting last Friday at the Hotel Coronado, and at a rummage sale resulting in the sale of $57,000 in bonds.

Fred Wehrenberg, president of the MPTOA of the district and head of the St. Louis campaign, was the largest purchaser, winding up with $25,000 and a wide assortment of articles. Other large purchasers were Paul Krueger, Mr. Wehrenberg's son-in-law, $5,000, and Louis K. and Joseph Ansell, owners of the Ansell Circuit, $8,000.

Arrangements were made for the sale of stamps at 100 theatres in the area for the duration. A special matinee will be held at subsequent-run houses June 6th, at which the admission will be a war stamp.

Purchase of a $5,000 bond by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana opened the drive in that state. Gov. Henry F. Schricker issued a proclamation designating the period from "Friday, May 29, until the war is won as Theatre War Bond and Stamp Days," and recommended that all the people of the State of Indiana combine their war-time movie amusement with investment in War Stamps and Bonds each time they visit a film theatre.

The committee sponsoring the drive in Indiana, is headed by Roy E. Harrold, president of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana.

DRIVE PRAISED BY MORGENTHAU

The campaign of the nation's motion picture theatres to sell War Bonds and Stamps is "one more great patriotic service" the industry is contributing to the war effort, it was declared over the weekend by Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury.

The Secretary pointed out that the theatres would be able to reach large numbers of persons at a time when other facilities for the sale of bonds and stamps were closed. He said the War Activities Committee had reported that more than 13,000 of the country's 15,000 theatres had pledged to join the drive before the campaign opened.

"This will prove to be one more great patriotic service the motion picture industry is contributing to our National Cause in this time of trial," the Secretary concluded.

"Yankee" Nets $5,750,000 in War Bonds

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros. film biography of George M. Cohan, in a premiere unprecedented in motion picture history, opened at the Hollywood Theatre, New York, last Friday night before a distinguished audience that had purchased $5,750,000 worth of war bonds as admission to the opening. The premiere was sponsored by the New York War Savings Staff, of which Col. Richard C. Patterson, Jr., is chairman.

Speaking over WMCA from the lobby of the theatre before the picture opened, Col. Patterson said: "This occasion should rank as some kind of a footnote, at least in the pages of American history. Where else could you get a five and a half million dollar box office for a movie premiere, even though the five and a half million does go to Uncle Sam. This occasion helps us dramatize the urgency of the Government's War Savings appeal," he said. He paid tribute to Warner Bros. "on their patriotic action in dedicating" the film to the war bond campaign.

Reservations were distributed to a capacity crowd of 1,554 persons who had purchased bonds ranging from $25 for seats in scattered sections of the house, to $25,000 each for 88 chairs in the loge and $12,500 each for 184 seats in loge and orchestra.

Celebrities, unions and individuals who could afford the tariff bought bonds for their tickets. The largest sale was made through Herman Chopak, a textile executive, who disposed of bonds valued at well over $1,000,000.

Among those who made reservations for the $5,750,000 premiere were: Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Mrs. Winthrop Aldrich, Stephen Ames, Hiram C. and Samuel T. Bloomingdale, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, Mrs. Douglas Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt D. Barnes Mrs. Morton Bogue, Mrs. Helen S. Guggenheimer, Leo Guggenheimer, Major and Mrs. Benjamin Namm, Judge Jonah Goldstein, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, Col. and Mrs. Richardson C. Patterson, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Neville Ford.

Kate Smith, Mrs. Eddie Cantor, Lucy Monroe, Mrs. Junius S. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermeyer, Mrs. Thomas P. Durrell, Mrs. Andrew Sage, Mrs. James P. Vogel, Mrs. Boris Orlove, Jr., Mrs. Tackaberry McAdoo, Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, Phil Spitalny and all members of his orchestra; Mrs. Arthur Anderson, Mrs. S. J. Blackstone, Mrs. Gertrude Nemerov, Mrs. Arthur Ochs, Mrs. Irving Valentine, James J. Walker, Samuel Rosoff, William Danforth, Don Meade, Harold Russek, Mrs. Estelle Milgrim, Major Albert Warner and H. M. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. James Cagney, Mr. and Mrs. William Cagney and Jeanne Cagney.

A resolution praising Warner Bros. for its "Yankee Doodle Dandy" world premiere campaign, was passed last week by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York. It was said to be the first resolution of its kind ever passed by AMPA.

No Rejections by Chicago Censors

During May the Chicago Police Censor Board reviewed a total of 130 pictures amounting to 441,050 feet. There were 42 cuts and no rejections. Three films, "The Mad Monster," "The Corpse Vanishes," and "The Gay Sisters" were classified "adults only" and licensed for showing accordingly. "Big Shot" was put in the same classification at the beginning of the month but later was issued a general permit.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

Esteemed Editor:

If all of the industries turning out sinews of war are clicking like this one the job's well begun (which that old German proverb construes as half done).

Last week "Mrs. Miniver" and "Ten Gentlemen from West Point" thrust themselves into these dispatches by sheer force of fitness of today's job.

This week two creations from the House of Warner command comment here and everywhere.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," which you'll have witnessed by now in the presence of a theatre audience, was screened the other morning in a studio projection room for the ladies and gentlemen of the tradepress without benefit of unprofessional onlookers alongside. When they'd dried their eyes, without quite understanding why they'd become moist, they came away talking to themselves and each other with all the stops out and three cheers for everybody related to the Stars and Stripes.

"Wings for the Eagle," filmed at, in and all about the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation plant, had done much the same thing to this group of catch-as-catch-can reviewers at the Warner theatre on Hollywood Boulevard only two nights before. It's not in the same league with "Yankee Doodle Dandy" as to cost, class and coverage, but it's got the same sure command of the mainsprings of patriotism.

These are four films, previewed here within the fortnight, which belong by right of value on every screen in the United Nations and in as many elsewheres as possible. Each does a job, primarily in terms of entertainment, and the four jobs are the one job that requires doing.

Presumably they are the first four of many to come.

It took Hollywood some time to get rolling.

There had to be some trial and errors.

It's rolling now.

Safeguards for The Children

The Los Angeles Theatre Defense Bureau, which has been doing for Exhibition in these parts a job as stimulating in its way as the one the studios have done for Production, has turned its attention to the matter of safeguarding the young theatregoer against whatever may befall if Secretary of War Stimson's predictions about enemy raids are borne out, or even if they're not.

The Bureau has placed in the hands of all exhibitors in Southern California a 20-page brochure entitled "Manual for Creation of a Battalion of Safety for Children's Matinees."

The manual has been devised in collaboration with representative of the County School Department, the City Board of Education, the Department of Playgrounds and Recreation, the Boy Scouts of America and other interested organizations.

PRODUCTION DIMOUT

Although there's no cause-and-effect connection, prdouction was doing a bit of a dimout last week simultaneously with the toning down of illumination along the coast line. Only four pictures got started, although 13 got finished. The starting figure will go up again next week, but the lights won't.

Pete Smith's Day and Month at MGM

Don't try to imagine Pete Smith speechless—it's impossible—but put it down in your Ripley book that he was, in a manner of speaking. Actually, he was well prepared, and rehearsed, to make a few offhand remarks to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer High Command assembled in the salon of the Irving Thalberg Building to fete him on the tenth anniversary of his start as a producer, in celebration of which the company has designated June as Pete Smith month.

Pete made his speech, but it was preceded, followed and practically cancelled out by remarks by Louis B. Mayer. Thus it was discovered why Pete gave up a thriving career as his boss' publicity man to become an off-screen actor. In last Wednesday's ceremonies his boss topped Pete, fore and aft of his prepared speech, as wit, as raconteur and as dealer in point and counterpoint.

Present, in addition to the ranking executives of MGM, were heads of exhibitor organizations and the representatives of the principal trade publications.

Persiflage was not the essence of the occasion.

Tribute was.

Pete's boss paid his, after he'd ribbed Pete to a rosey purple, in solid phrases.

Then Mrs. Leo B. Hedges, chairwoman of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, presented Pete with a plaque inscribed: "To Pete Smith in grateful acknowledgement of his outstanding education contributions and of his consistently high production standards."

Everybody on the premises underwrote those sentiments, including—W. R. W.

Independents Set "Freedom" Films

Four short subjects based on the "Four Freedoms" expounded in the Atlantic Charter, will be produced voluntarily and without profit by independent film producers through the Independent Motion Picture Producers Association. Plans for the project were disclosed in Hollywood on Monday, when the association forwarded its project to Washington authorities for approval. Production companies will donate time, talent and equipment, it was said.

The idea for the series originated with I. E. Chadwick, president of the association, following an address made by Nelson D. Poynter, Hollywood liaison officer for Lowell Mellett, Coordinator of Government Films. Mr. Poynter spoke before a meeting of IMPPA.

It is understood that a major release for the subjects will be sought and all profits, if any, would be donated to the USO, Army and Navy Emergency Relief or other wartime welfare groups. Launching of the plan awaits approval of Washington officials.

28 'Marquee' Names in the Armed Services

Hollywood Shifts Cast Assignments to Older Men; Grooms New Ones

HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Faced with a shortage of talent at the beginning of the current production season, Hollywood has lost a total of 28 leading male players of marquee calibre to the United Nations' armed forces through selective service and enlistment.

Many more are scheduled to go shortly, thus confronting the studios with new dilemmas in preparing for the next season's production casting, and creating a problem of whether to groom unknowns or seek leading men of past experience but now beyond the active service call age. In the first instance, there is every probability that the younger players may be called or enlist voluntarily in the armed forces; in the second, public acceptance of the former favorities may be questionable.

Twenty-one name players have been drafted or have enlisted in the United States Army or Navy, in the British services, or the merchant marine since hostilities became widespread.

New Roles for Male Stars

Those in the Army are: James Stewart, Ronald Reagan, William Holden, Jeffrey Lynn, George O'Brien and Burgess Meredith.

In the Navy are: Robert Montgomery, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Tony Martin, Gene Raymnd, Wayne Morris, Richard Barthelmess.

Louis Hayward and Frank M. Thomas, Jr., leave shortly to join the Navy, and John Shelton will soon be inducted in the Army.

Serving in the British forces are Laurence Olivier, Richard Greene, David Niven and Leslie Howard.

Stirling Hayden has joined the American Merchant Marine.

The loss to Hollywood of these players left no small gap in the casting of pictures. There are many more to go, including Tyrone Power, Van Heflin, George Montgomery, Robert Sterling.

Rejected on physical grounds was Errol Flynn, one of the top boxoffice stars, but he is attempting to enter some branch of the armed forces regardless.

Promising Talent Called to Serve

Effect of the depletion of talent can be estimated by the calibre of the players called to the colors.

Ronald Reagan and Jeffrey Lynn were Numbers Five and Seven respectively in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD's poll of exhibitors last year when they selected Stars of Tomorrow.

Stirling Hayden, William Holden were 12th and 13th respectively in the same ballot.

Power was 11th in order of the Money Making Stars chosen by exhibitors in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame balloting. Flynn was 14th.

RKO's Western star Tim Holt has been inducted in the Army, but was given an unasked for deferment because of local induction jams. The studio is utilizing the delay to make six more western pictures starring Holt for the new season.

Twentieth Century-Fox' rising star, Victor Mature, will shortly report to his draft board. Ralph Bellamy is reportedly scheduled for induction shortly.

There are reports that Gene Autry, Number One Cowboy star in the HERALD's poll, is seeking to join the armed forces, but no confirmation is obtainable.

It is no secret that casting directors and production executives are scanning the draft status of their players anxiously. In the current registration of employes under way at the studios, one of the questions asked is the draft, marital and family statuses of the players.

It is possible that western stars may be shifted to features for grooming as leading men, and vice versa. James Craig, who zoomed to prominence at RKO in a feature, has been shifted to outdoor pictures, being borrowed by MGM for "Ox Train" and will go into "Grand Canyon" at RKO in the autumn. There is a deal under discussion which would have Columbia's western star, Charles Starrett, enact roles in features.

Older players have opportunities for new screen careers, with the necessity for recasting pictures. John Boles is making what amounts to a comeback, and again to be seen in leading roles may be Warren William, Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Adolphe Menjou and others.

The recent ruling that no deferment will be given men with dependents who have sufficient funds on hand to care for their families will have its effect upon the film industry, although there is a bill pending in Congress that would defer men with families until all other classes are called.

Disney's "Bambi" Set for Radio City Music Hall

Walt Disney's "Bambi" will have its world premiere at the Radio City Music Hall in New York on July 30th. Contracts were signed on Tuesday by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, distributors of the picture, Roy Disney, and G. E. Eyssell, managing director of the Music Hall. "Bambi" marks the second Disney feature to play that famous theatre. The first was "Snow White," which also was the first picture in the history of the Music Hall to play five successive weeks, and which in that period piled up one of the largest cumulative grosses the theatre has ever had.

Columbia Will Continue "Glove Slingers" Shorts

The "Glove Slingers" short comedies produced by Columbia will be continued in a new series announced for 1942-43. Jules White, head producer of Columbia shorts has assigned Ewart Adamson and Jack White to the first of new two reel program. "A Study in Socks," latest of the 1941-42 series will be released late this month.

U. S. ARMY SNUFFS OUT MORE LIGHTS ON EAST COAST

Dimout Regulations Made More Stringent; Theatres Darken Marquee Lights

New York, New Jersey, and Delaware theatre men learned Monday the dimout thus far effected was insufficient. In forcible terms, the Army reminded owners of all amusement enterprises, store keepers, home owners and the general public, that ships were still being outlined at night by shoreline glow, and therefore were still silhouetted targets for submarine attack.

Monday, the Army commanded that immediately, in the area covered, all windows and skylights must be shaded or screened; and that all illuminated outdoor advertising signs must be extinguished for the duration.

Street and traffic lights, flood lights in construction and manufacture and in parking places, must be shaded, and reduced. Display windows, lobbies and business entrances must be shielded so light rays do not reach outside. Automobiles the rays of whose headlights are visible at sea, must use only parking lights.

Enforcement is by local and state authorities.

The new regulations, new in that they are more stringent, did not find theatre owners surprised nor uncooperative. For months past, in the areas mentioned, and especially in New York City, they had reduced their lighting so that this week most theatres were operating with under-marquee lighting only, and that reduced in many instances. Uprights were put out along with marquee lights weeks ago.

Good Holiday Business

The New York area fared well over the Memorial Day weekend, with Times Square crowded. Most theatres on Broadway reported greater business than last year's holiday period.

The dimout thus far has not affected receipts; and gasoline rationing was said to have brought the crowds to the city's amusement center.

Meanwhile, across the Hudson River, New Jersey underwent a state-wide blackout Monday evening, 10:10 P.M. to 10:40 P.M. It was the first "surprise" statewide blackout in the East. It was termed successful.

The Gulf Coast from New Orleans, Louisiana, to Brownsville, Texas, was blacked out Monday by the Army's Eighth Corps Area command. The blackout and dimout extend ten miles inland.

The Pacific Coast not only has a dimout, which this week extended to Los Angeles and Hollywood; it also is equipped for gas attack. Firemen and policemen in Seattle, Portland, and San Diego received gas masks last week. All major military points on the coast are guarded now by balloon barrages.

The measures are in anticipation, shared by the country's military leaders, of a major Japanese sortie, impelled by a desire to answer the bombing of Tokyo by Brigadier General James Doolittle and his force of bombers.

The dimout in Los Angeles and Hollywood was accompanied by a statement from Police Captain J. F. Lawrence: "It is urged that all lights which are visible from the ocean or from above be dimmed out by curtains, blinds or drapes during the night. Motor vehicle lights should not be projected toward the ocean for any length of time. This regulation will apply to lights and signs on large buildings."

A second blackout was to come for Baltimore this week, Wednesday.

Tennessee plans monthly blackout tests, according to indications from the central office in Nashville, for 120 defense councils. The state is to undergo a blackout next Tuesday.

A test blackout staged in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, May 25th was reflected in a 50 per cent drop in box-office receipts in the area. The demonstration was staged throughout Luzerne County.

Norristown, Pennsylvania, was to have a half-hour blackout this week. Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton, in the same state and area, were to have a practice blackout Sunday night.

Little Effect On Grosses

The nightly dimout ordered in San Francisco by Army authorities has had little effect on theater grosses so far, according to a checkup made a week after the order went into effect. A slight falling-off of receipts was reported in each of four neighborhood houses in districts bordering the ocean, where vertical illuminations were ordered eliminated, and marquee lighting softened. In downtown houses, where softer lighting had gone into effect several months ago, practically no change in business was noted as a result of the change.

Weekday business has fallen off nearly half in theaters of Fall River, Mass., and vicinity because of the East Coast dimout orders and the rationing of tires and gasoline. However, local houses still uphold the reputation of the city being a weekend town as weekend business, and particularly Sundays, is now at an all-time high. Relaxation of dimout regulations is being urged by some managers, particularly in display of lights beneath marquees. Business at open air auto theaters slumped the drop being estimated as high as 50 per cent.

Theatre attendance in Charlotte, North Carolina, has decreased 20 per cent, managers report. They ascribe this to gasoline rationing. Suburban and "drive-in" theatres are especially suffering.

A survey of all theatres in Camden, New Jersey, to determine their safety in event of an air raid, is being conducted there by Fire Marshal Bernard Gallagher at the direction of Herbert E. Harper, chairman of the Camden Defense Council. The check-up is being made as a result of a request by the State Defense Council, urging patrons to remain inside theatres in an alert or actual air raid. Experience in England showed, the request said, that people were three times safer inside a theatre than out. The Council instructed further that any theatre found unsafe should be closed "whenever raids are imminent or frequent."

MIAMI THEATRES USED AS CHURCHES

The Cameo, of the Wometco circuit, and the Cinema, of the Paramount circuit, in Miami Beach, Florida, are being used by the Army Air Corps Technical Training Command as churches on Sunday mornings.

The Paramount circuit has changed its Sunday schedules for the benefit of the men in the armed forces in the vicinity, opening at 1:45 P. M. Sundays, one hour earlier than usual.

Thurwachter Defense Head

L. F. Thurwachter, operator of the Avon, Pix and Park theatres in Waukesha, Wisconsin, has been named state commander of the citizens' defense corps of the state defense council by Ralph S. Kingsley, council chairman. M. R. Thurwachter, who will be in charge of all citizens' defense corps operating under the state's county defense councils, is a past commander of the Daniel J. Martin post, American Legion and served as a captain in the 85th division in the first World war.

Industry To Join New York Parade

The role of the motion picture theatre in a nation at war, will be demonstrated during the "New York At War" parade Saturday, June 13th, which Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia has set for the purpose of illustrating the city's war effort. One large float under construction, measuring 55 feet in length, 22 feet in height and 22 feet in width, will carry a giant camera, a representation of the Minute Man and a tableau depicting how theatres support the Red Cross, Army and Navy Emergency Relief, the USO and the Treasury Department's sale of War Bonds and Stamps. The other float will include a giant victory symbol—a "V" with three dots and a dash—representatives of the industry and a band. Hundreds of ushers and many theatre bands will be in the line of march.

Metropolitan circuits and individual exhibitors have subscribed the financing of the theatre demonstration for the parade. Samuel Rinzler, head of the Randforce Circuit, is chairman of the committee in charge. The floats were designed by Monroe Greenthal and are being constructed under the direction of Vincent Trotta and Armando.

The parade committee known as the Mayor's Committee for Mobilization of New York At War, is headed by Grover A. Whalen and it is estimated that 500,000 persons will participate. The film industry contingent will form the morale section of the sixth division, of the home front, along with radio, the stage, sports, music and the arts.

Disney's First Latin Shorts Ready Soon

The first "good neighbor" fruits of Walt Disney's tour of Latin America last year will be on South American screens by midsummer, the cartoonist disclosed on a trip east this week.

The first four commercial Disney releases using story, characters and background from South America are now nearing completion. They will be distributed commercially by RKO through regular channels in South America this summer. They will also supplement the autumn program of Disney releases in the United States.

Additionally Mr. Disney reported that work was advancing rapidly on 12 other specialized pictures on agricultural, health, war and economic subjects made specifically for the motion picture section of the office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. These will be distributed in South America on 16mm as part of the program of cultural interchange of motion pictures directed by John Hay Whitney.

The four theatrical subjects which are partially completed were exhibited in Washington to officials of the Office of Inter-American Affairs. They include "Acquerella do Brasil," "Pedro," "Lake Titicaca" and "The Flying Gauchita."

Four of the health subjects produced by Mr. Disney with the aid of government specialists deal with methods of malaria and mosquito control, the housefly and disease, clean water supply, and vaccination. Four agricultural subjects prepared with the aid of the U. S. Department of Agriculture discuss soy bean cultivation, the resources of the Amazon basin, the ever normal granary and corn and its development. They stress the closeness of inter-American agricultural ties.

Arrangements for production by Walt Disney of an animated training film on identification of U. S. Army aircraft have been completed, it was announced Tuesday by the War Department.

Cartoon Technique Adopted to Education

Mr. Disney described the pictures as an attempt to bring his cartoon technique to the educational screen film. He expressed the conviction that the educational value of such pictures could be substantially enhanced by making them entertaining too.

"With the help of experts from the Coordinators office we have tried to strike a new note which I hope will make ordinarily prosaic subjects acceptable to millions of people whom otherwise we could not reach."

Mr. Disney has opened a small scale animating studio in Washington to facilitate presentation of rough ups of cartoon material requested by the government. In addition to his Inter-American assignments he is now completing meteorological shorts for the Army and Navy.

Expansion of the non-theatrical film activities of Mr. Whitney's office into the production of specially written short subjects is proceeding rapidly, a spokesman for his New York office said this week. A large roster of top Hollywood writers is now working on story ideas for the non-theatrical division headed by Kenneth MacGowan. They receive what is described as "nominal" compensation for completed scripts.

The list of names, all with major Hollywood screen credit includes: John O'Hara, Lillian Hellman, Arthur Sheekman, Joel Sayre, Anthony Veiller, Allen Rivkin, Mary McCall, Frances Goodrich, Albert Hackett, Tess Slesinger, Frank Davis, Jane Murfin, Gene Towne, Dalton Trumbo, Fred Rinaldo, Robert Lees, David Hertz, Maurice Rapf, Edmund Dorfman, Paul Alley, Donald Slesinger, Guy Endore and others.

The Coordinator's plans for the production of informative shorts for South America on the war effort and other aspects of Inter-American relations were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on May 2nd.

HOLLYWOOD TO ASK "GOING MY WAY?"

RKO studio manager William S. Holman last week made a survey of studio employes looking toward starting a voluntary "pool-your-car" movement. Employes were asked if they would be willing to share their cars in picking up fellow workers nearby, what type of automobiles they had and the like. The studio is the first to make such a move.

Foreign Press Managers Rotating Chairmen

The International Film Relations Committee, at its regular bi-weekly meeting Monday, designated Clarence J. Schneider, international publicity director of Columbia Pictures, first editor of the committee's institutional feature service and newsletter. The editorship will rotate each month. When Mr. Schneider has completed his term, he will be succeeded by Dave Blum, international publicity director of MGM. The committee is composed of distributors' foreign publicity managers at New York home offices.

The feature service and newsletter will be part of an expanded program of international public relations being carried out jointly by the IFRC and the Hollywood Foreign Department Committee. They will supplement such continuing activities as the shortwave radio broadcasts to countries abroad, now in their 154th week, and collaboration with the Rockefeller and Donovan Governments Committees. The overall aim of the public relations program is to increase the prestige and standing of the motion picture industry throughout the world.

Mr. Schneider will confer Monday with members of the planning subcommittee which drew up the program. The subcommittee includes Albert Deane, chairman; Leslie F. Whelan and Fortunat Baronat. Miss Rosa Lewis, of the MGM international publicity department, who is working on the committee's master mailing list; Kenneth Clark, chairman of the IFRC, and Joel Swensen, secretary, will also attend.

Menjou Returns to Columbia

Adolphe Menjou has been signed by the Columbia studio for a part in the forthcoming Fred Astaire-Rita Hayworth musical, tentatively titled, "Carnival in Rio." Xavier Cugat and band will also appear in the picture which will be produced by Louis Edelman, with William Seiter directing.

Paramount Southern Meet

Southern area partners, associates, and executives of Paramount met in Atlanta this week. Among them were Austin C. Keough, vice-president and general counsel of Paramount; Montague F. Gowthorpe, theatre comptroller; Leonard Goldenson, head of the theatre department; Leon Netter, in charge of its southern operations; Robert Wilby, William Jenkins, Arthur Lucas, theatre partners.

Variety Chicago Meeting Planned

Plans for the national Variety Clubs of America meeting in Chicago proceeded this week, under the guidance of John Harris, of Pittsburgh, national chief barker, and Henri Elman, a petitioner for a new Chicago tent, both of whom conferred last week in Hollywood.

The meeting replaces a national convention. One hundred will attend, representing all tents; and reports on charities and other activities will be read. The meeting will be in conjunction with the forming of a tent in Chicago. It will occur late this month or in early July, and will be for two days.

Reports are reaching national officers of the war work of various tents, notable among them are the St. Louis and Baltimore. The St. Louis tent, Number Four, reported through Louis Ansell, that it is heading for a million dollar total in war bonds and stamp sales, through efforts of its members aiding the industry's selling campaign in theatres. In Baltimore, where Tent 19 has a goal of $200,000, the halfway mark has been passed.

The St. Louis tent handled the Hollywood Victory Caravan Show, and in addition, raised over $22,500 for Navy Relief.

Through C. B. Akers, Tent 22, Oklahoma City, in a preliminary report to Mr. Harris, this week emphasized its war activities. It is helping furnish entertainment to soldiers in nearby posts. Its aid to the War Bonds and Stamps drive is outstanding; and it will shortly survey the territory to determine how many theatres are entitled to the Treasury Department's citations.

Cleveland's Tent Six is moving from the Allerton Hotel to larger rooms in the Hollenden Hotel. The tent's annual golf tournament was to be at the Beechmont Country Club, Saturday.

The Charlotte, North Carolina, tent's benefit show last week, starring Bob Hope and troupe, garnered an estimated $3,000, for the 38th Hospital Evacuation Unit of Fort Bragg.

The Showmen's Club, Philadelphia, is now headed by Louis Schleifer, second vice-president, following resignation of Moe Verbin, president, and the inability of Myer Adelman, first vice-president, to serve.

Queens Clubwomen Meet; De Bra Heads Ceremonies

Speakers from the organized motion picture industry led the list at the final meeting of the year, for the Motion Picture Council of Central Queens, at the Hotel Picadilly, New York City, last week. Master of ceremonies was Arthur De Bra, authority on educational matters, and lecturer for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Other guests and speakers from the industry were Harold Hode, Columbia; Harold Hendee, RKO; Albert Howson, Warners; Mrs. Isabelle Turner, Warners; Roger Albright, MPPDA; Miss Jeanne Cagney, star of "Yankee Doodle Dandy"; Silas Seadler, MGM; Alec Moss, Paramount.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Edward T. Herbert.

President of the Council is Mrs. Dean Gray Edwards.

Al Duffy Joins Army

Al Duffy, former press agent for Schubert Theatres in Boston, and more recently a Hollywood scenario writer, for Columbia Pictures, has been commissioned a captain in the United States Army Signal Corps. He is assigned to duty with the Air Corps at the Training Film Production Laboratory, Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

THEATRE UNION IN ENGLAND DEMANDS WAR PROFIT SHARE

Double Time Rates for Sunday Work First Demand of National Union

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Taking a leaf out of their studio brethren's book, workers within British cinemas, banded together in the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employes, have begun to brandish the big stick. Self conscious of an increased power, patting themselves on the back for the acquisition during the year of a war bonus, cockahoop, maybe, at the wartime commissions awarded certain of their officers in connection with the C.E.A.'s Army training film scheme, they have begun softly, but not negligibly, to wave that big stick in the direction of the British exhibitor.

Particular objective of the theatre workers' union, as made manifest at this year's Annual Conference, is that their members should share in any current prosperity which may be abroad on the box office front on Sundays. The time is opportune, they contend for the consideration of double time rates for all Sunday work.

Exhibitors, therefore, who have been openly recording that the weekend business is now the business upon which their livelihood depends, who now have to pass over an increased volume of revenue to the State in the form of entertainment tax, may, in the near future, have to take a slice out of that prosperity to pay increased wages to their employees. It is clear that the N.A.T.K.E. are taking exhibitors at their word and determined that the situation shall not be exploited save to the advantage of projectionists, ushers, cashiers and other employees within the picture house.

Theatres Classed As Seven-Day Job

Most theatre workers in Great Britain work a six day week, with a changeable day off. Most legitimate theatres, on the other hand, which open (and there are but a few) on Sunday, pay double time, but do not give a day off in lieu. It is the theatre workers' belief that the present tendency is to class cinemas as a seven day job, as with public utility undertakings.

Conditions vary, of course, throughout the country. In Portsmouth employees work a full normal day on Sunday, but receive a day off in place of it. In some parts of Scotland double time is already paid for Sunday work. In Nottingham workers get one Sunday off in four and are paid extra, in addition to their weekly wage, no deduction being made for their day off, at pay rate of time and a half.

Some impetus is felt by the employees to be added to the N.A.T.K.E. argument by the fact that most British studios pay double for Sunday work, with war bonus and traveling allowance thrown in.

Not all of the employes are in favor of Sunday opening, though it is probably true that most of them are willing to work provided that a day off is given in place during the week.

Dissatisfaction exists within the labor ranks at grading of cinemas for wage purposes, a system which has been adopted between the Unions and the C.E.A. Cinemas taking £750 or more are graded AA, those taking between £350 and £750 are graded A, and cinemas whose receipts are between £75 and £150, are classified as C. The fact that the stimulus to trade has brought more money to the box offices of certain of these categories without increasing the wages paid to their employees has provoked the suggestion that the system should be done away with.

Want Grading On National Basis

The demand has now gone out that grading should be put upon a national basis and not upon a local classification. It is contended by the N.A.T.K.E. that this would be both ethical and economic for the exhibitor and would do away with much local opposition by employees to Sunday opening.

The theatre union has been patting itself upon the back for securing increases for its workers over the past four years amounting to four million pounds.

Some of its employees will be given commissions in the Home Guard, so that they can be liaisons between the picture houses and their employees on the one hand and the War Office on the other. As with the A.C.T., the production workers' union, membership has increased and nearly 100,000 employees, many of them now union, have benefited by agreements concluded during the year by the Association.

An effort is being made to expand the principle of unionism within the picture business by the formation of a managers' union. The N.A.T.K.E. have given the principle its blessing, irrespective of whether the managers' association was born as a separate union or formed within the Union itself.

Expansion of an even wider scale is not without the bounds of possibility, for the Musicians' Union proposal that one Union be formed for the entire entertainment industry, covering picture houses, theatres and studios, has been dismissed by none of the workers' unions within the industry, though the N.A.T.K.E. president has given his blessing to a two union scheme, with the professionals banded apart from the other laborer grades.

Producers and A.C.T. Talk on Wages-Hours

Discussions, meanwhile, have reached an advanced stage between the producers and the A.C.T. on the setting up of a standard agreement on wages and hours to operate throughout the entire production industry here.

Much concern exists, however, within the production union, a concern which is shared by the producers themselves, at the manner in which the Ministry of Labour, or some of its Exchanges, is interpreting the recent Manpower Panel Report on reservations and callups of studio technicians. The new demands for manpower have, it is stated, found fresh and unexpected inroads being made on studio personnel, with the danger that the understanding arrived at as a result of the Manpower Report may be upset.

A Government Advisory Committee, consisting of a representative of the Board of Trade, one of the Ministry of Information, plus a member of the Films Council, is currently dealing with production personnel, and the producers, backed by the labor unions, are at present seeking conference with them so that the situation might be straightened. Already the A.C.T. has sent a deputation to the Minister of Labour.

BRITISH MANPOWER PROBLEM GROWING

Considerable anxiety exists in producer and labor circles here as a result of the continuing apparent disregard of the findings of the Manpower Panel with regard to industry labor by the Ministry of Labour.

Despite its recent agreement with the findings of the panel, the Ministry is continuing to call up film technicians and other essential industry workers by age groups. Some have been told to send in applications for further deferment, but others have been informed that no further deferment is possible.

Industry officials said that if such registrations continued, film production would be brought to a virtual standstill. A producers' delegation met with the Labour Ministry last week, following up a similar meeting of a labor union's committee with the Ministry last weekend.

Olivier Wins British Award

Laurence Olivier won the "Picturegoer" gold medal for the best acting by a male star, for the second consecutive year, based on his performance in Alexander Korda's "That Hamilton Woman," released through United Artists. The previous year he captured the award for his acting in "Rebecca," the David O. Selznick production, also a UA release. The award is made on the basis of votes cast by readers of the English fan magazine.

Anna Neagle at Ottawa

Anna Neagle, British actress, attended the North American premiere of her newest picture "They Flew Alone," at Ottawa's Regent theatre on Saturday. The Governor General of Canada, the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice were guests of honor at the opening.

Mayer Again Gets Top U. S. Salary

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, again topped the field of America's highest paid executives, receiving in 1941 a remuneration of $704,425, it was disclosed by the Securities and Exchange Commission in Philadelphia last Thursday, following annual reports filed with the SEC. SEC's headquarters are now in Philadelphia, having been moved there from Washington's war crowding.

Mr. Mayer's salary for last year was $7,373 more than the amount he received in 1940, and included $548,425 in bonus and a share of profits.

Many of the annual reports of executives in war industries were held up by the SEC for possible censorship, among them that of Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation who was second, following Mr. Mayer, in 1940, with $478,144, and other top ranking steel men whose concerns are engaged in war production. George Washington Hill, president of the American Tobacco Company, who received $456,415 in 1940 and placed among the first three, dropped in 1941 to $288,144. This decline apparently resulted from a decision of the New York Supreme Court against the company last year which brought a reduction in "incentive compensation" paid to the firm's top executives.

James Cagney topped Clark Gable by $5,000 last year, to rank among the nation's highest paid persons, it was disclosed in additional annual reports filed with the SEC. Warner Bros. paid Mr. Cagney $362,500, $5,500 less than he received in 1940, but $119,500 more than he was paid in 1939. Clark Gable received $357,500 from MGM for the third highest salary of 1941, and Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., was paid $334,204.

Bette Davis, Wallis, Zanuck Over $250,000

Other high film industry salaries were:

Bette Davis, who received $271,083 from Warner Bros.

Darryl F. Zanuck, who received $260,000 from 20th Century-Fox.

Hal B. Wallis, production head, Warner Bros., $260,000.

Charles Boyer, $220,833, from Universal.

Ginger Rogers, $215,000, from 20th Century-Fox.

Deanna Durbin, $203,166, from Universal. Miss Durbin also received $20,530 from Decca Records.

Remuneration paid to Bing Crosby, who received $150,000 in 1940 from Universal was not shown in film company reports this year, but Decca Records reported he got $100,640 from that firm.

William Seiter, director, Universal, $183,250.

George Stevens, director, Columbia, $174,359.

Harry Cohn, president, Columbia, $145,600.

Irene Dunn, Columbia, $135,000.

David Bernstein, Loew's, $121,979.

Sam Katz, MGM, $121,979.

Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman and general manager, Eastman Kodak Company, $118,221.

David Sarnoff, president, Radio Corporation of America, $100,900.

J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel, Loew's, Inc., $100,308.

Thomas J. Hargrace, president, Eastman Kodak, $87,134.

Albert S. Sulzer, vice-president, Eastman Kodak, $87,072 .

Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman, Radio Corporation of America, $60,920.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman, Universal, $56,042.

Jimmy Dorsey, $45,591, from Decca records.

Nathan J. Blumberg, president, Universal, $56,042.

Otto S. Schairer, vice-president, Radio Corporation of America, $37,026.

Andrew Sisters, $34,235, from Decca records.

Charles D. Prutzman, vice-president, general counsel, Universal, $30,321.

William A. Scully, general sales manager, Universal, $30,321.

Fitzgibbons on Advisory Unit

J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of the large Famous Players Canadian circuit, and a leader in exhibition in the Dominion for many years, is now a Government official. He was designated last week chairman of the Motion Picture Advisory Council of the Canadian Wartime Prices and Trade Board. The Canadian Government has given permanent status to the Council, so that it may handle film trade problems.

Secretary of the Council is Henry Falk, representing independent exhibitors.

A critique of Government sponsored films, made by and through the country's National Film Board, was delivered to the House of Commons, Ottawa, last week, and tabled. The criticism came from John Grierson, board head, who held the films made thus far were technically good, but did not serve the purposes to which Government film activities should be directed. It was part of his report, which has been tabled.

Mr. Grierson's resume recommended a board to continually review the Film Board's policy. This recommendation has been acted upon. Mr. Grierson also advocated temporary employment of writers and producers, for fees, in lieu of a permanent staff.

AMPA Members Elect Lou Pollock President

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at New York last week elected Louis Pollock president, at their annual meeting in the Hotel Edison. Other officers elected were David E. Weshner, vice president; David A. O'Malley, treasurer; Blanche Livingston, secretary; and Paul Lazarus, Arthur A. Schmidt, Fred Lynch and Manny Reiner, directors. A. M. Botsford fills a vacancy in the Board of Trustees.

The organization presented Vicent Trotta, retiring president, with a desk set. Mr. Trotta urged the new administration to consider repetition of the Quigley Showmanship Awards, and the short subjects luncheons instituted this year.

Warners Plan Scout Film

Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood has announced arrangements with James Street, novelist, for the writing of a history of the Boy Scouts of America. The project contemplates serialization in a national magazine and eventual production as a screenplay by Jesse Lasky.

South American Star on Coast

Mapy Cortes, South American film star who will play opposite Victor Mature in "Sweet and Hot," the RKO musical which Tim Whelan will produce and direct, arrived in Los Angeles from Mexico City on Monday, and reported for work at the studio the following day.

Warner Bros. Net for 26 Weeks $3,802,055

Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., and subsidiary companies report for the twenty-six weeks ended February 28, 1942 a net operating profit of $3,802,055, after deducting all charges including amortization and depreciation, normal Federal income taxes and provision for possible Federal excess profits taxes. This compares with a net operating profit of $2,782,544 reported for the corresponding period the previous year.

During the twenty-six week period ended February 28, 1942 there was an additional provision for contingencies in the amount of $525,000 in respect of the net assets of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories. As a result of war conditions the accounts of subsidiaries operating in enemy or enemy occupied territories are no longer consolidated. Consequently the investments in and advances to such subsidiaries amounting to $268,432 have been charged against reserve for contingencies.

The net profit from operations for the twenty-six weeks ended February 28, 1942 before charges for amortization and depreciation of properties and Federal income and excess profits taxes was $9,243,457.

The gross income, after eliminating intercompany transactions, for the twenty-six weeks ended February 28, 1942, was $58,547,614. The gross income for the twenty-six weeks ended March 1, 1941 was $51,009,860.

Cash in the United States as at February 28, 1942 amounted to $10,202,288 as compared with $7,431,248 at August 30, 1941.

For 13 weeks ended November 29, 1941, company reported net profit of $2,079,601, equal to 53 cents a share on common, comparing with $1,276,316 or 31 cents a common share for the 13 weeks ended November 30, 1940.

Loew's Net Profit At $5,292,541

Loew's Inc. and subsidiaries in report for 28 weeks ended March 12, 1942, show a net profit of $5,292,541 after depreciation, federal taxes, subsidiary preferred dividends and reserve of $2,600,000 for contingencies. This amount is equal after dividend requirements on $6.50 preferred stock, to $2.91 a share on 1,665,713 shares of common stock. It compares with a net profit for 28 weeks ended March 13, 1941, of $5,141,135 after $900,000 contingent reserve, equal to $2.80 a common share.

Federal taxes for the 28-week period totaled $2,849,830 against $1,623,516 in the same period a year earlier.

The above earnings are subject to reserve on account of such foreign funds as may be restricted to year-end audit.

Court Denies Motion for Anti-trust Particulars

Federal Judge William J. Campbell in Chicago last week denied motions for a bill of particulars on sections of the complaint of the Thomas Murray $1,000,000 anti-trust suit which charged violations of the law as to damages incurred by the Thalia Theatre, to Loew's, Warners, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, RKO, Columbia and Universal.

Judge Campbell also denied Warners' motion to quash service and efforts to strike out parts of the complaint concerning the prior release system in Chicago and the consent decree of 1932 which ended in anti-trust prosecution of Balaban & Katz and the distributors.

RUSSIA BOLSTERS ITS ARMIES WITH U. S. FILM EQUIPMENT

Purchasing Commission Head Says Only Limit Is What U. S. Can Supply

"There is no limit to the amount of motion picture equipment and material which Russia will buy in the United States," it was said this week by Gregor Irsky, chief engineer of motion pictures in the USSR and head of the official film commission which has been in the United States since last August, purchasing "much-needed" film materials. Mr. Irsky is established at the offices of Amtorg Trading Corporation, the American buying and selling agency for the Soviet Union, in New York, since his recent return from Hollywood.

Russia "needs an enormous amount of American motion picture equipment chiefly for use in the Army, Navy, and Air Force," he said, adding that the only limit would be "what American industry can supply after U. S. needs are taken care of."

"We want to buy all kinds of equipment for military purposes and for our theatres. Our aim is to send a complete movie unit into every Army regiment," he said. Already a large number of regiments are fully equipped with their own cameramen and materials, he reported.

Asked whether or not the purchases of his commission were to be in cash or on lend-lease arrangement, Mr. Irsky replied, "Since last summer, the commission has bought for cash between $500,000 and $600,000 worth of camera and projection equipment, a large part of which was shipped and has been received in Russia. I cannot tell now, however, what payment arrangements will be made for the balance of the materials we want to buy."

Priorities Hinder Deliveries

He pointed out that "priorities on film equipment and on vital materials needed for U. S. war production, as well as uncertain delivery" were the two determining factors affecting placement of orders for more goods to Russia's motion picture studios and Army film units.

"I am not so satisfied with my mission here," the Russian film chief said. "We expected to order more than we have. Although we have had very good relations with American firms, speaking objectively, they cannot meet our demands because of prior commitments. However, we need the materials now, while we are at war," he said, and indicated that if a supply comcompany could not promise delivery within "a reasonable time," the order was placed elsewhere.

Specific requirements of the Soviet film industry, for which Mr. Irsky said he had "definite instructions" on purchases are for cameras for war newsreels; special 16 mm. projectors for the Army; regular projection machines for theatres; studio cameras; raw films; chemicals for development; projectors for color pictures; special lenses, lamps and recording equipment, both stationary and portable. These are already purchased, on order or in the process of negotiation, he asserted.

SEEK PROJECTORS FOR AUSTRALIA

Portable 35 mm projectors, preferably with generators, are sought by the British War Relief Society's Anzac Division. They will be paid for out of a fund specially allocated for such machines, which are to be sent to Australia to help entertain troops. Communications should be addressed to Albert Deane, Room 1001, Paramount Building, New York City.

No indication of what these orders amounted to, either in cash on on the lend-lease plan, was given by Mr. Irsky. He also refused to specify exact amounts of each order, declaring that he did not want to divulge information which he thought Washington officials of the lend-lease administration did not want published.

Mr. Irsky did say, however, "we must know first, how much American firms can give us on orders before we complete negotiations and arrange for payment."

Deals on With Equipment Firms

Among the U. S. companies with which the Russian film commission is negotiating are the following: DeVry Corporation, Chicago, for about 100 16 mm. projectors; Mitchell Camera Company, from which firm the commission ordered 25 cameras but expects to get only 15; Bell & Howell, supplying Russia with newsreel cameras, uncertain quantity, for use in the Army; Bausch & Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, special lenses; special lamps from Mole-Richardson; stationary and portable RCA recording equipment; single-system cameras from Akeley Company, to take pictures and make recordings simultaneously, also to be used for military purposes.

In addition to the American motion pictures which the commission bought for Russian distribution last year, including three 20th Century-Fox films, "Under Your Spell," "Three Musketeers," and "In Old Chicago," Mr. Irsky reported that he was negotiating for the purchase of "Manhunt," "Yank in the R.A.F.," "Night Train," "Four Songs" and "Man I Married," all Fox pictures. These films have been sent to Russia, he said, with his recommendations and he now is awaiting the order to go ahead with the purchase. Another film under consideration is Goldwyn's "The Little Foxes," an RKO release.

The deal with United Artists on "The Great Dictator," for which negotiations have been under way six months, according to the Russian film engineer, has not yet been completed. "We want very much to show this picture in our country," he said, "but we are not prepared to pay the price United Artists is asking." He added, however, "I believe we will eventually buy the Chaplin film," intimating that during the six months UA "came down three times" in its asking price.

400,000 Feet Of War Films

Mr. Irsky emphasized the need for his country's purchase of American film equipment in large quantities, by pointing out that during the war against Germany, Russian cameramen had taken 400,000 feet of motion pictures at the front and 100 newsreels had been released. He reported that 150 studio cameramen were in the front lines, fighting and filming war pictures. In addition, he said, Russian studios have turned out since June 22d, 1941, 150 shorts and 15 features on war subjects for the training of the Army and civilians. A number of plants, studios and laboratories were evacuated from danger zones and reestablished, in new localities inland, within two or three months after the Nazis invaded Russia.

Soviet productions currently in work, he said, include "Ivan the Terrible," "The Heroic Defense of Moscow," "The Brave Soldier—Schveik" and "Heroic Leningrad."

Ten years ago, according to Mr. Irsky, Russia had about 20,000 theatres with only 2 or 3 per cent equipped for sound. Today, there are close to 40,000 film houses of which 80 per cent have sound installations. The average number of prints made from each new film is from 500 to 1,000.

Mr. Irsky, who appeared at the recent convention in Los Angeles of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and reported on the technical progress of the film industry in his country, declared that he thought the SMPE sessions "inspiring." He expressed the opinion that more exchange of ideas and discussion of technical problems between motion picture engineers of all countries would be most beneficial to the rapid advance of the industry as a whole.

He said he visited a number of Hollywood studios and expressed great admiration for the technical achievements made in this country.

Discussing the annual output of Russian studios before the war, Mr. Irsky reported that Russia produced about 100 features a year; 350 shorts utilized for visual education for schools, the Army, workers and farmers; about 15 special features for children produced at a studio in Moscow which made pictures for children only. In addition to a large newsreel studio in Moscow, which turns out releases every three days, he reported, there are 25 local studios throughout the country which prepare special releases pertaining to their individual countries and which distribute their product on an average of once a week.

62 Screen Stars Tour for USO Camp Shows

USO-Camp Shows, reporting on its activities for the winter season, from November 27, 1941, until April 18th, this week announced that a total of 3,819 performances in more than 250 Army camps and naval stations had been given to servicemen audiences aggregating 2,149,388. During the period that all 24 basic shows were on the road, according to USO, 550 entertainers, in addition to managers, advance agents, stage hands and electricians were employed.

Some 30 major screen and stage personalities, under auspices of USO-Camp Shows, made 513 guest appearances before more than half a million soldiers, sailors and marines, and 32 entertainers, including screen and stage stars, were sent in overseas units on four separate trips to undisclosed off-shore bases.

USO now has 15 summer shows en route to replace the 24 winter units.

Weitman, manager of the Paramount Theatre, New York, conferred at their second meeting on the part the amusement industry will play in the 1942 campaign for funds to support the USO war program.

PRC to have 42 for year

Thirty-eight of the 42 pictures on Producers Releasing Corporation's current program have been completed, as well as two on the 1942-43 schedule, Leon Fromkess, vice-president in charge of production, said in New York City last week, prior to leaving for Hollywood, where he will reside.

Mr. Fromkess was in conferences with O. Henry Briggs, president, and Arthur Greenblatt, vice-president in charge of sales.

The production chief promised the new schedule would be delivered as set forth, a practice with PRC, he noted. "Baby Face Morgan" and "A Yank in Libya" will be released in August. These are the first two of the 1942-43 program.

For June production, the Glenda Farrell starring vehicle, "A Night for Crime" is set; for July, "The Yanks Are Coming."

Religious Film Catalog Ready

The Religious Film Association, Inc. of New York will issue within the next week a catalogue of several hundred motion pictures recommended for visual instruction among church groups.

The Association was founded in March by 16 leading Protestant church agencies to distribute suitable church films through their respective purchasing houses. Sponsored by the Harmon Foundation the new film group has opened offices at 297 Fourth Avenue, New York City.

By pooling the film resources of several religious groups the Association estimates that it is able to provide simplified and economical film service for approximately 122,000 churches. It will provide information to members regarding the value and availability of existing religious motion pictures and will promote the use of these materials for educational purposes in the church field.

The Harmon Foundation, acting on its experiences with religious motion pictures since 1925, aided the church group in establishing the Film Association as a self supporting venture. The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the International Council of Religious Education participated in the organizing work.

William L. Rogers is executive secretary of the Association. He has produced religious films in the missionary field for the Harmon Foundation. Other officers are Lovick Pierce, of the Methodist Publishing House at Dallas, chairman; George W. Card, of the Baptist Sunday School Board at Nashville, vice-chairman; and John Ribble, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Christian Education, at Philadelphia, secretary-treasurer.

FILM ARBITRATOR WOULD END ATTORNEYS' DELAYS

New York Lawyer Scores 'Excessive Disputation'; Threatens Drastic Steps

Delay, and excessive disputation and formal procedure by lawyers in motion picture arbitration hearings evoked hot criticism Tuesday from a New York arbitrator.

John C. Pemberton, New York attorney who has served for 16 years as an arbitrator on the panels of the American Arbitration Association, sharply rebuked attorneys for their lengthy argument and examination of witnesses in a clearance case before him. He warned further that unless they presented their cases with more dispatch at the next hearing he would take drastic steps to expedite procedure.

Mr. Pemberton sat for the first hearing of the complaint of the Orpheum theatre, Saugerties, N. Y., against all five consenting distributors and the Walter Reade circuit. Filed originally in the Albany tribunal the case was moved to New York on agreement by all parties.

In a statement to attorneys released by J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA after the hearing, Mr. Pemberton recalled his 16 years' experience in commercial arbitration and scored the procedure in the film hearing.

"One labor case in his experience," the arbitrator's third person comment recalled, "involved several hundred employes and many witnesses." But in that labor case and other cases in which he had served he had been impressed by the speed with which evidence had been presented through the arbitration process.

He was "somewhat disturbed over the considerable amount of repetition" during the motion picture hearing, he continued, expressing the belief that "much could be eliminated."

"Attorneys could reach an agreement on the facts so that each would confine himself to one line of questioning and not duplicate," Mr. Pemberton told the representatives of the five distributors.

"Having some pride in the record being accumulated," he continued, "the arbitrator in this case did not intend that it should be filled with repetitious testimony.

"At the next hearing," he said, he would "take steps to insure speedier action."

Previously the Appeal Board in several awards, and a number of individual arbitrators have sharply condemned attorneys for drawing out arbitration proceedings to an unnecessary length. The length and cost of transcripts to arbitration hearings has also been the object of criticism and study recently by the trade practice committee of the United Motion Picture Industry.

Appeal Chicago Zoning Award

The award of Thomas C. McConnell, Chicago arbitrator, cutting the clearance over the Wheaton theatre, Wheaton, Ill., by five weeks and moving it from the city to rural clearance zone was appealed this week by both defendant distributors and intervenors. Mr. McConnell had refused a request to reopen the award in the city's 13th case.

A notice of appeal was filed by Paramount Pictures, Inc., 20th-Fox, RKO; Balaban & Katz, as operators of the Tivoli Theatre, Downers Grove, Ill., and La Grange Theatre, LaGrange, Ill.; York Theatre, Elmhurst, Ill., and the Lombard Theatre Corporation, Lombard, Ill. All theatres mentioned were intervenors who said properties were likely to be affected by the recent decision.

Mr. McConnell ordered that only 24 hours' clearance be allowed between the playing dates of the Arcada Theatre, St. Charles, Ill., 11 miles away, and the Wheaton Theatre. In so doing he moved the accepted boundary line between Chicago's city clearance system and the country release system, several miles east.

Philadelphia

A two-part award by Robert J. Callaghan, arbitrator, granted a partial clearance victory in Philadelphia's 11th case to Abe M. Ellis for his Parkside theatre in Camden. Mr. Callaghan on Friday ordered that MGM, Paramount, RKO and Warners reduce from 21 to 14 days clearance over the Parkside for pictures which played first in Camden at the Broadway, Tower, Lyric, Victoria or Rio theatres.

The other portion of the award dismissed the demand insofar as it concerned the Savar, Stanley or Grand theatres in Camden, holding that their 21-day margin was reasonable. Costs were divided equally.

Washington

A new complaint combining clearance and specific run was filed at Washington on Friday by Henry Hiser, operator of the Hiser theatre, Bethesda. Naming all five distributors the complaint, Washington's eleventh and the first since November, charges that the clearance granted to the Warner circuit's Avalon, Uptown and Calvert theatres in Washington and to the Apex theatre, Washington and the Silver theatre, Silver Springs, Md., is unreasonable. The Section X portion of the demand asked that the arbitrator adjudge that the distributors had refused to grant the run requested by the Hiser because of the preferred circuit buying position of the other theatres.

Chicago

A new complaint, Chicago's 18th, has been filed by the Gary Theatre Corporation, owners and operators of the Palace Theatre, Gary, Ind., against the consenting companies. It states that the waiting time or clearance between the Tivoli, Lido and Lake theatres, Michigan City, Indiana; the Premire and Lake theatres, Valparaiso, Indiana, and the Palace Theatre, Chesterton, Indiana, is unreasonable and excessive.

Having in mind the location, seating capacity and potential receipts of the plaintiff's theatre, the complainant asks that the arbitrator fix a maximum and reasonable clearance for the playing of pictures between the theatres named and the Palace Theatre, Gary, on all future contracts.

This complaint, originally filed by the Y & W Management Corporation, was withdrawn last week by Attorney Sol Malkin because of improper filing. Mr. Malkin contends that this is a "borderline" case, involving Chicago zoning as did the Wheaton Theatre case. Gary theatres are controlled by the Chicago system of clearance and release, while the theatres in nearby towns are under the so-called "country system" of release giving them an automatic advantage in playing time.

The Oriental Theatre case at Chicago has been postponed again, this time until June 16th at the request of Perry M. Chadwick, counsel for the theatre, and Arthur Goldberg, representing Balaban & Katz and Paramount. Efforts continue by both sides to settle the case outside of arbitration.

St. Louis

Evidence in the clearance complaint of Adolph Rosecan, owner of the Princess, South St. Louis subsequent run house, against Warners, RKO, Fox, Paramount, was completed last week. Oral arguments will be heard after the transcript is completed.

Fred Wehrenberg, co-owner of the Wehrenberg-Kaimann circuit, which intervened in behalf of its Cinderella, was the last witness. He testified it was impossible for subsequent runs to book " on time, as it is difficult to match pictures." Mr. Whrenberg, who is also president of the MPTOA in the St. Louis area, said the St. Louis Amusement Company, which plays ahead of him, delays the pictures before they reach the Cinderella, resulting in a subsequent delay to Mr. Rosecan.

Detroit

A small town Michigan exhibitor won a clearance victory in Detroit's ninth case Monday when Joseph A. Vance, Jr., arbitrator, reduced the clearance margin held by the Garden theatre, Frankfort, Mich., over Don Gregory's Crystal Theatre in Beulah, Mich. Ashman Brothers operate the Garden, and all five distributors were involved.

Mr. Vance found the present 21-day margin in favor of the Garden over the Crystal unreasonable and reduced it to seven days, with exceptions for price differentials. The one-week clearance, he ruled, shall apply only when both theatres charge adults the same admission. It shall increase to 10 days when the Crystal price is five cents less and to 14 days when there is a difference of 10 cents. Costs were divided.

Salt Lake City

Salt Lake City received its second arbitration case, and the first complaint since March, 1941, on May 27th when J. N. Bills, operator of the Bountiful theatre in Bountiful, Utah, asked that all five distributors be ordered to reduce the 60-day margin held by Salt Lake City first run houses. Mr. Bills asks a maximum clearance of one week by Salt Lake over his theatre, 11 miles away, asserting that the situations were substantially non-competitive.

He named the Utah, Centre, Capitol, Victory, Studio and Paramount theatres in Salt Lake City. Other theatres cited as interested parties included the Burke theatres in Midvale and Sandy, Utah; the Southeast in Salt Lake, and theatres in Murray, Holladay and Sugarhouse, Utah.

Fellows Joins RKO

Robert Fellows, formerly a producer at Warner Brothers has joined RKO. His first production will be "Bombardier." Mr. Fellows left last week for Washington to confer with army officials and John Twist, script writers.

Montgomery Resigns

Robert Montgomery resigned this week from the U. S. O. Camp Shows, Inc., publicity section. He will join the Twentieth Century-Fox publicity department June 8th.

IN THE COURTS

FCC Contentions 'Reviewable', Court Holds

Brushing aside contentions of the Federal Communications Commission that its network regulations had not as yet adversely affected the networks to such extent as to give them standing in the courts, the U. S. Supreme Court in Washington, on Monday held them reviewable and sent them back to the Federal District Court for consideration.

The court's action—a five-to-three decision, with Associate Justices Frankfurter, Reed and Douglas dissenting from the majority—and Associate Justice Black taking no part in the case—sent back to the District Court for decision on their merits the suits brought by Columbia and NBC to enjoin the FCC from enforcing its regulations.

Two opinions were delivered by Chief Justice Stone, that in the NBC case being brief and based on the Columbia opinion, which went into the matter exhaustively.

Court Sees Possible Loss to Companies

Outlining the contentions of Columbia that the regulations immediately had the effect of deterring affiliates from renewing their contracts and of making other stations reluctant to join the network, even in the face of assurances from the Commission that no station would be penalized if a final court decision held the rules valid, the Chief Justice explained why the court majority believed that review of the regulations should not wait upon their enforcement.

"Accepting the allegations of the complaint as true, as for present purposes we must," he said, "it is evident that application by the Commission of its regulations in accordance with their terms would disrupt appellant's broadcasting system and seriously disorganize its business. As the bill alleges, station licenses have been renewable by the Commission annually, whereas appellant's contracts are for five year periods and many of them will survive the expiration of the existing licenses to the affiliated stations. Under Regulations 3.101, 3.102, 3.103 and 3.104, each affiliate must repudiate his contract or be denied the renewal of his license. In either case this would deprive appellant of the station's participation in its network, for which its contracts call.

"The ultimate test of reviewability," the Chief Justice concluded, "is not to be found in an overrefined technique, but in the need of the review to protect from the irreparable injury threatened in the exceptional case by administrative rulings which attach legal consequences to action taken in advance of other hearings and adjudications that may follow, the results of which the regulations purport to control."

In his dissent, Justice Frankfurter held that the appeal had been brought prematurely, before the consequences which the networks feared had occurred, and argued that subsequent orders of the commission had set up a method whereby a licensee could contest their regulations without fear of losing his license.

Paley Hits FCC As Arbitrary

William S. Paley, Columbia Broadcasting president, in New York, Monday declared that the Supreme Court's decision holding the FCC "reviewable" "puts an end to the technical and procedural objections raised by the commission and which have, until now, blocked any judicial review of the basic issues raised by the FCC network rules and the widespread evils which would result therefrom.

"We intend to present a full case on the merits to the Federal Court in New York and to show that the network rules promulgated by the commission are arbitrary and capricious and will be destructive of all that is best in the American system of network broadcasting. We believe that network broadcasting has performed, and is performing, a worthwhile and indispensible service to the public and that Congress never intended to grant to the FCC the power to disrupt this service, he said.

Paramount Dropped From "Lynton" Suit

Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Sheintag in New York last Friday ruled that Paramount Pictures had been improperly joined as a defendant in the suit of Guthrie McClintic against Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes. Justice Sheintag allowed the company to retire from the action and dismissed the counterclaims against it.

The case, currently pending in New York Supreme Court, arose from the plagiarism suit brought by playwright Sheldon and Miss Barnes against MGM, charging that the film "Letty Lynton" was plagiarized from their play "Dishonored Lady," in which Katharine Cornell starred some years ago. The authors won a judgment of $135,000. Mr. McClintic, producer, and husband of Miss Cornell, claimed half of that sum as producer of the play on Broadway. The authors contended that Paramount had been a party to the production of the play in Great Britain without their consent.

John Barrymore Dies at 60

John Blythe Barrymore died last Friday night, May 29th, after an illness of 10 days, at the Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital. He was 60 years old. At his bedside was his brother, Lionel. The actor's will, filed Tuesday, indicated an estate valued at about $10,000. Beneficiaries are his three children.

Born in Philadelphia on February 15, 1882, the son of the late Maurice and Georgianna (Drew) Barrymore and the nephew of the late John Drew, actors whose prominence was celebrated in the latter days of the 19th Century, John, with his brother Lionel and his sister, Ethel, dominated the American theatre for more than two decades. His roles in "Hamlet" and "Richard III" won him praise from critics on two continents as the greatest living Shakespearian actor.

Following a brief excursion in the arts which led him for a time into the newspaper cartoon field, Mr. Barrymore made his stage debut in Chicago in October, 1903, in a play called "Magda." His first New York appearance was on December 28, 1903, at the Savoy Theatre, in "Glad of It." A comedy role in Winchell Smith's "The Fortune Hunter," at the Gaiety, in 1909, established him as a matinee idol.

He appeared as Hamlet at the Sam H. Harris Theatre in November, 1922 and during 1923-24 he toured in the same play and a year later, stormed London in the role of the Melancholy Dane.

The first phase of his motion picture career won him star parts in "The Sea Beast," "Beau Brummel," "Don Juan," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Sherlock Homes," "Moby Dick" and "Rasputin." He also appeared in film versions of the plays "Grand Hotel," "A Bill of Divorcement," "Topaz," "Reunion in Vienna," "Dinner at Eight," "Counsellor at Law" and "Twentieth Century."

His last stage appearance was in "My Dear Children," which opened at the Belasco Theatre, New York, in January, 1940, after a highly-publicized Chicago run. Soon after it closed in May of that year, Darryl F. Zanuck, head of 20th Century-Fox studio, signed Mr. Barrymore to star in "The Great Profile." Other films in which he appeared during the second phase of his motion picture career, were "The Invisible Woman," for Universal, and "World Premiere," for Paramount. His last film appearance was in "Playmates," with Lupe Velez and Kay Kyser for RKO.

For the past year, Mr. Barrymore appeared on the Rudy Vallee radio program, broadcast over National Broadcasting System on Thursday nights.

A requiem mass was held in the chapel of Calvary Cemetery, Hollywood, on Tuesday morning, with family and friends in attendance.

Edward F. Hartford, Stage Manager, Dies

Edward Francis Hartford, actor, theatre manager and in the early days of motion pictures, inventor of several improvements in the handling of film, died May 22nd in Bellevue Hospital, New York, after an illness of two months. He was 53 years old.

At the start of his theatrical career, Mr. Hartford toured the Orient as manager of a stock company. Later, he was stage manager for the Theatre Guild's "The Guardsman," and for the original production of "Porgy," which he took to London in 1929. He also had been associated with the early careers of screen stars Claudette Colbert, Margaret Sullavan and Rosalind Russell.

Surviving are his widow, Mary Cary Hartford, who is a sister of Lucian Cary, the writer, and his mother, Mrs. Maud Hartford, of Central Chebogue, Nova Scotia.

Theatre Wing Wants 27,000 for War Work

Concentrating on a program which aims to marshal for war production "a whole new army of film and amusement field workers," the American Theatre Wing War Service, Inc., has formed a War Production Training Committee. Antoinette Perry, stage director and chairman of the board of directors of the Wing, and Edward Raquello, actor, who is chairman of the New York branch of the new service, said in New York last week that the new committee was not an employment scheme" but one that the Government considered "an intelligent approach to conversion in war production."

Actors Can Learn War Work Quickly

Objective of the project, said Miss Perry at headquarter offices of the Wing, is to assist members of the theatrical profession in putting their services at the disposal of the war production program. Miss Perry, Mr. Raquello and other directors of the Wing believe that actors, actresses, directors, stage managers, stagehands, technicians and others employed in the entertainment field, because of their wide diversity of education and training, might be adapted at short notice to the war program with the aid of occupational experts in Federal bureaus.

A comprehensive questionnaire, prepared by Mr. Raquello, with the assistance of labor experts, was being mailed to 27,000 people in the entertainment field this week. Nineteen theatrical unions, including the Screen Actors Guild, Local 702 of Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, Local 306 of Motion Picture Machine Operators and Local 52 of Motion Picture Studio Mechanics, have endorsed the program and are supporting the project.

Information to be gleaned from the questionnaires, and which will be used to classify theatre workers according to their adaptability to industry, includes queries on professional experience; experience other than theatrical; education; skills or aptitudes; present training; hobbies and leisure time pursuits; selective service classification; employment; marital status; physical condition; citizenship and age group.

Last Monday, at midnight, a rally of theatre workers was held at the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre in New York to launch the enrollment drive of persons whose theatrical background and experience equips them for some department of war industry work.

Stage Canteen and Other Activities Continuing

Meanwhile, Miss Perry pointed out, the Wing is continuing its efforts in other war-activity directions.

"Stage Door Canteen," located at the Forty-Fourth Street Theatre, daily plays host to more than 2,000 servicemen from five to midnight. Since the canteen opened March 2nd, more than 150,000 men in the armed forces of the U. S. and United Nations have received refreshments and entertainment, and have danced with the 1,100 volunteer hostesses—actresses, office workers and other young women representing all branches of the entertainment world in New York, including girls from the home offices of MGM, Warner Bros., 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Loew's, Inc., Paramount, Universal and the Goldwyn and Selznick offices.

The Work Room, another phase of war-time service of the American Theatre Wing, directed by Helen Carson, to date has sent to England 175,000 children's dresses and other garments, and has distributed more than 20,000 garments to the Army and Navy relief societies, since the U. S. entered the war. The Work Room also has supplied 1,000 felt slippers to the American base hospital in London and 200 slippers to the Army hospital in Iceland. Cotton, felt, wool, notions, buttons, thread and other materials necessary for this department's output are donated and the work is done by women from different branches of the theatre world who volunteer their services.

Miss Perry reported that the total expenditures for all phases of the organization's activity, for a period of three and one-half months, was $11,246. This includes expenses for maintaining a blood donor's bank, a speakers' bureau, in addition to the Stage Door Canteen, and the Work Room. "Everything is donated," Miss Perry declared, "even the office space."

Two years ago, she said, the Wing, when originally organized by playwright Rachel Crothers and affiliated with Allied War Relief, raised $100,000, from voluntary contributions from theatrical people. The first contribution, she said, was $500, donated by the Theatrical Wardrobe Attendants Union, which subsequently raised an additional $538.50, long before "some of our high-salaried actors and actresses" sent in their donations.

One of the more interesting and least known of the Wing's services is the Speakers' Bureau, under the direction of Vera Allen, who also is a member of the board. A roster of some 300 volunteers, stage and radio actors and actresses, radio announcers and others, comprises this department.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

ABFD

PROUD VALLEY, THE: Paul Robeson, Edward Chapman—Not a bad picture if one could understand the Welsh dialect. Some wonderful singing by Robeson and the Welsh choir but not half enough of the latter to suit the audience.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

Astor Pictures

SKY DEVILS: Spencer Tracy, William Boyd—An old picture which was exceptionally well laughed at for three good days. Story is about the first World War. There is nothing tragic or dramatic. Pure slapstick for many good laughs. My print was very poor. If you can obtain a good print, you can expect some good laughter and business.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

Columbia

BLONDIE'S BLESSED EVENT: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake—Up to standard of Blondie series. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CANAL ZONE: Chester Morris, John Hubbard—Fair aviation picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GIRLS UNDER 21: Bruce Cabot, Rochelle Hudson —This melodrama is an entertaining feature of the slum "Dead End" girls type.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG LADY: Penny Singleton, Glenn Ford, Bill Wills and his Texas Playboys—Showed this one night and wished that I had it to play for another night. I had them standing everywhere to see this picture. Those who live in the sticks even left their homes just for one night to some and see and hear Bob Wills. Swell picture. Player May 12.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

HELLO ANNAPOLIS: Jean Parker, Tom Brown Good Naval Academy Picture. Well acted.—Leon C. Goldus, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LADY IS WILLING, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Fred MacMurray—A nice program picture which pleased but did not send a Giveaway Night audience out of theatre in ecstasies. We were a little disappointed in it. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 13-14.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LAWLESS PLAINSMEN: John King, Arline Judge—Enough rough stuff in this one to satisfy action fans. Ran a Three Stooges comedy with this and the combination gave everyone more than their money's worth. Business good. If you like your house quiet and orderly, forget it and try this one with the Stooges. It will change the air for you profitably.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

ROARING FRONTIERS: Bill Elliott, Tex Ritter—This is the first Western we have played starring Eliott and Ritter together. Business a little better than average and they seem to like those two teamed together. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 8-9. —Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. General patronage.

SON OF DAVY CROCKETT: Bill Elliott—Elliott is the nearest and best reminder of Bill Hart. Fortunately, he neither sings or yodels. Running time, 60 minutes. Played May 15-16.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TEXAS: William Holden, Glenn Ford—This picture was liked by everyone that saw it and I can say I had above average on this picture. Nothing different from any other western but William and Glenn were very outstanding in it. Played May 8-9.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

TWO YANKS IN TRINIDAD: Pat O'Brien, Brian Donlevy—Fair action show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES ON GROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—MGM comes through with a picture which is entertaining. Two things wrong with this picture. It gets off to a slow start and is too long, could have been cut 20 minutes, and still have been just as good. Mickey and Judy shares the honors, and they both are really GREAT. It's a grand show and should do extra business, turning them away completely satisfied and leaving Mickey and Judy in top position. Played May 5-7.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Bad business. Good show but we just didn't do a thing on it. People satisfied but guess there wasn't enough to make them talk it up.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Weaver—Good picture and good business. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CHOCOLATE SOLDIER, THE: Nelson Eddy, Rise Stevens—This one was well made and no doubt went over better in the cities and larger localities. Running time, 102 minutes. Played May 13-14.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

CHOCOLATE SOLDIER, THE: Nelson Eddy, Rise Stevens—Might be O.K. in some towns, but not here. Singing was good but story did not please.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Maintains series average.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Another of the Hardy series which failed to bring in as much as the last one. The Hardy series is slipping everytime I show one. Although this is a good entertaining picture, it was liked by everyone that saw it. Played May 6-7.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR SCANDAL: Walter Pidgeon, Rosalind Russell—We enjoyed this one. Business up 40 per cent second night but the first night was one big nightmare.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR SCANDAL: Walter Pidgeon, Rosalind Russell—Good picture and good business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played May 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DESIGN FOR SCANDAL: Walter Pidgeon, Rosalind Russell—This was an entertaining comedy-drama with no drawing power in our theatre. Just why Rosalind Russell does not draw better than average we don't know. We think she's fine. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 25-26.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE GOES HOME: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Pine Bluff, Ark., is a defense town. I ran this picture May 7-9, doubled with "Arizona." During the entire run of trailer or picture, I did not hear one word of protest or unfavorable comment on Lew Ayres. The people here seemed to have forgotten the publicity or were broadminded enough to overlook it. I believe where no mention is made about Lew Ayres being a conscientious objector, most towns can safely play Ayres' pictures. My three day run was average business.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S VICTORY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—No business. Very good feature, possibly the best in the series. My patrons won't come to any show that even verges on war so thought perhaps they might come to this one due to Ayres' publicity; but no dice. I'm glad I ran it anyway and am sorry that conditions are such that it will undoubtedly be the last of this good series.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey—The object of this picture seemed somewhat obscure. For a time it seemed the hero, who was a stuffed shirt in the beginning, would become human but good old virtue eventually prevailed. The work of Robert Young was outstanding. Business not so good. Running time, 117 minutes. Played May 10-11.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey—Our audience seemed divided on this picture. Some thought it was too draggy. others thought it was very good. Definitely a woman's picture. Runnning time, 109 minutes. Played May 22-23.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—Also showed this one night only and it brought people in that I didn't even know lived in my town. This Joe Smith is a guy we all must remember, because you can't tell but what you might have to be a Joe Smith some day. Played May 19.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

NAZI AGENT: Conrad Veidt, Ann Ayars—Anti-Nazi spy picture. Interesting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE: Johnny Weissmuller-Maureen O'Sullivan—Good picture which drew better than average business, but did not reach the gross of "Tarzan Finds a Son." Played May 12-14.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

THIS TIME FOR KEEPS: Ann Rutherford, Robert Sterline—A fair little picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

YANK ON THE BURMA ROAD, A: Laraine Day, Barry Nelson—Our patrons enjoyed this very much. All comments favorable. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 22-23.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

Monogram

KLONDIKE FURY: Edmund Lowe, Lucile Fairbanks—Well made and pleased.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROAD TO HAPPINESS: John Boles, Mona Barrie —Fair picture. Played on best playing time, but am sorry I did. Had some walkouts. Some people complained that there wasn't anything interesting to stay and see.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

FLEET'S IN, THE: Dorothy Lamour, William Holden—Whatever may be said about the picture the attendance definitely proved that this is the type of entertainment our customers want. It gave us the best receipts of any picture we have shown this year, including "How Green Was My Valley." We thought it just a good hokum picture but our patrons thought it was great and got a big laugh out of it. It's the kind we want. The more comedy the better nowadays. Played May 17-19.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

GLAMOUR BOY: Susanna Foster, Jackie Cooper —This picture did not do much business. Played May 5-7.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—This picture seems to have a pretty good draw, probably due to the radio program. Business just above average for midweek program. Played May 19-21.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—The second of the Aldrich series played here. The public seems to like them and business on both was excellent. A far better drawing card than the Hardy family. I recommend any small town to try this picture. This Jimmy Lydon is really good.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

LADY HAS PLANS, THE: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland—A fairly good picture that did below normal business. It seemed to me that the actors lacked interest in their work and viewed the picture much as I did—just something to get by with. Played May 10-12.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE: Bob Hope, Vera Zorina, Victor Moore—Good picture, beautiful color, but did not come up to expectations. Played May 9-11.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE: Bob Hope, Vera Zorina, Victor Moore—Was well received and we had a fair turnout. Running time, 98 minutes. Played May 17.—Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. General patronage.

NIGHT OF JANUARY 16: Robert Preston, Ellen Drew—Good enough program picture and those you are able to get in will be well satisfied.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: William Holden, Ellen Drew—This odd picture failed to draw average business. Personally, I liked it, but I had some walkouts. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS, THE: John Wayne, Betty Fields—Too long and too dragged out to be interesting but the acting was excellent and the scenery beautiful. However, it was a natural for a small town and the title drew excellent business.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—An unusual and entertaining picture that our customers did not care for. It's a bit confusing and the audience didn't seem to understand it. Comments were adverse and business considerably under average. We still say it is good. Played May 8-9.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—I played this on best playing time, but would not advise anyone else to do so. Didn't seem to please my patrons.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

CODE OF THE OUTLAW: Tom Tyler, Bob Steele —Mediocre. Played May 15-16.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

COWBOY SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Autry's features are falling down very badly for me at the box office. This production is very short and of very little entertainment value. Another one of the Autry's that I could not recommend. No popular songs, and we miss Mary Lee in these Autry features. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 23.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

COWBOY SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Definitely not up to Autry's standard. We find Autry falling off and Roy Rogers coming up fast in our situation. Running time, 66 minutes. Played May 15-16.—Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. General patronage.

GIRL FROM ALASKA, THE: Ray Middleton, Jean Parker—Outdoor picture. Rather slow moving. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HEART OF THE RIO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Rather dull western.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HURRICANE SMITH: Ray Middleton, Jane Wyatt—This turned out to be a very good picture and we were asked to try and get some more like it, which is quite unusual. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 1.—Tip Top Theatre, Carencro, La. General patronage.

LADY FOR A NIGHT: Joan Blondell, John Wayne —Well made and entertaining.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—Rather silly. A few laughs.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TRAGEDY AT MIDNIGHT, A: Margaret Lindsay, John Howard—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

YOKEL BOY: Albert Dekker, Joan Davis—Nice little picture. Played on Friday and Saturday to business below average. Played May 8-9.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOKEL BOY: Albert Dekker, Joan Davis—Very good little picture. Joan Davis played her role to perfection. Let's have her more often.—Sammie Jackson. Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Martha O'Driscoll —This picture taken from the newspaper cartoon proved to be a good draw, and seemed to please.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

LOOK WHO'S LAUGHING: Edgar Bergen, Charlie McCarthy—This picture failed to bring them in. If they had left out the great Gildersleeve those who did see the picture might have liked it, although I liked it pretty well. Played May 6-7.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

PLAYMATES: Kay Kyser, John Barrymore—Played this Saturday midnight, Sunday and Monday, a big mistake. If it hadn't been for a few jokes and riddles it would not have been a picture. The lowest gross I have made on a picture in a long time but it could have been worse. Played May 9-11.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

THEY MET IN ARGENTINA: Maureen O'Hara, James Ellison—Action, music, comedy. A good program picture which pleased very well.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CASTLE IN THE DESERT: Sidney Toler, Arleen Whelan—Fair program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CONFIRM OR DENY: Don Ameche, Joan Bennett —Very far fetched in spots, but the public seemed to like it quite well and business was normal.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

DRESSED TO KILL: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Beth Hughes—Good program feature. Poor business.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GENTLEMAN AT HEART, A: Carole Landis, Cesar Romero—A different type of picture for Cesar Romero which was quite well liked. Our patrons like Romero, and like him best as the Cisco Kid. This was double billed with "Brooklyn Orchid" to normal business. Played May 15-16.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—This is about the best picture I've seen in a long time. It was well liked by the women, since they are the only ones that came to see it. The men who did see it liked it very well. Played May 23-25.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

MAN AT LARGE: Marjorie Weaver, George Reeves—Good program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MOON OVER HER SHOULDER: John Sutton, Lynn Bari—This was good for several real laughs. Light but entertaining. Running time, 68 minutes. Played May 15-16.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

ROXIE HART: Ginger Rogers, George Montgomery—Satire on crime wave. Did not please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

United Artists

BROOKLYN ORCHID: Marjorie Wentworth, William Bendix—Very ordinary. There is definitely a spot for these short features but they must be better than Roach has made them. Most of them to date have been poor. Played May 15-16.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

GENTLEMAN AFTER DARK, A: Miriam Hopkins, Brian Donlevy—Very good melodrama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MISTER V: Leslie Howard—Gripping and well made story of "underground" movement.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NIAGARA FALLS: Marjorie Woodworth, Tom Brown—This streamliner was doubled with "Ziegfeld Girl" to good business. This Hal Roach comedy is very good and makes a good double with a long feature such as the "Ziegfeld Girl," which as you know is probably our last big musical extravaganza for the duration.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE: Carole Lombard, Jack Benny—Entertaining and pleased all.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

BUCK PRIVATES: Abbott and Costello—Brought this old champion in for the first time here and failed miserably to do the business. I think their radio work spoils this team as they are funny on the GHOST OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Lon Chaney, Cedric Hardwicke—Did good business but the picture is nothing extra. Lon Chaney and other players in this are fine.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HELLZAPOPPIN: Olsen & Johnson, Martha Raye —A picture? Could be. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 10-11.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

KEEP 'EM FLYING: Abbott and Costelo, Dick Foran—Good. Dick Foran was excellent in this.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MAN-MADE MONSTER: Lionel Atwill, Lon Chaney, Anne Nagel—Fairly good thriller to average business.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

RIDE 'EM COWBOY: Abbott and Costello—Personally I think this is the funniest of this series and the audience certainly laughed plenty. However, my bunch does not consist of many Abbott and Costello fans so my gross was just average. It certainly has a slapstick chase finish that leaves them breathless. Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 22-23.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

SPRING PARADE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Cummings—Played this very late, my first Deanna Durbin picture. My audience considered this picture fair entertainment. Business was very poor on account of this having been played in every theatre in Saskatchewan ahead of mine. Would not recommend it on account of its age. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 16th.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

TIGHT SHOES: John Howard, Binnie Barnes, Brod Crawford—Mediocre program picture worth a midweek date.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS: Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery—Average feature which women seemed to enjoy.—William G. Clark, Alamo Theatre. Pine Bluff, Ark. General patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT: Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt—Swell picture liked by all. Bogart is plenty good and so is the rest of the cast. Played May 16-18.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT: Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt—Plenty of action for those interested in action pictures; thought it would be a natural for this spot; somehow our patrons would not go for this one, and business was very poor. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 17-18.—H. Goldson, Plaza Theatre, Chicago, Ill. General patronage.

ALWAYS IN MY HEART: Kay Frances, Walter Huston—Good family fare. Gloria is a real little actress and has a lovely voice.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS: James Cagney, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Exciting air show. Very good, and pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAPTAINS OF THE CLOUDS: James Cagney, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Although this picture was long it was liked by everyone who saw it and that was just a few, because of school doings going on. It's 113 minutes long but when you sit down to see it it seems not longer than thirty minutes. Played May 13-14.—Sam Stephano, Grove Theatre, Groveton, Tex. Small town patronage.

GAMBLING LADY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—A reissue worthy of playing again.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

KENNEL MURDER CASE: William Powell, Mary Astor—A reissue which will please.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MALE ANIMAL, THE: Henry Fonda, Olivia de Havilland—A good crowd came, laughed, and thoroughly enjoyed this very clever comedy. I was surprised as I did not know it was so good and I did not know it would prove to be a good attraction. All comments were good. Running time, 101 minutes. Played May 21.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

MALTESE FALCON, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor—Very good picture but business not up to expectations on it.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

MAN WHO CAME TO DINNER: Monty Woolley, Bette Davis—Decidedly not for small towns. Audience dissatisfied although really the picture is quite clever.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

PRIME MINISTER: John Gielgud, Diana Wynyard —Excellent picture to very bad business. Superb acting by all the cast and enough pace to keep the interest up. However, costume pictures are hard to put over now.—B. R. Johnson, Roxy Theatre, Nipawin, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural patronage.

20th-Fox Directors Increased to 14

Twentieth Century-Fox Thursday increased its directorate from 12 to 14. Permission to do so came at a special stockholders' meeting in New York Tuesday, where the number was changed from 12, to not less than three, nor more than 15.

The 12 directors, up to Wednesday, were Wendell Willkie, chairman; H. Donald Campbell, John R. Dillon, William Goetz, Daniel O. Hastings, W. C. Michel, William P. Phillips, Hermann G. Place, Steon Porter, Spyros Skouras, Sydney Towell, Darryl F. Zanuck. Mentioned earlier in the week as likely to be appointed a director Thursday, was Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

WAR SHOWMANSHIP

Theatres are certainly doing their part to "sell the war" to the public. They're also doing a swell job of selling bonds to the public. In these pages last week details were given of the efforts put forth by showmen even before the official opening of the drive to sell War Bonds and Stamps.

But the showmen aren't stopping there. Ideas which are candidates for the Quigley War Showmanship Award include such laudable efforts as organizing send-off committees for the boys who are joining the service and honoring a community's typical recruit.

Morris Rosenthal, who has a long standing reputation as a showman of ability, tells us this week that he intends to make the Loew's Majestic Theatre, which he manages, the War Stamp and Bond headquarters for Bridgeport, Conn. "The Post Office and the banks, the only other places where War Stamps and Bonds can be purchased, are closed at night, so we want to make everyone feel that the Majestic is the place to buy War Stamps and Bonds at night," he said.

Now, if every theatre felt that way, there would be as much competition for the public's War Stamp and Bond business as there is for their patronage at the show. That kind of competition will be welcomed.

"Suggestions"

We've been sampling some recent press books. One proposed "dressing a man as an Irishman and sending him through the streets." The question remains: How does the Irishman dress?

Another one is to have a "man dressed as a Jap slink around town."

That would do what?

For the Boys in Service

Back in 1917-18 it was called H.C.L.; today they call it inflation. No matter what it is called it's expensive. To meet the problem of how to balance the showman's budget, some circuits have given salary increases to their managers.

In many cases, managers whose employers have not helped them meet rising costs in this way, have nevertheless assisted their own staffs by giving them sufficient increases to maintain their standards. If business warrants it, good business judgment justifies such increases. It is a good bet, too, to keep an organization together, to keep its members happy and contented as possible in these trying times.

...and for all these kind words...

Lige Brien, a Quigley Award winner and a showman of note writes: "Noticed a few changes already in your section and believe them to be exceptionally worth while. The make up is a change for more attractiveness."

In addition Lige likes the plan of giving selling tips on the new product and wants to know if it will appear regularly. For his information and yours, it will.

Good Soldiers

Good showmen make good soldiers. Many Round Table members have joined the Army; some have risen to the Sam Browne belt and are sporting bars on their shoulders. Others have achieved success in other ways—as instructors of recruits or as technical men in the Signal Corps and in Army theatres.

Mike Weiss, long a Round Tabler and, who just before joining up was an exploiteer for 20th Century-Fox, likes the Army so well that he is considering making it a career. And the Army in turn likes Mike; he is now a Technical Corporal and works in the Personnel Administration Dept. at Fort Benning, Ga.

Personnel Administration is certainly a spot for showmen; they've had plenty of experience.

The Cost of Living

Because so large a number of its employees have entered the armed forces, the Interstate Circuit of Texas has issued a house organ devoted to news of the boys at home as well as with the services. Volume one, Number one is replete with items about the 200 Interstaters who have temporarily relinquished their jobs to take up arms. It also carries a complete list of them. Karl Hoblitzelle and Bob O'Donnell, in a front page message, urge each of the boys to keep in touch with them by correspondence.

Burke Promotes Co-Op For "Rio Rita" Date

Tying up several merchants in his vicinity, Bill Burke at the Capitol Theatre, in Sarnia, Ontario, ahead of his date on "Rio Rita" promoted them on a co-op ad page, each of which carried one of the title letters, to those assembling the title and coloring the small scene stills which were also run, guest tickets were awarded. A tieup with another merchant brought the distribution of small cards, each carrying one of the title letters in large print at top, followed by picture copy. To those presenting the set of seven to the store, tickets were given.

Teaser Campaign Sells "Cowboy" for Phillips

To sell "Ride 'em Cowboy" at the Regent Theatre, in Sudbury, Ontario, Max Phillips spotted a saddle horse at a local parking meter with teaser copy on the horse reading: "Owner gone to the Regent to see," etc. For further teaser purposes, Max stationed 3,000 lb. barrels at different spots in the business section with copy "Have a barrel of Fun."

Advance teaser ads were used a week in advance, six-sheets were posted on buildings under construction and two boys on horseback rode through the streets at peak hours. As an attention-getter, spotted at the water fountain in the theatre was a notice inviting folks to have a free drink on Abbott & Costello.

Bookstores Cooperate with Leighton on "King's Row"

Approaching the leading booksellers in Lancaster, Pa., Bert Leighton for "Kings Row" promoted window displays with copies of the book, scene stills and small cardboard cutouts of the various characters.

For further attraction, Bert got up a giant book cutout with the title painted in black on gold paint and the words "It's Dynomotional." A five week serialization was run in the local Sunday paper with a single column ad inserted at the end of each installment. While the week before opening a 15-minute radio program was landed, over which best sellers are reviewed, and appropriate credit given to the picture.

Brunson's Atmospheric Front

To inject a little of the old South in his front for "Vanishing Virginian" at the Rialto, in Phoenix, Ariz., "Carolina" Brunson used white lattice work and flowers with cutout heads of Frank Morgan and the cast. Special heralds were printed for the occasion with a money back guarantee and the PTAs were contacted with announcements made in schools.

Name Old Songs Contest

Reported as being highly successful for A. J. Kalberer was the "old favorite song" contest planted in the daily paper ahead of "Birth of the Blues" at the Switow Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind. Defense stamps and theatre tickets were awarded to those who could find the hidden song titles in a cartoon picture which was printed.

What DOES a Theatre Manager Do, Anyway?

by BOB WILE

What does a theatre manager do anyway?

We were asked that question recently by a person entirely unconnected with the motion picture. The routine of the manager's day varies to a considerable extent but here's a typical 24 hours of a composite of several showmen.

We'll start with the end of the day (close to Midnight) just to justify our man for sleeping a little the next morning. Our typical manager sees that the lights are out, that the marquee reads correctly for tomorrow's show and with a policeman at his elbow takes the receipts to the night depository and drops them in.

In order to fortify himself for the strenuous day ahead, we'll let our man have a full eight hours' sleep and then we'll permit him a half hour's breakfast with his family. (It's the only meal of the day he does eat with them). So it's fully 10:30 when he arrives at the theatre. He takes a look around to see that the cleaners are doing their jobs properly, that no light is being wasted and that due care is being taken of the company's property.

Our man then goes to his office and reads his mail. There are the customary four or five letters from various home office departments, district, division and zone managers. Each makes some specific request for information about one phase or another of this particular theatre's operation or else it has a new series of instructions for handling this or that matter.

He Reads the Herald

Aside from that, mail has brought Motion Picture Herald. (Oh, yes, it's an important part of a manager's job to know what is going on in the industry.) He reads the Round Table section thoroughly and jots down a note or two regarding a new idea he has obtained from its pages.

Now it's time to go to the bank. First he opens the safe to get the bankbooks; there's the bankbook for the regular receipts, one for the War Stamps account, a deposit to be made for the social security, unemployment insurance or tax accounts.

Back from the bank and it's well after noon already. The house opens at one o'clock. He examines the cashier's box to see that she has sufficient change and that she has enough of each type of ticket required. The numbers are recorded on the proper form. Then there's a little time left, so our manager fills in some of the many forms required by the home office; checks to be made out and duly recorded; a schedule to be worked out for the next show, etc. Here comes the cashier all ready for work. It's time to open so he takes her outside. Is the doorman handling the crowd all right? Let's make another quick inspection. No carpet ripped; all lights burning; ushers at their posts?

This looks like a good show, so our man says he'll watch a few minutes of it. He doesn't get much chance, though; first, one patron asks for a refund—it seems he saw the picture before but forgot he had; someone else wants to know when he is going to show "Why Girls Leave Home"; there are three inquiries on why doesn't he stop double features and four protesting that when he showed "Gone With the Wind" last week there was only one picture.

By this time it's 2:00. Time to get the ads ready for tomorrow's papers. That takes a good hour and then another hour to write publicity stories, prepare copy for next week's program and write a letter or two asking for special exploitation material.

Meanwhile he's been interrupted a couple of times. A lady would like to know whether a scarf she lost has been found; a search reveals it in the lost and found department. Several phone calls of this nature are interspersed with a number asking for information about the show; cashier is too busy to answer. (Business is good).

Here it is 5:00. Business has slackened up a little so our man takes the opportunity to eat his dinner. He takes only a half hour so that he can stop to see a couple of merchants about tieups for next week's show and still be back before it's time to check out the cashier at 6:00. . . .

Checks Out Cashier

Well, the cashier has been checked out and another checked in. The matinee receipts have been safely stowed in the safe. A lady at the door wishes to see him. Her youngster came in at 1:00 and isn't home yet. He is sorry he cannot announce the lad's name from the stage. If madam would like to walk up and down the aisles searching for junior she may do so although it is contrary to the rules. In the next half hour there are four more cases of this kind and one request by a gentleman to see whether a Miss Smith, with whom he was supposed to have a date to see the show, has already gone in with somebody else.

At 7:00 it looks as though business was going to be very good. Too bad he let that extra usher go. The boy has another job? Well, call up the newspaper and put in another classified ad.

Eight o'clock and the house is well filled. Better check up on the ushers to see that they're filling the house to best possible advantage. A walk up and down the aisles indicates a little more instruction is necessary. Wonder if the restrooms are clean. . . . Men's room is o.k. Now he relieves the cashier a few minutes so she can check up on the ladies' room. More soap is needed.

Ten o'clock is here now and he stands in the lobby and listens to comments and greets friends as they leave. He has only a half hour for this as the cashier comes in at 10:30 for the last check-out of the day. All tickets and cash are accounted, the money is put into a sack, the safe is opened and the sack inserted.

Time to stand in the lobby for a little while longer and listen to comments. Before he knows it, there's the wind-up of the picture. Here it is midnight already. Well, the officer is here to take him to the bank. He opens the safe, takes the sack out, walks up the aisle noting that all the lights are out. . . . Hey, this is where we came in.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAUGHS

Victory Book Drive Linked to "Virginian"

Joe Nevison, manager of Warners' Bromley Theatre, Philadelphia, linked "The Vanishing Virginian" with the Victory Book Drive by the U. S. O. and the American Red Cross. A receiving center was set up in the lobby for the collection of the books. To the 10 largest contributors were given a copy of "The Vanishing Virginian," along with letters of thanks written and sent by Frank Morgan, who stars in the film. Ten pairs of of passes were awarded to the second 10 largest book contributors. In addition, Joe got up a co-operative advertising herald, tying in with the neighborhood merchants. Patrons were invited to count the number of "E's" in the herald advertisements of the merchants, awarding 25 free passes to the first 25 correct answers.

Radio Contest Featured By Arnold on "Dancing"

A radio contest offering guest tickets for the best 25-word statements on "Why I Like Norma Shearer in Comedies" was one of the highlights of the "We Were Dancing" campaign put over by H. J. Arnold, Terre Haute, Indiana. He also tied up with a leading ballroom, which used a 40x60 in the main foyer and had the band leader announce nightly that guest tickets would be awarded best couples. A large chain of drug stores featured a special sundae, carried window streamers and plugged the film on its menus. In addition, a man in white tie and top hat, with a flasher light on the production in the bosom of his shirt, covered the busy streets for several days in advance of the opening.

Paratrooper Ballyhoo Attracts on "Invaders"

A window display using a model of the sub employed by the Japs at Pearl Harbor was planted by Joe Longo in a local department store one week ahead of the opening of "The Invaders" at Loew's State, in Boston. Man using paratrooper uniform was put on busy downtown streets with copy tied into the picture.

Members of the Junior Victory Army were invited to a special Saturday morning performance of the picture and tied in with the angle of preparedness against invasion. This netted breaks for five continuous days, climaxed with art break in the Sunday papers.

"Ship Ahoy Minute Girls" Sell Bonds for Lykes

In connection with the U. S. Treasury Department's "Ship Ahoy Minute Girls," who were loaned by MGM and sent out to make personal appearances and sell Defense Bonds, Jack Lykes at Loew's Valentine, in Toledo, arranged for the gals to visit local stores and factories, later taking them to a night club for an appearance. A special booth was set up in the theatre lobby for the sale of the stamps, while a ballyhoo truck appropriately lettered toured them about the city.

Lobby Stunt Aids Krolick On "Syncopation" Date

Featuring a "Syncopation" wheel in the lobby of the Century Theatre, in Rochester proved an attractor for Art Krolick. On the face of the wheel were spotted photos of various band leaders, patrons were invited by an attractive girl on hand to pick their favorite and then take a spin at the wheel. If it stopped at their choice, guest tickets were awarded.

In addition, through the cooperation of a local music shop records and sheet music were on sale, with each purchase the customer received a set of photos free, plus a chance on the raffle wheel. Advance readers and art were started two weeks in advance and running through to opening day, and a broadcast held from the stage on opening night was sponsored by local music store.

Matlack Ties "Young America" To Recent Victory Week

With the recent mobilization of 4-H forces in connection with "Victory Week," Jack Matlack at the Craterian, in Medford, Ore., booked "Young America," the Jane Withers picture, to tie in with the local celebration and succeeded in selling the picture as the official "opening event" of the 4-H's observance of Victory Week. In addition a Victory Revue was held on the stage, including a pageant depicting the organization's main six branches of strength toward victory, including canning, cooking, clothing, livestock, poultry and gardening. This was followed by a community sing and closed the program with the audience singing "God Bless America."

Matlack used an attractive advance display in his lobby calling attention to the Week, which featured several photos of local club members and workers to stimulate interest. Also displayed were 4-H flags and placards inviting new membership.

Bovim's May Day Program

Much goodwill and extra business was garnered recently by Russ Bovim at the Loew-United Artists Theatre, in Columbus, Ohio, by putting the resources of his theatre at the disposal of the local university for the annual celebration of May Day. The college's men's glee club, chapel choir, soloists and the May queen and her court appeared on stage at a special program. Tickets were sold by the university officials, who also paid for window cards.

Fisher Lands "Flat" Contest

For five days ahead of the opening of "Tortilla Flat" at the Loew State Theatre, in Cleveland, Ed J. Fisher, publicity director landed a coloring contest, with a twenty-five dollar defense bond awarded to the person turning in the best job. Besides the contest, a large classified ad was garnered in the same paper.

Selects "Woman of the Year"

Local women's clubs selected their "Woman of the Year" as part of the campaign put over by W. C. Aiken, Harris Manos, Jeannette, Pa. Voting was stimulated through radio and newspaper publicity.

Library Features Displays For Keefe's "Bomber" Date

Concentrating on the book angle of "Bomber Command," J. C. Keefe, at Warner's Cambria, in Johnstown, Pa., promoted large displays in the public library, which featured copies of the book together with other books having to do with World War II. Made up from the pressbook mat, tinted "see" cards were distributed at the mill gates of local steel plants and for a week ahead, two exchange sheets were mounted on each side of a delivery truck which toured the city and 25-mile radius.

To whip up interest in "Hellzapoppin'," Jim distributed small teaser cards to taverns, restaurants, cigar stores and on the street, the copy on the cards reading: "You thought right. Hellzapoppin'." The marquee of the theatre was entirely fringed with pennants two weeks ahead, chain druggist featured a special sundae and working on the premise that the picture should be sold along the circus angle, Keefe planted 100 8 sheets around the city with appropriate picture mention.

"Women of the Year" Stunt Aids Brien

For "Woman of the Year" at Warner's Belmar, in Pittsburgh, Lige Brien approached a local photographer, who in exchange for credit, snapped local women and called them "Women of the Year." These pictures were then planted on a lobby easel and to those identifying themselves, guest tickets were given. Contest angle was brought in with entrants painting portraits of Katharine Hepburn, the winning portrait being displayed in a local window for a week.

Literary Week Featured on "How Green Was My Valley"

To usher in "How Green Was My Valley" at the Avon Theatre, in Stratford, Ontario, Walter Helm held a special screening and tied up with one of the leading book stores which ran a "Literary Week" and featured best sellers, especially "Valley." In addition, Helm landed special advertising in the local high school library and the picture was reviewed at length on the woman's hour radio program.

Jennings Promotes School Paper

Since one of his usherettes is editor and writes for the local high school paper, Mack Jennings at the Strand, in Atmore, Ala., reports landing a review on his forthcoming attraction each week in exchange for a couple of passes which are given to a few students, whose names are picked at random. Jennings has also been able to plant a one-sheet board on the main bulletin board of the school.

Periodical Features "Ship Ahoy"

The current issue of "Phono-Graphic," publication of RCA Victor, devotes a full page to music and scene stills from "Ship Ahoy," the M-G-M musical starring Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton and Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra. The periodical goes to 10,000 juke box operators, and provides numerous tie-up opportunities with them.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

GRAND CENTRAL MURDER (MGM): Book stores should be wide open for tieups on this one, with window displays featuring "whodunit" books with appropriate scene stills spotted. For outside attention, the doorman may be dressed to look like a conductor or train caller, delivering a spiel on the picture in railroad terminology. A member of the staff might be dressed as a red cap and carry a grip about town with copy reading: "Check your troubles. See . . . ", etc. Also suggested for lobby purposes is a timetable board, substituting arrival and departure notices with thrill, action, mystery and suspense catchlines opposite times, such as: 9:00—Killer escapes from penitentiary. This same angle might be applied for herald throwaways, while certificates might be printed entitling holders to membership in the "Whodunit Club".

IN OLD CALIFORNIA (Republic): An opportunity is offered on a pre-sold exploitation stunt for this picture since a tieup has already been made with Camille, Inc., manufacturers of cosmetics, who will sponsor a contest to find the girl with the loveliest eyes. The winner will be awarded with an opportunity to appear in a forthcoming picture, runners-up receiving additional prizes. The drugstores and five-and-dimes handling the Camille products have already been advised of the tieup and are eager to cooperate. For student attention, the Supervisor of Art in the public schools might go for a contest featuring drawings of subjects pertaining to California or the student's own conception of the Gold Rush era. Debates on the topic, "Resolved: That the Forty-niners were mainly responsible for building up California", could be arranged between teams in different classes or schools.

TAKE A LETTER, DARLING (Paramount): The career girl angle predominates in the Paramount campaign; it will be recalled that in the picture Rosalind Russell is a successful business woman and MacMurray is her secretary, thus reversing the usual roles. This offers opportunity for a number of different promotions, such as an ad entirely in shorthand, a contest for typewriter doodles, and interviews by local newspapermen with prominent career women who will appear at a special showing of the picture. The press book suggests an excellent four-day newspaper contest which can be run in programs if newspaper cooperation cannot be enlisted. The comedy feature of the picture can be exploited by using a couple of young men as a ballyhoo with signs reading: "Rosalind Russell unfair to male secretaries in ' . . . ' ". A lobby display board in the form of a memo pad would be appropriate. Another idea to sell the comedy is a "glamour" contest for male secretaries.

Hart Ties "Kings Row" To Victory Book Drive

At the Glove, in Gloversville, Lou Hart ahead of "Kings Row" tied in with the local Victory Book campaign and featured a large bin of books in front of his picture display, and a one-sheet urging patrons to bring their books into the lobby and deposit them in the bin. Lou also promoted the library for a complete board on which he laid out an attractive display that remained there a week ahead of the picture's opening. Since the library had a long waiting list for the book, Hart donated a copy which was good for publicity breaks.

College Plugs "Suspicion" Date

A letter on the college bulletin board in flash style announcing that Joan Fontaine had won the Academy Award as the best actress of the year, turned the trick for Syd Poppay, manager of Warners' Majestic Theatre, Gettysburg, Pa., in calling attention to "Suspicion" among the students at Gettysburg College.

Weber Gives Tobaccy For "Ride 'Em, Cowboy"

Jake Weber at Schine's Liberty, in Herkimer, N. Y., used an ingenious stunt for "Ride 'em Cowboy." Dressing his doorman in cowboy attire, a sign was planted beside him reading: "Ask Lou for the makin's. See Abbott and Costello in," etc. The doorman was supplied with a package of tobacco which he proffered to patrons.

In addition, envelopes were distributed with copy on outside reading: "Vitamin A & B laff pills. See Abbott and Costello at their funniest in Ride 'em Cowboy." Also widely advertised was the offer of free admissions to those presenting horseshoes at the boxoffice.

Cartoonist Tied to "Dumbo"

In advance of "Dumbo," Jay Minsky, manager of Warners' Logan Theatre, Philadelphia, had a newspaper cartoonist appear on the theatre stage during the Saturday afternoon kiddies matinee making souvenir drawings of the picture characters.

NATION'S SHOWMEN SELL SHORT SUBJECTS, TOO

"Don't Talk" Screened for Plant Protection Head, Police

In Evansville, Ind., H. W. Reisinger at Loew's Theatre for "Don't Talk," planned a special screening for plant protection managers and personnel directors, police chief, civic leaders and OCD officials, which brought special news stories in the local dailies.

Street stencils were used with copy reading: "Keep Mum; Be Smart. Don't Talk. Loew's Now." Radio announcements were carried in advance, one sheets were planted in defense plants and Reisinger credits his assistant, James Carey, with promoting four A-boards on the main street from the Navy recruiting captain.

Waltmon Holds Special Show for Army Subject

Burgess Waltmon, manager of the Princess Theatre, Columbus, Miss., put on a selling campaign for the March of Time's "America's New Army," that was worthy of a feature. As a part of his campaign and preceding it, he held a special screening for the newspaper editors, the radio editor, civic heads, the Mayor, the draft board and principals of the schools.

As a result of this screening he was able to get a 15-minute radio program in which the subject and its playdates was mentioned several times. The newspaper carried a story on its front page giving some details about the short that had aroused the interest of the editor.

Announcements were made in the schools by all the principals; letters were sent to the relatives of men in the armed forces. Waltmon reported a great deal of talk in the town about the picture.

Harris Sells Short with "Be Kind to Animals Week"

Inspired by the fact that in one of the Hedda Hopper Hollywood shorts there is a sequence devoted to Carl Spitz and his North Hollywood Dog Training School, Ed Harris of the Glendale Theatre, Glendale, Calif., organized a real campaign to put over the subject and also the personal appearance of Spitz the following week.

Part of the promotion was to enlist the cooperation of the Glendale Humane Society to endorse a special program at the theatre for "Be Kind to Animals Week." This made it easy to obtain help from newspapers, radio stations, schools, pet shops and Youth Organizations.

Because the Army is looking for dogs, Ed was able to obtain its cooperation for this promotion. The theatre became a central point for the registration of dogs from patriotic civilians desiring to turn their pets over to the Army for the duration.

Ed also obtained some 16 mm. reels on dogs, augmented with a reel produced by the Humane Society and set them up as a road show booked into all the schools. The Secretary of the Glendale Humane Society spoke at every school in connection with the screenings.

Incidentally, Ed demonstrated his war showmanship as well, as he had an official Army dog put his paw print on each stamp album given with a purchase of stamps—more than $60 in War Stamps was sold in this way.

Ed gives his assistant Robert Pik credit for most of the leg work involved in putting over this idea.

30 MINUTES OF LAFFS WITH THE Crazy CARROT EATING CHARACTER

Manuel Ties Safety Week To Showing of "1-2-3 Go"

In connection with MGM's "1-2-3 Go" at Schine's State, in Cortland, N. Y., Johnny Manuel tied the short subject in with the local Safety Week and the Second Annual Safety Campaign sponsored by the American Legion.

Through the cooperation of the local police, a car with a public address system was parked in front of the theatre with an announcer advising pedestrians who were violating safety rules to see the film, plugging the film and playdates each time. School cooperation was also secured, with a series of essay contests being featured on traffic safety; in addition daily talks over the school public address system plugged the contest and film.

Civilian Defense units, represented by the county chairman, agreed to cooperate by augmenting the programs with a series of first aid demonstrations on the stage in conjunction with the opening. The Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, firemen and regular First Aid classes participated.

Screens MOT's "Air Raid" For Kiwanis Luncheon

Since Frank Bickerstaff of the L & J Palace, in Athens, Ga., was chairman of the Kiwanis programs for the month of February, he arranged to receive a print of MOT's "When Air Rails Strike" a week ahead of his showing and presented it to the Club at one of their regular meetings. Mayor Bob McWhorter, who is head of the Civilian Defense there and publisher of the Banner-Herald attended the luncheon and showing and ran a short story in the paper calling attention to the program. Before the picture was shown at the theatre, Mayor McWhorter made a brief address from the stage on Civilian Defense.

Emerson Presents Autographed Books

To usher in "The Vanishing Virginian" at the Omaha, in Omaha, Neb., Ted Emerson secured five copies of the book which were autographed by Frank Morgan. Publicity was secured by Ted, in this connection, since the books were turned over to the USO and placed in the reception room for servicemen at Fort Crook. For his street bally, Emerson built a giant replica of the book following the layout and color of the book backet, but adding "MGM's heart-warming hit starring Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson and Spring Byington." Two still boards containing eight production stills on each side were used in the lobby and in advance and during run of the picture.

Murdock Sells "Suspicion" on Academy Award Angle

For "Suspicion," Joseph Murdock, manager of Warners' Stanley Theatre, Camden, N. J., grabbed off extra publicity space in the newspapers on the Academy Award angle. The same thought was sold in advance to patrons by tacking a piece at the end of the trailer. Special cards were hooked over elevator push buttons at all buildings in the city with special cards placed with stenographers in office buildings and business houses. Special announcements were promoted on WCAM as well as a 15 minute personal interview and a program built around the picture score.

Pickets House on "Hellzapoppin"

To put over their "Hellzapoppin" campaign at the Capitol, in Waverly, N. Y., Ned Kornblite and T. J. Carey held a special party on the second night of run with defense stamps offered in connection with a door prize award. All advertising copy carried the line: "You don't have to be crazy to attend our shown, but it will help." For a week in advance the house was "picketed" by a man carrying a sign reading: "This theatre is fair to its patrons by showing," etc.

Plane Contest Featured on "Clouds"

Model plane building contest for kids highlighted Ray Helson's "Captains of the Clouds" engagement at the Schine Elmwood, in Penn Yann, N. Y. Entries were used by the Round Tabler for displays in the theatre and in merchants' stores. Judging to select winners was held from the stage during the regular Saturday kid matinee. Cagney photos, cost of which was defrayed by merchant's ad on reverse side, were distributed well in advance and local market came through with appropriately imprinted shopping bags.

Hobby Horse Display Featured by Leighton

Bert Leighton, manager of Warners' Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., rigged up a hobby horse with life-size cut-outs of Abbott and Costello as a display piece for "Ride 'Em, Cowboy." In addition, he induced the orchestras in the city to plug the songs from the picture. Comedy heralds, including laugh-ads as once popularized by "Ballyhoo" magazine, were gotten up for "Hellzapoppin'." Novelty stores, newspapers, trick telegrams read at various organization meetings and numerous window tie-ups, wound up the campaign based entirely on the comedy angle.

Almes Is Featured by Legion

Morty Almes, manager of Warners' Felton Theatre, Philadelphia, was cited by the Feltonville Weekly, a neighborhood newspaper, the local American Legion, local Board of Defense Wardens and other defense groups for assisting in the Feltonville Drive sponsored by the newspaper and the air-raid wardens. All merchants contributed window space and the theatre was placed in the limelight as a result of Almes' efforts throughout the entire neighborhood.

Cohan's MacArthur Buttons

In connection with the giveaway of MacArthur buttons at theatres, Albert Cohan, at the Apex, in Washington, recently broke into the local papers through his distribution of the buttons at a recent kid matinee.

Animated Displays Sell "Clouds"

Measuring 80 by 120 inches was the back drop with a cloud effect covering a velour board which was used as advance on "Captains of the Clouds" by Manager Joe Herman and publicist Phil Grody of the Embassy, in Brooklyn. At the top of the setpiece American and English flags were draped in red, white and blue streamers connecting the chandelier with a propeller which kept revolving.

At the base was a world map with miniature lights on Berlin, Rome and Tokio with a buzzer attachment. Three push buttons were set on the edge of the map, connecting the light and buzzer. Catch phrase above all was "Press the Button and Bomb the Axis." Upon pressing the button marked Berlin, the city would light up, and a buzzing sound would go off simultaneously. For additional display material the boys promoted an authentic RCAF flying unit with head gear and other paraphernalia. Various types of interesting RCAF posters were also secured and strategically spotted around the display with action scene stills.

Creates "O'Hara" Doll

Taking a still of Scarlett O'Hara, Tillie Pysyk, assistant manager of the Loew Poli, in Norwich, Conn., copied the dress worn by Vivian Leigh, complete in every detail, dressed a doll up in it and displayed it in merchant's window with appropriate tiein copy. LATE REVIEW

The Big Shot

(Warner Brothers)

Crime Doesn't Pay Again

Humphrey Bogart delineates here with his customary proficiency the career of a criminal who knows all the angles but the last one. The picture, snug in the Warner format of film criminology, opens with the gangster on his deathbed, skips back in review of the doings which brought him there, and ends with his demise which is due to bullets from the pistol of a crooked lawyer and not from due process of law.

Irene Manning has the role opposite Bogart and displays promise although the accent is at all times on the principal character.

A prison break effected during a stage performance is a highlight of action and a chase over mountain roads reminding of the pursuit in "High Sierra," but staged in the snow country, piles up suspense near the close.

The direction is by Lewis Seiler from a screenplay by Bertram Millhauser, Aben Finkel and Daniel Fuchs, and production is by Walter McEwen. The product of their collaboration is about par for Warner crime films.

Previewed at the studio for the trade press.

Decency Legion Condemns Objectionable Advertising

The National Legion of Decency, in its June 4th bulletin, placed two motion pictures in Class B, Objectionable in Part, and condemned objectionable advertising in behalf of one of them. "Misbehaving Husbands," Producers Releasing Corporation, was listed as objectionable because it "reflects acceptability of divorce." Warner Brothers' "The Gay Sisters" was cited for "light treatment of marriage; a suggestive line."

A separate notation said that "Misbehaving Husbands" had been advertised in New York in an objectionable manner and exhibited with a condemned picture.

Listed as Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage, this week were "Bad Man of the Hills," "Prairie Gunsmoke" and "Submarine Raider," Columbia; "Girl from Alaska," "Stardust on the Sage," "Romance on the Range," Republic; "Pierre of the Plains," MGM; "Private Buckaroo," Universal; and "Ten Gentlemen from West Point," 20th-Fox.

In Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults, were "Eyes of the Underworld," "Half Way to Shanghai," Universal; and "Juke Girl," Warner Brothers.

Three Rich Girls Grow Up

Adapted from the novel by Stephen Longstreet, the story of the three Gaylord girls who have battled vainly for 23 years for the remainder of a half-billion-dollar inheritance affords dramatic screen entertainment and an opportunity for a larger-than-usual quota of fine performances. Many women will pronounce it, as did several in this audience, "a beautiful picture," although its appeal for men will probably not prove so great.

Barbara Stanwyck gives a distinctive portrayal of Fiona Gaylord, the eldest sister, whose stubborn adherence to family traditions stems more from embittered pride than from any sympathy with ancestral values. Geraldine Fitzgerald effects the correct proportion of beauty and hardness as Evelyn, who has married a title but finds neither romance nor glamour in the life of an English Lady. Nancy Coleman is Suzanna, the only sister with any visible softness, whose interest in the estate dominates her life as it seems the only answer to her romance with a brash and impecunious artist, Gig Young.

Threads of plot and motivation are often not quite clear, but the emphasis on Fiona's story, as well as excellent direction by Irving Rapper, maintains direction and coherence. For the chief obstacle to settlement of the case is her pride and Charles Barclay's. He represents the charity which is the only legatee aside from the sisters, and is also, as the story emerges, the unavowed husband of Fiona, and the father of her son. His insistence on the house and land as the share for the interests he represents is explained, without conviction, as philanthropic, and her refusal is laid to her father's stern dictum "never to sell the land." But the clash of two strong temperaments, resolved in compromise for the sake of a child, holds the interest of the audience.

George Brent isn't given much to go on as Barclay, although his performance is satisfactory. With more opportunity, Donald Crisp, Gig Young, Larry Simms and Helene Thimig all make noteworthy contributions.

Among the production components assembled by Henry Blanke, mention should be made of excellent sets—with the right degree of musty elegance—and the music of Max Steiner, which helps to preserve tone continuity.

Shown at a New York projection room to an audience of professional reviewers, mostly women, who registered enthusiastic approval.—E. A. CUNNINGHAM.

Wings for the Eagle

(Warner Bros.)

National Defense Story

Warners' "Wings for the Eagle" ranks as one of the best picturizations to date of the national defense and victory efforts.

Filmed with the full and evident cooperation of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the picture, whose exploitation should appeal to every defense and victory plant worker and to every other citizen, is alive with human interest. Its story is as intimate as the man's next door and its scope is as wide as America itself.

Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan, Jack Carson and George Tobias are the principal characters in the drama, which is a down to earth exposition of the trials and tribulations of married life spiced with the problems confronting defense workers now and in the future. Supporting them are included Russell Arms, Don DeFore, Tom Fadden, John Ridgely, Frank Wilcox, George Meeker, Fay Helm, Billy Curtis, Emory Parnell and Edgar Dearing.

Exhibitors may point out that this is the first, and possibly the last, film to show interior scenes of the gigantic Lockheed plant in operation. The authenticity of the background, plus the competent delineation of the characters, makes for entertainment of an informational nature, yet without documentary dryness.

Plot and story are there, with the conflict between two men for the wife of another the main narrative line. All three principals work at Lockheed and the picture has the two men (Morgan and Carson) vying for the affections of Miss Sheridan, who is married to Carson. As a sidelight, the character portrayed by Morgan is anxious to became an essential defense plant worker in order to escape the draft. All turns out well in the end, however, when events at Pearl Harbor influence him to change his mind and enlist.

Shown to the trade press at Warners' Hollywood Theatre, where a mixed audience wildly applauded the film.—VANCE KING.

They All Kissed the Bride

(Columbia)

Farce, with Bells On

Columbia, a company noted for its sophisticated farces, this time essays a film showing the woes of a female business executive, pictured as being an automaton, when she falls in love with a class conscious writer who exposes her dealings. Done with the sheen of Columbia's best comedies since "It Happened One Night," this picture presents Joan Crawford and Melvyn Douglas as the principal protagonists in a farce which the Hollywood preview audience thought was uproarious.

Supporting the stars are Roland Young, Billie Burke, Allen Jenkins, Andrew Tombes, Helen Parrish, Emory Parnell, Mary Treen, Nydia Westman, Ivan Simpson, Roger Clark, Gordon Jones and Edward Gargan.

Alexander Hall, who specializes in a farce type of motion picture, extracted the maximum of comedy from the situations and dialogue. Many of the lines of dialogue of the screenplay by P. J. Wolfson and the adaptation of Andrew P. Solt and Henry Altimus were lost in the laughter. Gina Kaus and Solt wrote the original story.

The Edward Kaufman production, which dialogue and theme places in the adult audience classification, presents Miss Crawford as a trucking business executive and Douglas as a writer who gets "inside" information on the conduct of her business from her drivers.

Both fall in love at their first meeting, and their getting together runs the gamut of complications. Her faith in herself is shaken and she completely changes her ways from the cold executive type.

Shown at the Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, to an audience which roared, howled, and chuckled from start to finish.—V. K.

Romance on the Range

(Republic)

A Goodly Slice of Western

Republic has turned out a superlative Western in "Romance on the Range," the kind of action-romance-comedy film which will add greatly to the showman's entertainment program. As an additional exhibitor-aid, this one stars Roy Rogers, third in MOTION PICTURE HERALD-FAME's poll of Money-Making Western stars. Rogers continuously improves with each saddle-song saga in which Republic presents him.

Associate producer-director Joseph Kane and musical director Cy Feuer should be credited with a top notch achievement. The musical numbers, "Oh, Wonderful World," "When Romance Rides the Range," "Rocky Mountain Lullaby," "Coyote Serenade," and particularly "Sing As You Work," are sparkling, gay and tuneful cowboy ballads rendered expertly by the Sons of the Pioneers.

The plot deals with Roy's search for a gang of fur robbers who have killed his cowpuncher-pal while getting away with stolen pelts. Roy is foreman of Arrowhead Ranch, managed by Jerome Banning (Edward Pawley), and owned by absentee landlord Joan Stuart, a young New York socialite, played by Linda Hayes. Miss Hayes, disturbed by the series of fur robberies, and suspicious of Banning, goes West incognito to detect the culprits. The wide open spaces and the Western moonglow contrive quite easily to develop the romantic sequences between Roy and Linda.

There's plenty of good action and some expertly photographed chase-across-the-plains scenes. A rip-roarin' gun fight, high on the side of a cliff, helps build the suspense. Of course, Roy gets his man and his gal. He convinces the town sheriff, via incontrovertible proof of the stolen goods, that Banning is the leader of the gang and is responsible for the murder.

George "Gabby" Hayes, in the part of the ranch cook who hates "wimmin," and Sally Payne, who plays Linda's maid, provide the comedy. Hayes' toothless vituperations will draw many a laugh from the patrons.

Previewed in Republic's home office projection room before a group of National Board of Review representatives, all of whom apparently enjoyed it.—J. E. SAMUELSON.

Escape From Crime

(Warner Bros.)

Gangster and Newspaper Drama

Familiar formulae—two of them—are used in this picture combining the gangster with the oft repeated newspaper reporter variation. Richard Travis plays the hold-up man convicted and jailed. He becomes the prison photographer. On his parole he returns to his wife to find he has become a father. Vowing to go straight he gets a job as a newspaper photographer. One of his assignments is to get a picture of one of his friends being electrocuted.

Travis' parole is revoked because he took the picture (a rather flimsy pretext) and he is returned to prison. On the way a message comes over the radio that the leader of the gang, who hadn't yet been captured, had been cornered in a nearby building. The policeman who is accompanying Travis to prison wants the glory of making the capture, so he leaves his prisoner temporarily only to be captured by the gang. Travis saves him and is therefore pardoned.

A number of the situations in this picture will strain the credibilities of even an average audience. Also the technical adviser for the newspaper office sequences fell down a bit.

The Next of Kin

(Ealing Studios-United Artists)

War Propaganda

Made primarily for the Directorate of Army Kinematography, to help curb loose talk among British soldiers, this has now been persuaded from the military archives and issued as a commercial entertainment film. Though the purpose of the film will not be disguised from the greater public, it will be sold mainly on its angle as a spy story with a Commando raid climax. Made with professional actors—many of them now in the Forces—by an established studio, the film has obvious selling angles for Britain and there has been enough—maybe too much—preliminary ballyhoo to fertilize the box office ground.

The film is directly narrative and not documentary. It traces the threads of loose talk and gossip which follow the first planning of a raid on a U boat base in France, tracks the stray remark and the casual comment through saloon bars and theatre dressing rooms, to sweethearts and drinking pals, interweaves it all with a tracery of Nazi spywork in Britain and Combined Operations training. The raid is excellently done and as realistic and exciting a piece of action as the British screen has given. It is, thanks to the loose talk and German reinforcements, a success only at the cost of many lives. . . . But the gossip goes on, even when the raid is over.

The spy element has been sedulously exploited but the development of the yarn is uncomfortably slow for all its attention to detail. Topical though it be, it will have to stand comparison with a myriad others of more polished quality. The network of Nazi espionage may even depress the public by suggestion: the only spy to be caught is caught by a British Tommy, others seem to be working all over the country, and efficiently at that! The military detail is excellent and the raid with its bombing planes, invasion barges, and street fighting will set many an audience on its toes.

There is some fine acting by a big cast—and some indifferent.

The technical qualities are high and Thorold Dickinson's direction efficient.

Previewed with a mixed press and public audience, the film obviously palled at times in its attenuated development and there were but few signs of excitement until the Commando raid was reached. This obviously got over, with even the more hardboiled reviewers.—AUBREY FLANAGAN

In Old California

(Republic)

Period Melodrama

A lot of things went on in Sacramento, California, prior to and during the gold rush of 1849, and a lot of them are shown in this picture, but not all of them are related to each other, as presented, and this weakness of script detracts from the power of a melodrama made at considerable expense and with talent of marquee value.

John Wayne, Binnie Barnes, Albert Dekker, Dick Purcell, Patsy Kelly and Edgar Kennedy are the names for the billboards. They handle themselves capably, within the limitations of a scrip[illegible]rcumvents them periodically, in roles to [illegible] respective measures.

Direction by William McGann is effective at at all times, and associate producer Robert North got values out of most sections of the enterprise, but it does break up into sections, and it helps itself to a new start every now and again, at expense of interest and suspense.

The story by J. Robert Bren and Gladys Atwater, scripted by Gertrude Purcell and Frances Hyland, is about a Boston pharmacist who went to Sacramento in 1849, tangled with the local boss, whose gal fell in love with the newcomer, and survived various plots against him to save lives of miners and their families when, after the discovery of gold, epidemic swept the diggings. An attempted lynching, a bar room fight, various and sundry shootings, ridings and conflicts enliven the proceedings.

Due to lack of integration, the picture has the unique distinction of being better in any one of its component parts than in the whole.

Down Texas Way

(Monogram)

Action Western

Though not up to the standard of the preceding "Rough Riders" series, "Down Texas Way," Monogram's sixth in the current season's group, has action and suspense in sufficient quantities to satisfy the followers of this type of entertainment.

Buck Jones, Tim McCoy and Raymond Hatton, as the "Rough Riders," are seen again in their usual roles, but this time Hatton is falsely accused of murder. The plot deals with the efforts of the trio to extricate themselves from the position in which they have been placed and to bring to justice the real criminals.

Scott R. Dunlap produced the picture, which was directed by Howard Bretherton from an original screenplay by Jess Bowers. Supporting the trio are Luana Walters, Dave O'Brien, Lois Austin, Glenn Strange, Harry Woods, Tom London, Kansas Moehring, Jack Daley and Silver, the trained horse.

Spy Ship

(Warner Bros.)

Spy Melodrama

Spies swarm like locusts through this melodramatic tale of the fifth column in the U. S. before Pearl Harbor. An undistinguished cast of unknowns talk and shoot their way through an hour of incredible melodrama in which newspaper columnists outwit fifth columnists while the police and FBI are blithely unaware of the seditious activities going on practically in their midst.

Irene Manning plays a famous flyer who is a member of a fifth column organization. Her sister is a zealous patriot and assists a newspaper columnist in running down the traitors. The treacherous sister is killed by another Nazi leader while the patriot is captured by the spies and taken aboard a ship interned in the harbor. On the day Pearl Harbor is attacked, the spies attempt to take the ship to sea but the Marines in the person of the newspaper columnist arrive in time's familiar nick to effect a rescue, reunion and capture respectively.

16 Tunes in Search of a Story

Sixteen musical numbers are listed as performed in this picture. Performers performing them are Harry James and band, the Andrews Sisters, Joe E. Lewis, Dick Foran and Helen Forest. Settings are a night club and an army camp.

The 16 tunes and their performers roam the running time, as do Shemp Howard, Ernest Truex, Mary Wickes, Jennifer Holt, Richard Davies and the other players, in search of a story or some other reasonable reason for being on the screen instead of on the radio, dance floor or anywhere else.

They don't find it.

The credit list shows that Elmund Kelso and Edward James wrote a script from a story by Paul Gerard Smith, and that Edward F. Cline directed the picture for associate producer Ken Goldsmith, but nothing on the screen bears out any part of this information.

The Mad Monster

(Producers Releasing Corporation)

Mad Melodrama

Familiar pattern, this, and made with such disregard for reality, that it may fail of impact even with audiences at whom it is directed—the frequenters of western and "action" forums.

George Zucco is fine as the mad professor, but hampered by the necessity of compressing intense, embittered emotion into trite lines and situations laden with suspensive devices so obvious an audience may laugh. Glenn Strange, the "mad monster," is peculiarly touching. The transformations of his simple visage—a la "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"—into wolfish obscenity, are highlights of a generally good photographic performance. Direction is also able, but action lags several times, hampered by the "wait" for the situations which in development are too transparent.

Zucco is the able scientist, forced to resign a small college professorship because he insists he can transform humans into beasts, by infusing them with substances from wolves' blood. His "guinea pig" is Strange, the handyman, who roams by night, lasting t[illegible] [illegible] by Zucco's serum. Strange become[illegible] Kent Taylor ment of revenge upon the fellow professors who scoffed; he kills two people, and a little girl. Johnny Downs, reporter, and pursuer of Zucco's daughter, Anne Nagel, begins to pursue Zucco.

The climax comes in Zucco's swamp-bound mansion one lightning-filled night; Strange no longer needs serum to make him beastly; he kills Zucco. The fire that lightning started kills Strange, while Downs rescues Nagel. The two watch the house burn down.

Yankee Doodle Dandy

(Warner Bros.)

Flags, Romance and George M. Cohan

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" is a wartimely inspiration.

It has been correctly calculated to play not only upon every normal emotion but also to rouse the patriotic fervor of any American. The material at hand, the life of George M. Cohan, is perfect for the purpose and Hal B. Willis, executive producer and William Cagney, associate producer, have used it to the full.

The picture is one of Hollywood's finest. Photographically, musically, and in choreography, too, it is well nigh perfect. Sight and sound have been blended to make a screen masterpiece.

Interest is maintained at a high pitch for more than two hours—a real accomplishment with a biography where the element of surprise is inevitably not largely available.

The opening itself is unusual. James Cagney, portraying George M. Cohan, is depicted after a performance of "I'd Rather Be Right," receiving a telegram summoning him to the White House. Full of trepidation lest he be sharply criticized for miming the President he enters the Executive's office to find Mr. Roosevelt greeting him cordially and reminiscing about the past.

Never before has a living President of the United States been the subject of a motion picture portrayal. Captain Jack Young, who with make up bears a remarkable resemblance to Mr. Roosevelt, enhances his portrayal by a faithful interpretation including a skillful imitation of the President's voice and diction.

From this point on the picture moves into its portrayal of the life of George M. Cohan as recorded by Mr. Cagney, starting as narrator, describing the scene when Mr. Cohan was born, July 4, 1878.

Musical renditions of the early days of the Four Cohans are confined to snatches of the score. Romance is introduced early as Mr. Cohan meets and swiftly begins a courtship of his future wife, ably portrayed by Joan Leslie, who continues her fine work following "Sergeant York."

When still a young man, Cohan meets Sam H. Harris (Richard Whorf). By a ruse, he switches the interest of a producer to whom Mr. Harris was talking about a dramatic show, to his own musical comedy and persuades the producer to stage it for him and be his new partner. This marks the beginning of his long partnership with Harris.

This first hit for which Cohan wrote the music is "Yankee Doodle Dandy," a sobriquet by which Cohan was known for many years afterward and therefore a fitting title for the picture. Next of the many songs is "45 Minutes from Broadway" which is sung by Irene Manning playing the role of Fay Templeton. "Mary" is another hit of bygone days.

James Cagney, star of the picture, demonstrates his versatility as he sings and dances his way through it and plays emotional scenes as well. There is a long distance from the Cagney of "Angels With Dirty Faces" to the Cagney of "Yankee Doodle Dandy." Walter Huston and Rosemary DeCamp capably enact the roles of Jerry and Nellie Cohan. A showmanlike touch is the casting of James Cagney's sister, Jeanne, in the role of Josie Cohan, his screen sister. She fills the role admirably and in addition lends realism to it by her resemblance to her brother.

The title song and "Over There" are especially striking, the former because of its snappy rhythm and the latter because of its timeliness, again today. The audience will be singing and humming it as they leave the theatre. All lyrics and music in the picture were written by George M. Cohan.

Dancing has been well staged by Leroy Prinz and Seymour Felix; John Boyle is credited with routining James Cagney's dances. An interesting note is the fact that William Collier, Sr., long an associate of George M. Cohan, was technical adviser.

Michael Curtiz directed from a screenplay by Robert Buckner and Edmund Joseph.

Makeup artist Perc Westmore has done an unusually fine job. Not only has he aged Mr. Cagney progressively throughout the picture but in the scenes in which the actor portrays President Roosevelt in "I'd Rather Be Right," he does a double job of camouflage which is outstanding.

A projection room audience of reviewers gave the picture marked attention, laughed at its sallies and applauded at its conclusion—R. A. W.

NEW SOLDIERS ARE TOUGH (UA)

World in Action

A library job, by editing and narration this short achieves rapidity, but it may lack impact to an audience accustomed to newsreels from which many clips were taken. The thesis is that the United Nations' armies have learned mechanized war, and have evolved their own tactics to match the German strategy which smashed the Western Front. Seen are Chinese and Russian shock troops and guerillas; American specialist troops and their brand new weapons; Britain's Commandos and a Commando raid on Norway. Speed, ruthlessness and endurance are the essences of the new toughness and adaptability, the short suggests. The film was produced by the Canadian National Film Board and edited by Stuart Legg.—F. TALES OF MANHATTAN
(20th Century-Fox)

Comedy-Drama

PRODUCERS: Boris Morros and S. P. Eagle. Directed by Julien Duvivier.

SYNOPSIS

This is the story of a tail-coat which changes the course of the lives of its wearers and the people who know them. It seems to have supernatural powers of distinguishing the genuine from the false and producing appropriate results. It is new when Charles Boyer wears it to a party given by his friend, Rita Hayworth, and when her husband, Thomas Mitchell, shoots him. It helps to break up the prospective wedding between Ginger Rogers and Cesar Romero and transfer her affections to Henry Fonda. It bursts its seams on the night Charles Laughton gets his big chance to conduct his own symphony. It is rehabilitated sufficiently for Edward G. Robinson to wear it to his class reunion. W. C. Fields wears it to a lecture on cocoanut-drinking, although something besides cocoanut milk turns up in the glasses. The coat plays an important part in a jewel robbery and falls with the loot on a share-cropper's field—a gift from Heaven.

PLAYERS: James Ellison, Jane Wyatt, Kent Taylor.

SYNOPSIS

Beth Ainsley, a W.A.A.C. officer on her way to the battle-fields of World War II, is looking back to her part in another war, twenty years before. She was a nurse attached to the Medical Corps then, working under Capt. James Mason just behind the front lines. She remembers how Phillip Harvey appeared from the skies to awaken memories of their former love and to provoke conflict with Mason. These differences were resolved when the three of them were trapped in an abandoned cave with five soldiers. Then, as the food and oxygen were giving out, they dug their way to freedom to find themselves behind enemy lines. Mason was shot by a German soldier, but Harvey risked his life to bring him to safety. Neither man knew which of them she loved. When the scene shifts back to 1941, Dr. and Mrs. Mason are seen speeding to another war.

WAR and THE NEWS

"THE American people are not yet fully aware of what total war means and of the task confronting them before achieving victory." That in sum has been more than a murmur from Washington. And now this week it was the burthen of observation from four New York Times foreign correspondents returned from theatres of war and speaking before a Town Hall gathering.

Typical was the expression of Mr. Camille Cianferra: "Apart from the uniforms in the streets of New York one does not get the feeling of being at war."

One most sharply obvious reason that the American public feels less about the war is that it knows less, by reason of what it does not read, what it does not hear, what it does not see.

One of the most direct and the most vitally realistic and intimate of all the mediums is the American newsreel.

In the considered opinion of the makers of the newsreels the entire war is held an entirely confidential matter by the Army and Navy. Also these same newsreel makers see from those authorities a censorship and control of entirely internal affairs addressed at control of the opinions and attitudes of citizenry.

THE most casual examination of the newsreels would make obvious to the least expert of witnesses that they are not reporting the war, on terms comparable with even the press and radio, which admittedly and, apparently unavoidably, leave a deal to be desired.

The newsreels have cameramen flung around the world, maintained at large effort and great expense, assigned to the biggest story in the world. Much of the time the editors are unable to establish communication with these members of their staffs, and they see exceedingly little or no important film from them.

Pictures of that Pearl Harbor attack and its sequels reached the newsreel screen, in a fashion, two months after the event. The Marshall Islands engagement was released in the same reluctant manner. Nothing has been had from the bombing of Tokyo, despite the fact that Major Doolittle, hero of the occasion, has been brought home for war cause promotions. Nothing has been had from the Coral Sea, and of course nothing is even in sight on last week's Battle of the mid-Pacific.

Newspapers are in a slightly better position. A datelined story can be written anywhere, and not necessarily by eye witnesses. The newsreel reporter and his camera have to be on the spot when it happens, and then he has to send a can of negative home. It is a physical object, substantial and ponderable, in the hands of censorship or other equivalent authority. Censors, by reason of the long tradition of haste and speed of the press, appear to apply a very different approach to a sheet of manuscript than to a roll of motion picture negative. Yet, that roll of negative can carry a more penetrating, incisive, effective story of the war, to a people which needs to know, than pages of type.

IT is not the war abroad, alone, that is being affected by the official attitudes. Consider the all-important subject of rubber, which so directly touches the lives and movements of those who ride in the nation's 30,000,000 passenger automobiles. For weeks the newsreels have been engaged in an endeavour to tell the public something about rubber, and the prospects and promises of synthetic rubber, on the screen. After a tediously lengthy line of negotiation, the way was cleared, with what seemed to be all of the authorities that could bear on the subject. The day that camera work was to begin, word came "from the Army", it was said, that the rubber story could not be told.

This means that the newsreel screen is not permitted to verify the alarms of the official pessimists about the rubber situation, to verify the apparent optimism of President Roosevelt, or to document in pictures what the rubber experts and scientists have said and are saying.

Meanwhile, it is to be observed that the newsreels are being supplied, as some say "to saturation", with official trailers and inserts from official and quasi-official sources—all with messages of exhortation. Adequate information often makes exhortation unnecessary.

The effectiveness of the newsreel is being seriously invaded under these policies. That means that the newsreel is not sharing in the freedoms promised the screen.

The newsreel is a place of telling, showing, not argument. When it does not tell and show, the customers are annoyed and the nation is not served.

THAT CURVE ANGLE

WHEN Mr. "russell birdwell and associates" get a notion, they stick to it, even in matters of sweaters and publicity strip-teases. Last week they officially informed the press: "Jane Russell possesses the most beautiful bust in Hollywood. So declares Chaim Gross, famous New York sculptor, who so admired the youthful and luscious curves of the young actress that he has asked Howard Hughes, producer, . . . to permit the sensational young star to pose for him. . . . 'She would make a wonderful model for a figure typifying young American womanhood . . . '" Mr. birdwell-and-associates amplify the message, not too relevantly, by observing that "Gross, 37, was born in the Carpathian mountains and as a boy underwent harrowing experiences at the hands of the Russians during the World War". So young American womanhood just has to be typified.

More Cooperation

NEW impetus to the cooperative picture buying movement appeared in the Philadelphia exchange territory this week with reports that a group of independent exhibitors were about ready to announce a new booking and buying combine, currently in process of organization. Although a leader in the movement described the project as "still in the talking stage," it is understood to include exhibitors controlling about 60 of the larger independent theatres in the area. The avowed purpose is to combat high prices and fight circuit opposition, rather than solve the tire and gas ration problem for exhibitors, it was said.

David A. Milgram's Affiliated Circuit, which offers a buying and booking service to independents, meanwhile had added its 31st house in Ed Kapner's Upsal Theatre, in Philadelphia's Germantown district. Nate Milgram has been promoted to shorts subject booker for all Affiliated theatres.

While disclaiming any plan to organize a buying and booking combine, Lewen Pizor, independent circuit operator, is providing that service for the Clifton Heights Theatre, Clifton Heights, N. J.

METROPOLITAN NOTE

NOT yet is there grass growing in the streets of New York, but right where the gala zone of superheated Fifty-second Street ends at Sixth Avenue there is a patch of sweet corn. It is bounded on the north by the Faisan d'Or and on the east by Tony's. There is a vacant lot, razed for subway construction and now levelled and filled with a soil made of the debris of brownstone mansions of the '90's. It is a mixture of broken brick and tradition, besprinkled with street sweepings, rather like a Broadway columnist's copy. A dour old caretaker planted the corn. He cultivates it daily with an ice pick and a rusty carpenter's chisel. He draws a gallery of curious Fifty-second Street folk, who have never before seen corn in that form. They are a-maized.

Priority Conclave

ADMINISTRATION of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., offices in New York, Hollywood and Washington was turned over to Charles Francis Coe at the quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the MPPDA in New York on Wednesday.

Meeting in the council room at 28 West 44th Street, New York, the directors designated Mr. Coe, who is a writer, lawyer and public relations counsel, to be vice-president and general counsel of the MPPDA. Will Hays, president, said he had placed the operation of all the Association offices in Mr. Coe's hands. Mr. Coe joined the MPPDA in early April as assistant to the president.

The directors devoted a major portion of their Wednesday meeting to a discussion of priorities as related to the possible interruption or limitation of picture production.

They then adjourned until Monday afternoon, June 15th. At that time, further investigations having been prepared, the board will again consider the conservation of raw materials, the maintenance of picture production and allocation of available supplies. The board will also take up on Monday the policy report, and recommended program prepared by the eastern branch of the Public Relations Committee for improving public goodwill.

The home office public relations directors who comprise the committee membership were to meet again on Thursday to approve, it was said, the final draft of their proposals for a comprehensive industry public relations program. Although they are committed to a policy of unpublicized labor in behalf of the industry, it was understood their plan calls for an institutional advertising campaign, wider all-industry representation and an aggressive educational policy aimed at the public.

In Hollywood the studio public relations committee of the Association of Motion Picture Producers meeting this week voted to sponsor increased publicity on the industry's war activities program. A subcommittee of publicity men loaned by the studios will work full time on the preparation and dissemination of information about the war program in answer to many requests.

On the Russian Front

JAY LEYDA, among the editors of the leftist quarterly "films," and producer of a documentary picture entitled "Better Dresses, Fifth Floor," for the Whitney-Rockefeller Latin American cultural relations program, is now a technical consultant on the staff of Artkino, motion picture outlet for the U. S. for Russia's pictures-of-message. His present activity is described by Artkino as applying to adaptation of Soviet imports for the American screen. Mr. Leyda first appeared on the American screen scene when he was employed for the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art while in Moscow engaged in the study of Russian propaganda methods.

Sir Alexander

KNIGHTHOOD was to be conferred this week on Alexander Korda, the producer of "The Private Life of Henry VIII", by George VI, successor to the throne of the Tudor monarch. Mr. Korda, to be Sir Alexander, is included in the forthcoming birthday honors list, it was reported from London Thursday.

"That Hamilton Woman," the story of Lord Nelson, released last year by UA and Mr. Korda, is Winston Churchill's favorite picture. Britain's Prime Minister has admitted seeing it half a dozen times, or more "with delight."

No Tax for Camp Shows

ARMY AND NAVY post theatres, already benefiting from first runs of new pictures and expedition of prints, will additionally gain from a provision proposed in the new tax bill now being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee. The provision exempts from Federal admissions taxes all such theatres.

The proposals come from the two services and were sponsored in Congress by Representative Andrew May, Kentucky, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee.

Exemption of post theatres from admissions taxes would not seriously decrease Treasury revenue, it is argued. The average admission at post theatres is low, it was said.

Victory (Shorts) at Last

SELLING arrangements for those "Victory Shorts," the cause of much argument between exhibitors and distributors, and among distributors, are now, finally, complete. These are the war shorts which the industry will produce in Hollywood at the request of Lowell Mellett, Coordinator of Government Films. With one exception, all of the major distributors at midweek had subscribed to a plan calling for distribution of the pictures through regular commercial channels, "at nominal cost." All revenue above actual print and production costs will go to an "established war charity."

Under the agreement, the pictures, which are to be related to the war effort, will be distributed at rentals substantially less than those paid for current product. Most of the distributors will not include the Government inspired pictures in their regular shorts product roster. They will have considerable distribution leeway, it is understood. The pictures probably will bear the seal of the War Activities Committee, which is to retain general supervision over their exploitation and price, and will administer any proceeds which accrue for charity.

The Red Cross, USO and Army and Navy Relief Funds have been mentioned by the distributors as suitable recipients of any profits. The companies will underwrite distribution costs and handle exploitation themselves. As many as 600 prints may be made of some of the pictures, it was indicated, to permit rapid playoff in "upwards of 10,000 theatres."

The "nominal rental" will not be fixed at any flat figure, varying according to picture and situation.

MGM's short subjects department already has four of its nine Victory Shorts in work. John Nesbitt is to produce three. The first, somewhat in the Hardy family pattern, will show how everyone in a typical U. S. household can do his part. It will show how there is bound to be some red tape and inefficiency in a democracy, but will point out America's power to achieve victory over the totalitarians nonetheless.

Two pictures will be devoted to Geopolitics, "showing how war in Australia or China affects Joe Doaks in the U. S. A." The second will be modeled somewhat after the lessons in world geography, economics and politics which are given to Army soldiers and officers. Jack Chertok is at work on the fourth reel which will dramatize the unsung heroes of the Army, Navy and Marines.

Boosts Books 500%

FIVE hundred per cent increase! A big boost in sales, for a book. That's what release of the Warner screen version has done for "Kings Row," the novel, according to statements of the publishers and bookstores. While the picture was in work, the novel had been bought by 100,000 persons. Four hundred thousand more have since bought it, not only in the original edition, but in several of popular price.

Friendly Border

MOTION picture and still negatives passing from the United States to Canada will not be censored so long as they are addressed to an "authorized agency," Government spokesmen in Toronto said Wednesday. The statement was occasioned by the retention, last Saturday, by U. S. border officials, of developed and undeveloped films, still and motion picture.

A ruling has been obtained, it is understood, whereby films for Canadian exchanges are now permitted to cross the boundary without delay; even newsreels. Amateur motion pictures, however, are to be developed and forwarded to owners, after examination.

Officials of the Office of Censorship in Washington said Wednesday that pictures sent to Canada were exempt from the requirement of review by the new U. S. Board of Review. They said they had no knowledge of any films being held at the border.

Films to Teach Chinese

AMERICAN motion pictures, already widely employed by the United States Government to teach our armed forces, will be applied to train the Chinese and other armies of the United Nations, including South America.

Army training films will be made available in Chinese, Portuguese and Spanish and possibly in other languages, under a program announced recently by the War Department at Washington.

A special section is being set up at the U. S. Signal Corps photographic center in New York, under the command of Colonel M. E. Gillette, to record a number of the pictures in Spanish and Portuguese for use in training the armies of Central and South American countries.

One film has already been dubbed in Chinese at the photographic laboratory in Washington.

Tightening News Reins

PLANS for consolidation of Government information services now on President Roosevelt's desk are not expected to call for any reorganization of motion picture or radio activities of the war agencies, already well harnessed to the President's program.

That a streamlining of the Government's press services, now employing something over 900 persons, was on the cards was revealed by President Roosevelt early last month. Since then, nothing further has developed and it is reported that the delay in issuing the order is due to the reluctance of the War Production Board, the Army and the Navy to let their publicity get out of their own hands.

DISTRIBUTORS PLEDGE AID TO EXHIBITORS PROVING LOSS

Sales Heads Promise Relief on Rentals Where Attendance Is Cut by War

Film rental relief is available from most of the distributors for any exhibitor who can show that wartime conditions are adversely affecting his operation.

But the distributors must be shown.

Practically all the sales heads of the major distributors have indicated at New York that they, or their official agents, are ready and willing to sit down and talk terms with any theatre man who claims that the draft, labor migrations, industrial conversion, blackouts or other wartime factors are putting his operation on the red side of the balance sheet. Several have announced a general policy of special rental consideration for such theatres. Others have instructed their sales forces to study, and report on any local situation with an adverse reaction on box-offices.

Facts and figures must be presented in support of a plea for lower rentals, however. While promising relief in any situation of genuine distress, all the distributors were emphatic in statements that they would require specific proof, in dollars and cents, from the theatre's books that attendance had fallen off drastically.

The theatre that has really suffered a wartime decline may be assured of aid, the distributors asserted. At no time, their sales heads pointed out, has there been such a generally conciliatory attitude toward exhibitors on the rental question.

In cases of distress they urge the exhibitor to present his case first to the salesman or branch manager. If relief is not forthcoming then, most district managers have been instructed to pay special heed to these complaints. Home office executives also have expressed willingness to hear any legitimate complaint, supported by factual evidence, of a wartime box office decline.

Adjustments Already Effected by Distributors

Adjustments have already been made in a number of situations, according to a check of the sales departments. Both straight rental and perçentage contracts have been adjusted in instances where local problems have cut sharply into theatre business. One manager estimated, however, that the total of such cases "was only a few hundred, for all companies, from all sections of the country."

Many distributors pointed out that "wartime" adjustments represent no departure from established policies. Their companies, they declared, have always stood ready to meet with the exhibitor and discuss any extraordinary situation adversely affecting his business. Wartime disruptions, they added, are merely a new factor which must be considered by both distribution and exhibition.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at a meeting of district and division sales managers in Chicago on May 19th was one of the first companies to announce a specific policy of wartime aid to exhibitors. William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, warned that no general formula was applicable to the situation. He took cognizance of population changes and other adverse influences on small town and subsequent theatres and promised that every situation affected by war conditions would be reviewed and all necessary relief granted to keep theatres open.

WARN AGAINST MISUSE OF AID

Warnings against attempts to reduce "fair rentals" tempered the distributors' pledges to aid exhibitors facing serious losses because of wartime conditions.

"I hope that exhibitors will not use this as a general cue to try to hack down fair rentals," said one sales executive who declined to be quoted. He did point out that the distributors were trying to meet wartime problems "with an honest effort to make readjustments in behalf of the entire industry. The approach, I think, has been generally in the spirit of unity," he said.

Warners Promise to "Keep Theatres Open"

Warner Brothers, through Harry M. Warner, president, has gone on record with a promise to "keep the theatre doors open" in every situation where war changes threaten operations. Company salesmen and field executives, it is reported, have been instructed by the home office to survey all corners of their territory, and to report on any situation where wartime difficulties impend. Also, it was said, they have been told to prepare reports on trends in theatre attendance generally since Pearl Harbor.

"Find the exhibitor whose population has moved. Give him a break, even if you have to help him out with his rent. We must keep the theatre doors open. Find the exhibitor who needs help to keep operating and see that he gets a break," Mr. Warner instructed a recent meeting of sales heads.

Although Ben Kalmenson, sales manager, refused to comment on how the company was handling the problem, it was reported from the field that Warners had promised reductions in both percentage and flat rentals to theatre men in serious straits because of these wartime factors.

"Any time an exhibitor shows facts and figures to support that he is in trouble—war or no war—RKO is ready and willing to help him," according to Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of sales. RKO is drawing no general formula for wartime adjustments, he said. Rather it is the established policy of the company to discuss all theatre operation problems with exhibitors in search of a joint solution.

The RKO sales staff, Mr. Depinet said, has been instructed to keep careful watch for any situation where exhibitors may be in desperate plight because of the draft, population changes, blackouts or other factors likely to persist for the duration. To date no reports of specific adjustments have reached the home office. Local managers, Mr. Depinet said, have full jurisdiction in the adjustment of such problems.

The question of wartime adjustments is a new opportunity to apply the principles of unity in working out a joint solution to industry problems, according to Mr. Depinet. It is a question, he indicated, for both individual companies and exhibitors, and the industry as a whole. The continued operation of small theatres is essential for the maintenance of morale. Likewise, the volume business which they represent is important for the industry. Local difficulties should be attacked in a united effort, he said.

Called "Established Policy" at Twentieth-Fox

Sympathetic attention to any exhibitor who claims loss of business because of the war is also promised by Twentieth Century-Fox. Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution, indicated that such complaints, when supported with evidence, would receive prior attention. He pointed out that it was the company's established policy to give careful attention to any exhibitor's request for aid.

William J. Kupper said that adjustments would be made where required without regard for precedent.

W. A. Scully, vice-president and sales manager of Universal, at the company's convention last week instructed salesmen to hear and adjust all complaints. He warned that no plaint was to be ignored. If district managers cannot reach a satisfatcory settlement of such problems he instructed that they were to be turned over to division heads, or the home office.

Sees Boom Conditions Aiding in Emergency

Another distributor spokesman said that he was confident that wartime influences on the box office would not be too disturbing a problem. On the whole, he said, increases in population in defense industry areas, improving product, and a mounting box office index would undoubtedly offset any adverse trends. Local situations can be corrected according to established policy. Frequently, he recalled, all distributors have made special territorial concessions to meet temporary dislocations from flood, crop failure or other causes. This policy of helping exhibitors to keep theatres open under temporary difficulties is "merely insurance against loss of an outlet" when normal conditions return.

"There is no reason," he said, "why the war should force an established exhibitor to close his doors because of financial problems."

U. S. CLAIMS RIGHT TO ACT ON ANY NEW TRADE PROGRAM

Points Out Methods Available for Court Action Despite 'Escape Clause'

The United States Government insists that it retains the right to intervene at any time in the formation of new selling practices by the motion picture industry.

Although the Department of Justice has taken no active role in discussions between exhibitors and distributors in the United Motion Picture Industry it is still very interested in any new plans for selling motion pictures. The fact that Government attorneys have been extremely non-committal on the subject of a selling plan to replace the blocks-of-five is no indication that the Government has given the industry, or the consenting distributors, a free hand to write a new selling plan.

A difference of opinion exists, at the moment, between some industry attorneys and the Department of Justice regarding the right and authority of the Government to intervene in any action to amend the consent decree with respect to selling practices.

Several New York film lawyers point to the expiration on June 1st of the decree selling and trade show practices ordained by Sections III and IV. Under the "escape clause," or Section XII, they say they have the right to abandon decree sales practices on September 1st.

Legal Jurisdiction Disputed by Attorneys

While the New York lawyers thus held that the Department of Justice now has no legal jurisdiction over the size or type of blocks by which pictures can be sold, Department officials in Washington said emphatically that it could play a part in any attempt to amend the consent decree.

Anti-trust statutes, and the fact that the monopoly and conspiracy actions against both the Big Five (Paramount, MGM, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Warner Brothers) and the Little Three (Columbia, United Artists and Universal) are still pending give the Government full authority to regulate sales practices, it is maintained in Government circles.

The consent decree did not dispose of the suit. It merely provided for a three-year trial of new trade practices agreed upon by Government and film companies. These, it was hoped, would remedy the situations which originally provoked complaint.

However, it was admitted at the Department—in fact, it was pointed out—that the industry does not need to go to the courts to put into effect any new selling plan. Under the decree as it now stands, the companies are free under Section XII to adopt any form of selling for next season's pictures they may desire. On this point, it was said, there is no disagreement with the film attorneys.

But, it was explained, there are two courses of action which the companies might take that would call for intervention by the Government. One would be an application to the U. S. District Court at New York for amendment of the decree to incorporate a new selling plan, on which the Department certainly would voice its views. The other would be the adoption of a selling plan which the department believed violated the anti-trust acts, which would call for proceedings by the Government.

MINNESOTA APPEAL HELD UNLIKELY

Appeal of the county court decision which held Minnesota's anti-consent decree law unconstitutional appeared increasingly unlikely this week as the deadline for the filing of appeal papers neared. At Minneapolis on Saturday, June 6th, there was still no official indication of plans to seek an appeal. Only one week remained in which to institute an action.

Ramsey County attorneys would not comment on whether an appeal would be filed. They pointed out unofficially however that there were no public funds available with which to prosecute a further test of the law. If the higher court test is sought it is probable that the Northwest Allied association would be called upon to finance it. Officers said no decision had been reached. Minneapolis exhibitors were of the opinion that the case would end with the lapse of the appeal period. A large majority favor a test of the blocks-of-12 UMPI selling plan, describing it as a satisfactory compromise.

The Department of Justice at present is maintaining a hands-off attitude with respect to the efforts of the industry to develop a new selling method. Officials apparently are not concerned whether they are to be consulted about the plan. There is an implied feeling that the companies now are not going to do anything to jeopardize their situation and revive costly and lengthy litigation.

Aware of UMPI Developments

The blocks-of-12 formula agreed upon by the United Motion Picture Industry, along with cancellation privileges and other changes in selling, trade practices has not been officially submited to the Department of Justice. However, it is understood that the attorney of the film unit of the anti-trust division, under the supervision of Robert Wright, has kept fully abreast of all developments in the unity field.

Since the conclusion of the Schine trial, it is said, Department officers have been studying carefully proposed changes in film selling. They also have examined a number of dissenting messages from regional exhibition groups, the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers and others who have objected to the Unity selling proposals.

The UMPI plan itself, meanwhile, was still in the hands of the legal committee appointed to cast the accepted points in formal language. Their work was almost completed, it was reported, as the group met on Tuesday and again on Wednesday, at the Hotel Astor. Only a few technical points, and some differences on verbiage, remained to be ironed out.

Members of the committee of lawyers which worked on the plan were: Joseph Hazen, Warner Bros., Austin Keough, Paramount; Howard Levinson, Warners; J. Robert Rubin, MGM; Robert Barton, Virginia exhibitors counsel, George Aarons and Abram Myers.

It was expected that when the plan was finally ready copies would be sent to the Department of Justice at Washington, for its inspection, and a date sought on the calendar of Judge Henry W. Goddard in the New York District Federal Court. Judge Goddard, who signed the consent decree, presumably would be requested to incorporate the new selling plan into the decree as a formal amendment.

Wisconsin ITPA Asks UMPI Aid on Shortage

Subsequent run theatre operators in Wisconsin and upper Michigan through their Independent Theatres Protective Association have asked the United Motion Picture Industry to examine a threatened product shortage it was revealed at Milwaukee on Tuesday. Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the ITPA disclosed that the organization had written the UMPI committee of the whole protesting against delay in clearing pictures through first run situations.

Protracted negotiations between first run situations and consenting distributors on each block of five have delayed product seriously in some sectors, it was charged. The letter asserted that although Milwaukee first and key runs were being completed in rapid order many other large city, and circuit runs, in the territory have been subjected to bargaining delays. This, it was said, threatened a serious shortage of current product in subsequent houses.

In New York UMPI headquarters reported that no official communication had been received from the exhibitors association. In any case no date had been set for a meeting of the UMPI committee of the whole.

Poole Urges Wartime Return to Block Sales

Robert Poole, executive secretary of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners and a leader in the UMPI trade practice committee sessions which adopted the blocks-of-12 formula, urged on Monday that exhibitors be permitted to contract for a full year's product as a wartime economy measure. Restriction on gasoline and tires, and the difficulty of traveling to exchange centers, or sending salesmen on frequent visits to exhibitors were advanced by Mr. Poole as reasons for permitting a return to full block booking.

It would, he said, eliminate many sales expenses for which exhibitors now pay directly or indirectly.

STUDIOS DEVISE SUBSTITUTES FOR 19 CRITICAL MATERIALS

WPB Executive, Returning to Washington, Reports Progress on Conservation

The first important results of the meeting of Hollywood chiefs to save critical war materials, became apparent this week. Workable substitutes for 19 materials used in production have been developed by the studios, which have also pledged to cancel films which may consume prohibitive quantities.

This disclosure was made by Harold Hopper, chief of the Motion Picture and Photographic Section of the Consumers Durable Goods Branch of the War Production Board. Mr. Hopper, who took office two weeks ago, returned to Washington Monday night after a week of conferences in Hollywood with studio executives, and those of the guilds and unions.

Meanwhile, conservation continued to be discussed in Hollywood, in meetings of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, latest of which was Monday night. That day, also, Twentieth Century-Fox officials met to draw up methods of accomplishing the company's decision to save 35 per cent of negative and 25 per cent of positive film.

Congratulates Producers On Steps Taken

Mr. Hopper last week congratulated Hollywood leaders of all groups, on their voluntary conservation measures. He said he would report to the WPB that the 19 substitutes would save steel, copper, bronze, aluminum, and rubber. One producer has already cancelled a production which would have used up much of these, he said, adding:

"Everywhere, I have found a full realization of individual responsibility for conserving materials and at the same time preserving the industry that is so necessary to the country's morale."

Mr. Hopper has arranged monthly meetings to be held in Washington, starting June 23rd, between WPB officials and the producers and distributors' advisory committee. The latter will thus be kept informed.

Execution of Mr. Hopper's conservation suggestions has been left to the AMPP, and to two allied organizations: the Materials Conservation Committee, and the Film Conservation Committee.

Committees Set To Function

The Materials Conservation Committee, under the chairmanship of Ben Goetz, represents all studios which are members of the AMPP. It is a controlling group, in the matter of materials consumption, and directs the policies of all studio departments, which have been organized on a conservation platform.

The Film Conservation Committee, organized May 27th under chairmanship of M. C. Levee, Artists-Managers Guild executive, represents all branches of the industry, including the AMPP, the Independent Producers Association and the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers.

Active in the FCC are George Stevens and J. P. McGowan, Screen Directors Guild; Kenneth Thomson and George Murphy, Screen Actors Guild; Loyd Wright, SIMPP; Fred Jackman, American Society of Cinematographers; Allan Scott, Screen Writers Guild; Y. Frank Freeman and Fred W. Beetson, AMPP; I. E. Chadwick and Lindsley Parsons, IPPA; Herb Aller, Studio Photographers Local 659; Richard Day, Society of Motion Picture Art Directors; M. C. Levee, AMG; William Koenig, B. B. Kahane and Ben Goetz, studio managers; Herbert Freston, Maurice Benjamin and M. B. Silberberg, Special Industry Coordinating Committee; Frederick Y. Smith, Society of Motion Picture Film Editors; and John Nickolaus, representing laboratory workers.

Alterations, Additions Banned for Duration

An outgrowth of the Hollywood meetings is a decision announced by Y. Frank Freeman, president of the AMPP, whereby studio heads will forego alterations, additions or improvement to plant equipment for the duration of the war.

Additionally, Mr. Freeman said, studio executives have pledged themselves to reinspect production projects on agenda with a view to eliminating any which require an inordinate consumption of critical materials.

The War Production Board has reopened executives have pledged themselves to re-in-of studio truck and bus facilities, which bogged down because it seemed difficult to mesh transportation requirements for various studios.

There will be a meeting in Hollywood next week to revive the project.

Mr. Freeman was to meet this week with a Screen Directors Guild committee, which completed a survey on conserving film stock, and chemicals.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Research Council last week appointed an economy committee, under Daniel Clark and Douglas Shearer.

Membership of this committee includes, in addition to the co-chairmen: John Aalberg, John Arnold, Bernard Brown, George Carrington, Farciot Edouart, Herbert Griffin, E. H. Hansen, John Hilliard, Dr. E. M. Honan, Barton Kreuzer, Grover Laube, Colonel Nathan Levinson, John Livadary, Charles L. Lootens, Dr. Burton F. Miller, Wesley C. Miller, Thomas T. Moulton, John Nickolaus, Elmer Raguse, Loren Ryder and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

The Motion Picture Conservation Committee, representing all studios, this week advocated use of still pictures for wardrobe and set tests.

The Twentieth Century-Fox meeting to enforce the company's decision to cut use of negatives and positives, was called by William Goetz, vice-president. Department heads submitted recommendations to him. The Fox action was taken voluntarily, it was emphasized. The percentages by which it will cut film use, are those frequently mentioned as likely to be set for the whole industry by the WPB.

Conversion of the radio industry to war production was the chief topic at the 18th annual convention of the Radio Manufacturers Association, which opened in Chicago Tuesday, at the Stevens Hotel, with 350 attending.

CONSERVATION IS N. Y. TOPIC

Conservation of film stock, especially in its use for prints, was the subject of several meetings last week between distributors' executives, at the New York headquarters of the War Activities Committee. Also discussed were the possible effects of the War Production Board order to curtail negatives, which is reported to be impending.

Theatre Building Halts By WPB Ban

Construction of amusement projects costing more than $5,000 stopped Saturday, under War Production Board order. In Washington, however, it was said some applications for completion of theatres and other projects had been filed.

It was added that prior to the announcement of the ban, only two at most of authorizations had been issued. They are to be continued, it was added, for the very reasons influencing the authorizations originally.

Permission to extend construction work on his Asbury Park, New Jersey, recreational center 15 days beyond last Saturday, was reportedly secured from the War Production Board last week by Walter Reade, circuit operator. He returned to his New York office from Washington Friday, June 5th, and it was reported he pleaded the project was 98 per cent complete, with material to finish on hand.

The War Production Board set seven "criteria" to be met before approval of amusement construction:

1. It is essential for the war effort.
2. Postponement of construction would be detrimental to the war effort.
3. It is not practical to rent or convert existing facilities for the purpose.
4. The construction will not result in duplication or unnecessary expansion of existing plants or facilities now under construction or about to be constructed.
5. All possible economies have been made in the project, resulting in deletion of all non-essential items and parts.
6. The projects have been designed of the simplest type, just sufficient to meet the minimum requirements.
7. Sufficient labor, public utilities, transportation, raw materials, equipment and the like are available to build and operate the plant. The manufactured product can be used at once or stored until needed.

Axis Films Boycotted By Uruguayan Public

European Pictures Fail at Lone Outlet; U. S. Newsreels Popular

by PAUL BODO
in Montevideo

There are no European pictures in Uruguayan theatres. Teatro Artigas, leased a year ago to the same concern which operates a couple of theatres in Buenos Aires, dedicated to German pictures and Nazi, Italian and Japanese newsreels, presented the same films here but, although it was heavily supported, it failed to do any business. This year the contract was not renewed and Teatro Artigas reopened as a legitimate theatre under the former management.

French pictures, always popular with our public, are not available. So far only two old French films have been presented, both with excellent box office returns. Programs are formed exclusively from American, Argentine, and a few British pictures.

Current hits are: "El Sargento York" (Sergeant York, WB) in Trocadero, and "A la Habana me Voy" (Weekend in Havana, 20th-Fox) in Cine Ambassador. Other successes were: "Puerta de Oro" (Hold Back the Dawn, Para.); "La Sospecha" (Suspicion, RKO); "El Halcon Maltes" (The Maltese Falcon, WB); "Tienda de Locuras" (The Big Store, MGM); "El Hombre y la Bestia" (Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," MGM). From the Argentine productions, "Sonar no Cuesta Nada" (It Costs Nothing to Dream) and "Adolescencia" (Adolescence) can compete with any American picture as far as success and returns are concerned.

Newsreel Houses Draw Heavy Grosses

Since the outbreak of war the public has been more interested in newsreels than ever. Each of the local circuits, Glucksmann and CENSA, operate a newsreel theatre. Glucksmann transformed the 900 seat Cine Ariel for this purpose and CENSA—Compania Exhibidora Nacional S. A.—the Cine Azul, which has a capacity of 500. Both theatres, situated in the heart of the town, do excellent business. The show opens at 11 a.m. and goes on without interruption till the time allowed by new regulations of the local authorities. The program is composed of American, British and some Argentine and local newsreels as well as cartoons and short subjects.

A big attraction at the Cine Ariel was the Russian documentary film "Canción de Juventud" (Song of Youth).

CENSA did such business with the relatively small Cine Azul that the management has planned the construction of a new theatre built for this purpose. Work has begun on the house, which will be named Cine Victory. It is situated in the center of the business district, where Avenida Agraciada, one of the main arteries, flows into Avenida 18 de Julio.

The summer season used to be very weak in Montevideo as the best customers of the first class houses were at the summer resorts of the famous Uruguayan beaches. But in the last three years, due to the recently built modern air conditioned movies, the theatres, at one time closed during the summer, now do excellent business. The outstanding success of the summer just closing, was Chaplin's "El Gran Dictador." The Chaplin production was banned in Argentine and this, together with the protests of the Argentine press. resulted in excellent publicity for the exhibitions of "The Great Dictator" in Uruguay.

A group of Argentine tourists—thousands of them spend their holidays in Uruguay—asked Bernardo Glucksmann, local representative of UA, and owner of the largest circuit, to show "El Gran Dictador." The production was booked for the Rex Theatre. The picture was held over for five weeks and shown daily in two performances, mostly before Argentine tourists.

Conservation Brings Closing Hour Rules

In order to save fuel and electric current, strict regulations are enforced by the authorities. All theatres have to close on working days at 11:30 p.m., and at midnight on Sundays, festivals and the nights preceding such days. The circulation of street cars has been regulated in accordance to the closing time of theatres. At the beginning of the last show, but in any case at 9 p.m., all outside lights have to be shut down.

The new time regulation has called for certain changes in the program. Theatres working on double feature policy shifted partially to single feature. In the evening they only give one full length feature, American and British newsreel, and some shorts.

The traffic police of Montevideo have prepared some short films about the new traffic regulations enforced recently. For the first time the public of our capital has been instructed how to behave correctly on the streets during the hours of heavy traffic. The one reel pictures are included in the regular program of all theatres. Special interest has been shown in a feature about the school children and traffic in the proximity of schools.

Loew's have again closed the Poli theatre, Meriden, Conn. after a short run with Polish pictures. The house has been dark for two years.

AMUSEMENT BUS TRAVEL BANNED

More rationing affecting transportation arrived this week; but its effect was seen beneficial to theatres. Tuesday, the Office of Defense Transportation banned inter-city bus travel to places of amusement after July 1st. The ruling affects buses whose "primary purpose" is servicing of beaches, dancing pavilions, race tracks, and the like—including theatres. Expected to benefit, however, are city theatres. The other amusements mentioned are normally competitive.

Universal Declares $2 Preferred Dividend

A quarterly dividend of $2 per share on preferred stock, has been declared by Universal's board of directors. The dividend maintains arrears on that stock at $68 per share.

This week or next, the company's report for the second quarter of the current fiscal year, will be made public. Observers expected it to show a substantial gain over the $1,513,000 reported for the first quarter before Federal taxes and special reserves. They predicted, however, that because of higher taxes, the net would be smaller than the profit shown for the first quarter after such deductions. The profit was $845,000.

Court Approves $1,000,000 Settlement in RCA Suit

A settlement of $1,000,000 in a $300,000,000 stockholders suit against Radio Corporation of America, which charged, in 1940, that its directors had permitted RCA to be mulcted of millions of dollars worth of assets in a stock transfer to General Electric Company and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, was approved by Justice Aaron J. Levy in New York Supreme Court on Wednesday.

Judge Levy gave his approval to a report from Abraham J. Halprin, referee, who urged that stockholders accept a compromise offer from General Electric and Westinghouse in which the two companies agreed to pay $1,000,000 to RCA.

RKO Testimonial For Alperson

Edward L. Alperson, new general manager of RKO Theatres, was given a testimonial dinner Wednesday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York, by RKO employees.

The committee in charge of arrangements included Malcolm Kingsberg, toastmaster; Charles B. McDonald, chairman; Alvin Dawson, Michael Edelstein, Russell Emde, Wilbur B. Survivors are Miss Lupino, another daughter, and his widow. Mr. Lupino had been an actor, writer, and play producer, as well as comedian. He had been on the stage since he was six, and came from a long line of actors. He had appeared in films, plays, musical comedies.

SCHAEFER LEAVING RKO POST, ODLUM TO TAKE OVER, pro tem

Stockholders' Meeting Now Postponed to June 17th; To Elect New Board

George J. Schaefer is leaving the helm of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, a move long in contemplation. Early in the week he wrote his resignation as president of the RKO production, distribution and exhibition affiliates. The resignation, however had not been formally presented to RKO's board of directors as of midweek.

A twice postponed meeting of the stockholders, called for Wednesday at noon in the offices of Prentice Hall, at Dover, Delaware, was put off a third time, to June 17th.

Active direction of the company, it is understood, will be assumed by Floyd B. Odlum, financier and president of Atlas Corporation, which holds approximately 40 per cent of RKO stock. He will serve on a temporary basis, probably as chairman of the board, until a successor to Mr. Schaefer is selected. Also, Mr. Odlum presumably will undertake to find $3,000,000 or more in new financing needed to build up a product inventory.

The stockholders meeting at Dover, originally scheduled for June 3rd and then postponed, will be the first meeting of RKO stockholders since the company emerged from reorganization in 1939, and the first in more than ten years.

New Directors To Be Elected

The principal business of the stockholders meeting will be the election of a new board of directors. Mr. Schaefer is a board member. The Atlas Corporation, Radio Corporation of America and Rockefeller Center, Inc., owners of the largest blocks of stock, were this week selecting their directorial nominees.

Atlas and the RCA-Rockefeller interests own approximately 40 per cent of both the preferred and common stock in RKO and their candidates are virtually assured of election. No proxies have been sought from holders of the other shares.

Preferred share holders are entitled to elect one-third of the directorate, because dividend arrears exceed $7.50 per share. Common-stock holders are entitled to elect the remaining two-thirds of the board.

Rockefeller Center Interests Aloof

The Rockefeller Center, Inc., interests are not now directly represented on the board of directors, by their own choice. They appear to have taken no position in the present reorganization moves either against or in behalf of the incumbent management. The Rockefeller interests were the original sponsors of Mr. Schaefer's presidency.

It was also reported that efforts by the present management to arrange a refinancing and policy change suitable to stockholders had not crystalized into a specific plan. It was asserted that no such plan had been presented to the board of directors.

Mr. Schaefer, it was reported at midweek, might become a full time director of the industry's War Activities program, representing the screen in Washington and taking over active direction of the War Activities Committee. He is now chairman of the WAC.

Joined Company In October, 1938

Mr. Schaefer was elected president and a director of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation in October, 1938, and also headed the RKO subsidiaries RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and Keith-Albee-Orpheum, the motion picture production and theatre operating units of RKO.

He entered the motion picture business in 1916 with the late Lewis J. Selznick. In 1917 Mr. Schaefer went with Mr. Selznick to World Film, becoming a district sales manager. Three years later he joined Paramount as a booker in the New York exchange and within a year was promoted to manager of the New England territory.

He was appointed Paramount sales manager for District No. 1 in 1927 and soon afterwards became Paramount's general sales manager. Mr. Schaefer was named president of Famous Theatres Corporation in 1935 and a vice president of the reorganized Paramount Pictures corporation. In 1936 he left Paramount to head domestic and Canadian sales for United Artists, as vice president and general manager. He left UA in October, 1938, to accept the leadership of the reorganized RKO.

Transfers, Shifts Of Loew's Circuit

A number of promotions and transfers affecting the personnel of Loew's out-of-town theatres was announced by Joseph R. Vogel in New York Monday. A. H. Beuhrig, Jr., manager of Loew's State, Cleveland, moves to Loew's, Dayton, replacing Orville Crouch who has entered the service. Vaughn O'Neill, assistant at Penn, Pittsburgh, is now manager of the State, Cleveland. Thomas Delbridge, assistant at Loew's Midland, Kansas City, fills the vacancy in Pittsburgh. Martin J. Maher, student assistant at State, Boston, is now the assistant manager at Kansas City. Ira Beck, formerly student assistant at Loew's, Rochester, becomes assistant manager of that theatre.

Republic Purchases Nathanson Franchise

James R. Grainger, president of Republic, completed arrangements in Minneapolis last Friday for purchase of the rights in the franchise for its product owned by Gilbert Nathanson. The franchise covers the Minneapolis territory and the deal becomes effective July 1st.

Astaire Back at RKO

Fred Astaire, dancing film star, will return to the RKO Studio where he first became one of the top screen box office attractions. He will appear in "Look Out Below," a musical to be produced by David Hempstead.

1941-42 Stage Season Ends

Broadway's 1941-42 theatrical season drew to a close last week with 16 days still on the boards, plus two vaudeville shows. Nine dramatic plays, two musical comedies, one revue, a revival of the operetta, "Porgy and Bess," and three plays remaining from previous seasons, comprise the 16 shows continuing. Observers termed the season "moderately successful," although the volume of plays this season had an edge over the previous season of 1940-41. From July, 1941, until the end of May this year, a total of 89 productions reached Broadway stages, including nine musicals, 34 dramas, 21 comedies, 10 revivals, six experimental plays, 4 Gilbert and Sullivan shows, four vaudeville shows and 1 ice show.

Only nine of the 89 plays which opened during the year passed the 100-performance mark. Musicals fared somewhat better, with six opening and four hitting the 100 performances generally regarded as the minimum for a successful production. Two revues, "Sons o' Fun," a definite success and still current, and "Of V We Sing," which represented a semi-professional venture, reached 74 performances. The only revival besides "Porgy and Bess" to pass the 100-mark was "Macbeth" which hit 131 performances.

Four attempts to "bring back vaudeville" were on the boards: "Priorities of 1942," which is still running with close to 200 performances chalked up, and "Top-Notchers" which opened recently, are the survivors. "Keep 'Em Laughing" ran only 77 performances.

Ed Wynn will launch his new vaudeville show featuring himself, Jane Froman and Carmen Amaya, on June 15th, at the Alvin Theatre, following a few pre-Broadway performances. Others in the show include Ken Davidson and Hugh Forgie, the Five Herzogs, Hector and His Pals, the Volga Singers and the Hermanos Trio.

Actors Equity Shows "Profit"

Actors Equity Association had an excess of $41,209 of receipts over expenses for the year ended March 31st, it was reported last Friday at the annual meeting of the actors union at New York's Hotel Astor. This amount obtained despite the fact that 400 dues-paying members have joined the armed forces during the past year. Surplus on hand was reported at $431,084 as compared with $379,893 for the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1941. Total assets amounted to $611,950.

30 STARS TAKE TO THE ROAD TO SELL MORE WAR BONDS

Second Hollywood "Caravan" On Tour To Aid Industry Sales Drive

Another patriotic endeavor to be undertaken by the film industry, in cooperation with the Treasury Department, will be a second nationwide personal appearance tour of screen stars. The project, as announced by the Hollywood Victory Committee, provides for a tour of 30 top film players to reach an estimated 35,000,000 persons in 120 cities, and to help the industry raise an estimated $100,000,000 in sales of war bonds and stamps. The first Hollywood Victory Caravan recently trekked to 13 cities on behalf of Army and Navy Emergency Relief.

The first contingent of the new tour left Hollywood last Friday for Midwest cities and consisted of Donald Crisp, Arleen Whelan, Shirley Ross, Mary Howard, Gale Sondergaard and Mrs. Pat O'Brien. Their first performance was in Milwaukee. Marlene Dietrich was scheduled to join the tour in Chicago and after that appearance, the stars were to separate for small group or single appearances in other Midwestern cities.

Assignments made for Seven Zones

Lana Turner and Marjorie Weaver headed the contingent for the Northwest tour over the weekend. Other stars are scheduled to cover every section of the country. Political and civic officials will join with local showmen in handling local rallies and other demonstrations at which bonds and stamps will be sold. The War and Navy Departments are cooperating by assigning detachments of armed forces as honor guards for the screen luminaries.

The nation has been divided into seven zones for the tour, each zone covered by the appearance of more than one star. Among cities on the list to be visited by the first contingent are: Milwaukee, Madison, Springfield, Monticello, South Bend, Superior, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Sioux City, Des Moines, Rock Island, Moline, Davenport, Toledo, Cleveland, Akron, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, Wenatchee, Spokane, Wallace, and towns in Pennsylvania and Tennessee not yet determined.

Theatres Raise $1,550,000

Funds collected in the nation's theatres for Army and Navy Emergency Relief Fund reached $1,550,000 this week. On Wednesday, announcement was made at national headquarters in New York of the industry's drive that with hundreds of independent and circuit theatres still to send in their checks this figure represented a record-breaking total. The March of Dimes drive totalled $1,450,000, the previous high mark. Nicholas M. Schenck was chairman of the campaign, which was sponsored by War Activities Committee.

STIMSON, KNOX THANK INDUSTRY

The official gratitude of the Army and the Navy, expressed personally by their chiefs, came Tuesday to the Hollywood Victory Caravan, which toured the country for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief Fund.

Secretary of War Henry Stimson wrote: "The work of the Caravan has been an example to all Americans who are determined with us that the minds of our fighting men shall be free from financial worry."

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox wrote: "Assure all those generous, patriotic travelers that the Navy will not soon forget the outstanding work they have done for us."

The big jump in Wednesday's total was due to several large checks, the highest being $260,000 from Warner Bros. theatres. This topped the Loew circuit check of $217,000. RKO theatres remitted $89,745.

Among remittances received at headquarters this week were: Balaban & Katz Theatres, Chicago, $20,909; Balaban & Katz Theatres in Illinois, $36,761; W. S. Butterfield Theatres, Detroit, $36,170; United Detroit Theatres, $21,553; Whisper & Wetsman Theatres, Detroit, $6,943; Associated Theatres, Inc., Detroit, $2,938; Ben & Lou Cohen Theatres, Detroit, $2,380; Schulte's Theatres, Detroit, $2,527; F. H. Durkee Enterprises, Baltimore, $9,720; Wilmer & Vincent Corp. (additional), $1,357, making a total of $8,147.

Also Mullin and Pinanski Theatres Corp., Mass., $31,619; Essaness Theatres, Inc., Chicago, $5,241; Fabian Theatres, Inc., New York City, $14,047; E. M. Loew's Theatres, Mass.. $4,792; Interstate Theatres Corp., Boston, $2,767.

"Hero" Parades Boost Morale

A welcoming parade in New York was the opening gun for a 21-city tour which 15 American and British fighting men will make in the interests of home front morale and in order to stir the American public to greater war consciousness. The tour is sponsored by the U. S. Treasury Department, to stimulate war bond purchases. Coordinator of the demonstrations is Spyros Skouras, president of 20th Century-Fox, who has been so designated by Secretary Morgenthau. The over-all committee of which Mr. Skouras is chairman is known as the War Heroes Parade Committee and was a specifically created division of the film industry's War Activities Committee.

In New York, the committee for Monday's demonstration included Abe Lastfogel, Hal Horne, Robert Weitman, Jack Partington, Stirling Silliphant, Aubrey Schenck, Robert K. Cristenberry, Irving Lesser and Lou Epstein.

Mayor LaGuardia greeted the war heroes officially at City Hall following which the party rode through the financial district of the city, up Broadway, to Times Square, where at 1:00 P. M. a demonstration was held. Bernard M. Baruch headed the Mayor's reception committee, which included Wendell L. Willkie, Joseph D. McGoldrick, Richard C. Patterson, Jr., and Alfred E. Smith.

During the Duffy Square ceremonies, Benny Goodman and Cab Calloway orchestras played and Gracie Fields, British comedienne, sang.

A show and rally were held Monday evening at Madison Square Garden. Following a keynote speech by Mayor LaGuardia, Wendell Willkie introduced the war heroes. Entertainment was provided by a talent-packed show including Kay Kyser's orchestra, Danny Kaye, Ray Bolger, Gracie Fields, Henny Youngman and the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra, Glee Club and Rockettes.

The honored Americans are Lieut. Commr. Harold P. Smith, Ensign Donald F. Mason, First Lieut. Elliott Vandevander, Jr., Lieut. William C. Carrithers and Second Lieut. George S. Welch. The British group includes: Squadron Leader John Daring Nettleton, Pilot Officer A. F. Taylor, Flight Lieut. Carroll Warren McColpin, Flight Sergt. Maxwell A. Riddell, Lieut. Thomas Wilson Boyd, Wing Commander M. Loudon, Lieut. J. Michael Hall, Sergt. D. N. Huntley, Sergt. R. George Herbert, Chief Engine Room Artificer Harry Howard.

Accompanied by an official of the Treasury Department and an Army Air Corps officer, the heroes will tour the country in an Army plane. The itinerary is as follows:

Philadelphia's turnout for the 15 menaces to the Axis was held on Thursday, with an official city reception at Independence Hall, luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton, a parade and demonstration, followed by a celebration at Reyburn Plaza in the evening. Mayor Bernard Samuel headed the reception committee, which included Benjamin Ludlow of the Treasury Department, and Ted Schlanger, local coordinator for the War Activities Committee in that city.

Pittsburgh's celebration will be held next Monday, June 15th. M. A. Silver, general manager of Warner Bros., and Frank Harris arranged the plans of the local observance during which the warriors will tour war plants and attend a public rally to boost the sale of War Bonds. Bond Cash on the Drumhead

Co-chairmen John J. Payette, of Warner Brothers, and Carter Barron, of Loew's, paraded the Roxyettes from the Earle Theatre through the streets of Washington, D. C., to inaugurate the sale of War Bonds and Stamps at theatres in the capital.

Circuit Bond Sales Reach $150,000

Reports on the first week's sale of wartime securities in motion picture theatres participating in the industry's War Bond and Stamp Drive, indicate a banner start toward the $100,000,000 goal set by theatremen for the end of the year.

In New York on Monday, Loew's Theatres reported a total of $150,000 in war bonds and stamps sold at the 140 theatres of the circuit from the start of the campaign, May 30th, to June 4th, an average of more than $1,000 per house for the six days. Of the total, $75,252 was in stamps and $74,806 in bonds. The largest total was at the Embassy, North Bergen, N. J., where Emanuel Light, manager, reported a sale of $15,642, with $12,000 of this amount obtained on the first day, it was said.

According to the circuit, sales at neighborhood and subsequent run houses comparatively are running better than at the large first runs, particularly in New York. The State Theatre on Broadway reported $2,500 for the six days; the Capitol, $1,175. Outside the New York metropolitan area the largest amount was obtained by the Orpheum, Boston, with $2,500. The circuit's 72 theatres in the New York metropolitan area have accounted for $51,992 in stamps and $49,531 in bonds. Out-of-town theatres reported $23,260 in stamps, $25,275, bonds.

To stimulate interest in the drive, Fanchon and Marco has offered various prizes of bonds to managers of its first-run theatres and to those of the St. Louis Amusement Company circuit in St. Louis. A $25 bond will be awarded to the manager whose bond booth in the lobby is judged "the best." $50 war bonds will go to the manager who has the best record of sales in proportion to grosses and who has conducted the best campaign. In addition, the company is offering to each purchaser of $1 stamps at any of the 30 theatres a free chance on a six month's pass to the theatre the buyer patronizes.

First San Francisco theatre to construct a War Bond booth was Dan McLean's Embassy on Market Street, which sold more than $1,000 worth of stamps during the first week of the drive. At the El Rey, a neighborhood house of the Golden State Theatres' circuit, more than $2,000 in bonds were sold to patrons. Offering its facilities to students of San Francisco State College for a "Victory Rally," the management of the latter theatre brought Abbot and Costello and Al Donahue and his orchestra to the house for the occasion, to help boost the sale of wartime securities.

Delaware's sale of bonds in theatres throughout that state got off to a good start with the purchase of a $2,000 bonds by the J. Ferdinand Speer Post, 615, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in a formal ceremony which took place in the lobby of Loew's Aldine Theatre, Wilmington. Manager Edgar J. Doob was host to a group of the state's outstanding civic and patriotic leaders. Among those present were Lewis S. Black, Warner Theatre manager and chairman of the bond committee for Delaware; Mayor Albert W. James and Benjamin Shindler, manager of the Ace Theatre.

At a meeting of Baltimore owners of neighborhood theatres last week, Arthur B. Price, exhibitor, urged the 30 showmen present: "It seem to me that if we plan to ask customers to buy bonds, we should set an example." Within five minutes, the exhibitors present subscribed to $110,000 worth of bonds.

Studios Set July 15th War Savings Deadline

Studio chairmen members of the War Savings Staff motion picture committee at a meeting held last Friday in Hollywood at the Paramount studio, set July 15th as the deadline for completing 100 per cent employee participation in war savings. It is estimated that weekly payroll deductions from approximately 17,500 workers in film studios and allied industries for purchase of war bonds has reached $135,000. An additional $100,000 per week is reported to have been invested in bonds through cash sales, making a weekly total of $235,000. The committee's goal is $300,000 weekly.

Variety Clubs Boost Bond Sales

War Bond sales by the Variety Club of Los Angeles have totaled $769,618, according to the latest report reecived by National Chief Barker John H. Harris from David Bershon, chairman of the war savings committee of the Southern California Tent. Of the total, $141,532 was raised within the membership of the tent, and $628,086 was sold through theatres and distributing companies.

The Variety Post of the American Legion in Cleveland took over the Wm. Taylor Sons & Company window last week to sell war bonds and stamps and collected $207,000 in five days, a record for that headquarters, it was said.

Ways and means of increasing the sale of war bonds during the current theatre drive were discussed at a luncheon meeting of the Cincinnati Variety Club last week. Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman of the War Activities Committee, addressed the gathering. Among the 100 exhibitors and others who attended were Isaac Libson, managing director, and Arthur Frudenfeld, division manager of RKO; F. W. Huss, president of Associated Theatres, Cincinnati, and P. J. Wood, president of the ITO of Ohio.

Shift Ohio Circuit Staff

John Murphy, head of the Jackson and Murphy Circuit of Columbus, Ohio, has named Thor Haucheld, former manager of the Olentangy, manager of the Uptown and chief of advertising and publicity for all houses. Arch McCleese becomes manager of the Olentangy with supervision over the Alhambra, where Douglas Warner, former Uptown doorman, is now manager. David Brown, assistant at the Uptown, succeeds Tom Motts, who has resigned.

Altec Signs Circuit Deals

The Wometco Circuit in Florida has signed an agreement with Altec Service for sound and repair-replacement service for their 18 theatres. A. Fiore represented Altec. United Detroit Theatres signed an additional contract with Altec to assume responsibility for booth maintenance in their 19 theatres in addition to sound and repair service.

Army Calls Tim Holt

Tim Holt, RKO western star, was ordered to report to the Army Air Corps for commissioning last week while on location work for "Singing Guns." He has been granted 90 days to complete picture assignments.

RODGERS TELLS ALLIED GROUP NO DARK MOTIVES IN 'UNITY'

Full Cooperation Urged by Sales Heads; Myers Hits Priority Handling

Independent exhibitors must not lose their heads. They must cooperate, and make the United Motion Picture Industry live up to its name. Their leaders must not suspect dark motives behind unimportant, possibly inadvertent, actions by the distributors.

This plea for continuing tolerance, and support of the "Unity" program came Friday last to the exhibitors specifically from William F. Rodgers, Unity chairman and sales manager of MGM, at the closing business session of the New Jersey Allied Theatre Owners at the Hotel Ambassador, Atlantic City. The session was followed that evening by a testimonial to past president H. A. Cole of Texas, the banquet winding up a three day convention, the real import of which was the fate of UMPI and Allied's relation to it, exposited both by Mr. Rodgers and by Abram F. Myers, National Allied's general counsel.

Mr. Myers deplored UMPI's "failure" to represent the film industry in securing priorities, adding that "the main concern that all of us feel now is whether the possibilities of the unity movement have been exhausted, or whether UMPI can still serve a useful purpose—and our doubt is occasioned not so much by its failure to accomplish more, as by the seeming attitude of some of those who were advocates of unity six months ago.

Sees Future of Film Industry at Stake

Mr. Rodgers asserted that he was in "UMPI up to my neck" and said he would stay that way. The future of the industry is at stake, he declared, unless exhibitors see eye to eye.

Minor actions, he continued, are being exaggerated. Many industry executives are giving more attention to other things, than to their own business. They are making small mistakes, he added, and making them in a period when many are "bordering on hysteria."

Mr. Rodgers said he wanted to forestall "drastic action" by those who suspected dark motives behind small actions by distributors.

Unity, he believed, has not to date "even scratched the surface" of its possibilities. Mr. Rodgers asserted he wanted producers and all others of the film industry in UMPI.

Of UMPI's hesitancy to represent the whole industry in securing priorities, Mr. Rodgers said he agreed with those who think it should; but that, thus far, the Government preferred to deal with motion pictures branch by branch. He said he thought it might be persuaded to change its viewpoint.

Unity means so much, Mr. Rodgers said, that it has accomplished things impossible but "six or seven months ago"; and he cited examples from the business experience of his company.

Proceeding with evidences of the benefits of Unity, Mr. Rodgers cited the Lew Ayres "situation," which he said he had placed before independent exhibitor leaders, stressing MGM's stake in the Ayres' films.

All the exhibitor leaders backed him, Mr. Rodgers added; and "as a result, we retrieved what might have been a tremendous financial loss."

Pleads for Full Personal Cooperation

He asked exhibitors to make every "personal effort" to cooperate. He asked them not to "lose their heads." Distributors, concerned with the war's problems are very cautious, and are conscious of their obligations, he said.

He asked cooperation especially on playing the Victory (Government-suggested) shorts, for which rental will be charged. "No matter what policy a company adopts, it is for one cause," he reminded, adding:

"Without your support, we are going to fall down in the eyes of our Government."

He cited producers' expenditures in giving 1,200 prints of 300 new subjects with trailers, to combat soldiers, and the expense in reducing from 35 to 16 mm. This was remindful, he said, of the producers' share in the war.

Myers Attacks Priority Failure

In addition to noting UMPI's failure to deal with priorities, Mr. Myers charged, "It might be because certain interests feel they have a special 'in' with the War Production Board from which they can derive special benefits or protection and are unwilling to risk the loss of these anticipated benefits in order to cooperate with a committee acting for the industry as a whole. This is the negation of unity. It is unadulterated selfishness," Mr. Myers said.

He noted the UMPI's new selling plan was limited to a single year, because next year the Justice Department would take the whole decree under examination.

The Department will adjudge the decree by its effect toward restoring lawful competitive conditions, he said.

He added that distributors who had not participated in the UMPI conciliation plan apparently felt they had a "whip hand."

"It is out of step with the times," he said, "and it persisted in will spell the end of unity."

Kupper Pledges For Cooperation

Twentieth Century-Fox will give sympathetic consideration, individually, to small town exhibitors' complaints, William J. Kupper, executive assistant to Tom Connors, 20th-Fox sales manager, said. Precedent will not hold, he said, adding "We're all in this together."

Leon Bamberger, UMPI executive secretary, noted it was dealing with national problems, therefore not superseding local exhibitor acactions. He pledged it to be effective, but stressed the need for exhibitor aid, particularly in serving on UMPI-appointed local groups.

Francis Harmon, War Activities Committee Coordinator, outlined its history, noting the high content of exhibitors on aiding committees, and that 14,521 theatres now pledged support. He said exhibitors were doing by voluntary means what "in Hitler's Germany they would be compelled to do," and that the film industry was "not only doing its job, it is also trying to prove the worth of the 'voluntary way.'"

Other speakers Friday afternoon were Earle Sweigert, Paramount; Clarence Eisman, United Artists; Henderson M. Richey, MGM; Paul Terry, shorts producer.

With Joseph Reed, Connecticut, national vice-president, presiding, the Eastern regional directors that morning endorsed the national Allied's Chicago bulletin assailing high rentals; asked units to follow the endorsement; and asked exhibitors to resist to the legal limit demands for "extortionate and unfair film prices."

Climax of the testimonial to Colonel H. A. Cole, past president, was presentation to him by M. A. Rosenberg, national president, of a $1,000 war bond, gift from all Allied units. Toastmaster was Mr. Rosenberg. Among speakers were Harry Kalmine, Warners; Mr. Kupper, Mr. Rodgers; J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association; Sidney Samuelson, business agent of the Eastern Pennsylvania Allied; Mr. Reed, Mr. Myers; George Dembow, National Screen Service.

All Jersey Allied officers and directors were re-elected. Officers are Harry Loewenstein, president; Maury Miller, vice-president; David Mate, secretary.

Sell War Shorts Separately

Allied's Eastern regional unit directors voted Thursday afternoon, June 4th, that war short subjects, produced at Government behest, be leased by each distributor on separate contract, showing they are Government films produced without profit.

That day, too, Mr. Rosenberg stressed confidence in UMPI, and asserted theatres' war activities were most important now.

Colonel Cole said unity could not be achieved without relief from high film rentals. He urged UMPI to see that no theatre closed, and to take over WAC activities.

FOX WILL DELIVER FIVE IN AUGUST

Twentieth Century-Fox will deliver five pictures in August, regardless of acceptance by the Justice Department of the United Motion Picture Industry's new sales method, providing release of 12 films en bloc. This was announced to the Allied of New Jersey Atlantic City convention Friday, June 5th, by William Kupper, the company's executive assistant to Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution. Mr. Kupper asserted the release of five pictures that month was not to evade the UMPI plan but merely to provide Fox's customers with pictures. He added that if the plan was approved later, Fox would release seven more pictures that month, and show some of them.

COAST READY FOR BLACKOUT WHEN JAPS HIT IN PACIFIC

Theatre Defense Bureau Credited with Prevention of Serious Slump

Los Angeles theatre grosses were ranging from normal to 20% off toward the end of the week backlighted by the Japs' attack on Dutch Harbor.

It had taken seven days of an unpublicized alert, and the 60,000 Civilian Defense people and contacts notified of it in official confidence, to thin down the attendance to that extent.

It had required, further, the silencing of radios from 9 p.m. to dawn three nights in succession to give the populace a stay-near-home tendency.

Only theatres well out of walking distance from residential sections dipped as much as 20%.

Neighborhood houses stayed at normal or close by.

Business at in-between cinemas varied proportionately. On Saturday attendance regained normal proportions despite continuance of radio precautions and on Sunday all grosses were back up to par or above. Radio stations resumed normal operating schedules Sunday night.

It had taken the Theatre Defense Bureau only five months to prepare the citizenry psychologically for this tranquil acceptance of officially proclaimed danger.

How thoroughly it had prepared may perhaps be more accurately measured, however, by the experience of May 25th, which followed upon no period of seven days in which the confidings of 60,000 persons confided to had permeated the community.

May 25th was a Monday.

On the midevening of May 24th Los Angeles and 50 miles round caught a 47 minute blackout ascribed subsequently to "unidentified planes later identified."

It was the area's third blackout.

After the first, grosses were down for three days, scraping bottom the first.

After the second, business recovered its balance on the second day.

"Biggest Monday Business"

The Sunday of the May 24th blackout was followed next day by what Charles P. Skouras, president of National Theatres, last week described as "the biggest Monday business in the history of Fox West Coast theatres."

Responsibility for that state of affairs is placed by Mr. Skouras squarely in the laps of the Theatre Defense Bureau.

Activity of that organization dates from the Sunday on which the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor.

That day B. V. Sturdivant, founder and director of the Bureau, went down to the City Hall and placed the personnel, properties and resources of Fox West Coast Theatres at the command of Mayor Fletcher Bowron.

Mayor Bowron was right busy at the moment, what with Washington on the long distance 'phone saying it was likely the town would be bombed shortly after nightfall, and told him to come back next day with a plan.

Next day Mr. Sturdivant did so.

So did hundreds of other people, ranging from corporation heads to cranks with defense gadgets for sale, and the Mayor was still pretty busy.

But, as the Mayor now tells it, the Sturdivant plan looked like it might really work, particularly if the planner prosecuted it with the same persistence he displayed in presenting it. Wherefore it was so ordered.

Confidence of Public Won by Campaign

By last week it had proved itself so well that Los Angeles Defense Director George Hjelte pronounced it the most progressive, reliable and efficient unit in the city's defense setup.

The list of its achievements is long.

The sum of them is the community's complete confidence in the motion picture theatre as a place in which to be and stay or, if one is elsewhere outside of home, to go to when the sirens start screaming. One of the jobs undertaken by the Bureau, with municipal authority, has been to educate the population in the knowledge that theatre buildings are and by legal requirement must be of Class A construction, therefore safer against fire or other destructive hazard than most business structures and virtually all dwellings. Indolent Angelenos hadn't thought much about things like that before.

On the physical preparations side the Bureau has—

1—Made available to exhibitors at cost transcriptions of carefully phrased announcements informing of start, progress and end of alert or blackout, without stampeding the customers.

2—Designed and obtained official approval of blackout lights for lobbies (later adopted by other places of business).

3—Equipped theatres with all safety appliances, materials and facilities prescribed by police and fire departments, maintaining continuing inspection of same.

4—Set up a communications system whereby 709 places of amusement (dance halls and bowling alleys as well as theatres) are notified instantly and simultaneously of alarms.

5—Organized the Battalion of Safety for protection and self-discipline of children attending matinee performances.

6—Trained 2,000 employees in First Aid, providing on-the-spot emergency services in all theatres.

7—Publicized all these measures along direct informative lines.

8—Combined the foregoing and other detailed information in a manual used as basis for the manual issued by the Washington Office of Civilian Defense.

And on the side of morale in support of the war effort the Bureau has—

1—Supplied exhibitors with a Star Spangled Banner trailer for use at start and end of every show.

2—Instituted a series of trailers promoting the purchase of war bonds and stamps, contributions to the U.S.O., the Red Cross, all approved agencies.

3—Established as fixed practice the piping in of all Presidential broadcasts.

4—Set a record of 99% use of government-sponsored Victory Films.

Every theatre circuit in the Los Angeles area and virtually every independent exhibitor operating as many as one theatre belongs to and functions in cooperation with the Theatre Defense Bureau.

Every ballroom, bowling alley and cabaret in the area was included automatically in the initial formation of the Bureau and have kept stride with the theatres, but these are in process of being set up now as independent members of the newly formed Amusement Industry Committee, an arrangement which places them on nominal par with the Theatre Defense Bureau, which will continue to run the show however.

As many more as may desire are under blanket invitation to communicate with the Los Angeles Bureau and obtain complete data.

Elsewhere, Too: Dimouts, Blackouts

New York's first city-wide blackout, Friday, June 5th, 9:30 to 9:50 P. M., had no effect upon Times Square theatre attendance, managers reported. The people of the city have been conditioned by local and borough blackout tests.

While for the 20 minutes of the blackout no tickets were sold, this was not an appreciable factor because of the time of the blackout, it was said. Moreover, patronage before and after, in the neighborhoods as well as Times Square, counter-balanced cessation of ticket sales.

Approximately 580 theatres were affected, serving 8,000,000 persons. The blackout was 95 per cent perfect, officials declared. It covered 320 square miles.

For Philadelphia, dusk to dawn blackout, June 23rd, has been ordered. The expressed idea is to simulate actual air raid conditions. Thirty other Pennsylvania counties, as far west as Gettysburg and Lewisburg, will share the blackout, which two nights later will be enforced for the rest of the state.

WAC "ENVOYS" ON EXHIBITOR TOUR

How to participate most effectively in the work of the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry will be explained to exhibitor organizations through the country by Francis Harmon, Arthur Mayer, and Si Fabian, WAC officials, who this week began a tour to dispense the "information." The men are also outlining the work and plans of the WAC.

Alstock Named to Whitney Post as Coordinator

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Francis Alstock, formerly with RKO and Selznick-International and more recently assistant to John Hay Whitney, last week was named director of the motion picture division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, to succeed Mr. Whitney, who became a captain in the Army Air Corps and will go on active duty in the intelligence branch sometime this month. Captain Whitney left last Friday for Mexico, presumably on Inter-American business. He was last reported, on Tuesday, in Hollywood, where he was the guest of the Association of Motion Picture Producers at a luncheon in the Beverly Hills Hotel for 17 producers and leaders of the film industry. Y. Frank Freeman presided.

Captain Whitney will leave for the Intelligence Officers Training School at Harrisburg, Pa., about June 20th, for a six weeks' training course. Afterwards, it is reported, he will be assigned to London.

Mr. Alstock is a graduate of the University of Oregon and the Harvard Business School.

Official Announcement From Nelson Rockefeller

The change in organization was announced personally by Nelson A. Rockefeller.

"I am sure that Mr. Whitney will continue his interest in inter-American relations, a field in which his services have been of such great value in the past," Mr. Rockefeller said in a formal statement.

"Mr. Whitney has been largely responsible for enlisting the full and generous cooperation of the motion picture industry in the inter-American program, as well as organizing the non-theatrical production program of the office. It is with deep regret that we see Mr. Whitney leave."

Mr. Rockefeller explained that the motion picture division was established in October, 1940, at the time of Mr. Whitney's appointment, working in cooperation with the Department of State and the Motion Picture Society of the Americas, a permanent organization composed of the heads of all studios and guilds which has dedicated itself to the furtherance of the inter-American program through the medium of the motion picture.

Reports 300 Films To Be Released

"In the non-theatrical field," it was explained in a statement dealing with the film work, "the division has released 69 films for distribution in the other American republics and 34 for distribution in the United States. These films, which deal with such subjects as war production, science, education and government, are designed to speed the interchange of knowledge and understanding among the peoples of the hemisphere. By December of this year there will be 300 such films available for general use.

"In the theatrical field, the division has had the fullest cooperation of the industry, which since the inception of the motion picture program of the Office of Inter-American Affairs has released 18 feature pictures based on themes relating to the other American republics, and has currently in production 12 additional feature pictures of particular significance to the inter-American program. In addition, the industry has set up machinery by which all films based on inter-American themes are carefully supervised by experts in various fields to insure accuracy in treatment and interpretation.

"In the field of newsreels, the five United States newsreel companies have materially increased their coverage of inter-American events, which they circulate every week in virtually all of the motion picture theatres of the hemisphere. To supplement the work of the regular newsreels, the division has arranged for the compilation of two 16-mm newsreel summaries to be distributed monthly throughout the other American republics for non-theatrical showing."

Schaefer Comments On Resignation

George J. Schaefer, chairman of the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, made the following statement in New York last Thursday:

"The resignation of John Hay Whitney, as Director of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, will be received by the industry with great regret. In the accomplishment of the broad purposes which our nation has undertaken, it is most essential that there be a thorough understanding and full cooperation between the industry and the Office of the Coordinator. Mr. Whitney's long experience in the industry and his sympathetic understanding of its problems eminently qualified him to serve as the liaison executive with the Federal Agency. All representatives of the industry who have participated in its efforts are keenly conscious of the value of his counsel and constructive activities."

ALLIED PLANS PARTS POOL

A pool from which theatre and projection maintenance parts may be drawn to aid the exhibitor awaiting execution of priority requests, will be formed by Allied, its Eastern regional unit directors decided at the Jersey Allied convention in Atlantic City's Hotel Ambassador, last week. Theatres will take inventories, which will be filed in the national office. Eastern directors will meet more often, to exchange information more rapidly in changing times, the Eastern directors decided, setting meetings for the week of July 6th, in Connecticut; August 10th, New York state; September 14th, Philadelphia.

Reward for Seat Vandals

Recently-renovated seats in the Northio Paramount theatre, in Hamilton, Ohio, have been mutilated by patrons. The house is now offering a $50 reward, flashed on the screen daily, to anyone supplying information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

Mexican Union Workers Bar Axis Nationals

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Picture workers are prominently among the several unions of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's strongest labor organization, which have begun a unique and intensive boycott of all Germans, Italians and Japanese. Nationals of these Axis countries are effectively barred from the theatres because cashiers refuse to sell tickets to them and if they do manage to get tickets, doormen bar them.

This ban is also being exercised by employees of night clubs, cabarets, restaurants and other amusement places.

Sabotage by Axis agents is strongly suspected in the damaging of the Cine Alameda, built at a cost of $210,000, the newest and smartest theatre of Guadalajara, capitol of Jalisco State. The damage, estimated at $25,000 and done after the last show at night, included the smashing of most of the seats and destruction of the screen, projection room and apparatus.

The Guadalajara police have enlisted the aid of federal G-men in investigating the case.

Latest Mexican company to open a foreign branch, the Gallardo Bros., distributors, have arranged to open two theatres in Tegucigalpa, capital of Honduras. The theatres are to specialize in the exhibition of Mexican films.

Mexican picture workers now have two unions with the organization of the Mexican Union of the Cinematographic Industry Workers which has its headquarters at Calle de Palma Norte, 335, Mexico City, and belongs to the Confederation of Workers and Peasants. This organization is the rival of what had been the sole film workers' labor organization, the Cinematographic Workers Syndicate which has 7,000 members and is affiliated with the Confederation of Mexican Workers, long ruler of labor in this country but whose power is now beginning to wane. The Union's membership is not stated but it is believed to be several thousand. Officials of the new Union, which declares that it is for "justice and equity for everybody" (presumably employers, too), are:

Francisco Pichardo, secretary general, Jose Juan Vega, Wilebaldo Solis and Alfonso Rodriguez, vice secretaries, and Maria Guadalupe Delgado, publicity representative.

Britton to Argentine for RKO

Leon Britton, formerly Far Eastern supervisor for RKO Radio, left New York recently for Buenos Aires to assume the managing directorship of the company's branches in Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay. Joining RKO Radio's foreign department in December, 1937, Mr. Britton established the company's offices in China, Philippines, Dutch East Indies, and Singapore. Later he assumed charge of the India office with headquarters in Bombay,

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The art of motion picture sound and sound research lost a top-flight engineer this week, at the hands of Mars, when those two Navy blimps crashed in mid-air over the Atlantic, off Jersey's shores, and carried into the sea Frank Gilbert, and a dozen other who were aboard them.

Franklin C. Gilbert was only 37, but he had gone far in motion picture sound engineering, in Hollywood's studios and in New York for Western Electric's ERPI, and Altec. Mr. Gilbert left Hollywood nine months ago, where he had been chief engineer for Paramount Pictures, to serve the war effort even before we went to war, as a civilian expert. It was in that capacity, while on an unexplained civilian mission for the U. S. that he was this week lost at sea.

Many a Californian has petitioned the courts to legally change his name from the name of birth to more glamorous screen and marquee billing. But this week, Edward L. And in these days of priorities.

The Rockefellers have been in the real estate business at Rockefeller Center now for an even ten years. They first opened house in this sector in the spring of 1932, when they turned the keys in the RKO Building, from where this and the other Quigley Publications go forth. It took them more than seven years to raise the other buildings and towers skyward. They followed the RKO and Music Hall Building with the Centre Theatre structure, in the winter of 1932, then the tallest, the 70-odd story RCA Building, which also houses the great studios (free ad) of National Broadcasting, in May, 1933; the British Empire Building, in May, 1933; the Maison Francaise, in October, 1933; International Building, in 1935; Time and Life Building, August, 1937; Associated Press Building, August, 1939; Eastern Air Lines Building, October, 1939, and, finally, the U. The Kansas City Star's review of some weeks back, rapping the 'clowning' in the trial in 20th Century-Fox's "Roxie Hart," got a reminder from Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the film story, that the courtroom exaggerations therein were not too outrageous, Mr. Johnson offering in evidence some of his early court-reporter experiences, starting from the days when he covered the Scopes "monkey" trial in Dayton, Tenn., and observed that "many of the didoes in that trial were simply too fantastic for even such a burlesque as Roxie. I recall," remembered Mr. Johnson, "one profound speculation, carried on at some length, between William Jennings Bryan, the witness, and one of the attorneys for the defense, in which Mr. Bryan upbraided the attorney for referring to a woman as a mammal. Mr. Bryan simply couldn't let anyone get away with an insult like that. Clarence Darrow's examination of Bryan was also an excursion into daffiness which we would never dare to reproduce in the movies.

$2,915,000 Net for Paramount in 1st Quarter

Paramount Pictures, Inc. estimates its earnings for the first quarter ended April 4, 1942 at $2,915,000, after interest and all charges including estimated provision for all Federal taxes, normal and surtaxes being computed at 40 per cent. This amount includes $544,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and $130,000 of non-recurring income.

In the first quarter of 1942 the company has included in its earnings only those subsidiaries which have operations in the western hemisphere; the operations of all other foreign subsidiaries (including those operating in England, Australia, New Zealand and India) and the company's share of current film rentals therefrom are included only to the extent received or determined to be receivable in dollars.

Earnings for the quarter ended April 5, 1941 were $2,475,000 after interest and all charges including provision for all Federal taxes. These earnings included $650,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries and also included the operations of and the company's share in film rentals from subsidiaries operating in England, Australia, New Zealand and India, which have not been included in 1942 except to the extent above reported.

There were outstanding on April 4, 1942, 126,042 shares of cumulative convertible $100 par value six per cent first preferred stock, all outstanding second preferred stock on February 3, 1942 having been redeemed on that date. FBI Chief in Warner Short

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will do an introduction and commentary for "Divide and Conquer," the Warner Bros. short subject about German espionage activities in the United States. Included in the short are several hundred feet of film smuggled off a German freighter just before America's entry in the war. This sequence, it was said, was made for German authorities and contains confidential information about European activities in the U. S.

"This Is Our Enemy," another Warner short with similar theme, has been completed. A camera and sound crew was in Washington last week to record the commentary spoken by Archibald MacLeish, director of Office of Facts and Figures.

RKO Signs Radio Programs

RKO Radio seeks a potential 26,000,000 customers for its "Sweet and Hot" in signing two popular coast-to-coast radio programs for the forthcoming Tim Whelan musical which co-stars Lucille Ball and Victor Mature. Charles Victor and his "Court of Missing Heirs" program, and Ralph Edwards and the "Truth or Consequences" company have been signed for sequences in the story, which involves the efforts of "Corporal" Mature to clinch a $100,000 inheritance.

Two R.K.O. pictures, which have never had a run in the Philadelphia district, have been booked into the independent Studio Theatre in the central city. The bookings were considered unusual since all the first-run houses in the city are operated by the Warner circuit, which passed up the pictures.

Silver Leaves National Screen

Milton Silver resigned, last Friday, as advertising manager of National Screen Service, in New York, after nine years. He is credited with originating National's widely circulated "baby" advertising. Edward McNamee, of the home office, will take over.

Mr. Silver started with The American Magazine, interrupting that for U. S. Army service in World War I, from where he returned, as co-editor, to Who's Who on the Screen, and The Little Movie Mirror. Margolies Leaves United Artists

Another change in film advertising-publicity officers in New York this week was the resignation of Al Margolies as publicity director at the United Artists home offices. He will become publicity representative for Alfred Hitchcock, at Jack Skirball Productions, Hollywood, effective July 6th.

Hardy Andy Hardy

Don't believe everything you read in the newspapers.

"Andy Hardy's Last Fling", which went before the cameras at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio this week, is not to be Andy Hardy's last fling.

The newspaper columnists who reported that it is were putting two and two together and coming up with five.

According to present plan, MGM will be turning out Hardy pictures as long as Mickey Rooney is around to star in them and, so far as current contemplation goes, on and on after that.

Reasons in evidence are many.

Not in evidence, but asserted confidentially by many attaches of the studio, is the close similarity between the Hardy series revenue and the company's annual net profit.

"Andy Hardy's Last Fling" was one of eleven pictures started last week.

You Can't Escape Forever

Emphasis Placed on Short Subjects

Emphasizing of the short subject, which commenced last month with establishment of monthly short subjects screenings under sponsorship of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, was carried forward last week by George Glass, United Artists director of advertising and publicity in Hollywood, who arranged a private screening of that company's World in Action shorts for publishers and editors of Los Angeles and Hollywood newspapers.

Norman Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, was host to the invitees, who saw "Churchill's Island," "This Is Blitz" and "Food—Weapon of Conquest," projected by equipment installed by UA for the occasion, and found in them substance for editorial comment.

Accent on short subjects, with publicity courted, became a Hollywood policy following announcement that U. S. Coordinator of Films Lowell Mellett had supplied production executives with some 26 ideas considered suitable for use as screen material at this time and that production executives had elected to use most of them in the short subjects form.

Cavalcade of Paramount Stars

Paramount, which some years ago produced the many-starred "If I Had a Million" is to do somewhat the same thing differently in the case of "Star Spangled Rhythm."

Scheduled for the film, to be directed by George Marshall, are Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Paulette Goddard, Victor Moore, Betty Hutton, Ray Milland, Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin, Veronica Lake, Eddie Bracken, Lynn Overman, Alan Ladd, Gil Lamb, Marjorie Reynolds, Betty Rhodes, Walter Abel, Martha O'Driscoll, Dona Drake and a dozen others.

Framework for this venture, in contrast to the multiple-story scheme used in "If I Had a Million" and recently in another film by another studio, is the staging of a show for service men at the Paramount studio.

New-Styled Pickets

Russell Birdwell put out a story designed to do something for a group of young Hollywood players. The release reads in part:

"Four pretty co-eds today picketed a Hollywood studio to express their admiration for James Craig, screen actor, and to petition the producers to cast the actor in as many pictures as possible before he is taken from Hollywood by the Army.

"They did their marching in front of the RKO studio.

"Exodus of most of the top-flight stars from Hollywood to military service prompted the girls to put on their campaign for Craig—'before the Army gets him, too,' they said."

This is a variation on the Birdwell picketing technique.

You'll remember that it was last utilized in behalf of Gerta Rozan, actress, who strip-picketed the Loew-Lewin studios, discarding a garment a day, reportedly by way of pressuring the producers into giving her more footage in "So Ends Our Night" than they might have given her otherwise.

That drive got a lot of distance, but that was pre-war and no co-ed thoughtlessly referred to the imminence of the Army "getting" anybody.

Mr. Craig, or Mr. Birdwell, should have edited that young lady.—W. R. W.

Samuel Goldwyn has announced "The Joan of Arc of America" (title tentative) for production following the Dorothy Lamour-Bob Hope comedy and the Danny Kaye musical on his agenda. It will star Teresa Wright and will "symbolize all the women in the war," according to the announcement.

Cliff Reid, who recently resigned an RKO-Radio producership, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to handle special production assignments.

Ralph Dietrich will produce "The Cisco Kid Rides Again" for 20th Century-Fox with Cesar Romero in the title role.

Paramount dissolved by mutual consent, its agreement with E. H. Griffith, producer-director, which had 17 more months to go, the company announced in Hollywood last week. Differences over treatment of "Frenchman's Creek" which Mr. Griffith was to have handled, was the reason for the dissolution, it was said.

Columbia has signed Michael Gordon as a director. His first assignment is "Boston Blackie Goes Hollywood." He had been a member of the Group Theatre before joining Columbia as dialogue director.

Review Boards Set Up for New York, Hollywood by Director of Censorship

from WASHINGTON BUREAU

Watterson R. Rothacker, Hollywood, a vice-president of Quigley Publications and since 1910 active in the motion picture industry, this week was named chairman of the Los Angeles Board of Review which will examine feature pictures destined for export for the Office of Censorship.

Richard R. Smith, identified with publishing, educational and business circles, was named head of the New York Board which chiefly will review newsreel pictures.

Also named to the Los Angeles board, which will have its quarters in the Taft Building, Hollywood, was Major Ralph W. Liddle, as administrative officer. A third member, to complete the board, remained to be announced.

On the New York board, to have offices at 244 Seventh Avenue, will be Perry Arnold, formerly general news manager of the United Press, and Captain George Ernest as administrative officer.

In announcing the review boards, which were to begin functioning immediately, Byron Price, Director of Censorship, outlined the objectives of the film censorship which, he said, were to keep vital information about possible bombing targets, military or economic conditions or technical data from leaving the country and to prevent enemy propaganda and information leading to subversive activities from entering the country.

Basic Question Is Value to Enemy

"There is no firm rule of thumb applicable to film censorship," Mr. Price said. "Decisions must be governed by the knowledge and understanding of those applying them. There is no intention to cause drastic restrictions in the motion picture industry. As in all other phases of censorship, the boards will ask one basic question: 'Will this material be of value to the enemy?'

"The boards are being instructed to review films as rapidly as possible, particularly in the case of newsreels."

All commercial film for export, except that going to Canada, must be examined by the boards before it may be shipped out of the United States. Photographic prints and all other types of pictorial material entering or leaving the country are examined at the various postal censorship stations located at strategic border points. Customs officials are cooperating with censorship authorities in that work.

Mr. Price listed the classes of information prohibited for export in photographic form, unless approved by appropriate Government agencies, as including all aerial or detailed close-up views of war production plants, docks, shipyards, railroad terminals, dams, power plants, storage tanks, reservoirs, radio towers, arsenals, munitions dumps, forts and all other military installations, including air fields and military depots. Detailed close-up shots of all air fields, cities or terrain showing distinguishing buildings or landmarks in relation to each other or to the general landscape, and detailed pictures of new-type planes, tanks or guns also are prohibited.

Photographs of identifiable beaches and coastlines of such a character as to aid an enemy landing party on any American seacoast come within the ban, but this restriction does not apply to conventional beach views, or bathing beauties. Other classes of prohibited pictorial information for export include movements of land, air or sea forces and merchant ships, when the identification, origin or destination is indicated; detailed views of military or naval equipment and activities, or movements of ships in coastal waters which might be of value to the enemy in regard to attack of sabotage.

Classes of photographic information prohibited for import include subjects of a propaganda or counter-propaganda nature, and details of United Nations' troop or ship movements, stations or equipment, with the exception of newsreels or commercial films approved by the boards of review of United States postal censorship authorities.

Rothacker On Leave of Absence

Watterson R. Rothacker, Hollywood vice-president of Quigley Publishing Co., has resigned this position to accept appointment by the Office of Censorship as chairman of the Los Angeles Board of Review which is charged with the responsibility of wartime censorship of feature films intended for export or import. Mr. Rothacker's resignation has been accepted on a leave of absence basis for such time as his services may be required in the Government work.

Mr. Rothacker accepted the Government appointment at a conference in Washington last week with Byron Price, director of the Office of Censorship. Following the Washington conference he came to New York for meetings with Will H. Hays and film company executives. He was scheduled to return at mid-week to Hollywood where he immediately was to enter upon the work called for by the Office of Censorship.

Mr. Rothacker became associated with Quigley Publishing Co., in 1939 and has been active in a consultative and advisory capacity. He has been importantly identified with the business of motion pictures since 1910 in various executive connections. He is one of the most widely known industry personalities, both in the United States and abroad. Through extensive travel in all parts of the world over a period of many years he has wide and first-hand knowledge of foreign conditions.

News of his Government appointment has been received in industry circles both in Hollywood and New York with marked favor due to the recognition that both in ability and experience he is especially well-qualified for the difficult and important undertaking a safeguarding the national interest in connection with the exportation and importation of feature motion pictures during war time.

Radio Editors Meet Censor

At the request of Eugene Carr, assistant radio director of the Office of Censorship, a meeting of radio news editors and writers of the Blue Network, NBC, Press Association, United Press and International News Service was called for Wednesday in New York to discuss the function of that Government air censoring agency.

Radio Shows End Season

Jack Benny, radio and film comedian, ended his eighth consecutive year of broadcasts for Jello over N.B.C. on Sunday. He will return October 4th for Grape Nuts. Bob Hawk's "How'm I Doin'?" replaces Al Pearce and "His Gang" for R. J. Reynolds Tobacco on NBC for the summer. Hawk's present CBS program will be replaced by Vaughn Monroe's band.

BRITISH DISTRIBUTORS SPLIT ON UNIFIED TRADE POLICY

Dispute on the Jurisdiction of KRS May Bring on Intra-Industry War

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

Something vaguely resembling a raincloud of discord has cast its shadow over the deliberations of the distributors, American and homegrown, of Great Britain during recent sessions. The cloud may pass, or it may break into a shower. Either way it should clear the air. Either way it should result in a sharpening of the functions and policy of the Kinematograph Renters' Society.

Deliberation in the K. R. S. circle over various matters of late has made manifest a certain lack of unity among members. Decisions over matters which seem to many of the distributors here to be both urgent and important, have been sidetracked and postponed. Whilst certain among the more powerful distributors here have questioned the right of the K. R. S. Council to adjudicate and offer guidance on some points, challenging the right to dictate on trading policy, others have, with forceful directness, categorized the Society as being lacking in "guts," as degenerating into a mere collecting agency.

Out of the present conflict of viewpoint, which, though it may not be drastic, is at least significant, should emerge a clearer conception of the Society's standing in trade affairs, a firm definition of which matters do and which do not come within the orbit of the K. R. S. and its governance of its members.

Clarity Needed On Trade Practices

Most troublous of recent developments have been the unwillingness of certain renters here to fall into line with policy as interpreted and devised by the Council of the K. R. S., and the lack of a clearcut definition of what is trading policy—on which supposedly the Society has no right to legislate — and what policy of general trade purpose.

So sharp has been the conflict at times that the whole question of continued membership has been raised by at least one distributor. At this week's Council that member threatened to leave the meeting—which was interpreted in some circles as tantamount to a threat to leave the Society. Such a step would not necessarily have the most beneficial results to the K. R. S. prestige.

The K. R. S. constitution is understood to debar the Society, or its Council, from directing the trading policy, or business methods, of its members. Such a consideration has time and again stayed the hand of the Council from decisions which might have been interpreted as telling members how to sell their films. The lesson of the grading dispute, which was a hands down defeat for the K. R. S. in battle with the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, has not been lost on distributors here since the fiery days of 1937. For instance, recent discussions over the way to tackle a recalcitrant and subtly "combine" exhibitor found the suggestion that he be sold films on a percentage basis only, killed stone dead.

PLEA MADE FOR BRITISH SHORTS

A formal and emphatic appeal to British exhibitors to observe the agreement to screen regularly the Ministry of Information's five-minute short subjects was to be made at the meeting of the general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association this week.

The Ministry has complained that some exhibitors are not abiding by the agreement. Officers of the CEA are disturbed over the situation because of the necessity of maintaining the good will of Government departments.

Most recent manifestations in this regard have been over whether the same exhibitor should be barred from having any films. Corporate agreement that he be "frozen" from film supply was only arrived at after protracted and complex discussion over the rights and wrongs of doing so, achieved ultimately with one leading distributor falling into line with the policy under direct, formal and emphatic protest and an abstention from actual voting.

So, too, when the Council of the K. R. S. decided no further to condone the booking of films for two-day runs was the matter criticized and objected to on the grounds that no constitutional right existed for the Society to dictate to members how they should market their motion pictures. There was, however, agreement not to offer any more two-day bookings.

'No Guts' Charge Distributors

Such and other incidents, which it is clear are possible only because there are those in the distributor camp who take a very well defined view of what is the K. R. S. function and what not, have provoked the present forceful criticism within the camp that that body has no longer displayed, indeed would seem to have lost, the essential quality of "guts" ("no guts": "of no real value or force." Oxford Concise Dictionary).

A weakness of the K. R. S. operations of recent times has been the increasing tendency of heads of renting houses here to stay away from the Council meetings and delegate representation to sales managers, secretaries and other officers. It is clear that no matter what authority they have, in spite of their possession of executive capacity, such virtual juniors are not prepared, nor in fact authorized, to vote either way on matters of major policy. Vital decisions have, again and again, been shelved, postponed, and avoided, on exactly such grounds. One distributing house has even been represented on occasion by two executives, neither of them a managing director.

See KRS Powers 'Weakening'

It would seem to be logical then that the question of representation at Council meetings should have been raised at the May session by one of the most constructive and forceful of the distributors' representatives, not so much with the objective of snubbing the deputies as, it would seem, gingering up their chiefs. The implicit suggestion is that the laggards are not taking the interest in the Society's affairs which is their duty, and that the Society is, as a result, weakening its powers and losing prestige.

As one critic within the stronghold has voiced it: "The K. R. S. is only as strong as its weakest member."

Exactly what form the next development will take remains yet to be seen. An exact and binding definition of what is policy and what not is unlikely. Distributors scout the accusation of dictation of trading methods with the riposte that the aim is merely to prevent renters from distributing pictures below an economic level. No distributor, says one of the leading K. R. S. stalwarts, can claim to be independent of the actions of his fellow distributors. The vital test would seem to be whether the evils about which the discussions evolve concern the trade as a whole. If so there would seem a clear case for correction.

Seek Greater Unity of Action

One hundred percent loyalty to the K.R.S. would seem to be existent, despite disagreement upon what matters come within its orbit and what are legitimately without. A clear majority viewpoint inclines to the basic principle that the K.R.S. should adjudicate and legislate on all matters concerning the distributors without reservation. The recent give and take will probably have the ultimate result of stimulating a keener interest in the Society's problems and purposes, produce a closer attention to its decisions. The cloud will probably pass and the wetting will probably have been a refreshment rather than a cause of chill.

Treacher in Columbia Film

Arthur Treacher returns to the screen after two and a half years on Broadway in a featured role in Columbia's forthcoming musical, "The Gay Senorita," with Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth. Marguerite Chapman, Leslie Brooks and Adele Mara were also signed for the picture to be directed by William Seiter. It was formerly titled "Carnival in Rio."

British Paying Increased Tax Without Protest

Britain's admission tax has been virtually doubled so that in some instances it is 27 per cent. Nevertheless, the British public's overweening desire to see motion pictures has maintained box office receipts, and there probably will be no decline, according to William Gell, managing director of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., and distributor in Britain for Monogram and Producers Releasing Corporation.

Mr. Gell arrived in New York last week by Clipper, and planned to confer in that city with officials of the two American independents, and also on the Coast with their production chiefs.

Mr. Gell noted that the theatre was still the primary recreation for the British public, and that business was exceedingly good. The admissions tax is being passed on to the public without protest, inasmuch as every other commodity has risen in price. Mr. Gell expressed some surprise, in fact, that admissions in Britain had not risen in line with the increase in the cost of living.

That increase, he noted, has been counterbalanced by increased wages, especially in war industries.

Ten Pictures Set for Year

Pathe Pictures will make at least ten, and possibly 12 films, this year, Mr. Gell said. Three of the program have been completed: "Banana Ridge," "The Night Has Eyes," "Suspected Person." Last week, work began on "Women Aren't Angels"; and this is to be followed by "Quiet Weekend."

Pictures are made at the company's Welwyn Studios, 30 miles out of London, untouched by bombing, but where three stages and sound equipment have been used much by the Government's Ministry of Information. Mr. Gell said a "considerable" number of Government films were being made.

The British Army has commandeered several London studios, for non-film purposes, Mr. Gell remarked.

He refused to hazard how many of Pathe's current product would be marketed here, but he noted the good reception for its product last year. Among Pathe films released here by PRC and Monogram, "Dark Eyes of London" had good reception.

No Comment on Suit Against Monogram

The arrival of American troops has had no effect upon business, Mr. Gell said, reminding that business was dependent upon other factors. The troops were mostly quartered in northern Ireland, and American pictures have always dominated the British screen.

Of the suit against Monogram and himself, by Arthur Levey, Mr. Gell refused to say anything beyond, "It will be adequately defended—we have a perfect answer to what I consider to be a flamboyant charge. I have no written agreement with Mr. Levey at all. He's suing Monogram, and he's paid me the compliment of including me as a 'conspirator.'"

Mr. Levey is suing in New York Federal Court for $225,000 damages, alleging breach of contract, and charging that commissions are due him for arranging a distribution contract between Monogram and Pathe. Defendants are Monogram and Pathe, W. Ray Johnston, Monogram president, and Mr. Gell, as Pathe head.

War Board Restricts All Radio Devices

The War Production Board at Washington Tuesday amended its order prohibiting the manufacture of radio receiving sets and phonographs to expand the definition of "radios" to include combination receivers and transmitters, television receivers and blackout or air raid warning devices using vacuum tubes. The definition of phonographs was changed to make certain it included any form of wireless record player using tubes.

It also clarified the ban against production by providing that it should not apply to persons who simply assemble or convert sets produced by others. It clears up confusion among manufacturers as to whether they could complete assembled parts produced before the prohibition became effective. Likewise, it permits individual radio service men to piece together existing equipment into new combinations.

Pittsburgh Parks Plan Free Shows

Intent on meeting last year's record grosses despite tire shortages and anticipated gasoline rationing, Pittsburgh's Kennywood and West View parks have booked many expensive outdoor acts for two free shows daily.

Kennywood, one of the nation's three largest amusement parks, will present two weeks each of the Paroff Trio, Fanchon and Fanchon, the Walkimirs, the Dixon Bros., Will Hill Circus, Donahoe and LaSalle, Eric the Great, Will Morris and Bobby, the Canestrelli Troupe, Monroe Bros., Stevens Bros. and Big Boy, Zenka Malikva, the Juggling Jewels, LaSallas, the Three Milos, James Evans and Co., and the Peaches Sky Revue.

West View, has booked the Four Grotofents, the Watkins Animal Circus, the Four Aerial Apollos, Mlle. Bernice, and the Flying Valentinos. Picnic bookings equal previous years, both parks' managements indicated.

Republic Sells New Season to Griffith

The Griffith Amusement Companies, Oklahom and Texas circuits, have signed a contract with Republic Pictures, James R. Grainger, president, announced, for the entire 1942-43 Republic product.

Lloyd Rust, Republic Dallas manager, and Russell Brown, Oklahoma City manager, and Mr. Grainger represented Republic. Horace Falls and H. O. Stark signed for the circuit.

FitzPatrick Signs New MGM Shorts Contract

James A. FitzPatrick will produce 12 "Traveltalk" short subjects for release by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during the 1942-43 season. He signed a new contract last week. Mr. FitzPatrick is now vacationing at his Puget Sound home. He will then film a re-enactment of the historic Lewis and Clark Northwest Expedition for the new series. They will include extensive material on the United States.

Dissolve News Theatre Firm

Airways News Theatres, Inc., a New York Corporation has been dissolved by court order. Papers for the corporation were filed by Battle, Levy, Fowler and Neaman of 30 Broad Street, New York. It operated the news theatre in the 42nd Street Airlines Terminal. The house was later taken over by the Embassy group.

Lukan, Manager of Shearer Circuit

L. O. Lukan was appointed general manager this week of Ben Shearer's circuit of suburban houses in Seattle and first run theatres in Everett and Bremerton, according to an announcement. Mr. Lukan formerly was manager of the Green Lake theatre in Seattle.

Brazil Theatres Report Increase

Greater public interest in the motion picture as a result of the war has increased theatre attendance in Brazil and has caused re-opening of theatres long closed, S. E. Pierpoint, Paramount manager for Brazil, declared on his arrival in New York Monday for a home office visit.

According to Mr. Pierpoint, two of the oldest and largest theatres in Rio de Janeiro, the Palace and Rivoli, which have been closed for some time, have been completely renovated and will resume operation in the near future. Other theatres throughout Brazil's larger cities, said Mr. Pierpoint, are being completely modernized to meet the new public interest in motion pictures.

Brazil continues to play more than 90 per cent Hollywood product, the Paramount manager reported, with a number of British pictures still being received and shown, although these, he pointed out, are either British productions of American companies or films which have been acquired for distribution by American firms.

Distributors have a representative on the newly established National Cinematographic Council, he said, which was set up by the Brazilian Government recently to handle numerous film matters. The country produces about 12 features annually and a large number of short subjects. Theatres are required by decree to show a representative number of shorts on their programs, Mr. Pierpoint reported.

Schine Corporation Seeks Change in Affiliate Name

In Albany, Howard M. Antevil, Schine circuit attorney, filed a change of name for the Rochester-Riviera Corporation with Michael F. Walsh, Secretary of State. It will henceforth be known as the Schine Service Corporation, Gloversville.

New York Theare Program Corporation, Manhattan, has changed its name to Playbill, Incorporated, in papers filed by Charles E. Murphy, 280 Broadway, New York. Arista Amusement Corporation, has filed papers of dissolution.

Tryo Productions, Inc., Wilmington, Del. filed statement and designation with Mr. Walsh, showing its New York office at 1697 Broadway, with Jacob J. Siegel as secretary-treasurer and 100 shares of stock, no stated par value. Papers were submitted by Abner Goldstone, 527 Fifth Avenue, New York.

B. and K. Acquire Full Interest in Cine

The Balaban & Katz Corporation, which has owned a half interest in the Cine Theatre property in Chicago since it was built five years ago, purchased the remaining half interest last week from the Northern Amusement Corporation for a reported $243,000.

The two-story building houses a 1,000 seat theatre, and several stores and offices. The theatre has been operated by Balaban & Katz since it opened in August, 1937. It was designed by Rapp & Rapp and was one of the first motion picture houses to utilize structural glass block.

Paramount Signs Lamour

Paramount announced in New York recently that new contracts had been signed with Dorothy Lamour, Dona Drake and Eddie Bracken. Miss Lamour's next film for the studio will be "Galveston," a story of the development of the Texas oil port and the Galveston flood of three decades ago. Sol C. Siegel has been assigned to produce the picture as his first job for the Buddy DeSylva unit and Robert Pirosh is now writing the screen story.

Despite the fact that it is playing only four shows daily, it is reported topping MGM's "Woman of the Year," and other pictures which have had five daily performances at the Music Hall. The film, based on Jan Struther's best-selling novel, began its second week on Thursday.

Other holdover reports for the week include:

"Fantasia" Breaking Records, Says RKO

Anent "Fantasia," A. W. Smith, Jr., general sales manager for RKO, reports this week that the Walt Disney film is "maintaining its spectacular pace as one of the year's top grossers," and seems to be headed for some kind of "record for extended playing time, holdovers and box office receipts." The film has just completed a run at the Century in Rochester, which gave that house its biggest business in two years, except for one other picture. Similar results, said RKO, are reported from the Paramount, Syracuse. It was held over for extra days at the Booth, Knoxville, and Clover, Montgomery, and has recorded "big grosses" at the State, Spokane; Iowa, Cedar Rapids; Orpheum, Des Moines; Orpheum, Dubuque; State, New Brunswick; Brandeis, Omaha, and Lincoln, Trenton.

Reports on Grosses

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros. film starring James Cagney in the role of George M. Cohan, playing three times daily with a $2.20 top at the Hollywood, New York, now in its second week, brought an estimated $12,300 last Saturday and Sunday, which the company reports is "capacity."

"Ten Gentlemen from West Point," Fox, playing at the Roxy, New York, drew an estimated $42,000 last Thursday through Sunday, duplicating the success of its predecessor, "My Gal Sal," according to reports. "In This Our Life," at the Strand, drew $17,600 last Friday through Sunday. "Take a Letter, Darling," at the Paramount, took in an estimated $22,000 over the weekend. "This Above All," at the Astor, finished its fourth week with an estimated $14,000 Tuesday night. It drew $6,300 over Saturday and Sunday. For its first two days at the Rivoli, "Miss Annie Rooney" grossed an estimated $5,200.

Speaking at a showing of a two-reel motion picture on metal conservation, "Mines Above Ground," produced by Western Electric, P. L. Thomson, director of public relations declared in New York Monday that the Bell System had turned out more communications equipment since the beginning of the present war than during the entire period of World War I.

Mr. Thomson said that more than 75,000,000 pounds of junk metal, exclusive of much iron and steel, had been salvaged for reuse last year in the Bell System.

The film which is being shown to many industrial organizations throughout the country, depicts the methods used in W. E. plants to collect, sort and refine scrap accumulated from manufacturing operations.

Warners Shift Clark, Australia to Alaska

Ralph Clark, former Warner Brothers representative in Australia, arrived in Seattle last week with Mrs. Clark. He will continue northward to Alaska on a special sales and exploitation mission for the Warner organization. Recent influxes of defense workers to Alaska were said to have prompted special sales attention.

Mrs. Clark has return to New York to visit her son while Mr. Clark is in the Far North.

Hamrick Evergreen Chain Announces New Positions

Herbert Sabottka has been appointed a manager of the Seattle theatres in the Oregon Hamrick-Evergreen theatre circuit. Frank Newman, Jr., was named manager of the Paramount, Portland. Z. 20th-Fox opens 'West Point' at N. Y. Roxy Prominent West Point graduates and classmates of distinguished military leaders were present at the premiere last Thursday night at the Roxy, New York, of "Ten Gentlemen from West Point," the 20th Century-Fox film. Produced by William Perlberg and directed by Henry Hathaway, the picture co-stars George Montgomery, John Sutton and Maureen O'Hara.

Among the guests who attended the opening were: Major General William H. Hay and Col. Edwin S. Wright, who were classmates of General Pershing; Rev. Dr. Arthur P. S. Hyde, Lt. General Frederick E. Schnyder, and Col. Allan M. Pope, classmates of General MacArthur; Major General Robert Danforth, Col. J. W. Riley, Major Charles McKew Parr, and others.

Prior to the film debut, Spyros Skouras, president of 20th Century-Fox, was hôst to a group of West Point graduates and classmates of Generals Pershing and MacArthur, at a dinner given at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The new Fox production deals with the early history of the U. S. Military Academy on the Hudson and pays tribute to its past and present heroes.

Universal Sets "Eagle Squadron" Exploitation

John Joseph, director of advertising and publicity for Universal, announced in New York last Saturday before returning to Hollywood, that arrangements had been made for operation of exploitation units, each numbering three men, on "Eagle Squadron." Maurice Bergman, Eastern advertising manager, will supervise the units which will cover engagements in every part of the country. George Fraser, formerly in the publicity department of 20th Century-Fox, has been named special press representative for the Walter Wanger production soon to be released by Universal.

Bamberger Lists UMPI Tax Committee Changes

Leon Bamberger, executive secretary of the United Motion Picture Industry on Tuesday announced that Sam J. Switow, Louisville, Ky., exhibitor, had been commissioned in the U. S. Army air corps and had relinquished his chairmanship of the Kentucky UMPI tax committee. Fred J. Dolle will discharge his duties until a successor is chosen.

In Maryland the tax committee has elected Meyer Leventhal of the Lord Baltimore theatre, permanent chairman. Other members are William K. Saxton, of Loew's and Joseph L. Young, Universal's Baltimore representative.

William G. Cooke resigned from the Nevada tax committee after selling his Reno theatre. S. E. Bower, of the Desert theatre, Hawthorne, Nev., has filled the vacancy.

Alabama and Florida tax committees have been partly filled, Mr. Bamberger said. Colonel Thomas E. Orr of Albertville heads the Alabama committee. Serving with him are Mack Jackson of Alexander City, R. M. Kennedy, Alabama theatre, Birmingham and an undesignated distributor agent. Fred Kent of Florida State Theatres, Inc., is chairman of the Florida tax group. Earl Fain, of Leesburg, and a third member for the distributors will serve with him.

APPEAL BOARD REVERSES SELF ON CHICAGO ZONE SYSTEM

Clearance Possible Between Successive Chicago Runs, High Court Decides

The Appeal Board changed its mind this week. In its 26th decision the high court of motion picture arbitration reversed its previous finding that no clearance existed between the successive weeks of the Chicago system of designating runs and clearance by successive weeks.

Writing a 12-page decision on the appeal of William Pearl, operator of the Alcyon theatre in Highland Park, Ill., the board found that clearance could exist between the runs of the Chicago zone playdate schedule. However, they affirmed the arbitrator's dismissal of Mr. Pearl's action, the ninth Chicago case, on the grounds that the clearance complained of was reasonable.

RKO and 20th Century-Fox were the defendant distributors. Mr. Pearl had asked that the average of seven days clearance held over the Alcyon by the Teatro Del Lago in Wilmette, and by the Glencoe theatre, Libertyville, on the prior B run, be found unreasonable. The Alcyon is on the C run, immediately following. Costs were asesssed against the complainant.

The ruling in effect reversed the Appeal Board's first award, dated June 11, 1941, in which they dismissed the clearance action of the Ken theatre. At that time they held that there could be no clearance between the successive weeks of Chicago runs.

In the latest ruling the board wrote:

"This was as far as the agreed facts enabled the Board to go and it was sufficient to justify the award. The statement in the opinion of this Board in the Ken case that there was no clearance question involved between successive weeks of Chicago general release has been modified by subsequent decisions in cases involving systems of release based upon availability after the conclusion of first runs. (Matter of Rowlands, Dec. No. 13, Dec 26, 1941; Matter of Main, Dec. No. 14, Dec. 26, 1941; Matter of Piedmont, Dec. No. 21, April 9, 1942).

"As we now understand the Chicago system, upon a full record in explanation of its practical operation, we find that there may be clearance between the weeks of general release, depending upon the actual playing time of a picture.

"The first week of general release commences on Sunday, one week after the commencement of C pre-release week. Each successive week of general release also begins on Sunday. Each run begins seven days after the commencement of the run immediately preceding it. With respect to all pictures played in each of these weekly runs, except those played on Saturday, which is the last day of each run, there is a period of waiting time before they may be played by the theatre having the next succeeding run. That waiting time is clearance. It is necessarily short. It cannot be more than six days if a picture is played on Sunday only, and there is no clearance if a picture is played on Saturday. The average waiting time probably does not exceed three days.

"The systems in Columbus and Oakland, discussed in the Rowlands, Main and Piedmont cases, although established by language which differs from that used in the Chicago system, are the same in actual practice as the Chicago system. Subsequent run theatres in Columbus and Oakland have an availability after first run downtown. The Chicago system does nothing more than that. Theatres in A pre-release week have an availability of twenty-one days after first run downtown; theatres in B pre-release week have a similar availability of forty-two days; theatres in C pre-release week fifty-eight days and theatres in the first week of general release sixty-five days.

"In the three cases cited we held that the actual clearance of a prior run theatre over a subsequent run theatre was the number of days elapsing between the last showing of a picture at a prior run theatre and the number of days after first run downtown that such a picture became available to the subsequent run theatre. The same clearance results from the Chicago system," the Appeal Board concluded.

Although Mr. Pearl's demand was dismissed exhibitor circles generally regard the award as a victory for independent theatre operators in the Chicago area inasmuch as it opens new grounds for attacking the city's system of designating runs.

Buffalo

For the first time an arbitration award was altered this week subsequent to the arbitrator's decision when all parties to the ninth Buffalo case petitioned Joseph M. Boehm to amend his grant of clearance to the Astor theatre, operated by Vincent Martina at Attica, New York. The stipulation restored the 30 day margin held by the Warner New Family theatre in Batavia. It had been cut to 14 days.

Mr. Boehm agreed to the change on the basis of a recent Appeal Board ruling in the Dipson case (Buffalo No. 5). The board had found that distributors affiliated with a party to a clearance proceeding were not bound equally with unaffiliated distributors, in accord with Section XVII of the decree.

The agreement restores the 30 day clearance only in Vitagraph product.

New York

New York's 37th case was filed on Monday by the Kent theatre, Newark, operated by the Davestan Amusement Company. The Regent and Elwood theatres, Newark, and the Capital in Belleville, N. J., were named as interested parties. The Kent complains that the seven to 14 day clearance which all five consenting distributors grant the theatres is unreasonable and asks day and date with the Regent and Capital and a maximum of 14 days to the Elwood. All the respondent theatres are controlled by the Warner circuit.

St. Louis

The hearing on the clearance complaint of the Beverly theatre, St. Louis, against Warners, RKO, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox, were resumed Wednesday. Arbitrator Claude Pearcy had adjourned the hearing to check complainant's testimony regarding distances between the Beverly and houses of intervenors, the Wellston Amusement Company, Wellston, and the St. Louis Amusement Company, owners of the Victory and Shady Oak.

Chicago

A declaration of intervention has been filed in the Palace Theatre, Gary, Indiana, clearance case by the Dune-Lake Corporation, a subsidiary of the Indiana-Illinois Theatres circuit, operators of the Tivoli, Lido and Lake theatres, Michigan City, Indiana.

The Annetta Theatre, Cicero, Ill., case has been postponed until August 4th by request of the complainants, the Bartlestein Brothers circuit.

Kansas City

John Rhodes, an attorney, will arbitrate the fifth Kansas City case, a clearance complaint by Simon Galitzki, for the Coed theatre, Topeka.

37 ARBITRATION AWARDS TO THEATRES, 47 CLAIMS REFUSED

120 of 168 Cases Filed Were Disposed of, Annual AAA Report Shows

Citing figures from clearance reductions awarded exhibitors in the first year of arbitration, ended January 31st, a "Fourth Quarterly Report of the Motion Picture Arbitration Tribunals" appearing in the Spring edition of the Arbitration Journal, published this week in New York, concludes that substantial benefits had been obtained by exhibitors through the arbitration provisions of the motion picture consent decree.

In the first year of arbitration 168 demands for arbitration were filed in thirty of the thirty-one tribunals, 120 of the cases were disposed of: 78 by awards and 42 by settlement or withdrawal. Thirty-seven awards were in favor of the exhibitor and in 41 cases the exhibitor's claim was disallowed, the official report said.

"The general object of the Arbitration System established under the Decree was to afford an opportunity for the exhibitor to present to an impartial arbitrator complaints regarding any unfair competitive situation imposed upon him through his contracts with distributors for the purchase of pictures. It is impossible to state the results obtained in the cases settled and withdrawn, as there is no requirement to file such information upon the withdrawal of a complaint.

Report Cites 'Improvement'

"It would seem, however, that an exhibitor withdrawing his complaint must have made some satisfactory adjustment of the situation complained of and it would, therefore, appear that in those cases the exhibitor had improved his business situation," the report continued.

Sylvan Gotshal, attorney, and member of the administrative committee of the motion picture arbitration system prepared the report from figures compiled from tribunal records by J. Noble Braden, executive director of the American Arbitration Association which administers the decree's arbitration clauses.

Mr. Gotshal is acting chairman of the administrative committee replacing Paul Felix Warburg, now absent on official duties in Washington.

Seventy per cent of cases were filed under the decree's clearance clause, according to Mr. Gotshal. Surveying the changes made through awards, he found that:

In the Boston tribunal two awards reduced the previous clearance imposed against the exhibitor from 60 to 30 days. In New York, in five awards the clearances were reduced from 30 to seven days; from 30 to 21 days; from 21 to seven days; from 30 to 20 days, and from 14 to seven days. In two other cases in the same tribunal, clearance was reduced from 14 to seven days.

In Denver, a reduction of clearance was awarded from 21 to three days. In New Haven, in two cases clearance was reduced from 14 to seven days, and from 30 to 21 days. In Washington, in two cases clearance was reduced from 74 to 30 days, and from 74 to 40 days. In Dallas, clearance was reduced in two cases, in one from 60 to 14 days, and in another from 45 to 14 days.

"These figures seem to indicate clearly that substantial benefits have been obtained by successful exhibitors who have sought arbitration under the decree," he wrote.

Trade press coverage of arbitration was also commented upon by Mr. Gotshal, with the statement:

"No report of the operation of the Motion Picture Arbitration Tribunals would be complete without an expression of appreciation to the motion picture picture press for the splendid support it has given the System and for the generous allocation of space, in both the daily and weekly publications, to the activities of the tribunals. In addition to reporting the filing of new cases and the awards as they have been rendered, the press have been generous in publicizing the names of arbitrators and in announcing changes in the personnel of the System. In addition, the yearbooks in general use in the industry have given pages of statistical reports of the operation of the tribunals and a complete directory of arbitrators and personnel.

Increasing interest in the proceedings of motion picture arbitration by attorneys and exhibitors in all sections of the country has prompted the Association to place mimeographed copies of all awards in the files of each of the 31 tribunals. They may be consulted there by any interested parties.

In the fourth quarter, ended January 31, 1942, 29 additional cases were filed making a total of 168 cases received in the tribunals in the first year. These cases were distributed among thirty tribunals as follows:

Albany	3	Memphis	3
Atlanta	2	Milwaukee	2
Boston	8	Minneapolis	4
Buffalo	11	New Haven	6
Charlotte	2	New Orleans	5
Chicago	12	New York	31
Cincinnati	4	Oklahoma City	1
Cleveland	2	Omaha	1
Dallas	5	Philadelphia	17
Denver	3	Pittsburgh	3
Des Moines	3	Portland	2
Detroit	8	St. Louis	5
Indianapolis	2	Salt Lake City	1
Kansas City	4	San Francisco	4
Los Angeles	4	Washington, D. C.	10

(No cases were presented in Seattle)

By classification the 168 cases filed were divided as follows:

Clearance (Section VIII)	118
Some Run (Section VI)	28
Designated Run (Section X)	4
Combination (two or more sections of the Decree)	18

During the course of the first year 22 cases have been appealed; 17 have been concluded by decisions of the Appeal Board. Of the 17 decisions which have been rendered by the Appeal Board, seven have modified the award of the Arbitrator, five have reversed the Arbitrator's award, and five have affirmed the Arbitrator's findings; nine decisions have been in favor of the distributors, and eight in favor of the exhibitors, Mr. Gotshal reported.

Attorneys, according to the report, were by far the most popular selection of exhibitors and distributors for the role of arbitrator. Out of 21 arbitrators who served during the quarter 14 were lawyers, one was a retired circuit judge, three were prominent educators and two business men. The latter were a bank president and insurance company president, respectively.

The arbitrators who served in the hearings held in the fourth quarter of the operation of the tribunals were:

Arthur L. Brown, Boston, professor, Boston University Law School; Edward W. Hamilton, Buffalo, attorney; Michael Catalano, Buffalo, attorney; Thomas McConnell, Chicago, attorney; Drennan J. Slater, Chicago, attorney; J. C. Dempsey, Cincinnati, attorney; J. B. Adoue, Jr., Dallas, president, National Bank of Commerce; S. J. Hay, Dallas, president, Great National Life Insurance Company; Paul W. Voorhies, Detroit, attorney; Ferris Stone (two cases) Detroit, attorney (former president, Detroit Bar Association); H. Eugene Breitenbach, Los Angeles, attorney; George S. Harris, New York, Dean, University of Newark Law School; Lloyd Buchman, New York, attorney; Calvin H. Rankin, Philadelphia, attorney; Samuel W. Pringle, Pittsburgh, attorney; Irving Rand, Portland, attorney; Donovan O. Peters, San Francisco, attorney; J. W. McAfee, St. Louis, former Judge of Circuit Court; John J. Nangle, St. Louis, attorney; William H. Stead, St. Louis, Dean, School of Business and Public Administration, Washington University; Milton W. King, Washington attorney.

Warners May Set July Convention for Sales Staff

A national convention of Warner Brothers sales staff probably will be held early in July at a midwestern city, possibly Chicago, it was indicated this week. Although Ben Kalmenson, sales manager, would not discuss the company's convention plans it was reported that district and branch managers had been advised that they would be summoned to a July meeting to discuss 1942-43 product and sales policy.

A meeting during the first weeks of July would allow sufficient time for decisive action on the UMPI sales plan, it was said. If the plan is approved by the court before then Warners are said to feel that there would be sufficient time to adjust sales procedure to the blocks-of-12 formula. Otherwise the company would still be in a position to work out its own selling formula, as permitted under the escape clause of the consent decree which became effective June 1.

New York Sales Force Convenes

A special two-day convention of the Warner sales force in the metropolitan New York district has been set for Saturday and Sunday at the home offices. District Manager Sam Lefkowitz and New York Branch Manager Roger Mahan will preside. Speakers will include Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager; Roy Haines, Eastern and Canadian sales manager; A. W. Schwalberg and Arthur Sachson, sales executives, and Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager.

Sales representatives attending will include Leo Jacobi, Gus Solomon, Harry Decker, Irving Rothenberg, George Waldman, Joe Vergesslich and Wally Howes. In the bookers' group will be S. Macomber, Archie Berish, Pete Saglenbini, Al Blumberg, Dan Ponticelli, Mike Anderson and Phil Levine. Manny Gross, ad sales manager, also will attend the meetings.

One purpose of the sessions is to launch a special Summer Cleanup Drive mapped out by Mr. Lefkowitz and Mr. Mahan for the New York area. The drive will run until the end of August.

Warner Bros. has set the next six pictures for the New York Strand as follows:

After the current six-week engagement of "In This Our Life," Ann Sheridan and Ronald Reagan in "Juke Girl" opens June 19th, followed by "The Big Shot," starring Humphrey Bogart; "Sergeant York," returning to the Strand for a second time; "Wings for the Eagle," with Ann Sheridan, Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson; "The Gay Sisters," with Barbara Stanwyck and George Brent, and "Across the Pacific," with Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor and Sydney Greenstreet.

Paramount Sales Managers To Meet

Paramount's district and division sales managers will meet at New York on June 19th, Neil Agnew, sales manager, announced this week. A discussion of the operations of the company's new "profit sharing" plan for extra compensation to salesmen is the principal item on the agenda.

It is also considered likely that Mr. Agnew will have additional plans completed for selling 1942-43 product and will be ready to add a number of titles to the list of productions announced last month by Y. Frank Freeman, studio head, at the sales meeting held at Adolph Zukor's Westchester estate.

The profit sharing plan will be administered by a committee of district managers. It will be retroactive to the start of the 1941-42 selling season last September.

Paramount's next block of four pictures were trade shown nationally on Thursday and Friday this week. The films are "Holiday Inn," "Are Husbands Necessary," "Tombstone—the Town Too Tough to Die," and "I Live on Danger."

In Hollywood on Tuesday, the company announced that B. G. DeSylva had been signed to a new contract as executive producer. The new contract replaced one which had a year to run. Mr. DeSylva came to Paramount in November, 1940, on a two-picture deal and became an executive producer in February, 1941.

IATSE 'REVOLT' COLLAPSES, WALSH AGAIN PRESIDENT

Delegates' Vote for Reelection Vindicates Regime of New President

by FRED OESTREICHER
in Columbus

The Administration of Richard F. Walsh, who was appointed president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees upon the imprisonment of former president George E. Browne, was vindicated by his overwhelming reelection at the concluding session, Friday, June 5th of the 36th convention of the IATSE last week in Columbus.

The vote for president was: Mr. Walsh, 644; William T. Bennett of Washington, D. C., 296; Vincent Jacobi, New York, 33. Mr. Walsh and his entire slate of candidates were voted back into office and will serve until the next biennial convention, 1944.

The dramatic collapse of the Jacobi-for-president boom was highlight of the final stages of the convention. Defeat of the Jacobi faction was forecast when the delegates rejected the resolution offered by the Jacobi element, attacking all present officers and demanding their removal. The convention adopted the resolutions' committee report that the resolution not only be rejected but expunged from the record.

The vote on the other officers:

First vice president: Harlan Holmden, Cleveland, 671; Russell L. McKnight, Hollywood, 287.

Second vice president: William P. Covert, Toronto, 599; Archie Prentice, Toronto, 367.

The following were unopposed:

Floyd M. Billingsley, San Francisco, third vice president; James J. Brennan, New York, fourth vice president; Roger M. Kennedy, Detroit, fifth vice president and Felix D. Snow, Kansas City, sixth vice president.

Seventh vice president: Carl G. Cooper, Hollywood, 634; Harold V. Smith, Hollywood, 328.

General secretary-treasurer: Louis Krouse, Philadelphia, 764; Steve D'Inzillo, New York, 192. Mr. Krouse thus received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate.

Three trustees elected in a field of five candidates were: George W. Brayfield, Denver; William C. Scanlon of Lynn, Massachusetts, and R. E. Morris of Mobile. The vote: Brayfield, 733; Scanlon, 709; Morris, 658; Glenn H. Humphrey, Utica, New York, 391 and William Vermont, New York, 168.

Thomas V. Green of Newark and E. J. Brock of Cleveland were named delegates to the American Federation of Labor. The vote: Green, 681; Brock, 656; George Cushing, Union County, N. J., 302 and Ben Scher, New York, 128.

Edward L. Turner of Winnipeg, Canada, was unopposed for delegate to the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress.

All the new officers were sworn in by Ernest A. Clark, Seattle, Wash., just before the convention was adjourned. A total of 971 votes was cast.

Action Taken on Post-War Problems

Conditions created by the war emergency caused the adoption of several resolutions by the IATSE delegates.

A committee will be set up in each IATSE district to plan for the protection of the membership in defense areas, so that during the readjustment period following the present war the present and future livelihood of the members will not be jeopardized. The plan is to cover at least five years after the end of the war. This resolution was proposed because of the influx of thousands of workers into defense plant areas.

Affiliated local unions are granted the right to issue one working permit for the duration of the war in place of every member who enlists or is drafted into the armed forces or the industrial field. These permits will be in force only for the war's duration, "until said member shall return and demand his job back." This resolution was referred to the incoming general executive board.

Television After War Considered

Also, steps are to be taken to set up a committee to investigate television and to place properly the different branches of television so that the jurisdiction of the crafts of the IATSE will be protected. A thorough organizing campaign is to be carried on by the IATSE in this field as well as the radio and electrical transcription field. This resolution was referred to the general executive board.

A declaration was made that the operating and handling of all television equipment in theatres shall be under the jurisdiction of the motion picture projectionist. Operating and handling of any motion picture equipment in any radio studio, motion picture producing studio or any theatre for the purpose of film, television, broadcasting commercially by radio or by wire, shall be under the jurisdiction of the motion picture projectionists of the IATSE. This resolution also was referred to the general executive board.

The president and the general executive board were empowered to "take such measures as shall be necessary" to unionize New York City because its Local 306 "has to contend with dual unionism."

felonies from holding office in the Alliance, was referred to the special committee.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor gave his official blessing to the re-elected officers of the IATSE in his convention speech. Mr. Green did not mention former President George Browne of the IATSE nor his lieutenant, Willie Bioff, by name. The nearest he came was when he complimented President Walsh and the other officers for their work and their proposal to run on their records. Mr. Green then said:

"An organization stands high and influential with the public if it is well and honestly led and an organization honestly led reflects credit on itself. . . . If I leave one thought with you, that thought is inspired because of the tragic experience through which you have passed. It is that you may see to it that, come what may, your movement be led by honest men who are known to possess the highest degree of honesty and integrity."

Mr. Green, who told the delegates that the AFL now had almost 6,000,000 members, referred to Mr. Walsh's stewardship, as "a splendid record."

Alabama Sunday Shows Assured

Theatre men won another victory last week, in securing permission to operate on Sunday in Alabama towns of less than 15,000 population. State Attorney General Lawson ruled last week that such operation was not illegal.

The 1940 Code provides that Sunday film showings are legal in cities of 15,000 or more. The new ruling clarified the Code, and leaves the decision to ban Sunday showings to local governing groups.

Mr. Lawson also held that Bank Night was a lottery, prohibited by the state.

A "blue law" passed in Newark, Delaware, seat of the state university, and comprising 5,000 population, has halted showings of films Sundays. The ordinance prohibits all "worldly" activities. But it does not include golf. The town council acted upon an April 14th referendum by which 277 persons voted for the ordinance, 158 against. According to law, only property owners and paid up taxpayers may vote.

Publicists' Guild, Warners submit to Conciliation

Inability of Warner Brothers and the Screen Publicists Guild to agree on a closed shop contract for advertising and publicity workers in the New York home office has led to intervention of the Federal Government, in the person of Commissioner James W. Fitzpatrick, of the United States Conciliation Service, who officiated in a previous disagreement between the Guild and the seven other major distributors, who signed the contract.

Warners refused to allow disputed contract points to be given to arbitration. The Guild then appealed to the National War Labor Board, which assigned Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Clauses in dispute affect "membership maintenance," severance pay, term of contract, and retroactive pay.

Mutual Defends FCC Rules

The evils in the radio network system of operation, which prompted the Federal Communications Commission to issue its anti-monopoly regulations, were fostered by the National Broadcasting Company system and the Columbia Broadcasting System, it was charged last week, by Fred Weber, Mutual Network's general manager, in testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

The Committee is holding hearings on the Sanders Bill to reorganize the Commission.

Mr. Weber asserted the two networks consistently used their time options with affiliated stations, to make booking of Mutual programs impossible.

Previously, Alfred J. McCosker, chairman of Mutual's board, said the FCC regulations were the only barrier to complete domination by NBC and CBS. He also attacked the Bill's Section Seven, which asks that Congress determine broadcasting policy. He charged this merely meant delay in enforcing the regulations.

The Committee was expected to end hearings this week, with testimony from FCC Commissioner James C. Fly, and Commissioner T. A. M. Craven. Mr. Weber was to be recalled, also.

Ad Film Units Deny Charges of Monopoly

Commercial motion picture distributors, booking agencies and a trade association charged by the Federal Trade Commission with conspiring to suppress competition and creating a monopoly in advertising films filed a response with the Commission over the week-end in which it was denied that the actions cited as contributing to monopoly were undertaken for that purpose.

Respondents in the case are the Motion Picture Advertising Service Co., Inc., New Orleans; United Film Ad Service, Inc., Kansas City, Mo.; Ray-Bell Films, Inc., St. Paul, Minn.; Alexander Film Company, Colorado Springs, Colo., and A. V. Cauger Service, Inc., Independence, Mo., distributors; Screen Broadcast Corporation, New York, and General Screen Advertising, Inc., Chicago, booking agencies, and the Association of Advertising Film Companies.

The Commission had charged that by agreement the distributors entered into individual contracts with exhibitors for the exclusive privilege of showing advertising films in their theatres, an allegation admitted by General Screen Advertising and the Alexander Film Company but denied by Screen Broadcast Corporation, while the other respondents aver that a majority of such contracts were non-exclusive in character.

Declare 'No Price Fixing'

The answers deny that the distributors are allied and banded together with the booking agencies and the trade association for the purpose of exercising any control upon the industry, or that the distributors, either directly or through the booking agencies, have determined and fixed by agreement the screening rates to be charged national advertisers, or the commissions to be paid the booking agencies and exhibitors. It is asserted that each distributor determines independently the prices to be paid to exhibitors and that such prices are not fixed by the booking agencies or by the distributors acting in concert.

In a majority of the answers it was alleged that no single respondent distributor ever had been capable of furnishing a national advertising campaign for any product because no one distributor had contracts with theatres covering a sufficient area of the country. As a result, it was set forth, manufacturers desiring to conduct national film advertising campaigns requested the respondents to associate themselves together for the purpose of making the theatre coverage of all available, thus avoiding the necessity to contract separately and individually with each respondent.

The action of the court was in the form of an order, denying the petition without comment.

ATP

Columbia

ADVENTURES OF MARTIN EDEN: Glenn Ford, Claire Trevor—Another good picture gone to waste. Of course, we had commencement week to fight and that had something to do with it, but we were surely vexed at the reception this picture received here. Running time, 87 minutes. Played May 22-23.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WIFE TAKES A FLYER, THE: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone, Allyn Joslyn—Played this feature early to average receipts with exceptionally heavy competition of graduation and top dance attraction. Timely and exceptionally funny show with clever gags and dialogue. Allyn Joslyn outstanding in his role. Should be played; stress novelty angle. Played May 24-26.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—We sure didn't do any business on this one in comparison with some of his earlier releases, but every time they select more soldiers we lost that many more customers, with no one to take their places. It might be that, then it might be that the young man's marriage has something to do with his evident falling off of business. The picture is as good as any he made lately, but it didn't do average business.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE: Spencer Tracy, Lana Turner—In spite of what other exhibitors say about Spencer Tracy's acting in this, I thought he turned in a grand performance. Picture didn't draw for some reason but those who saw it were well satisfied. Played May 14-15.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

FEMININE TOUCH, THE: Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche—Top cast, well made show to above average mid-week receipts and thoroughly pleased audience dominated by feminine trade. Played May 13-14. —Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

H. M. PULHAM, ESQ.: Hedy Lamarr, Robert Young, Ruth Hussey—Not a small town picture. Too long and too talky. Business was very bad. Running time, 119 minutes. Played May 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Better picture than some of the newer ones, but Rooney fails to draw for us.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

KATHLEEN: Shirley Temple, Herbert Marshall, Laraine Day—The women and children came but the men stayed away. Running time, 88 minutes. Played May 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LITTLE NELLIE KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy—One of the fine pictures well liked but fair at the box office—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

LOVE CRAZY: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Just fair at the box office.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

MARRIED BACHELOR: Ruth Hussey, Robert Young—A good show that pleased on our bargain night.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MEN OF BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney—Played this one late but it pleased 100%. The box office sure did well and the customers all gave me a nice smile when they left. If you have not played it do so. Running time, 106 minutes. Played April 23-25.—H. B. Narfason, Foam Lake Theatre, Foam Lake, Sask., Can. Rural patronage.

MR. AND MRS. NORTH: Gracie Allen, William Post, Jr.—Well, it was just about what you could expect from Gracie. Not a bad mystery story but made nonsensical by Gracie's antics. Running time, 67 minutes. Played May 20-21.—Horn & Morgan. Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—Old but well liked and business good.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

THIS TIME FOR KEEPS: Ann Rutherford, Robert Sterling—A programmer from Metro and just that, with no names in the cast. Will do very well on a double or bargain night, this story of mooching in-laws who nearly wreck a marriage. Virginia Weidler about the best, with Guy Kibbe doing alright. —Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo—Very satisfactory and business up.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

Paramount

ALOMA OF THE SOUTH SEAS: Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall—Business satisfactory.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Atlanta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—Good at the box office and a treat for the eyes. Paramount really shot the works on this picture. Seems like people prefer this type to the heavier productions, at least our people do. Running time, 82 minutes. Played May 17-18.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—Very beautiful scenery in color was strongest selling and pleasing characteristic. Advertised as escapist entertainment. Below average receipts. Played May 17-19.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BORDER VIGILANTES: William Boyd—Good enough western that pleased and drew average, maybe a little better, but this series has a definite draw and the kids eat them up. Ran with another feature and "Superman" for a nice double bill.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

HENRY ALDRICH FOR PRESIDENT: Jimmy Lydon, Charlie Smith—Best Aldrich show to date. Good drawing power. Radio fans came in large numbers and all thoroughly pleased with entertaining good show. Really funny. Used single feature to above average receipts. Played May 15-16.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE: Bob Hope, Vera Zorina, Victor Moore—Did above average business but not as good as "Caught in the Draft," but better than "Nothing But the Truth." Color helps. Played May 18-20. —Oliver Stewart, Circle Theatre, Alliston, Ont., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin—Very poor box office. Poor comments, not well liked. Plot thin and exaggerated. Would not recommend using. Played May 20-21.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: William Holden, Ellen Drew—This story is well off the beaten track and I enjoyed it for a change. But my customers don't attend as regularly as I do and the feeling wasn't mutual. Too fantastic for the practical-minded. Business was off. Running time, 83 minutes. Played May 7-9.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Republic

COWBOY SERENADE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Another top western from Republic and Gene Autry. Above average Friday, Saturday gross. All around good show to fine comments from audience. Played May 22-23.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRL FROM ALASKA, THE: Ray Middleton, Jean Parker—Good snow and dog picture which pleased the Friday-Saturday trade. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck —This arrived on the crest of a flood that washed out highways, bridges, and business in general. In some localities, only the mortgages were left standing. "Ball of Fire" just sputtered and died. A handfull of customers enjoyed the picture very much, but were unanimous in their desire to see Mr. Cooper stick to the he-man roles. Running time, 111 minutes. Played May 14-16.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

GAY FALCON, THE: George Sanders, Wendy Barrie—O. K. Mystery-filler that held their interest throughout. Running time, 66 minutes.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE AT SEA: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Am afraid that this series is on the wane. From past experience, my customers can anticipate the laughs and that takes all the fun out of laughing. Not the draw "Lord Epping" used to be. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 18-20.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

PLAYMATES: Kay Kyser, John Barrymore—Kay, you better go back on the air and let this acting alone. There wasn't enough band music to help put this one across and we just didn't equal our usual Friday and Saturday take. Not good enough for Sunday and it just ain't got what it takes.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—It had everything that has been claimed for it and on top of that we did the best business of the year, excepting one picture which was played at advanced admission prices. Thoroughly satisfied. Running time, 118 minutes. Played May 17-19.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE DAY: Claudette Colbert, John Payne—Why is it? Claudette Colbert is one of the finest actresses in pictures today yet we can hardly get a Corporal's Guard out to see one of her pictures. When we played her last one, we vowed we'd never use anymore yet we weakened and—same result! The picture is grand and was well liked by everyone that saw it but what good does that do? Running time, 86 minutes. Played May 24-25.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry—Dandy western. Excellent for small towns.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 30-May 2.—H. B. Narfason, Foam Lake Theatre, Foam Lake, Sask., Can. Rural patronage.

SUN VALLEY SERENADE: Sonja Henie, John Payne—This picture has all that it takes to make the box office jingle. Sonja Henie is very popular especially with the young people. Hope we see and hear some more of Glenn Miller's orchestra. Business very good. Played May 11-13.—Oliver Stewart, Circle Theatre, Alliston, Ont., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

SWAMP WATER: Walter Huston, Walter Brennan—Good feature. No draw. We don't particularly like this type of show here.—Al Eliasen, Koronis Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural patronage.

TO THE SHORES OF TRIPOLI: Maureen O'Hara, John Payne—This picture did excellent business here and pleased 100%. The second day better than the first. Played May 25-26.—Ira Smith, Breeze Theatre, Beaufort, S. C. Rural patronage-near Parris Island Marine Barracks.

YANK IN THE R.A.F.: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Played this one late but it seemed to be pre-advertised as a lot of strangers came far to see it and left well pleased. More like this and the exhibitor could be a friend of his customers. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 21-23.—H. B. Narfason, Foam Lake Theatre, Foam Lake, Sask., Can. Rural patronage.

United Artists

POT O' GOLD: James Stewart, Paulette Goddard—Fair musical; business down.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

GIVE US WINGS: Billy Halop, Huntz Hall—Went back and picked this up to fill up a program. It's not new but it has plenty of action and airplanes which is what the small town needs these days. Strictly a programmer, but good. Played May 21-22.—Oliver Stewart, Circle Theatre, Alliston, Ontario, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

HELLZAPOPPIN: Olsen & Johnson, Martha Raye—Not much of a story to it. Plenty of laughs. Will do business any place. Played May 21-23.—Nick Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT GHOST: Abbott & Costello—This picture should do business in any small town. Their popularity on the radio certainly helps to put their pictures over. The kids all know them and bring out the adults. Business above average. Played May 25-27.—Oliver Stewart, Circle Theatre, Alliston, Ont., Can. Small town and rural patronage.

IN THE NAVY: Abbott and Costello—These boys do business for me, and this was no exception.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

KEEP 'EM FLYING: Abbott and Costello—The best yet from these boys. Just what the Doctor ordered for these troubled times. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 21-23.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

NICE GIRL: Deanna Durbin—We are unable to do satisfactory business with Miss Durbin.—R. R. Kiefer, Kiefer's Theatre, Hardisty, Alberta, Can. Village and rural patronage.

SPOILERS, THE: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne—Fine action drama. Somewhat rough but still enjoyed by ladies as well as men. Miss Dietrich definitely adds value and helps draw. Picture is well made, backgrounds interesting, and entertainment diversified. Used shorts with feminine appeal. Played May 10-12.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SPOILERS, THE: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne—A good picture that did average business on our best time. The cast was no star-studded affair but was well selected and they did a very good job. The fight was good, maybe just a little gruesome and some scenes are pretty risque, but my patrons liked the picture a lot.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WHAT'S COOKIN': Andrews Sisters, Gloria Jean—Played this with "Burma Convoy." Two good shows, one musical the other action. Recommend as extra good double bill. Comments good for both. "Burma Convoy" timely. Played May 3-5.—Stanley R. Leay, New Stanley Theatre, Galena, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DANGEROUSLY THEY LIVE: John Garfield, Raymond Massey—Business way off on this one although no complaints were registered by those who paid to see it. Running time, 77 minutes. Played May 20-21.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

MANPOWER: Edward G. Robinson, Marlene Dietrich—A swell picture with plenty of action and some good comedy that pleased our bargain night crowd and drew average business. Sold right away and showed some profit on the two-day run. A little old but much better than some of the new ones.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY: Jeffrey Lynn, Priscilla Lane—A light picture with a swell cast. Did not draw. Some said it was OK, others said they did not care for it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played May 14-16.—H. B. Narfason, Foam Lake Theatre, Foam Lake, Sask., Can. Rural patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—I blush to say it, but I was afraid of this one. And the customers waded for miles through flood and mud to see it, not once, but twice and even three times. One of the most moving moving pictures I have ever run. By all means, play it; it's a credit to the industry. Running time, 108 minutes. Played May 25-27.—Delmar C. Fox, Fox Theatre, Pincher Creek, Alberta, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

TARGET FOR TONIGHT: Documentary—Very timely and exceptionally interesting. Running time, 48 minutes. Played May 22-23.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TARGET FOR TONIGHT: Documentary—Doubled with "Niagara Falls" made a bang up program that pleased 100%, as both pictures tops in their class. Played May 11-12.—W. R. Pyle, Dreamland Theatre, Rockglen, Sask., Can. Rural small town patronage.

THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Enjoyed by all. Title hurt the draw. Why don't they give Errol Flynn a modern story. Miss de Havilland gave her usual fine performance, a swell actress. Played May 25-27.—Nick Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ont., Can. Small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Exhibitor Problems

At the Atlantic City convention of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, held last week, an entirely new set of problems was discussed—problems which have arisen as a result of the war effort. For example, one of the principal concerns was the establishment of some uniform system for calling air raid wardens, doctors, nurses' aids and other people necessary for emergency purposes which would not disturb audiences. It is considered inadvisable to stop the show to announce that air raid wardens' presence is required; during an air raid, a motion picture theatre is a good place for an audience to remain.

Still another wartime problem discussed at the Allied convention was the question of dimouts. Ever since there has been such a thing as a theatre, it has been considered axiomatic that there must be a maximum of light outside. Now the enemy has forced us to curtail our light; we may only have one half watt per sq. ft., and lights are restricted so that they do not contribute to sky glow. Most theatre owners have found that the lack of light has not cut their business; also their light bill is considerably less, so that the net result is a gain.

Priorities also came in for discussion and some fears were expressed that the Government might impose restrictions on the manufacture of exciter lamps, photoelectric cells and radiotrons.

But the problem that seemed foremost in the mind of everyone was: "What can we do to further the war effort?" Before the convention was over the delegates had the answers. There are three: Sell War Bonds and Stamps, show Victory Films, and make collections whenever asked.

Extra-Curricular Activity

Following closely on the heels of our editorial, "The Joiner", in the issue of May 30th, comes word from showmen on various types of extra-curricular activity. Theodore Friedman, manager of the Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y., points with justifiable pride to his rise in the ranks of the Volunteer Fire Department from Lieutenant to Captain "and now to the esteemed position of Battalion Chief, which I now hold. Our Suffern Fire Department is not just an ordinary outfit," he explains, giving details of its equipment and manpower. Ted would like to hear from other showmen who are also members of the Fire Departments in their respective communities.

The showman's post as head of the largest edifice in most communities where crowds gather and also as custodian of such highly inflammable material as film makes him a logical candidate for membership and later officership in a Volunteer Fire Company. Besides the safety aspect of such a position, there is also the social viewpoint: "Vamps" are often the leaders in the community's social life.

A further example of outside work is submitted by Hal Orr, city manager for Wilby-Kincey Theatres, Rocky Mount, N. C., who has recently been elected Governor of the 189th District of Rotary International. The Rocky Mount Evening Telegram regarded his selection as an honor to the city and commented upon it editorially.

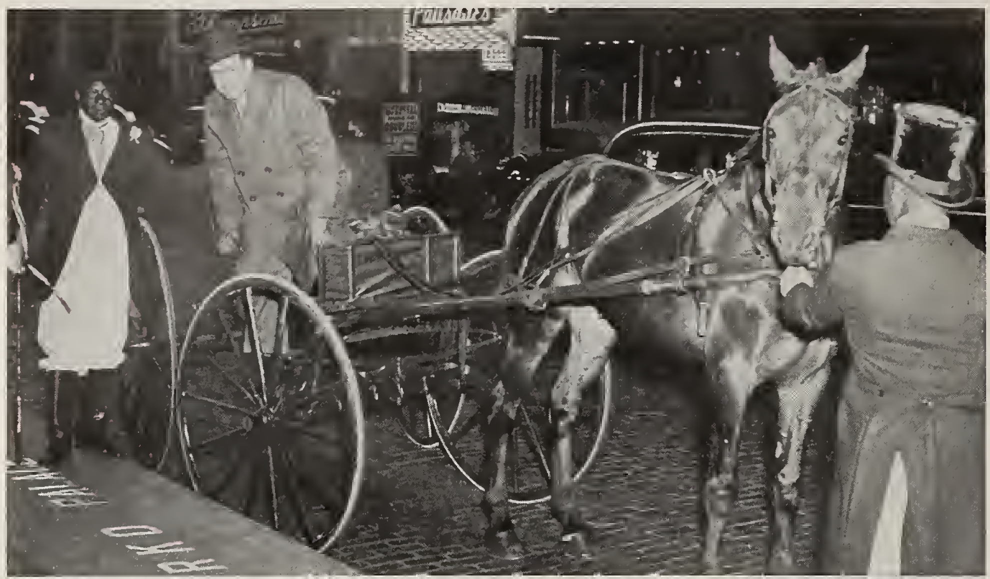
Another "joiner" of whom we learned this week is Lee Conrad of the Embassy Theatre, Johnstown, Pennsylvania. They call him "The little dynamo" in Johnstown, and no wonder. Here is a list of Lee's activities aside from his job as manager of the Embassy: President of the Lions Club, Chief Air Raid Warden, Director of the Chamber of Commerce, President of the Citizens Council, Director of the Boy Scouts, Director of the Ad and Press Club, Director of the Community Chest and Director of Promotions for the Retail Association. He is also a Fourth Degree Knight of Columbus, a member of St. John's Roman Catholic Church, a member of the American Legion, a member of B.P.O.E. and a member of the Loyal Order of Moose. With all that activity, Lee is a valuable employee of Wilmer & Vincent, owners of the Embassy, and indubitably deserves also the title, "A good citizen".

Eleven Years Old But Still Good

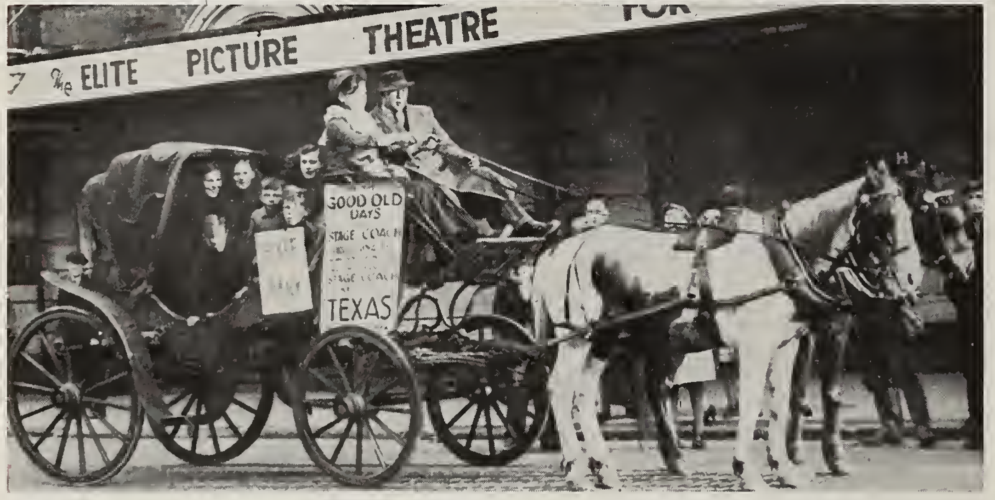
Jack Hamilton, manager of Schine's Webster Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., finds that the pages of the Round Table are as good today as they were eleven years ago. Jack discovered this when he came across a copy of Motion Picture Herald dated May 2, 1931. "To say I enjoyed reading this is putting it mildly, and the Managers' Round Table was extremely interesting with all the gags and exploitation stunts that were used to sell pictures. From these pages, I have gathered very valuable and sure-fire information on selling a show and I just couldn't let it go by without telling you of the discovery."

Jack isn't the first showman we've heard of who has a file of the Herald and who uses it regularly, too. —BOB WILE

HORSE TO FORE AGAIN AS EXPLOITATION ADJUNCT



MY GAL SAL
MY GAL SAL



The horse is returning as a useful exploitation concomitant. Manager Frank Smith offered free admission to any patrons driving to the theatre in a horse-drawn vehicle during the run of "Broadway," at the RKO Palace, Chicago. The lower picture shows the coach used by Reynolds Roberts, Elite, Middleborough, England, to advertise "Texas". A by-law prohibits advertising vehicles between 10:00 A. M. and 8:00 P. M., but he got around that by catering for shoppers and market people in the morning and pleasure seekers and shift workers in the evenings. Top, right—Lou Cohen used the lady in the horse-drawn coach on the streets of Hartford, Conn.

THEATRES SELL BONDS IN BIG CITIES, SMALL TOWNS

The first week of the sale of Bonds and Stamps in the theatres across the country brought many entries for the Quigley War Showmanship Award from Round Tablers whose ingenious and showmanlike campaigns may be duplicated by other members from large and small towns alike.

Tupper Lake, N. Y. Pop. 5,451

To put over his Memorial Day show, Clay Cornell at the State Theatre, Tupper Lake, N. Y., especially booked "Remember Pearl Harbor" for a one-day showing, adding the March of Time "America's New Army," featuring General MacArthur and Popeye in "Fleets of Strength." With the entire show booked and built on a patriotic scale, Clay followed his advertising along the same lines with plenty of red, white and blue. In advance of the regular trailer, the Round Tabler used the color title slide and at the same time played a record on the non-sync before the show and at all breaks.

Army and Marine recruiting A-boards were secured from the postoffice and placed at the curb to add dress to the front, while pennant streamers were suspended over the entire face of the building and the American Flag flown from the marquee. The theatre's radio program each morning plugged the show five days in advance and letters regarding the feature and stressing the showing of the Army in the M. of T. were sent to heads of the American Legion Posts, VFW, Boy Scouts and Red Cross.

Arnold Stoltz at the Warner Avon, Utica, has created this booth which features caricatures of Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito. Every time a sale is made a bell rings and the caricatures pop up with the word "Ouch" plainly visible.

A large window was promoted from local five and dime, which featured MacArthur photos, busts, pins, etc., the theatreman distributing MacArthur buttons to the first 200 persons attending his show. In addition to his regular weekly program, 2,000 special circus heralds were distributed for the occasion within a 40-mile radius.

Meriden, Conn. Pop. 39,494

To inaugurate his campaign at Loew's Poli-Palace, in Meriden, Conn., Joe Samartano has contacted members of the Business Girls' Club of the local Y. W. C. A. to handle the sale of bonds and stamps in his lobby for the duration. For his lobby display, whipped up on the theme "Make These Headlines Come True," Joe used actual master signature heads from the various newspapers and pasted them on an easel for a background.

A contingent of ushers were included in the Memorial Day parade, which was the day the theatre opened its campaign, carrying a mounted Treasury Department 24-sheet plus a 14-foot oil cloth banner announcing the sale of bonds and stamps at the theatre. Girls were also included in the line of march selling stamps and getting pledges for the bonds. The Mayor agreed to purchase the first stamp in the lobby of the theatre to open the campaign and this was good for newspaper art break together with stories.

For his Army and Navy Day Relief Drive, Joe contacted the junior auxiliary of the Y. W. C. A., with a girl on hand to make collections at all performances. A prologue was gotten up to open the show, using local singers and a piano player augmented by a contingent of members from the American Legion in uniform, who appeared as a color guard. This took place immediately after the Gary Cooper trailer while the girls were collecting in the aisles.

Special announcement stories were planted in the dailies and much interest was aroused by keeping the public in touch with the totals collected.

Jackson, Tenn. Pop. 24,332

In Jackson, Tenn., city manager J. R. MacEachron at the Malco Paramount and State theatres, arranged for several students to make minute talks on the stage to aid in the sale of Stamps and Bonds.

Washington, Ind. Pop. 9,312

A. J. Kalberer of Switow's Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind., who was in charge of the local drive for the Army and Navy emergency relief fund, forwards tear sheets showing stories run in his local dailies on the excellent showing made at his theatre. In addition, Kal through the newspaper columns publicly thanked the theatregoers for their cooperation in helping to make the drive a local success.

Evansville, Ind. Pop. 96,062

In connection with his War Stamp and Bond Drive at Loew's Theatre, in Evansville, Ind., H. W. Reisinger secured the cooperation of the O. C. D. and Women's Auxiliary, promoting women for the duration to sell stamps and bonds in his lobby. Advance stories were planted in both newspapers and institutional ads were run on the drive.

A 40-foot float with two 24-sheets mounted was used in the Memorial Day parade, followed by ushers from all the theatres carrying banners. Radio spot announcements were also promoted from the two stations for the duration. The Outdoor Advertising Company is permitting the sniping of 24 War Bond and Stamp posters for the duration and all downtown street intersections will be stencilled with: "Buy War Bonds and Stamps at your Favorite Theatre."

Reisinger further promoted Fifi D'Orsay, playing locally, to sell stamps on the opening afternoon of his drive and intends following through on other personalities. Local transportation company has also come through permitting cards with institutional copy for the theatres.

Columbia, S. C. Pop. 62,396

Members of the Wilby-Kincey "Mickey Mouse Club" at the Palmetto Theatre, in Columbia, S. C., competed with each other.

New York City, N. Y. Pop. 7,454,995

At Loew's Sheridan Square, in New York City, Round Tabler Bob Rosen featured an electric eye shooting gallery in his lobby with cutouts of Hitler and Hirohito. To every purchaser of a bond or stamps a free shot at the "menaces" was allowed. Through the cooperation of the American Women's Voluntary Workers, a girl was on hand all day to handle the booth. Also featured in his lobby is a thermometer which records the sales made.

A fully equipped air raid shelter has been set up in a strategic location in the lobby of the City Newsreel Theatre, in New York City, where it is attracting a great deal of patron inspection and attention during the run of "This Is Blitz." The publicity and exploitation staff of the theatre promoted the loan exhibition from the Solid Timber Products Company.

The shelter is contrived to withstand the weight and pressure of over 10 tons of debris and is made from non-priority materials. There is also space for a double mattress and emergency equipment at both ends.

In cooperation with the Gem Razor Company, Al Rosen, manager of Loew's State, in New York City, has set up a recording booth in his lobby. Each stamp purchaser is permitted to make a record of his voice, which is mailed gratis by the management anywhere in the United States. In addition, Rosen has offered free recordings to all servicemen with gratis mailing included here, too.

Memphis, Tenn. Pop. 292,942

Tying in with the Scripps-Howard national search for a stirring new war song, for which war bonds will go to the three major winners, Francis Deering at Loew's State, in Memphis, reports that for the second time in its history the local Commercial Appeal was cracked for a contest. The paper ran stories of the tieup, plugging the fact that the awards would be made from the theatre stage, getting a plug in for his current attraction, "My Gal Sal." In addition to the War Bonds, Deering offered guest tickets to runners-up.

Plains, Pa. Pop. 15,621

To help promote the sale of Bonds and Stamps in his locality, Manager Joseph Engel of the Plain Theatre, in Plains, Pa., in conjunction with a local club, sponsored a poster contest for amateur artists. Contestants were required to submit sketches of General MacArthur with the winner receiving stamps for his prize. Artists of all accepted sketches were guests of the management at a special matinee show when the awards were made.

Syracuse, N. Y. Pop. 205,967

Harry Unterfort at the Keith Theatre, in Syracuse, is another Round Tabler not unmindful of the boys in service. Harry offers one child's ticket for each seven records presented at the boxoffice and one adult admission for each 12 records turned in. Attractive two-color heralds plugging his current show, "My Gal Sal," were distributed to put over the offer.

Glendale, Calif. Pop. 82,582

Although put on for Mother's Day, Ed Harris at the Fox Glendale, in Glendale, Cal., says that efforts along the same lines as his campaign will keep up the morale of mothers as well as the men in service and create good will for the theatres and the industry as a whole.

One of the slants of his campaign included inviting any men in the service who were on leave to attend his show with their mothers as guests of the management. For the publicity involved a local recording studio set up its equipment in his lobby and made free recordings for mothers wishing to send a record of greetings to their sons stationed in camps.

Harris further reports that he secured the cooperation of mothers with boys in the service, to sell bonds and stamps in his lobby. This resulted in sales over $2,000 on a Sunday. Another stunt conceived by the enterprising theatreman was to declare Mrs. MacArthur the Ideal American "Victory Mother." In this connection a letter was sent to her signed by Glendale War Mothers.

A special matinee was staged the Saturday before Mother's Day with children paying tribute to Victory Mothers. Boy and Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls and other patriotic youth organization groups participated in a co-operatively planned program. Stage ceremonies included Flag dedications, Allegiance to the Flag and singing of "The Star Spangled Banner." The highlight of the program was the introduction of a mother whose son is in the service. She spoke on the important job being done by all Youth Groups in joining the Victory Program. The War Savings Booth was set up in the lobby and handled by the youngsters.

Gloversville, N. Y. Pop. 23,329

For his date on "Remember Pearl Harbor" at Schine's Hippodrome, in Gloversville, Guy W. Hevia arranged for the local "I Am An American" Day ceremonies to be held on his stage. Sea Scouts and Red Cross nurses, as well as a bugler, were on hand to form a color guard and surround the main speakers. Contacting the Army Department, Hevia got Sgt. Ryan up from Ft. Monmouth to give a talk on his experiences at Pearl Harbor. Since the lad was a former localite, the papers further played up his appearance.

An additional promotion was the invitation extended by the theatremen to all mothers of local boys overseas to be his guests on opening night. Numerous window displays with stills carrying full credits were landed as were red, white and blue displays, while special cards made up in the shape of shields carrying full credits were spotted in 10 different locations.

Pollock Reports on Recent Activities

To sell his openings on "Maisie Gets Her Man" and "Wife Takes a Flyer" at Loew's Theatre, in Rochester, Les Pollock for the former tied in with the local Raleigh cigarette agency for a display of Red Skelton. Complete coverage of all cigar stores using Raleighs was garnered with displays landed in the town's leading windows. One of the leading department stores featured an Ann Sothern co-op ad, which carried a cut of the star with a new hair-do.

Newspaper coverage included a contest on Red Skelton, with entrants requested to write down five typical Skelton gags for guest tickets. A feature story on radio comedians who have risen to screen fame was also fun.

For "Flyer," Les also planted a contest which required contestants to name four pictures that had the word "wife" in their titles. A summer fashion co-op was landed on Larraine Day with leading women's merchant and another with a local hairdresser, and President Roosevelt buttons were distributed to the kids.

JUNIOR SHOWMEN

William Bryant, on May 31st, to Mr. and Mrs. William Holden. His dad manages the B. & K. Chicago Theatre.

Lobby Stunts Aid "Hellzapoppin"

Lobby sideshows featured the campaign put on for "Hellzapoppin" at the RKO 58th Street Theatre by Manager Ansel Weinstein and press agent Fred Herkowitz. Among the stunts was a distortion mirror which stopped patrons in the lobby, while a target contest offered guest tickets to the show to those scoring bulls' eyes with rubber darts provided.

For the opening night, the Fife and Drum Corps of the American Legion marched to the theatre followed by a float carrying a 24-sheet and ushers with "Hellzapoppin" signs. For his street ballyhoo, Weinstein used one of his ushers dressed as old time cop who toured streets carrying rubber lamppost. Entire opening was highlighted by the personal apeparance of Olsen and Johnson, heralds, trailers and lobby cards selling their appearance.

Moyer's "To Be" Canvass

Two weeks prior to the opening of "To Be or Not to Be," Charles Moyer, manager of Warners' State Theatre, Hanover, Pa., devoted an hour each morning for a personal house to house canvass on all principal sections of the city and personally advised the lady of the house that the picture was opening at his house. This same procedure was followed when heralds were distributed in the surrounding towns.

Harris' "Dancing" Contest

With the cooperation of a large local store, scene stills from former Norma Shearer pictures appeared on a large circular and patrons correctly identifying the films were awarded guest tickets to "We Were Dancing" by J. Schultz, Harris, Donora, Pa.

Smile Week Held By Rosenzweig

Divided into three groups is the "Smile of the Week" photo contest inaugurated at the Manchester, St. Louis, by Jack Rosenzweig. The contest is divided into three groups: Babies, Children and Young Folks, and Parents and Grandparents;; all are eligible to participate merely by submitting their photographs.

Free guest tickets are awarded weekly to winners in the form of a grand prize as well as by groups. The photos for judging and of previous week's winners are posted on a lobby card with copy reading: "Keep Smiling, no matter how old or young, all the way through the ages and don't miss any of our 'Keep Smiling' hit programs."

For the convenience of patrons, Jack arranged a tieup with a neighborhood photographer, which enables them to have their photo taken and entered in the contest free. At the same time, a display in the photographer's window affords the theatreman an opportunity to plug his pictures. The cost of the lobby and window displays is defrayed by the cooperating merchant, who in turn receives a plug on the lobby display.

In Jackson, Tenn., city manager J. R. MacEachron at the Malco Paramount and State theatres, arranged for several students to make minute talks on the stage to aid in the sale of Stamps and Bonds.

Stilt Walker Used by Goldberg for "Marines"

Securing the permission of the Chief of Police, Herb Goldberg at the Broadway Theatre, in San Diego, Cal., ahead of his date on "Call Out the Marines," featured a stilt walker as his advance exploitation for the picture. Dressed in marine uniform with an appropriate chest and back banner the man toured the downtown area, around the Navy and Marine bases and army camps. In addition the ballyhoo covered shift changes at one of the local aircraft plants, which Goldberg says has about 25,000 men in each shift.

For his double horror show of "The Ghost of Frankenstein" and "Strange Case of Dr. RX," Herb created an entire false front of pressed wood panels painted in several shades of eerie greens and spooky colors. Stills and cutout figures, coupled with a large newspaper campaign, 24 sheets all over town and a street ballyhoo sold the show for three weeks at his theatre.

Murphy's Street Artist

A sketch artist, complete with beret and easel was stationed in front of Loew's State Theatre, in Syracuse by Frank Murphy as part of his campaign on "Tortilla Flat." The artist made sketches of characters in the Steinbeck novel and then presented them to passersby.

Weiner's "Joe Smith" Week

Proclamations by the mayor of "Joe Smith, American" Week; insertion of thousands of pluggers in payrolls at defense factories, and a special screening for officials of these plants highlighted the "Joe Smith, American" campaign put over by Fred Weimer, Gopher, Minn.

Bond Opening Nets $5,750,000 For War Effort

An outstanding job was done for the New York world premiere of "Yankee Doodle." The campaign was directed by Mort Blumenstock and tied to the Treasury Department, which sponsored the premiere with the purchase of a War Bond the requisite for admission. The War Bond campaign which may be adopted elsewhere resulted in the sale of more than $5,750,000 in bonds.

Making full use of the wealth of popular music in the picture, especially such numbers as "Grand Old Flag," "Over There," "Yankee Doodle Boy," "Mary," and numerous other George M. Cohen hits, radio programs totalling a new record were lined up for playing of the song numbers and tributes and salutes to Cohan himself, with plugs for the picture in each case.

To spur more efficiency among defense workers, arrangements were made with labor management committees of the War Production Board whereby "Yankee Doodle Dandy" Score Boards would be set up in defense plants to give recognition to the best workers—who received a pin reading "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy." It was also arranged for the Navy's first High School flying cadet unit to be officially known as the Yankee Doodle Dandy Squadron.

Red, white and blue "Yankee Doodle Dandy" hats, blocked at the bottom and slit at the top for the dropping of coins or bills, were made up for use in collecting funds for the United Service Organization campaign to provide entertainment for the boys in uniform.

Victor, Columbia and Decca put out elaborate albums, decorated with stills and art work from the picture, and with advertising and exploitation designed to include exhibits of stills and other display matter publicizing the film's current engagement at the Hollywood Theatre. Twenty-five Davega stores all over town had big window layouts with streamers crediting the picture, together with plugs in the large newspaper ads, and in cooperation with the recording company the music counters of various other stores also set up attractive displays. In addition, men's clothing stores featured a "Yankee Doodle" tie and leading women's specialty shop devoted window display and newspaper ads to dresses adapted from the model worn by Joan Leslie in the picture.

Model Plane Contest Tied to "Captains"

For juvenile attention, Bob Collins at the State Theatre, in Modesto, Cal., ahead of his date on "Captains in the Clouds" ran a model airplane building contest, which was plugged in the daily papers, in his house organ and on the screen. Collins also promoted prizes from neighborhood merchants which were awarded as prizes to the youngsters. To build interest, the entries were displayed in the lobby ahead.

War Bonds & Stamps Now On Sale At All Motion Picture Theatres

This is one of a series of ads inserted in Baltimore newspapers by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland. Reaction of the public was excellent, according to Meyer Leventhal, a member of the organization. At the convention of Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, held in Atlantic City last week, it was recommended that other exhibitor organizations use similar ads. Francis Harmon, executive secretary of the War Activities Committee, praised the idea at the convention.

Corn Contest Builds Dallas' "Holt" Serial

To give the new serial, "Holt of the Secret Service," a good send off, David Dallas of the State of Manhattan, Kan., working with the local county agricultural agent, arranged for a unique corn contest. The county agent mailed special letters to all the 4-H boys and girls in the community announcing that all members who brought one ear of corn would be admitted free. Prizes were given for the following: Largest single ear of field corn, fully developed; smallest single fully developed ear of field corn, most interesting collection of five ears, of various sizes, types and colors. The contest rated large space for stories and art in the local morning and afternoon papers.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

THE MAGNIFICENT AMBERSONS (RKO Radio): Orson Welles' second production will be advertised by many showmen with his name played up heavily, since "Citizen Kane" was so successful and is inextricably identified with Welles. The time of the picture is early Twentieth Century, providing the clues for several exploitation ideas, including a display of styles of the period contrasted with today's modes, various ancient vehicles such as a horse car, an early type automobile or even a horse and carriage with a modern tieup. The picture is adapted from a well-known book by Booth Tarkington and therefore promotions can be arranged with lending libraries and bookstores. The Ambersons are a large family and, because of the book, well known; therefore, a lobby blow-up with their names and pictures and a similar cut used in newspaper publicity or programs would be good exploitation.

ONCE UPON A THURSDAY (MGM): The story deals with a maid and her adventures on her Thursday off. Much of the exploitation can center on the maid's point of view and others' views toward her. Teaser ads in the classified columns would be unusually appropriate and would attract attention. Cooperation of laundries could be obtained to insert messages, purporting to come from the maid, in each package. Posted want ads in the lobby would also attract attention. A tabloid type herald would be especially appropriate.

THE MAGNIFICENT DOPE (Twentieth Century-Fox): The picture is a comedy and is being sold entirely as a comedy; stress is being laid on the number of laughs and the unusual situations all pregnant with humor. The title suggests several promotions which would include the word "dope", including such ideas as a herald with a personal message from the manager headed "The Inside Dope" and a series of pictures of old classbooks from high school, singling some out as "Magnificent Dopes". The press book suggests several amusing contests, including one in which "No" is the correct answer and one scores minus ten for each negative response. There are special ideas in the press book for insurance salesmen, for fire departments and for ad writers. A large standee (life size) of Don Ameche pointing his finger directly at the camera should attract plenty of attention if placed in the lobby, a vacant store window or even on the sidewalk.

Callow Reports on Cool Activities

From Ev Callow, in Philadelphia, come accounts of his plans for "cool offensive" at the Warner theatres there. It is planned to use summer furniture in the lobbies of the houses with shrubbery pots spotted strategically. Small evergreens, hanging ferns and flower-covered lattice work will be featured, with credit card for the florist and furniture store from whom the aggregation has been promoted.

Contests will be run in the local dailies offering guest tickets for the best "cool slogan" and a director from the weather bureau will be photographed at the theatre plant for story and art work in the papers.

For herald distribution, small thermometers will be attached to printed cards, copy to the effect that whatever the temperature may be outside, it is always cool in the Warner theatres.

Moyer Holds Special Show For Underprivileged Kids

Some excellent goodwill was garnered recently by Charlie Moyer at the State, in Hanover, Pa., when he arranged for a free Sunday Night concert to be held on his stage. A silver offering was taken and all the proceeds together with the sale of program ads to merchants was turned over for the Underprivileged Child Fund of the local Kiwanis Club. A local studio donated the services of 50 musicians, Warner's the theatre, and Moyer reports the show as a huge success.

Stoltz' First Aid Herald Offers Free Admissions

Eye-arresting was the herald distributed by Arnold Stolz at the Avon, in Utica, N. Y. ahead of his Midnite Spook Show. Printed in red at the top were two of the Red Cross insignias with copy in black reading: "First Aid to faint hearts. If you pass out when seeing Francisco's midnite spook frolic, we'll pass you in free to see another performance. See this big midnite spook show at" etc.

Perry Hosts Officer

Since a neighborhood officer appeared in the short "Training a Police Horse," Fred Perry at the Beach, in the Bronx booked the subject and advertised it widely in his sector. In addition Perry promoted the loan of some of the officer's trophies, which were put on display in the theatre lobby, and invited him to attend the opening together with his family.

Greber Celebrates Theatre Anniversary

For the anniversary of the Avenue Theatre, in Philadelphia, Ben B. Greber put on a well rounded campaign which included announcements and stories in both local papers and a sound truck which toured the city playing records telling of gala events at the theatre.

A multi-colored framed lobby display featured telegrams received from Hollywood stars congratulating the theatre on its anniversary. One of the highlights of Greber's campaign was an Air Raid Warden's Nite, which included an auction night with the entire proceeds being turned over to them for equipment. The local merchants contributed various items which were auctioned off to the highest bidder.

Juke Girl Plays "Juke Box" on Stage

An excellent stunt inaugurated by Marlowe Conner at the Capitol, Madison, Wis., ahead of "Juke Girl" consisted of placing a box on one side of the stage, closed in just before the trailer with an attractive girl walking across the stage and going through the motions of dropping a nickel in the machine, which brought the trailer on the screen.

During the run of the picture, Conner placed the box in front of the theatre and hooked it into his public address system. As folks went by they were sold on "Juke Girl" as well as the sale of Defense Stamps and Bonds.

"Spy Smashers" Tied To Newsstands by Myers

For the "Spy Smasher" serial, Al Myers, manager of Warners' Astor Theatre, Philadelphia, culled the aid of the news trucks servicing the area. Posters selling the serial were on all trucks, giving the theatre credit mention. Colored stills of the Spy Smasher were distributed to all the merchants in the neighborhood, 3,000 circus heralds were handed out, announcement cards placed at all neighborhood news stands and "Spy Smasher" comic books were given to the first 100 children attending the first chapter showing of the serial.

Promotes Mayor on "Remember"

Reporting on his "Remember the Day" campaign at the Century Theatre, in Minneapolis, Charlie Zinn landed a four-column break with art on an interview planned between Mayor Marvin Kline and his former grade school teacher. The story included highlights of the pair reminiscences of school days.

Holds Service on Stage

With the Veterans of Foreign Wars holding a dedication service to the present fighting men on the stage of the St. Albans Theatre, in St. Albans, N. Y., N. Levinson arranged for the color guard to parade down the aisle playing "Call to the Colors." The Pledge of Allegiance was given by the entire audience, followed by singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

ROUND TABLE MEMBERS HAVE WIDELY VARIED CAREERS

Harry A. Colvin

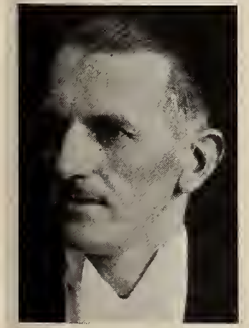
Practically brought up in showbusiness, Harry A. Colvin, now manager of the State Theatre, in Richmond, Ind., traveled with his parents in vaudeville until he was 17 years of age, during part of which time he was a tap dancer. Eventually settling in Bedford, Ind., Harry worked on and off at the Indiana Theatre as artist, doorman and exploiteer for Public and McCarrell Enterprises.

From that spot, Colvin moved to Bloomington as artist and exploiteer for the Indiana Theatre and thence to Seymour as manager of the Vondee for the Vonderschmitt Circuit. In 1939 was transferred to Crawfordsville as city manager of the Strand and Vanity theatres for the same circuit and in 1941 to Richmond to manage the State, which opened in June of that year and from which post he is still operating.

Edmund Burke Noonan

Edmund Burke Noonan manages the Olimpia Theatre, Mexico City, D. F. He tells us that currently this is the only American operating theatre in Mexico. Before moving south of the border Ed ws with the R.K.O. Distributing Corporation in St. Louis, Missouri, having started there as assistant booker.

Reynolds Roberts



Showmanship is not a dead art in England by any means, it can be attested by Reynolds Roberts, manager of the Elite, Middlesborough, Yorkshire, who recently joined the many Britishers who are members of the Round Table. The Elite is one of the Associated British Cinemas.

Roberts was born at Hull, East Yorkshire, June 19, 1901. His career as a showman started at the Regal, Hull, in 1934, where he served as doorman. After serving in various posts in the Rex, Regis and Royalty in Hull and the Regal in Beverly, he returned to the Regal in Hull as house manager in 1937 and remained until 1939, when he was promoted to the managership of the Ritz at Wallsend-on-Tyne. In 1940 he was again promoted, this time to his present post.

Roberts won the solid silver trophy awarded by the Kine Company of showmen outright in 1939. The next year, when the award was discontinued for the war period, he won a replica.

Among his outstanding accomplishments is the inauguration of the Navy, Army and Air Force Cigarette Fund from which every townsman in the fighting services receives Postal orders from the money collected in the vestibule (lobby) in pennies.

At right, above, we introduce Zeva ("Skee") Yovan, who is assistant to Sam Gilman at Loew's Theatre, in Harrisburg, Pa. "Skee" started at that house as an usher, six months later going on to a doorman's job and later chief usher. After the Majestic was completed and reopened as the Capitol, Hatfield went back as operator and worked there until a year ago when he was promoted to manager of the house.

Jack Bartholic

Jack Bartholic is a Round Tabler from the Warner Ritz Theatre, in New Kensington, Pa., having been initiated in the business in 1937 as an usher at the Harris Theatre, in Tarentum, Pa., under Manager W. SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Holiday Inn

(Paramount—Block 7)

Song and Dance Festival

Showmen surely will be liking the result of the collaboration of three high-powered box-office names like Bing Crosby, Fred Astaire and Irving Berlin. "Holiday Inn" is entertainment, most positively escapist, extravagantly set and blithely successful.

Patrons will be singing of a "White Christmas" in September and perhaps looking determinedly toward a year when holidays can again be devoted to carefree enjoyment. Such unalloyed gaiety carries its own propaganda.

There is a plot, of course, which is not taken too seriously. No one could doubt that Crosby will win the pretty girl with the heart of gold, with little more than a song and a shrug, or that the charming bounder, Astaire, will be justly served with the scheming gold-digger. That circumstances seem to interfere with this happy solution provides occasion for more Astaire dancing and more Crosby singing of more Berlin songs.

What really holds "Holiday Inn" together for 101 minutes is an idea. As a song and dance man who yearns for the open spaces but can't make farming pay, Bing conceives the idea of an inn, a converted farmhouse off the main road, open on holidays only with an elaborate one-day show, for people who would like "to get away from it all" if only there were "something to do." The story runs by the calendar with each "red-letter" day bringing a new show, a new song and another small slice of plot. There is a delightful variety in song—the ballads "White Christmas" and "Careful, That's My Heart" are neatly contrasted with the spice of "Happy Holiday" and a semi-spiritual "Abraham"—while Fred Astaire's intricate ballroom dancing with two clever partners, Marjorie Reynolds and Virginia Dale, is interspersed with a solo fire-cracker dance and a special New Years Eve number after scotch and soda—one bottle of each.

Producer Mark Sandrich has made an excellent blend of song and story, keeping the film moving easily and without pretension. The four principals give fine performances, and mention should be made also of Walter Abel as the theatrical agent and Louise Beavers, the major-domo of the Inn.

The bare facts about "Holiday Inn", cast and contents—14 songs by Irving Berlin and 8 dance routines by Fred Astaire—are selling points. It's a war tonic, and it works.

Red Tanks

(Artkino)

Tank Warfare Dramatized

Russia's Lenfilm Studio combines a thin story with spectacular documentary photography to tell the function and methods of the Red Army tank corps.

Rather than following the straight documentary pattern of say "Target for Tonight" Z. Drapkin and R. Maiman, scenarist and director, peg their film about tanks, and the men who operate them, on a fictitious drive for a salient of the Russo-Nazi front. It is the scenes of tank brigades leaping trenches, splashing through rivers, crushing enemy field guns and pounding through burning forests that give drama and interest to the picture.

The tanks perform in obviously staged maneuvers against token opposition. But the charges and cavortings of the 50-ton monsters are interesting and the story device, with its problem in tactics, relates newsreel sequences to each other.

The actors personify military personnel briskly and lend an occasional touch of humor. Their "Song of the Soviet Tankmen" provides a musical theme. It is interesting to note that the picture, made before June 1941, portrays the professional German officers with respect, the Nazi staff gauleiter with contempt.

Reviewed at the Stanley theatre, New York, amid an audience that rooted loudly for the Red home team. But nonpartisans also watched with interest, and appeared impressed.—JOHN STUART, JR.

I Live on Danger

(Paramount—Block 7)

Action on the Airwaves

Chester Morris plays one of those fast chattering radio commentators that are allegedly always on the spot with blow-by-blow reports of prizefight or disaster for the networks.

His broadcasting, in this film, leads into a round of sleuthing vs. the crooked district attorney, racketeers, and a rival commentator. It all seeks to prove that the girl's brother is innocent of a gangster slaying. Morris meets Susan, played by Jean Parker, as he broadcasts the burning of a ship. He recognizes her as the partner of the wanted killer.

But his interest in the girl changes from the reportorial to the romantic after she arranges a meeting with her brother, and Morris broadcasts an eyewitness account of his capture by police. He learns then that Eddie is innocent, and really Susan's brother. He sets out to expose the true killer and win back Susan.

The chase leads cross country to an abandoned mine shaft, with Morris, microphone in hand, on the trail of the killer. He broadcasts the real killer's confession and exits as the mine blows up. Of course, the girl is waiting and Morris wins a London assignment over his rival announcer.

William H. Pine and William C. Thomas produced the picture, with Sam White directing. It has an experienced cast and sufficient production values to permit a wide range of scene. The story is episodic and somewhat slow in getting underway.

Ralph Sanford is an amusing comic foil and Patsy Nash, age three, makes a winsome debut as a refugee from the burning ship.

Tombstone

(Paramount—Block 7)

Bad Men of Arizona

For the locale and inspiration of "Tombstone," Paramount has turned back the pages of history of the lawless West to the days when the Arizona territory was over-run by bandits, cattle rustlers and cut-throats and when a court of law dealt out justice in the saloon.

With producer Harry Sherman and director William McGann at the helm, and with such well-known troupers as Richard Dix, Edgar Buchanan, Kent Taylor and Victor Jory in feature roles, the film emerges as an entertaining Western, expertly photographed.

Richard Dix, as Wyatt Earp, a frontier marshal and two-fisted fighter, sets to work to clean out the gang of outlaws preying upon the townspeople, ranchers and silver-mine owners of Tombstone, Arizona. Earp and his two brothers take on the job, aided by the town's newspaper editor and its leading first citizen. Edgar Buchanan, as "Curly Bill," leader of the gang, employs Johnny Duanne, played by Don Castle, to trick Earp and make him easy prey for the bandits. Johnny, however, is won over by the sheriff's forthright manner and is further indebted to Dix for patching up a quarrel between the boy and his girl friend.

Action centers around Dix's attempts to outwit "Curly" and the bandits. There are plenty of outdoor chase scenes and shooting frays to please the average Western fan. Dix and his accomplices finally corner the gang on the Arizona terrain and fight it out to the last man, and Tombstone settles down to a normal way of life where law and order prevail.

It's the kind of picture men and boys in the audience are going to like.

Lawless Plainsmen

(Columbia)

Fast Western

Here is proof that an unpretentious western, with intelligent production and excellent photography, can be made an engrossing and exciting film, handsomely mounted.

Charles Starrett, the star, is natural and tough as foreman of a ranch, with the additional task of safeguarding the boss's son, Russell Hayden. The two are involved in a fight, in the saloon of "Baltimore Bonnie" (Luana Walters) whose divorced husband, Raphael Bennett, frames it so the sheriff can find excuse to close the place, and who simultaneously robs the safe. The fight forces Miss Walters to accept the offer of a wagon train ride to Tucson. Wounded, Hayden is also taken along. Starrett goes along because Hayden insists on the trip. Bennett, the villain, also has his wagon in the train. All know he is bad; but they do not know he robbed the saloon safe. And neither do they know his wagon contains guns for the Indians. After Bennett kills the train leader, and a good Indian, the train is in constant trouble staving off one attack and facing another. Starrett kills Bennett, then takes the body of the Indian to his father, leader of erstwhile friendly Puma Indians. The father is not palliated; he imprisons Starrett and prepares to massacre the train. Hayden rescues Starrett. The two reach the train's hurried stockade two steps ahead of the Indian, and another battle ensues. This ends with the arrival of U. S. troopers, summoned by Scout Kit Carson.

Produced by Jack Fier, and directed by William Berke, this moves virtually all the time. Luci Ward's original screenplay has given the characters spritely, and natural, lines. Cliff Edward's comedy part enlivens, does not delay, the proceedings. Benjamin Kline was the photographer.

Nazi Spy Ring

(Producers Releasing)

Spies

Conventional melodrama in which the spies and their pursuers do the expected, this is handicapped by miscasting and banal lines.

Michael Whalen and William Bakewell are the two chemists working on a defense formula, coveted, they learn, by Nazi spies headed by a renegade chemist, George Pembroke. Bakewell succumbs to the spies' threats against his mother, and against his sister, Anne Nagel, whom Whalen courts. Bakewell attempts to filch the formula from Whalen's desk. Whalen catches him, and learning more, beards the Nazi's in their tavern headquarters, promising himself to give them the formula, but merely intending to trap them. He fails when Bakewell bursts in with what he says is the real formula. The Nazis and Bakewell depart for a meeting with the renegade chemist, coming from the East by airplane. Whalen, Nagel, and FBI men rush to the airport, but the plane, with all conspirators aboard, takes off. It is then Whalen realizes what Bakewell, his friend, intends. The formula, improperly mixed, is explosive. Whalen, Nagel and the rest look to the skies. Enacted in the plane is what they expected. Bakewell mixes the improper formula; the plane explodes; he has killed the enemies and himself for his country.

Produced by George M. Merrick and Max Alexander from Arthur St. Claire's original story and screenplay. Arthur Alexander, associate producer; Eddie Linden, photographic director.

Are Husbands Necessary?

(Paramount—Block 7)

Comedy on a Budget

This is the screen adaptation of the series of stories titled "Mr. and Mrs. Cugat" by Isabel Scott Rorick. The picture is highly entertaining and fits into the pattern of light comedies which Paramount promised the exhibitors for their screens this season. There is a chuckle every minute or two and laughs aplenty.

The stories from which it was adapted were a disconnected series of incidents involving a young married couple. Their economic circumstances were somewhat better than average in the story but for the film, this has been lowered to the extent of putting them in debt to a finance company. Direction, by Norman Taurog, keeps the picture flowing smoothly and easily.

The story puts Ray Milland and Betty Field to the fore; one or the other of them is on the screen every moment. Miss Field should win wide acclaim for her performance as the typical young wife. Eugene Pallette, Charles Dingle and Patricia Morison contribute smooth performances to a well-mounted picture.

Adult dialogue concerning extension of the family restricts the appeal to adult audiences.

Fred Kohlmar was associate producer and Tess Selsinger and Frank Davis collaborated on the screenplay.

The Big Shot

(Warner Brothers)

Crime Doesn't Pay Again

Humphrey Bogart delineates here with his customary proficiency the career of a criminal who knows all the angles but the last one. The picture, snug in the Warner format of film criminology, opens with the gangster on his deathbed, skips back in review of the doings which brought him there, and ends with his demise which is due to bullets from the pistol of a crooked lawyer and not from due process of law.

Irene Manning has the role opposite Bogart and displays promise although the accent is at all times on the principal character.

A prison break effected during a stage performance is a highlight of action and a chase over mountain roads reminding of the pursuit in "High Sierra," but staged in the snow country, piles up suspense near the close.

The direction is by Lewis Seiler from a screenplay by Bertram Millhauser, Aben Finkel and Daniel Fuchs, and production is by Walter McEwen. The product of their collaboration is about par for Warner crime films.

INDIA AT WAR (RKO)

March of Time (23,111)

As the first March of Time issue on India presented the social factors working against a unified resistance to Britain's enemies, the second attempts to show the people's response to the threat to their lands. Where the film pictures Indians at work in factories, enlarging shipyards to turn out men-of-war, forging steel and loading freighters, it is effective and interesting. But this is no more than half the footage. The rest is a summary of the traditional position of India and the century-old plans of Japan. In these sequences the visual presentation often adds little to the commentary. The impression given is that, while there was too much material at hand for one issue, there wasn't quite enough for two releases to meet the usual standard of interest in this series.—E. A. C.

PERILS OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED (Col.)

Serial Western

This fast-moving serial is set in the days when new railroads were steadily pushing back the frontiers of Western Canada, when the Indians were still a potential threat to traders and when "Mounties" were supplying more than law and order to the social life of the scattered community.

The situation is clearly outlined in the first two episodes. A railroad is planned for a trapping locality previously without ready access to the cities. A local trader, seeing the threat to his prosperous business in stage-coach robberies, plays on the superstitions of the Indians to provoke them to riot against the plan. His opposition is a small post of Mounted Police.

Each episode— the first ran 29 minutes, and the second 20—provides a substantial slice of riding, shooting and at least two hand-to-hand brawls. They also advance the story sufficiently to keep the action fans coming back.

The film is a Larry Darmour Production, directed by James W. Horne. The cast includes Robert Stevens, Kenneth MacDonald, Herbert Rawlinson, Nell O'Day, John Elliott and Nick Thompson.—E. A. C.

LAKE CARRIER (OEM)

Victory Film

The Office of Emergency Management has produced a beautifully photographed and moderately informative short on Great Lakes shipping of iron ore in its relation to the war effort. It is marked, as are the efforts of so many government film units, by an effective narration—spoken by Fredric March—and carefully paced presentation. Persons east and west, unfamiliar with our inland sea traffic, should find much of interest in it, although the restrictions of wartime censorship leave many questions unanswered. The film is being distributed free to exhibitors by Producers Releasing Corp. for the War Activities Committee, except in the Lake region where Universal exchanges have the responsibility.—E. A. C.

Fourteen exhibitor organizations have approved the plan to date. Three more have given it tentative [illegible]

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 147, No. 12 June 20, 1942

PRIORITIES, CONSERVATION, CREDITS

THE motion picture industry can in good faith and good conscience pursue its proper priorities in matters of services and supplies, as a highly essential institution of service to the whole nation.

That War Production Board ruling which loosely rates the motion picture alongside such devices as the racetrack confers no recognition of the screen from which the Government now would ask so much.

The nature of the motion picture and the business of its presentation are such that they must function with a high degree of perfection, else not function at all. A bad show is no show.

No other medium can do so much for so many, with so little, as the motion picture. The motion picture has achieved dominance among the popular arts and media by reason of its fundamental efficiency. Even the capacity of a good picture to make profits is a proof of that efficiency, that effective service, measured in the American way.

That $5,000 limitation on construction of amusement projects is in the nature of a conventional ceiling. No blanket ruling can fit all cases.

THE projected rationing of film stock is another subject which rates careful examination. It is true that the chemical content and materials of manufacture are also essential in the making of gunpowder. Both film and gunpowder are nitrated cellulose. The usual and handy source is cotton linters, the short fibers shaved off the seeds of the cotton, left by the ginning process which removes the staple or fibers used for fabrics.

Not so long ago we were hearing about the tremendous overproduction of cotton and surpluses piled high in warehouses. Both film and powder can be made of any kind of cotton.

Also, it is to be observed that there is an unending and increasing demand upon film stock made by the countless government projects which have taken to camera and screen to tell their story, advance their separate causes. More projects of the kind are in the making, one which, if executed, will take millions of feet of the so-called "non-flam" or cellulose acetate stock. Some part of some of those projects might be examined to discover their relevancy, if any, to the conduct of the nation in a state of unlimited war emergency.

The essential uses of film today are in the making of training films for the armed forces, and the maintenance of the motion picture theatre in its service to the customers, who are the nation.

SOME weeks ago some observations were made here about the working life of motion picture prints in theatre practice. It was observed, while the industry was claiming much less, that under laboratory conditions prints had repeatedly been run through a thousand showings without serious deterioration. Just now Mr. Frank Meyer contributes some data from London on certain Technicolor prints: "Gone With the Wind" color positives averaging five months each at the Ritz, and a total of 420 runs for a print of "Conquest", and even then in good working condition. For all practical considerations the working life of a motion picture positive is governed entirely by the condition of the projector and the attentive skill of the projectionist.

WAR conservation has gotten really personal with Hollywood, now that there is a proposal to save film by the elimination of the extensive credits to talent, crafts and services on the theatre screen. The protest is rising in waves of hurt indignation.

The first compromise offered, a plan of using full credits on prints used for previews and for regular exhibition in the Hollywood-Los Angeles area, appears as insufficient appeasement.

The situation reminds one of Bill Nye's remark that the prohibiton question was like a pair of pants, in that there were two sides to it.

Credits and identification with competent work are obviously of direct occupational utility to the picture makers, in all departments: actors, directors, writers, editors, scenic artists, make-up artists, juicers, cameramen, recorders, and all that array of those skilled persons who must perform perfectly and in coordination.

A LARGE preponderance of those credits appearing on the theatre screen, from pine-clad Maine to sun-kissed Del Rio, are of exceedingly little interest to the box-office customers, and often of decided annoyance—so much annoyance, in fact, that it is not unusual for the exhibitor to eliminate credit footage in the projection room.

In current practice, screen credits, apart from the main title, run from about one minute to as much as a minute and a half. Examination of figures for a group of probably typical productions, not an exact over-all averaging process, gives this breakdown—there being, of course, 90 feet to the minute on the screen:

MAIN TITLE	from 20 to 30 feet
Associate Producer	10 to 15 feet
Director	10 to 15 feet
Technical Staff	20 to 30 feet
Cast	40 to 50 feet
Totals	100 to 140 feet

It would seem that from a third to a half of the credit footages might be spared without impairing the show. The

The Industry Conserves

SAVINGS of as much as 22 per cent in the use of raw film stock will be pledged to the War Production Board next week when industry leaders go to Washington with their plan for voluntary curbs on the use of scarce materials. Producers have promised to reduce their consumption of film from eight to 22 per cent of current footage, it was disclosed on Tuesday, following a special meeting of company heads at the MPPDA offices in New York.

The session, lasting all afternoon, thoroughly aired every aspect of the priority situation, participants reported. Unanimous agreement was reached to take immediate steps to insure utmost economy in the studios and in distribution.

By Monday, it was said, statisticians will have compiled a full presentation of figures on current consumption of raw film, and other supplies, and estimates of the bare minimum needed to keep the cameras rolling. This docket will be sent to Washington. It will be a positive indication that the industry is taking steps to effect a decided saving in raw stock to release precious nitrates and cellulose for munitions.

Hollywood has surrendered to the war more than 50 basic materials used in production, it was shown in a report from studios' purchasing agents to the film capital's Film Conservation Committee, Tuesday.

Hollywood has also bent its ingenuity to substitution which will maintain quality, the report showed. Wood and reinforced concrete replace steel in trusses, storage tanks, and the like; ferrous metals replace bronze and brass in hardware; wood and gypsum substitute for metal lath; rockwool, for asbestos.

Bathroom fixtures are of vitreous, instead of enameled, iron and steel. The machines which pick up and straighten nails, are widely used. Hardwood masonite is used for floors. For different sets, it is repainted.

Meanwhile, hurried meetings of the Committee in Hollywood, and of its union, producer, and guild components, have resulted in specific recommendations in an over-all conservation plan—all of which will be submited to the War Production Board in Washington Tuesday. One recommendation is elimination of all screen credits except cast and title. See page 18.

RKO Stockholders Meet

STOCKHOLDERS of Radio-Keith-Orpheum held their twice postponed annual meeting at the corporation offices in Dover, Del., at noon Wednesday. They reduced the number of directors from 13 to 11 and filled ten of the posts on the new board of directors. George J. Schaefer was not among them.

Monday, Mr. Schaefer confirmed reports of his resignation as president of the company. In a statement clarifying his position he said that some time ago he had informed all the "principal stockholders" that he did not wish to continue as president or be reelected at the annual meeting.

RKO directors elected on Wednesday were Raymond Bill, Thomas P. Durell and N. Peter Rathvon, affiliated with Atlas Corporation; De Witt Millhauser, Richard C. Patterson, Jr., and Lunsford P. Yandell, for RCA; Frederick L. Ehrman, of Lehman Brothers; John M. Whitaker and L. Lawrence Green represent stockholders and Ned E. Depinet and J. Miller Walker are management representatives on the new board.

A directors' meeting was to be called "within a few days," probably Friday to arrange changes in management.

Immediate selection of a successor to Mr. Schaefer is not expected. Meanwhile a home office spokesman said that Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of sales, and other officers would carry on interim operations. Active direction of the company, it is understood, will be assumed by Floyd B. Odlum, financier and president of Atlas Corporation which holds approximately 40 per cent of RKO stock.

The principal problem before the directors, it was reported, would be a review of company finances and the securing of new working capital. The company is reportedly seeking $3,000,000 in loans against future pictures to build up a backlog of product for the new season starting September 1st.

On Monday a delegation of home office executives arrived at the RKO studios to discuss 1942-43 plans with Charles W. Koerner, general manager in charge of production. The group included Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of sales, S. Barret McCormick, Edward Alperson, Sol A. Schwartz and James Mulvey.

EDITORIAL

condition may be compared to that obtaining in popular magazine publication where the signatures on cover drawings and illustrations are not even casually noticed by one reader in a thousand. But those signatures are of decided importance alike to artists and the editors who buy and publish. On the printed page, however, which can be scanned or ignored in any area, the artist's crediting line or signature can be and commonly is made most inconspicuous.

The screen, as its dramatic pretentions have grown, has tended to take in all those elaborate credits which have so long appeared in the printed programs of the stage, which the audience can consult or ignore before the curtain rises or between the acts. In the theatre program the process has been subjected to a deal of padding, for many reasons, including the long list of "the ladies of the ensemble". The stage play program is not a proper model or precedent for the motion picture film and its insistent presentation.

The endeavour at restriction of the credits on national release prints to those directly necessary to the narration and the show the customer sees, seems reasonable at this time of necessity. Also, the use of the full credits for the Hollywood area would appear warranted, as a part of the functioning of production.

Valentino in Films

RUDOLPH VALENTINO will be the subject of Edward Small's next picture, the producer said in New York this week, disclosing some details of his plans to do a film based on the life of the late dancer who leaped to fame with the promotion of his portrayal of the role of Julio Desnoyers in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and stayed there through a series of box office successes, including "The Sheik" and "The Son of the Sheik."

The Small picture will be titled "The Life of Rudolph Valentino." Mr. Small said that no actor had yet been selected to play the title role. He envisions some lively publicity as the result of his search for a suitable star.

Big Circuit Deal

ACQUISITION of 26 theatres by Skouras Theatres, New York, was reportedly under consideration this week. The deal would raise that metropolitan New York circuit's holdings from 65 to 91, making it one of the largest independents in the country.

Theatre buys of this size have been rare for many a day. The houses under discussion are all in New York. Their present major holder is the Immigrant Industrial Savings Bank, of New York. George Skouras is president of Skouras Theatres.

That Latin Budget

FUNDS sought to propagate "good neighborliness" between the Americas via the motion picture section of the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, it seemed, were slashed almost 50 per cent this week. Washington heard that the Budget Bureau had cut the requested appropriation for Nelson Rockefeller's film program from between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 to $3,600,000. Realignment of the non-theatrical and film projects of the section were reported in the near offing in consequence. Some saw the curb in finances as a substantial veto also for plans to set up a U. S. distribution system for 16 mm pictures for and about South America and other subjects.

John Hay Whitney, who organized the Inter-American film program 14 months ago, and Francis Alstock, his successor as director, appeared recently before the Budget Bureau to explain their film endeavors in behalf of Inter-American understanding. The Government auditors spent several days asking for detailed explanations of all the film section's activities, what each project cost, and why.

The biggest slash, it was said, came out of a $3,000,000 request for the unit's Mexican project. It was cut to $1,000,000. These Mexican plans reportedly called for the acquisition of a studio in Mexico City for the production of Inter-American films and U. S.-Mexican Government sponsored short subjects and features. The project had grown from initial plans to provide $50,000 and a half dozen Hollywood technicians to assist the Mexican Government in a $300,000 short subjects series.

Mr. Whitney, in one of his last efforts before entering the Army Air Corps as a captain, was in Mexico City last week with Mr. Alstock in behalf of the project.

Meanwhile, evanescently in the background, came up from across the Rio Grande reports that A. C. Blumenthal, one time Broadway entrepreneur and once prominent in movements pertaining to 20th Century-Fox-British Gaumont relations and projects, more recently sojourning over the border, had plans to emerge on the scene of U. S.-Mexican relations, in whatever connection or fashion. He was said to be seeking, or holding, meetings in Mexico City.

Monetary needs for all activities of Mr. Rockefeller's whole program, including films for the year will be $28,000,000, of which $3,000,000 will be available from the current appropriation.

"War Short" Award

The announcement of the Herald's plan to take the vote of the exhibitors of the nation on the "Best in War Shorts" for 1942 meets official approval, and exhibitor approbations. From letters to the editor:

> We are delighted that the Motion Picture Herald has set up this incentive for the movie makers to do a still better job.
> NELSON POYNTER,
> Office of the Coordinator of Government Films.

> It will have a lot of reader interest, and it is a fine acknowledgment to patriotic producers.
> SOL LESSER,
> Principal Artists Productions, Hollywood.

> That's a fine thing to do, that award for the best in war shorts. Winning it would be, I would think, about as high honor as a producer of films could attain.
> R. B. WILBY,
> Wilby - Kincey Service Corp., Atlanta.

The exhibitors will be polled simultaneously with the annual poll for the selection of the "Ten Best Money Makers", late in the year.

'Information, Please'

ELMER DAVIS, newspaper man and CBS news analyst, became director of the Office of War Information on Saturday when the President issued a long-expected executive order gathering all varied Government press and information services under one leadership. Mr. Davis was also given broad authority and specific duties relative to the motion picture.

He is currently making his screen debut in an RKO "Information Please" short subject.

The President directed Mr. Davis to coordinate, and issue, all war information consistent with Government policy, and in consultation with a newly formed advisory war information council of War, Navy, State, Inter-American, Psychological Warfare Committee and other department chiefs. Mr. Davis has equal rank with Byron Price, chief censor. Specifically he is instructed also to:

> "Formulate and carry out, through the use of press, radio, motion picture and other facilities, information programs designed to facilitate the development of an informed and intelligent understanding, at home and abroad, of the status and progress of the war effort and of the war policies, activities and aims of the Government.
> "Review, clear and approve all proposed radio and motion-picture programs sponsored by Federal departments and agencies, and serve as the central point of clearance and contact for the radio broadcasting and motion-picture industries, respectively, in their relationships with Federal departments and agencies concerning such Government programs."

The OWI is to take over the Office of Facts and Figures, under Archibald MacLeish, who is also radio coordinator; the Office of Government Reports, under Lowell Mellett, who also is Coordinator of Government Films; the foreign information service of Colonel William J. Donovan's office as Coordinator of Information, and the publicity department of the Office for Emergency Management.

Excluded from the merger is Nelson Rockefeller's Latin American film, radio and other work as Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs. The Defense Communications Board is to cooperate with the OWI to broadcast war information to the peoples abroad.

40% OF FEATURES IN WORK HAVE WAR AS THEME

28 in Production during a 2-Week Period; Comedy Second in Popularity

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

Forty percent of the pictures now being filmed in Hollywood are warfilms.

This statistic is derived from a survey of the pictures which are now before the cameras, plus those which passed from shooting stage to cutting room during the fortnight ending June 14th.

Warfilms outnumber the second group 2 to 1.

Here are the figures:

Warfilms	*28
Comedies (and comedy-dramas)	15
Melodramas	12
Musicals	11
Westerns	7
Biographies	3

*Six of these are also musicals and are so listed.

Twentieth Century-Fox has five war films coming up: MGM, Paramount, RKO-Radio and Warner Brothers have four each; Columbia, Monogram and Universal each has a pair, and Republic has one.

The Twentieth Century-Fox group is made up of "Berlin Correspondent," "Careful, Soft Shoulders," "China Girl," "Iceland" and "Little Tokyo, U.S.A."

MGM is represented in this classification by "Random Harvest," "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," "For Me and My Gal" and "Cargo of Innocents."

Paramount is to bring out "Happy Go Lucky," "Star Spangled Rhythm," "Submarine Alert" and "Wake Island."

RKO Radio will be offering exhibitors "Name, Age and Occupation," "The Navy Comes Through," "Once Upon a Honeymoon" and "Sweet or Hot."

Warner Brothers' four are "Air Force," "Casablanca," "The Desert Song" and "The Watch on the Rhine."

Universal has supplied Deanna Durbin with a war story for her return to the screen in "Forever Yours," and brought Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson up to date to thwart Nazis in "Sherlock Holmes Fights Back."

Columbia takes account of the conflict in "The Spirit of Stanford" and "Stand By All Networks."

Monogram has "Hillbilly Blitzkrieg" and "Rubber Racketeers" coming up.

Republic is nearing completion of "The Flying Tigers."

In the field of comedies and comedy-dramas, grouped here because many a film now in one bracket may slide across the thin dividing line into the other before completion, Columbia is at work on "Lucky Legs" and "My Sister Eileen."

MGM has "Andy Hardy's Last Fling" and "Whistling in Dixie" in work.

Monogram's contribution to the mirth menu is "Smart Alecks."

Paramount is filming "No Time for Love," an item on the sophisticated side.

RKO Radio has "The Big Street," "Here We Go Again" and "The Mexican Spitfire's Elephant" on its production line.

RUSSIA FAVORITE IN NEW CYCLE

Latest cycle of war themes which Hollywood is planning for production, are screen stories concerning Russia's offensive against the Nazis. Four such films are now scheduled: Republic's "Nazi Busters," a story in which Don Barry and Fay McKenzie will be co-starred, is concerned primarily with the convoying of supplies across the North Atlantic to the USSR. MGM has announced "Song of the Red Army" as a big-scale film to be produced by Arthur Hornblow, who is in the east conducting research for material on Russian Army operations. Twentieth Century-Fox is planning to use Rimski-Korsakov music as the background for a Russian historical film, "Russian Marine," and recently, Alexander Korda scheduled Tolstoy's epic novel "War and Peace" among his forthcoming productions for United Artists.

Twentieth Century-Fox is filming an inter-American comedy entitled "Girl Trouble."

Hal Roach is getting "Prairie Chicken" and "Taxi Mister," streamliners, ready for the United Artists' schedule of releases.

Universal is shooting "Love and Kisses, Caroline" and "Who Does It?"

Warners have "George Washington Slept Here" in camera stage.

Melodramas, Musicals Show Decrease

For the field of melodrama, a term stretched here as always to cover a variety of subjects, MGM is filming "Eyes in the Night," "White Cargo" and "Ox Train."

Monogram is filming "The Isle of Fury" and "King of the Stallions" for the followers of melodrama, and Paramount is at work on "I Married a Witch" and "The Black Swan."

Twentieth Century-Fox is making "The Man in the Trunk," Universal "The Mummy's Tomb," and Warner Brothers "The Hard Way," "Now Voyager" and "You Can't Escape Forever."

The 11 musicals in process of manufacture, six of which are included also in the warfilm classification are:

"The Gay Senorita," Columbia; "Happy Go Lucky" and "Star Spangled Rhythm," Paramount; "Sweet or Hot," RKO-Radio; "Hi Neighbor" and "Ice-capades Revue of 1942," Republic; "Iceland" and "Orchestra Wife," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Get Hep to Love" and "Forever Yours," Universal, and "The Desert Song," Warner Brothers.

The seven Westerns in work during the period surveyed—and it is to be observed that the smallness of the number does not truly reflect the ratio of Westerns to other product as of delivery to screen, since most of them require less shooting time than other types of film—are:

"The Trail's End," Columbia; "Arizona Stage Coach," Monogram; "Lost Canyon" and "Missing Men," Paramount; "Son of the Saddle," RKO-Radio; "Call of the Canyon," Republic, and "Deep in the Heart of Texas," Universal.

Three Biographies Now in Work

Three biographies in the filming, all of the matter extensive periods of research, are:

"The Man on America's Conscience," MGM; "Great Without Glory," Paramount, and "Gentleman Jim," Warner Brothers.

Upturn in the percentage of pictures based upon or dominated by the war is counted no phenomenon by the men who make them.

Public response to warfilms recently released, and to those unreleased ones which have been extensively previewed, has conduced to the opinion that the war is at this time the subject that the people who go to the movies want to see, hear and learn about more than any other.

Single lines of dialogue with war reference, tossed into pictures on other themes, have been stealing the show at test screenings.

No saturation point has yet been glimpsed by producers, and no concern about exhausting the possibilities of the subject has been expressed.

On the contrary, the appointment by United States Coordinator of Films Lowell Mellett of Nelson Poynter as Hollywood representative, with leave to supply governmentally authenticated information and material to producers, has opened a reservoir of subject matter not previously available and now, what with the war itself brewing tales of heroism in abundance, regarded as practically inexhaustible.

Source Material Seen Dwindling

Conversely, it is pointed out, the stream of fiction upon which producers commonly draw for screen material has thinned to a trickle.

Daily announcements of product to be made disclose that the next trend is to be toward dramatizing the global character of the conflict. Russia and China are beginning to appear in the announcements as the scenes of pictures on agenda.

Another factor in the situation is the extent of the cooperation extended to producers by the Army, Navy and Marine Corps in the making of films which pertain to their activity, and still another is the $5,000 limitation on the cost of new materials for set construction, per picture.

SEES 'SOCIAL IMPLICATIONS' FORCING FAIR TRADE CODE

Arbitrator Warns Industry Must Regulate Self or Face New Legislation

CHICAGO BUREAU

Formation of a self-regulatory code of fair trade practices, or stringent anti-trust regulation by courts and legislatures are the alternatives facing the motion picture industry according to Thomas C. McConnell, prominent Chicago attorney and the first motion picture arbitrator to serve in three cases.

Mr. McConnell, who recently resigned from the Chicago panel of motion picture arbitrators because of the press of other business, last week took time to discuss the decree and arbitration processes for MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

The industry, and arbitrators of motion picture complaints, must demonstrate greater awareness of the "social meanings and public policy" involved in film trade practices, he warned.

The consent decree derives from the Sherman Act and other federal anti-trust laws. It is an opportunity for the motion picture industry "to rule itself, decide its disputes and thus remain free." It is not merely a contract or truce with the government suspending enforcement of anti-trust statutes, Mr. McConnell asserted.

Discussing the motion picture arbitration system the former arbitrator declared, "The ultimate success or failure of the entire system of arbitration depends in the final analysis on the opportunity afforded the individual arbitrators to be advised concerning, and their ability to respond to, the larger social interests involved in the problems presented to them in arbitration hearings."

Mr. McConnell presided over three cases, and rendered two awards in a year on the Chicago arbitration panel.

Arbitrators Feel "Limitation"

"While arbitrators' difficulties are more apparent than real," he said, "it is clear from a reading of various of their opinions that they have felt that certain definite limitations upon their power to deal with underlying faults in the moving picture industry have to a certain extent, at least, impaired the value of their work.

"The Consent Decree was entered on November 20, 1940, by the United States District Court at New York City. Everyone in the motion picture industry knows that this decree resulted from an equity suit commenced by the Government against the five largest distributors of film and that the purpose of this suit was the divorcement of the ownership of theatres from the distribution of film," Mr. McConnell recalled.

"Anyone with even the most superficial knowledge of the industry can sense that prior to this decree the larger distributors had sought to create a situation in which the independent exhibitors of film would, by economic necessity, be forced to forfeit their bargaining power in the purchase of film not only as to price, but as to clearance and playing position.

THE CASE FOR THE DECREE

A self regulated code of trade practices, under the decree, can save the industry from adverse legislation or prosecution, according to Thomas C. McConnell, prominent Chicago attorney and motion picture arbitrator. Following are some pertinent quotes from his message to the industry.

"From the decree itself . . . and instructions to arbitrators . . . and the arguments by distributors . . . it would appear that the arbitrators are supposed to close their minds to social meanings and public policy".

"This decree presents an opportunity to the industry to rule itself, to decide its own disputes and thus remain free".

"The large scale purchase of independent theatre properties by the distributors had progressed to such an extent that it could not fail to evidence the fact that the control of the release of film by the distributors had convinced large numbers of independents that there was no future in the moving picture business so far as they were concerned.

"From a common sense view, it is perfectly apparent that the Consent Decree offered the large distributors amnesty from divorcement for a trial period. During this time they were to be afforded an opportunity of working out a system of self-regulation.

"The distributor and exhibitors alike must grasp the underlying significance of the opportunity presented by this decree to the industry to rule itself, to decide its own disputes and thus remain free," he said.

"Unless the decree, the court that entered it, the Government officials who proposed it and the arbitrators who administer it must all stultify themselves, it follows that the individual arbitrators who construe it, must have the inherent power and duty to read into it the social, economic and philosophic background of the Sherman Act," he continued.

"Unless the Consent Decree can be construed so as to permit change in the industry itself, it will be robbed at the source of any living or vital impress on the distribution and exhibition of motion pictures. It will fail in its purpose of providing a healthier climate not only for the little business man, but for the growth and integration of the entire business.

"Granting that some system of release is necessary it must be apparent that this particular system, or any system, does not stand justified by the mere fact that it exists. It is an obvious restraint on trade, and its justification must depend upon the balancing of the various interests involved, including those of the attending public."

Continuing, Mr. McConnell said, "The difficulty that an arbitrator has who interprets the decree in the manner mentioned is that his action in this regard can easily be construed as prejudice against the large distributors. The distributors, at least in the cases heard by me, attempt to construe the Consent Decree as a bargain they have made with the Government. To them, to view it as anything other than a contract is to read into it that which is not literally there, thus offending a sense of justice. They agreed, so the argument goes, that only certain issues were to be arbitrated and those in only certain ways. An arbitrator who looks beyond to the larger interests involved must, from their point of view, be deciding the 'case off the record.'

Sees Vital Need for "Broad Interpretation"

"Certainly broad and liberal constructions and interpretations are not what the distributors bargained for. The Consent Decree says in so many words that no violation of the Sherman Act is proved. It is not difficult to see the distributor's point of view in this respect. Nevertheless, they themselves must gain a larger perspective which will permit them to view this system as a great opportunity to meet necessary changes in their business practices step by step and within the framework of an orderly development, rather than to have their entire business structure, in which large sums of money and large investments of time, ability and effort are involved, attacked with a broad ax by legislation or prosecution animated by the outcry of those who have suffered injustice at its hands.

"It is claimed by certain so-called spokesmen for the moving picture industry that the industry itself can never be free without resulting chaos; that there are insurmountable technical difficulties in the distribution of prints; that the only way it can produce, distribute and exhibit films efficiently is by a system emanating from the larger units of the business. This same argument is, of course, made for all sorts of monopolistic control, both independent and governmental. If this argument prevails and the larger units are permitted to exercise arbitrary control over the industry, the inevitable concomitant will be ever increasing governmental regulation.

"It may be that the little fellow is doomed to extinction. It may be that the philosophy expressed is completely out of step with the times. It may very well be that modern society cannot afford the luxury of free entertainment, but I am sure that the common sense of the individual arbitrator will never accept this conclusion."

PARAMOUNT'S INVENTORY UP $9,000,000 WITH DECREE

Stockholders Approve Plan to Indemnify Officers for Company Suits

Preparation for selling under the consent decree, and operations thereunder since enactment of the decree, last Septembr, sent Paramount's film inventory up $9,000000 in 18 months. So reported Barney Balaban, president, on Tuesday, to stockholders at the company's annual meeting, in New York.

The present board of directors was reelected and two recommended amendments to the by-laws of the Corporation were passed "by an overwhelming majority" at the meeting.

The first amendment grants indemnity to officers, directors and employees for costs in future or pending unsubstantiated lawsuits arising out of the performance of their duties. The stockholders also voted to move the company's corporate office from Milbrook, N. Y., to Manhattan.

The reelected directors are: Neil Agnew, Mr. Balaban, Stephen Callaghan, Y. Frank Freeman, Harvey D. Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Duncan G. Harris, John D. Hertz, John W. Hicks, Austin C. Keough, Earl I. McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Edwin L. Weisl and Adolph Zukor.

Mr. Balaban read his annual report to the stockholders and following the meeting two Paramount shorts—"Parachute Athletes" and "Tulips Shall Grow" were shown to the stockholders, who had assembled in the home office projection room, for both meeting and screening.

Mr. Balaban reported that the company's consolidated balance sheet, as of January 3rd, showed cash of $12,101,572, and that current assets were $40,273,888, against current liabilities of $11,108,624, leaving net working capital of $29,165,264.

Ballet Taken as Vote of Confidence

Mr. Balaban said that a preliminary count showed that stockholders having over 71 per cent of the total votes were represented and that of the stock so represented at the meeting over 96 per cent indicated a vote in favor of the amendments. "The management appreciates the confidence shown by these returns," he added.

David J. Rathner, attorney for Paramount stockholders suing in federal court to recover sums paid to William Bioff, opposed the resolution to indemnify officers and employees. He charged the inclusion of employees exceeded the New York statute governing such corporate rules and that the retroactive provision would nullify recovery of any judgment in the suit now pending against officers for the Bioff payments. Mr. Balaban replied that a "wash" transaction of a recovery for the company from officers was unlikely as the clause would not apply if a court found the officers or employees had been remiss.

Combined consolidated and share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries for the year 1941 totaled $10,251,242, which compares with $7,633,130 for 1940, reported Mr. Balaban. These earnings include share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries of $1,045,000 for 1941 and $1,231,000 for 1940.

Dividends paid to stock holders during 1941 aggregated $3,367,970, representing dividends on the first and second preferred stocks at the rate of 6 per cent per annum and four dividends totaling 90 cents on the common stock. A common stock dividend of 25 cents a share was paid on April 1, 1942, and a like amount was declared payable July 1, 1942, at which time the common stock was placed on a regular dividend basis of $.25 quarterly. The regular dividend of $1.50 per share on the first preferred stock was paid on April 1, 1942, and a like amount has been declared payable on July 1, 1942, continued Mr. Balaban.

Explains Changes In Inventory

The $9,000,000 increase in film inventory, he said, is due principally to the provisions of the consent decree which required trade showings before the release of feature pictures, thereby making it necessary to carry in the inventory a greater number of productions. A new plan—the Unity plan— is now being proposed by various sections of the industry, which if approved by all the parties concerned, including the government agencies, will require further changes in the method by which pictures are licensed for exhibition. The effect of these changes on the amount of film inventory to be carried cannot be forecast at his time, added Mr. Balaban.

Exchange Debenture Plan Completed

"On December 12, 1941, the company redeemed the balance of its 3¼% convertible debentures due March 1, 1947, amounting to $1,336,300," he reported. "This represented the balance of these obligations which were not converted in connection with an exchange offer made last year whereby the holders of the 3¼% debentures and the holders of certain corporate notes and other obligations were given the right to exchange these securities for an equal amount of 4% debentures due 1956. As a result of the exchange offer $18,843,700 principal amount of 4% debentures due 1956 have been issued to date. At the present time the company holds in its treasury for sinking fund purposes $1,270,000 principal amount of these debentures, leaving outstanding in the hands of the public $17,573,700. The advantages to the company of this refinancing were the elimination of the 3¼% convertible debentures due March 1, 1947, and the extension, consolidation and simplification of the debt structure of the Company.

"On February 3, 1942, the remaining 51,110 shares of second preferred stock not converted on the call were redeemed at $10.06 per share. During 1941 the company acquired 7,800 shares of its first preferred stock at a cost of $770,228.

"Late last year the company's wholly owned subsidiaries in England paid off in full their sterling mortgage obligations amounting to approximately $1,650,000. These payments were made with funds which, because of currency restrictions, were not remittable to New York.

Company Borrowed $6,000,000

"During January 1942 the company borrowed from four banks an aggregate of $6,000,000 on unsecured notes, repayable over five years with interest at 2¾% per annum. This was deemed advisable due to the substantial expenditures which had been made during the past year for additional film inventory, expansion of existing Hollywood studio facilities to an enlarged and permanent basis; the redemption of 3¼% convertible debentures, the acquisition of 4% Debentures due 1956 for sinking fund purposes and for loans of approximately $950,000 to wholly owned subsidiaries in 1942 to repay guaranteed note obligations. The company has also called for redemption at par on July 1, 1942, $382,000 of 5% first mortgage bonds due July 1, 1943, on a theatre property owned by the company in San Francisco.

"The earnings of the company and its consolidated subsidiaries for the first quarter of 1942 were $2,915,000, which includes a $544,000 share of undistributed net earnings of partially owned non-consolidated companies and $130,000 of non-recurring income. These earnings include only those subsidiaries which have operations in the western hemisphere; the operations of all other foreign subsidiaries (including those operating in England, Australia, New Zealand and India) and the company's share of current film rentals therefrom are included only to the extent received or determined to be receivable in dollars. Earnings for the first quarter of 1941 were $2,475,000 which includes $650,000 share of undistributed net earnings of partially owned companies and also included the operations of and the company's full share of film rentals from subsidiaries operating in England, Australia, New Zealand and India.

Net Income Gaining Over Last Year

"So far this year the net income from our business is running ahead of last year after providing for higher estimated probable Federal taxes and despite the loss of additional markets due to the spread of the war to the Far East. Domestic business has finally responded to the increased payrolls of the country and grosses are running ahead of last year. Stockholders have inquired about the effect of gasoline rationing and at this early date it appears to us that such rationing has not hurt our box offices. Indications point to earnings for the second quarter of 1942 exceeding the $1,904,000 earned for the second quarter of 1941," Mr. Balaban predicted.

SCHINES SELLING THEATRES UNDER ARMISTICE WITH U. S.

Five Sales Completed in Court; Minnesota Gets Stay on Judgment

Disposal of 16 Schine circuit theatres in accord with the two year agreement with the Government deferring anti-trust prosecution began on Monday when the U. S. district court at Buffalo approved the sale of the first five theatres.

A check for $18,364.68 changed hands in court before Federal Judge John Knight, transferring ownership of the Cla-Zel and Lyric theatres in Bowling Green, Ky., back to Clark M. Young, builder of the two theatres. He operated them prior to their acquisition by the Schine circuit.

Also sold on Monday, to the prior owner, were the Viv theatre, in Corbin, Kentucky, and the Appalachia and State theatres in Appalachia, Va. They are to revert to M. K. Murphy, who operated them prior to their transfer to the Schine interests. He disclosed that $8,500 was involved in the Viv transaction and $76,689 for the two Appalachia theatres. Also $3,000 was paid to G. C. Scott in compensation for his part in original negotiations for the sale of the Viv.

On Wednesday it was revealed that the Webster, Rochester Paramount, Glens Falls, and Palace, Clifton Spring, N. Y., also had been sold to former owners.

The transfer was marked by a sharp courtroom debate as to whether Schine booking contracts, running in the case of the Cla-Zel and Lyric theatres until June 11, 1944, and replacement equipment now in the theatres, were acquired by the transaction. Willard McKay, Schine lawyer, and J. Myer Schine, president, contended that the booking franchises were not mentioned in the government sale order and consequently were outside court jurisdiction.

Martin Hanna, Bowling Green attorney for Mr. Young, and Mr. Murphy, representing himself, sought to have the franchises declared void. Mr. Schine offered to sell them to the new owners for $14,000. The court finally directed that they be permitted to expire in Schine hands.

Argue Over Equipment

Argument waxed particularly strong over the question of spare parts and replacement supplies now in the five theatres. The purchasers pointed out that much theatre equipment could not be obtained today. The court indicated that it would consider all equipment as part of the theatre deal.

Mr. Schine took exception to several of the charges by Mr. Young and Mr. Hanna and by Robert M. Hitchcock, Assistant U. S. Attorney.

"The unfair attitude of the Government in this matter has cost us a great fortune," he told the court. He said he thought the Schine interests were entitled to a five year agreement on booking contracts and 38 months of additional fees.

Total cost figures for the 16 theatres which the Schine interests must give up under the May 19th agreement with the Department of Justice which halted anti-trust action for two years were filed with the Buffalo court meanwhile by Forrest E. Ferguson, Certified Public Accountant. They embrace capital investments in the theatres by the Schine circuit and will guide disposal prices.

Investment Price Offered Owners

The court order requires the theatres to be offered to the former owners or operators at the capital investment price. If the offer is not accepted the theatres are to be offered generally to other independent exhibitors at the same price. Figures filed in May at the time of the order listed only the tentative cost of the theatres. Mr. Ferguson showed five increases and two decreases over the original estimate.

The figures for each theatre (with change from the estimate in parentheses) were as follows:

Webster, Rochester, $50,149.63 (decrease of $1,127.79); Strand, Cumberland, Md., $278,079.55 (decrease of $21.18); Plaza, Malone, $8,500 (increase of $500); Memorial, Mt. Vernon, O., $10,125.88; Paramount, Glens Falls, $580 (increase of $580); Opera House, Lexington, Ky., $23,058.40; Ada Meade, Lexington, Ky., $10,000.

Palace, Clifton Springs, zero; Scotia, Scotia, $10,586.49 (increase of $15.95); Viv, Corbin, Ky., $11,554.91 (increase of $3,000); Appalachia, Appalachia, Va., $76,689.25 (increase of $141.20); Cla-Zel and Lyric, Bowling Green, O., $18,364.68; Margie Grand, Harlan, Ky., $33,400; Liberty, Pikeville, Ky., $18,990.64 (increase of $46.72).

The auditor included in the Webster, Rochester theatre figures, a $4,000 mortgage on the Plaza theatre property and the Viv theatre total included the payment of $3,000 to G. C. Scott for his part in the original negotiations.

DIVORCEMENT CASE SET FOR OCTOBER

Hearings on Department of Justice motions asking the New York district court to order the divorcement of 16 theatres acquired by Paramount and 28 by 20th Century-Fox were put over until October 5th on Tuesday.

Judge Henry W. Goddard at New York granted a request by Louis Phillips, Paramount attorney, for an extended postponement. Government attorneys told the court that they were ready to argue for divorcement of the theatres on the grounds that their acquisition violated terms of the decree but were willing to accede to the postponement. The case thus carries over to the autumn term of the court.

Minnesota Judge Extends Appeal Time

Attorneys representing the state obtained an extension of the stay of judgment in the Minnesota anti-block-of-five case this week and will argue a motion for amended findings and a new trial on Saturday, June 20th.

James F. Lynch, Ramsey county attorney, in St. Paul on Monday asked District Judge Albin S. Pearson for the extension of stay and it was granted until June 27th. The extension was made as the original 60-day stay was about to expire. Judge Pearson had ruled in twin actions involving a half dozen majors that the Minnesota law was unconstitutional.

Mr. Lynch made the motion for amended findings and for a new trial, and Judge Pearson set hearing on the motion for June 20th.

Meanwhile the question of whether or not his decision in the case would be appealed appeared to depend on finances. Northwest Allied sponsored the bill and pushed it through the Minnesota legislature, defending it successfully in a previous legal attack. It also bolstered the defense in the action before Judge Pearson, but still is stalemated in its efforts to finance an appeal.

Such a procedure would cost $2,000 to $2,500, and it was reported few Allied members believed the law's chances in the higher court would justify the expense. Mr. Lynch said the county attorney's office has no funds to press the appeal.

Still Non-Commital On Umpi Plan

Northwest Allied, occupied with its defense of the Minnesota law and with work of the Northwest war activities committee, is one of the few independent organizations which thus far has taken no stand on the UMPI block-of-twelve plan. Its officers said the organization preferred to wait until it is determined whether the consent decree will be modified according to the UMPI plan, and whether the conciliation program will be put in effect.

E. L. Peaslee, president of Northwest Allied, and Harold Field reported late last week on results of their trip to New York to carry grievances before distributors. They said their conversations with distributors encouraged them to hope some of the problems of the territory may be rectified.

Fox Signs Cornel Wilde

PRIORITY PROBLEMS TO LOCAL WPB, U. S. TELLS EXHIBITORS

Owners Told to Apply to Field Offices for Relief on Materials

Exhibitors experiencing breakdowns of equipment which necessitate emergency repair or maintenance materials were instructed by the War Production Board this week to communicate with WPB field offices in their localities rather than with the board in Washington.

Requests for emergency assistance, it was said by Christopher J. Dunphy, chief of the amusements section of the services branch, may be submitted by telephone, telegram or letter.

"Emergency" was defined by Mr. Dunphy as an actual breakdown of existing equipment or a situation where it is evident that a breakdown or suspension of operations is imminent because of damage, wear and tear, destruction, failure of parts or a similar situation.

In order to expedite the handling of applications for emergency ratings, he explained, it is necessary that the WPB's field offices be used as a means of reviewing them. These field offices were set up to handle such matters, and direct contact with them will result in quicker appraisal of the merits of applications than if they were sent directly to the services branch in Washington.

"In event of an emergency breakdown," Mr. Dunphy said, "get in touch with the War Production Board field office in your locality, state to them the emergency case and they will communicate the facts immediately to the proper authorities in Washington handling emergency repairs and maintenance. If justified, a preference rating for the necessary repairs will then be wired back to you."

Attempts to deal directly with various WPB branches in Washington will result only in unnecessary delay, he warned.

BUFFALO PROJECTS HALTED BY WPB

Two Buffalo theatre projects have been stopped by the War Production Board order banning all such construction costing over $5,000. The order took effect Saturday last. The owners indicated they would appeal.

The theatres are the $150,000 Colvin, owned by Basil Brothers; and the Teck, owned by the Shea circuit. The first is new; the second was being remodelled.

Both chains said their appeal will be based upon asserted availability of materials to finish the jobs.

The H. & E. Balaban circuit, Chicago, has dropped plans to build an outdoor theatre.

The Civic Theatre, outdoor amateur house 10 miles from St. Louis limits, closed. Directors said the cause was the rubber and gasoline conservation program.

The State, Minneapolis, reopened last week after 10 days' installation of 2,400 new seats, new carpeting, and a new marquee.

Credits Cut to Save Footage

An estimated 10,000,000 feet of film may be saved by eliminating all screen credits except titles and casts, according to Hollywood's Film Conservation Committee, recently formed. The Committee, meeting last week, recommended unanimously that this be done.

Although all guilds were represented at the meeting, rebellion appeared coming from the directors. The opposition developed immediately after the Committee meeting. Many said elimination of credits would accomplish a comparatively trifling economy and was not worth the sacrifice.

The Guild board was to report Wednesday night on an authorized survey of the matter.

The film directors' opposition surprised other representatives on the conservation committee. They had expected approval, after a stipulation was made that prints for Hollywood commercial and preview showings would carry the credits.

Approval of credit elimination came from individual guilds and unions. The Screen Writers Guild supported the step, and named a committee of six to produce further economy suggestions. All parties, however, were to report back to the FCC Wednesday night.

Committee spokesmen said they hoped to have a completed conservation program ready Thursday night for submission to the War Production Board. Elimination of credits is but one facet of that program. Ray Klune, representing independent producers on the FCC was expected to appear before the WPB in Washington next Tuesday to present the full FCC program.

Studio managers met Tuesday, to promote collection of scrap rubber. The session was called by Ben Goetz, chairman of the film industry's General Conservation Committee.

Already, 50 basic materials are being diverted from production of films to production of war material, according to a report from purchasing agents of all studios.

Carrier Services Study Reduction

Meetings among film carriers, theatre owners, and exchange managers will begin shortly in key cities, to work out new methods of delivering film. The meetings were advocated at the annual two-day convention of the National Film Carriers' Association, in New York's Hotel Astor, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The carriers discussed their curtailed deliveries under WPB and Office of Defense Transportation orders. Representing the latter Government agency was Everett Harding, its Philadelphia regional director.

The ODT order limits film delivery service to one pickup per day, at exchanges; one delivery per day to theatres, effective July 1st.

It was pointed out in Monday's session that one result of the curtailment may be longer life for pictures. Rapid transportation heretofore had facilitated bookings; and a picture had an average life of six months, instead of the nine formerly prevailing.

Distributors' representatives attended Tuesday and the convention was extended through Wednesday so that new servicing plans might be formed.

Reelected officers were James P. Clark, Philadelphia, president; Thomas Gilboy, San Francisco, vice-president, and Clint Weyer, Philadelphia, secretary.

Delay In Shipments Abroad Is Deplored

Despite priorities granted American newsreels and other films worthy of showing abroad, their shipment recently has been severely circumscribed, and the value of the newsreels endangered. This was disclosed to major company foreign department heads at a meeting in the New York headquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, last week.

It was reported some executives want the film industry to appeal to the War Department or to the President. But no decision came at the meeting, it was said.

The commonest cause for delay, it was added, was precedence over American priority granted a newsreel by priority in the country of destination for another article.

Brylawski Returns To Warners

A. Julian Brylawski has returned to his Washington desk as real estate chief for Warner Theatres. He has been serving the Office of Production Management and its successor, the War Production Board.

The film industry is weaving war themes into pictures admirably; but it should broaden the presentation to emphasize the universality of the war. This was said by Nelson Poynter, assistant Coordinator of Government Films, at a meeting of the Hollywood Writers' Mobilization last week. Mr. Poynter asserted emphasis upon spectacular branches of the armed forces tended to minimize equally important work by other factors. He also advocated depiction of the Chinese and Russian efforts.

Industry Puts Bond Campaign in High Gear

The motion picture industry remains well in the vanguard of the Government's effort to spurt War Bond sales through parades, rallies and other "morale-building" ceremonies. Exhibitors, screen stars, publicists and others in all branches of the industry continue to give of their time and talent wherever showmanship is needed to help make the American public more "war conscious."

In New York last Saturday where the huge "New York at War" parade brought 500,000 participants and approximately 2,000,000 spectators to the sidewalks of Fifth Avenue, two large floats and a number of screen stars represented the film industry.

Sponsored by Metropolitan exhibitors, the industry contingent appeared in the home front division representing morale. One float carried Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra and a group of John Powers models. Screen stars Charles Winninger, Martha Scott, William Holden, Charles Ruggles, Roy Rogers, Jeffrey Lynn and others, represented Hollywood on the second float. A highlight of the parade was the distribution among spectators of toy airplanes which carried the slogan, "Movies for Morale," many of them containing passes for downtown theatres. Scores of ushers from the city's film houses marched in the parade.

Arrangements for industry participation in the event were made by an exhibitor committee, which Sam Rinzler headed, and Monroe W. Greenthal, Vincent Trotta and Armando, who planned the floats; David E. Weshner, S. Barret McCormick and Maurice Bergman. Edward L. Alperson was treasurer.

Television trucks from NBC and a float of the American Theatre Wing War Service were among the many displays.

Saturday matinees of all Broadway's legitimate theatres began at 3:00 P. M., 15 minutes later than usual, to permit theatregoers to view the parade.

Stars Sell Bonds in Milwaukee

Last week, a contingent of Hollywood stars helped to sell more than $2,500,000 of war stamps and bonds in five days of Milwaukee's War Exposition. The players, who made two appearances daily in connection with the entertainment features of the Exposition, included Major Donald Crisp, Arlene Whelan, Mary Howard, Shirley Ross, Mrs. Pat O'Brien and Gale Sondergaard.

Exhibitors in Washington and Baltimore participated in arrangements for the War Heroes Parades in both cities, held last Saturday and Friday, respectively. John J. Payette, Warner Bros. zone manager in the Capital, was chairman of the executive committee, and I. M. Rappaport, exhibitor, was local coordinator, representing War Activities Committee, in Baltimore.

Reports continue to come in from key city exhibitors on the industry's War Bond drive. Fred Wehrenberg, chairman of the St. Louis campaign, announced that more than $138,000 in bonds and stamps were sold the first week of the drive in that city's motion picture theatres. Loew's downtown first-run house led with $17,400. A special matinee at 25 neighborhood houses, at which admission was a stamp of any denomination, yielded $4,447 last week.

Sales of War Bonds and Stamps at Loew's theatres during the second week of the drive indicate that the first week's pace of $150,000 was maintained. The two weeks' total was a little over $300,000, of which $125,000 was in stamp sales. The circuit is now accepting checks from patrons who wish to subscribe for bonds.

BONUS GIVEN FOR BONDS

Home office employes of Warner Bros., numbering 800, received an extra bonus last Thursday in payments ranging from a half week's salary upward. The bonus was presented to stimulate War Bond savings under the payroll allotment plan and to help employes meet the quarterly income tax installments due on Monday. Following distribution of the checks, there was an immediate spurt in War Bond pledges as well as outright purchases of bonds, it was reported.

Skouras Theatres Corp., of which George Skouras is president, has been appointed by the Treasury Department as an official issuing agent of War Bonds, Series E, enabling it to make immediate delivery of bonds. The circuit is the first film organization designated as an issuing agent. Purchases of War Bonds will be handled at Skouras houses in the same manner as at post offices and banks. The general procedure is that theatres take pledges for bonds which are then followed up by the Treasury.

Theatre owners of North and South Carolina reported on Tuesday the "record" results of a one-day sale of War Bonds and Stamps. Roy Rowe's Pender Theatre, in Burgaw, N. C., with a population of 1,200, sold $15,000 worth of securities. At Taylorsville, N. C., where 926 persons reside, W. D. Sears' Palace Theatre chalked up $925 in bonds and $28 in stamps. In Plymouth, N. C., with a population of 2,000, the Plymouth, owned by Shep Brinkley, sold $1,800 worth of bonds and stamps.

Final reports on sales of War Bonds through the broadcast sponsored on May 29th by film theatres in Pittsburgh, revealed that $109,870 in bonds and stamps were purchased by radio listeners and the audience of the show. All five local radio stations broadcast the event and seven more of the regional Victory network also carried it. The publicity committee was headed by James M. Totman of Warner Bros., and Kenneth Hoel, of Harris Amusement Enterprises.

"Ship Ahoy" Girls Completing Tour

MGM's two "Ship Ahoy" girls, Jetsy Parker and Dorothy Schoemer, who were selected from the cast of that picture to make a tour of the country selling War Bonds, have disposed of $3,500,000 worth to date, it was reported last week. The girls were in New York last Wednesday where they sold a bond to Alfred E. Smith atop the Empire State Building. Their tour ends next Monday. This week the girls are trekking through New Jersey on behalf of the Treasury Department.

Another MGM juvenile player, Johnny Sheffield, is on a "Tank for a Yank" national tour to promote the sale of wartime securities.

"Let's all be 110 per cent Americans," is the slogan coined by Mervyn Le Roy, Hollywood producer, which will be used by the film industry committee in its campaign to enlist every employe in the industry's payroll savings plan for War Bond purchases.

To date, 94 per cent of all employes of 20th Century-Fox have subscribed to the savings plan. Of 1,069 workers in the field, 1,003 have signed up and 14 exchanges report 100 per cent participation. The percentage of home office employes who have signed up reached 74 at the end of last week.

Theatres Expect $2,200,000 Goal for Relief

With checks continuing to pour into national headquarters of the motion picture industry campaign for Army and Navy Emergency Relief, totaling more than $1,700,000, it is estimated that the country's film theatres will have collected, when all remittances are in, approximately $2,200,000. This amount will set a record for industry collections, it was said.

The drive, held May 14th to 20th, was the first national collection campaign for war purposes in which the industry was asked to assist since the United States entered the war. The bulk of contributions came from theatre patrons in more than 13,000 picture houses and included large donations by film companies and circuits.

Previous high mark for theatre collections set by the industry was for the Infantile Paralysis drive in January, which yielded $1,450,000.

Nicholas M. Schenck was national chairman of the Army and Navy Relief campaign. Co-chairmen were Barney Balaban, Gus Eyssell, George J. Schaefer, Spyros Skouras, Joseph Bernhard, Charles Moskowitz and Harry Brandt. S. H. Fabian was treasurer.

Illinois Sets $117,000 Record

Collections for the drive in the state of Illinois far exceeded the $50,000 quota, it was reported last week, with a total of $117,902. The grand total is expected to reach $125,000 when all checks are in. According to an announcement by Joseph Blumenfeld, chairman of Northern California's drive committee, theatre collections in that area exceeded $75,000. Members of San Francisco's film row contributed another $549, many giving the equivalent of a day's pay.

Downtown and neighborhood theatres and local film exchanges in Indianapolis turned in $12,500 collected from 52 theatres in the city which participated.

A total of $19,238 was raised by 34 theatres in Hartford County, it was announced last week by Fred R. Greenway, manager of the Loew-Poli Palace Theatre, and county chairman for the campaign. In the city proper, $11,847 of the total was collected at 17 theatres.

Legitimate theatres throughout the country brought in a total of $37,700 towards the drive. In addition, Katharine Cornell's revival of "Candida," in New York and Washington performances, collected a total of $122,247 from the 27 Broadway shows and eight in the Capital. Army and Navy Relief funds each will receive $36,817 of this amount, and $9,437 will go to the American Theatre Wing War Service. Expenses of the recent revival amounted to $39,175 and royalties paid to George Bernard Shaw, author of "Candida," were $15,887.

Sues "U" Over Song

Plagiarism of a Hungarian song is claimed in a suit for an accounting and an injunction filed last week in the Federal Court, New York, by Emery Heim against Universal Pictures, Inc., Robbins Music Corp., Universal Music Corp. and Aldo Franchctti. The complaint charges the infringement of plaintiff's "Ma Este Meg Boldog Vagyak" by the defendant's number "Perhaps" sung by Deanna Durbin in the film "Love at Last."

Exhibitors Aid Local Air Raid Precautions

Dim-out Regulations Extended; Extra Shows for War Workers

Theatre men throughout the country rested this week upon their accomplishments in seven months of war: thorough preparation for possible enemy attack, and adjustment and service in the country's various fuel and commodity emergencies.

Meanwhile, although the Office of Civilian Defense' theatre protection manual has been nationally distributed, the program of the Los Angeles Theatres Defense Bureau has been examined and found worthy of study by OCD officials, it was reported from Hollywood last week.

Theatre activities in connection with the war this week are local.

Special Midnight Shows Arranged

The Norside, a subsequent run house in North St. Louis near war industries, is the fifth St. Louis theatre to arrange a special midnight show for late-hour war workers. The Norside will hold special shows Friday nights. It is of the Schucart chain.

Thus far three such houses—the Empress, Capitol and Drive-In—are holding late shows, on Saturday. The Missouri, the only first-run house to include such a program, holds them Tuesday nights.

Nasser Brothers Theatres and Golden State Theatres, both San Francisco neighborhood circuits, are cooperating with the American Women's Volunteer Service, staging exhibitions of bomb fighting equipment in theatres of the two circuits each Saturday morning. Blackout materials and how to use them for civilian protection are emphasized. The demonstrations were introduced in the Alhambra and Castro of the Nasser circuits, and in the Golden State's Uptown and El Rey.

"Better Than Average" Business Reported

Despite numerous dimouts during the past month, plus nightly subdued lighting, the city's theatres are reporting better than average business. Exhibitors were heartened last week by indications that recent agitation for a midnight closing of all bars, which would tend to slow down all night-time activity, has died. The closing was proposed by the Navy, with tavern owners countering that they could not close before their usual 2 A. M. hour unless the state law was changed by the legislature. Observers contended the Navy could force the closing if desired; but nothing more was done, although some tavern operators closed of their own volition.

A possible future obstacle to downtown box-office receipts is an extension of the city's new policy of designating certain downtown streets as "no parking" areas.

Two more, Kearney and Stockton, have been placed in that category as far as Columbus avenue, ten blocks away in each case. They are the ninth and tenth downtown streets so designated. Parking problems always have been critical to downtown merchants and showmen. The $1,000,000 Union Square Garage, built under the city's largest downtown public park and financed by leading citizens, is nearing completion. It will park 1,600 cars.

Connecticut exhibitors hope that patrons will become accustomed to dimmed-out streets and marquees and continue theatregoing. Inroads made into average box offices are blamed by exhibitors on the summer "doldrums" and type of product. None, except the exhibitors in in-shore towns, are prepared to state that either dimout or gas shortage will seriously affect business.

Stonington, Groton, New London, Waterford, East Lyme, Old Lyme and Old Saybrook are listed as definitely in the dimout area, by First Corps Area Headquarters of Major General Sherman Miles. Less restricted were Westbrook, Clinton, Guilford, Madison, Branford, and East Haven. From New Haven to the New York line the dimout will be in full effect, with particular emphasis on sky glow. This includes New Haven, West Haven, Orange, Milford, Stratford, Bridgeport, Trumbull between the Merritt Parkway and the shore, Fairfield, Westport, Norwalk, Darien, New Canaan south of the Merritt Parkway, Stamford and Greenwich. No theatre marquees or signs are permitted lit, street lights are partially blacked out and motorists drive with dim headlights at 20 miles per hour.

Three Pennsylvania towns blacked out Tuesday, Hallstead, Great Bend, and New Milford. The move was ordered by the state defense council.

Connecticut exhibitors this week were warned to remove combustible waste. The warning came from Edward Hickey, state police commissioner, and was contained in a letter accompanying OCD general blackout instructions.

Recommends Regular Inspection

Mr. Hickey asked theatre managers to inspect premises regularly, and note the value of their properties. He also commended installation of emergency lighting as a practice in peace as well as war.

Night baseball has been banned in Newark and Jersey City, popular bases of the International League. The order came from the Army. It follows elimination of the game at night in New York and other Eastern cities.

A 30 minute blackout last week in Memphis hurt downtown theatres, but left those in neighborhoods unaffected. Drive-in theatres were deserted.

The dimout in the Boston area has become more stringent under drastic Army supervision, although enforcement still is the function of the committees on Public Safety.

Meanwhile, national gasoline rationing awaits results from the scrap rubber drive which began this week and extends one more. Rationing of gasoline in 17 Eastern states has brought mixed results, hurting some suburban and drive-in theatres, but benefiting neighborhood and downtown houses in large cities. It also appeared certain that the rationing, generally, is hurting, and eliminating competitors to established theatres; such as beaches, dance pavilions, roadhouses, and suburban bowling alleys.

In New York, former employes of the sightseeing buses now banned, have formed a co-operative, and are leading their tourist charges by foot, street bus, and subway. They report good business; and New York theatre men expect more visitors than usual this year, resultant from the gasoline rationing.

Harmon, Mayer, Fabian Lecture On WAC Work

A War Activities Committee meeting, one of a series of gatherings being conducted throughout the country, was held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, last week, at which Francis S. Harmon, Coordinator and executive vice-chairman of the WAC; Arthur L. Mayer, his assistant, and Si H. Fabian, national director of the Bond and Stamp campaign, were the principal speakers. The meeting was attended by all Chicago exchange managers and some 100 exhibitors representing 400 Chicago, downstate Illinois and Milwaukee theatres.

Chairman Jack Kirch first introduced Mr. Fabian who told the exhibitors they should sell bonds and stamps with every instinct of showmanship they possessed. He discussed future plans for keeping up interest for 52 weeks in the year in the campaign and said that about June 20th an 8-page booklet would be issued and distributed to the exhibitors that would give them many ideas for furthering the sale of bonds.

52 Victory Films a Year

Arthur L. Mayer, assistant to Mr. Harmon, who was associated 13 years ago with the Balaban & Katz and Great States circuits, said there would soon be 52 Victory Films a year. He voiced disappointment in the lack of sufficient bookings by Chicago exhibitors in these shorts, pointing out that of the 728 theatres in the Chicago area, 645 pledges were signed to play all Victory Films but that up to June 1, 1942, play dates numbered 81 to 378 on reels so far released. He told the exhibitors they should be played as a patriotic duty and urged them to set dates immediately.

To remedy this situation, it was agreed among the exchange managers at a meeting later, that every pledged theatre would be booked automatically and the exhibitor notified of the play date, presupposing that he would play the picture on that date or set a later date at once. Answering the complaints of some Chicago exhibitors who said the playing of Victory Films on a long bill would necessitate the paying of overtime to motion picture machine operators, Mr. Kirsch said the Chicago Operator's Union had agreed to give 15 minutes a day gratis for the running of defense reels.

Harmon Urges Industry Unity

Mr. Harmon explained the workings of the WAC organization and its various divisions and told of work the industry was doing without benefit of publicity, such as the furnishing of films for the armed forces in Iceland and the completion of 175 training films. He urged complete unity within the industry. Mr. Harmon left for Los Angeles where he was scheduled to address the Variety Club of Southern California on June 15; confer with the Exchange Committee on June 16 and conduct a luncheon meeting with the Exhibitors Committee on June 19. On June 22 he will hold a joint meeting in San Francisco and then will go Portland and Seattle. Mr. Fabian and Mr. Mayer returned to New York.

Brief remarks were also made by John Balaban, Jules Rubens, J. J. Donahue, Chairman of the Chicago Exchange Manager's Committee; H. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Exhibitors Committee of Milwaukee; Jack Flynn, MGM Central Division Manager and Eddie Zorn, President of United Theatres of Illinois, Springfield, Ill.

New Records Added by Holdovers

Despite blackouts, dimouts, gasoline and tire shortages and other wartime factors, a number of current releases on Broadway have chalked up four or more weeks of holdovers. Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," released through United Artists, heads the long-run list of film features, entering in its 10th week at the Globe Theatre this Saturday. Warner Bros. "In This Our Life," starring Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland, is next for long-run honors, currently in its sixth and last week at the Strand.

"This Above All," 20th Century-Fox film starring Joan Fontaine, at the Astor, completed its fifth week on Broadway and will remain an indeterminate number of weeks depending upon the product lined up for that theatre, according to a company announcement. Gross business for the film is said to be 20 per cent better than for the same number of weeks played by any recent attraction at the Astor.

Paramount's "Take a Letter, Darling," with Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray in the stellar roles, began its fourth and final week at the Paramount Theatre on Wednesday.

Other holdovers of the week:

"Mrs. Miniver," MGM: third week, Radio City Music Hall, New York.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy," Warner Bros.: third week of its two-a-day engagement at the Hollywood Theatre, New York.

"The Invaders," Columbia: second week holdover at Mayfair, Trenton.

"Wife Takes a Flyer," Columbia: held a second week at the Bijou, Springfield, Mass.

"Ship Ahoy," MGM: second week holdovers at the State, St. Louis; United Artists, Chicago, and Paramount, Seattle.

"Rio Rita," MGM: held a second week at the Stanley, Pittsburgh.

"Tortilla Flat," MGM: second week holdover at United Artists, Portland, Ore.

"Syncopation," RKO: second week holdover at Orpheum, New Orleans.

"Tuttles of Tahiti," RKO: held second week at Keith's Memorial, Boston.

"Miss Annie Rooney," United Artists: held a second week, Rivoli, New York.

Bernstein to Discuss Anglo-US Film Plans

An account of wartime motion picture cooperation between the United States and Great Britain by Sidney Bernstein, official British film liaison to Washington and the U. S. industry, will be the highlight of a joint Associated Motion Picture Advertisers-War Activities Committee luncheon on Thursday, June 25th, at the Edison Hotel, New York.

Mr. Bernstein will report on the screen in wartime in England and describe the film activities of Britain's industry and government. He is currently engaged in arranging an exchange of official war footage for use by American producers.

Delivery Services To Decide on Cuts

Local meetings of exhibitor representatives, exchanges and film transportation companies, to be summoned shortly in exchange centers, will decide on consolidation of film delivery routes, pick-ups and other changes to conform with truck-transportation rulings of the Office of Defense Transportation. This decision was made Wednesday by exchange representatives and film carriers at the Film Carriers' Association convention in New York.

GOOD BUSINESS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Northern Pennsylvania theatres are doing the best business of recent years, reports from film men in the field indicate. Some of the state's war production centers are now showing the results of increased payrolls. Possible rationing of gasoline in western Pennsylvania, exhibitors believe, will bring better business for theatres.

Zanuck Returns, 20th-Fox Meets

Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox, who had been on active duty with the United States Signal Corps in England, returned to Washington on Sunday, and after two days conferring with War Department officials, left Wednesday for Hollywood. While in London, he attended conferences between American and British military leaders and took part in a Commando raid. International News Service reported his presence with the first raiding party to enter Boulogne.

Spyros P. Skouras, president of Twentieth Century-Fox; Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of sales, and Hal Horne, advertising and publicity director, are to leave for the coast studio Friday, June 26th for a series of production conferences with Col. Zanuck. Following the conferences, production plans will be announced for 1942-43 and also the first block of releases for August and September will be set. Other business to be concluded at the meetings will include the plan for sales meetings this year and whether they are to be regional meetings or whether the branch managers are to assemble in New York.

Fox's eastern district sales manager William Sussman returned to the home office Wednesday after a tour of exchanges.

All Vincennes Theatres Taken By Alliance Corp.

The Alliance Theatre Corporation, Chicago, after June 28th, will manage and operate all theatres in Vincennes, Ind. The theatres are the Pantheon, Alice, Fort Sackville, and Strand, of the Welsh-LaPlante-Lyons interests; and the New Moon, of the Alliance company. City manager under the new agreement is Everette Sorensen, manager of the New Moon.

Order NSS Election

Clerical workers in the New York office of National Screen Service, trailer manufacturers, will vote shortly on representation by the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, C.I.O. The election order came from the National Labor Relations Board, Washington, Wednesday.

Poster Men to Meet

The independent Poster Exchanges of America will convene June 28th at the Broadwood Hotel, Philadelphia.

Trial Starts in Repayment Suit

Trial started Wednesday before New York Supreme Court Justice Carroll G. Walters in the suit brought by six Paramount minority stockholders to compel company officials to repay to the corporation $100,000 paid to George Browne and William Bioff.

Judge Walters at the outset limited the plaintiffs to the specific payments made to the convicted racketeers. They were compelled to drop general allegations of waste and dissipation of company resources from the complaint.

Austin C. Keough, general counsel of Paramount and the first and only witness Wednesday, disputed a claim by Alfred J. Talley, plaintiffs' counsel that the payments were a bribe, and not extortion. Mr Talley frequently used the word "bribe" in reference to the Bioff-Browne payments and Mr. Keough just as frequently corrected him, changing it to "extortion."

Mr. Keough, called by the plaintiffs, in summing up the reasons for meeting the demands of the labor leaders, said that he had been aware that "Bioff was a well-known gangster, a member of Capone's gang. I knew I was dealing desperate men."

Mr. Keough maintained that the distributors were utterly helpless in the face of the labor leader's threats and that Paramount in particular had emerged from reorganization one year before. At the time of the payments the company was losing money and had a very weak production situation, he said. Had Paramount refused payment, he continued, it would have been back in the bankruptcy court very soon.

Barney Balaban, president, was not told of the payments until some time after they were made, Mr. Keough recalled, saying that he had acceded to the demands before Mr. Balaban became president. John Otterson, Mr. Balaban's predecessor, had been informed of the confidential negotiations, but they had not been mentioned in either directors' or stockholders' meetings, Mr. Keough said.

No payments were made to any labor representatives other than Browne and Bioff, Mr. Keough testified.

A pre-trial memorandum from Paramount charged the present action was "a spite suit" since the combined interest of the plaintiffs totaled only 212 shares. Their entire stock would appreciate only $7.12 if the $100,000 was paid back, the company said.

Adolph Zukor will be the next witness called by plaintiffs, followed by Mr. Balaban, Mr. Talley said. Three similar suits by Loew, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox stockholders are pending.

Court Hears Moskowitz Plea for Probation

Federal Judge Grover M. Moscowitz Wednesday reserved decision at New York on an application of Joseph H. Moskowitz, Twentieth Century-Fox executive, for admission to probation and for the suspension of his sentence of one year and a day for income tax evasion. John W. Davis, attorney, based the application on the final disposition of the sentence imposed on Joseph M. Schenck for the same charge. Mr. Schenck's three-year sentence was suspended and he is now serving a sentence of a year and a day imposed after he pleaded guilty to one count of another indictment.

Fadiman to Coast

William Fadiman, MGM Eastern story editor, is to be given a "farewell" luncheon in New York Monday, by friends. He is to leave for the Coast Wednesday next, to be assistant to Kenneth McKenna, head of the company's story department.

Universal, Columbia Profits Increase

Cowdin Announces Net of $3,741,634 for 26 Weeks Ended May 2nd

J. Cheever Cowdin, Chairman of the Board of Universal Pictures, reported on Tuesday that net profits of the company and its subsidiaries after all charges but before provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes and special reserve for write-off of equities in subsidiaries operating in foreign territories, amounted to $3,741,634 in the 26 weeks ended May 2, 1942. This compares with a profit, similarly computed, for the 26 weeks ended May 3, 1941, of $1,759,534, or an increase of $1,982,300 in 1942.

After provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes of approximately $1,778,500 and after provision for the write-off of equities in foreign subsidiaries in the sum of $232,075, the profit for the 26 weeks amounted to $1,731,100. After providing for Federal income taxes of $390,000, the net profit for the 26 weeks ended May 3, 1941 amounted to $1,369,334. The profit of $1,731,100 as shown above for the 26 weeks ending May 2, 1942 includes an increase of $409,969 in restricted funds in Great Britain during the 26 weeks.

Profits Doubled in Second Period

Net profits before Federal taxes amounted to $2,223,319 in the second 1942 period of 13 weeks, more than double the $1,055,539 in the comparable 1941 period. Provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes amounted to $1,337,902 in the 13-week period, compared with $240,000 in the same 1941 period. Net after taxes was $885,158, which compares with $815,539 in the like period in 1941.

"Gross revenues of the Company's pictures have been running well ahead of a year ago in both domestic and foreign markets," it was said. Mr. Cowdin attributed the better market to a combination of circumstances, some of which apply as well to the whole motion picture industry. All pictures to be released before September 1 have already been completed and work on the new year's schedule is well under way, he added.

Columbia Earnings Increase $667,186

The nine months' report of Columbia Pictures, for the period ended March 28, 1942, lists net profits of $941,950, after provisions for Federal income and excess profits taxes amounting to $648,257, which compares with a net profit for the nine months ended March 29, 1941 of $274,764, after provisions for Federal income taxes amounting to $120,785.

Columbia continues to receive dollars currently under restrictive agreements with the Governments of England, Australia and New Zealand, but cannot at this time determine the exact amount, if any, of the cash balances which may be permanently restricted in these countries, said a company announcement.

The balance sheet shows current assets of $14,203,000 and current liabilities of $1,637,000. Working capital amounted to approximately $12,566,000.

Two Toronto Units Declare Dividends

The board of Marcus Loew's Theatres, Ltd., operating Loew's and the Uptown theatres, Toronto, has declared a dividend of one and three-quarters per cent on the preferred for the quarter ending June 30, payable June 15. Hamilton United Theatres, Ltd., affiliate of N. L. Nathanson's General Theatre Investments, Ltd., and operating houses in Hamilton, Ont., has declared a dividend of one and one-quarter per cent on the preferred, payable June 30.

Stockholders of Loew's London Theatres, Ltd., operating Loew's in London, Ont., have been asked to ratify a board resolution to appoint Midland Securities, Ltd., as exclusive agent for six months for the sale of the theatre's assets at a cash price of not less than $250,000.

Schenck and Rubin Cut Loew Holdings

Transactions involving the securities of only two motion picture companies were reported this week in the first April summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission, Washington.

The SEC report showed that Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's president, disposed of 1,800 shares of Loew's common stock during the month, leaving him with 1,017 shares, and that J. Robert Rubin, vice president, sold 100 shares, reducing his holdings to 10,315 shares.

Sale of 100 shares of General Theatres Equipment capital stock was reported by Edward C. Delafield, New York, director, who held 300 shares at the close of the month.

Universal Managers Shift

James Prichard, for three years manager for Universal in Charlotte has returned to the Memphis branch which he previously headed, while Roy Brauer, Memphis manager for the company, has been shifted to Charlotte. Both executives attended Universal's New York sales convention recently.

Sunday Films in Natchez

Sunday motion pictures were inaugurated in Natchez, Miss., by the Star Theatre last week, with no attempt being made to invoke Mississippi blue laws. Two other film theatres owned by a syndicate remained closed and no indication has been given as to whether they will follow the Star's lead.

Edward Howe Missing

Edward Howe, 19, a Marine, last reported at Corregidor Fort, Philippines, was reported missing this week, presumably a prisoner. He had been usher at the Roxy Theatre, New York. His father is M. D. "Doc" Howe, Twentieth Century-Fox exploitation director.

Servicemen Are Premiere Guests

Non-commissioned servicemen were the guests of four women's volunteer wartime organizations Friday night at the special premiere of "Friendly Enemies," at New York's Rivoli Theatre. The Edward Small production, released through United Artists, began its regular run the following day.

Mr. Small was honored, along with the film's stars, Charles Ruggles and Charles Winniger, at a cocktail party in New York Tuesday evening.

Under arrangements by UA with Mrs. Douglas Gibbons, director of sales of the New York War Savings Staff, 2,000 tickets to the premiere were given to those members of the women's groups who sold the largest amounts of war bonds and stamps during a "friendly enemies" sales drive preceding the opening. Each of the 2,000 winners had as her guest to the picture's debut a soldier, sailor or marine. The service organizations were: Women's Division of the National Security League; American Women's Voluntary Services; Retail Volunteer Corps and the Office of Civilian Defense.

Charles Winninger and Charles Ruggles, co-stars of the film, were scheduled to appear at the premiere. Their supporting cast includes: James Craig, Nancy Kelly, Otto Kruger and Ilka Gruning. "Friendly Enemies," based on the famous stage play by Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman, was directed by Allan Dwan.

World premiere of "Eagle Squadron," Walter Wanger's production for Universal, will be held at the Orpheum Theatre, San Francisco, on June 25th. Flying Officer John M. Hill of the Royal Air Force Eagle Squadron, technical advisor for the picture, was in New York on Monday, to begin a four-weeks' assignment, assisting in special openings of the film in 12 key cities.

Samuel Goldwyn's picture on the life of Lou Gehrig, "Pride of the Yankees," with Gary Cooper in the Gehrig role, is scheduled to open at the Astor Theatre, New York, following the current engagement of "This Above All." The Goldwyn film will be released by RKO.

MPPDA to Broaden Public Relations

Periodical 'News Letter' Planned by Eastern Press Agents Committee

Directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., meeting on Monday at New York approved initial proposals of the eastern branch of the Public Relations Committee for a broadened public relations program in behalf of the entire industry.

A census of all workers in the industry, and their jobs, the publication of a periodical newsletter, organization on a national basis and the compilation of a master list of MPPDA field representatives are among the projects to be launched at once by the public relations committee. Several are already underway.

Charles Francis Coe, assistant to Will Hays, president of the MPPDA outlined the principal points contained in the dozen pages of the publicity committee's report. It was drafted from the recommendations of the publicity directors of all the major distributors.

The public relations committee has already started organization on a national basis. Leaders of the film industry in key cities will be asked to be local representatives, or correspondents, of the national publicity committee. Glendon Allvine, executive secretary of the public relations committee is at present compiling a list of prominent men in the field who will be asked to serve. They include circuit executives, district or branch managers for the distributors, exhibitor organization officers, and others prominent in either distribution or exhibition.

Industry-wide Census Planned

The census of industry workers will be taken as quickly as it can be organized, Mr. Coe said. It is intended to embrace all branches of the motion picture industry and will compile for the first time accurate figures on the number of persons engaged in making, distributing and showing motion pictures, and the nature of their jobs.

Each studio, distributor, laboratory, circuit and independent exhibitor organization will be asked to make its own census of staffs along lines suggested by the national committee. Figures will then be compiled in New York to provide information on the total number of workers dependent on motion pictures for a livelihood, and the numbers in each job category.

The periodic issuance of a news letter under the publicity committee's letter head will be one of the major projects of the new group Mr. Coe indicated. The bulletins will be sent to an extensive mailing list of film critics, newspaper editors, columnists, radio stations and others in executive or organization positions within or independent of the industry.

"It will be a real news letter. It is not to be a clipsheet, or mail ballyhoo," Mr. Coe declared.

The letter will be issued only when developments within or affecting the industry warrant a semi-official report it was indicated. The letters will be cumulative, it was said, and Mr. Coe expressed the hope that at year's end the file of letters would present an accurate digest of important developments during the year.

Mr. Allvine, who will edit the messages, said they were intended as a running supplement to the yearly report of the MPPDA and would generally be confined to factual reports on developments in the industry. They will be issued as the need arises, he said, and at no regular interval.

The work of compiling a master mailing list of newspaper film critics, correspondents, columnists, radio commentators and others which the public relations committee launched as one of its first projects is continuing. The list will be kept up to date and probably will form the basis for circulating the newsletter.

To Explore Use of Radio

The publicity committee will also devote increasing attention to the activities of the MPPDA speakers bureau, contacts with educational groups, and other organizations. Under discussion for future action also are a survey of advertising media, including a check of newspaper rates for amusement copy, magazines and other outlets. Presumably this will include a further investigation of radio and the possibilities of an all-industry sponsored institutional radio program.

The public relations committee met on June 11th at the New York Athletic Club to elect a new six-month chairman and take final action on the report preparatory to submitting it to the MPPDA directors. Election of the chairman was deferred for one week when a full complement of votes was not mustered. The initial ballot, it was reported, was split 4 to 4 between S. Barret McCormick of RKO and Mort Blumenstock of Warner Brothers. Robert Gillham of Paramount is the retiring chairman.

Priorities Under Discussion

The directors of the MPPDA at their deferred quarterly meeting on Monday continued a discussion of priorities begun the previous Wednesday. Unrestricted cooperation with all Government requests for conservation and continuing efforts to devise substitutes for all critical materials was pledged.

A meeting of a special sub committee on priorities on Tuesday was scheduled to present further facts on the raw film situation and a possible plan for joint conservation efforts.

The directors also examined requests from several charities for the production of benefit pictures, starring several top ranking players, for distribution nationally in behalf of charitable causes. Such sponsorship, the committee of company leaders decided, is a matter for individual producing companies, rather than for all-industry action.

The International Film Relations Committee, composed of the foreign department public relations chiefs of all distributors, at their Monday meeting elected Joel Swensen chairman. Mr. Swensen, head of the public relations staff of the MPPDA, succeeds Kenneth Clark on the international committee. Mr. Clark has entered the army.

Harry Smith, Jr., also a member of the MPPDA press staff, succeeded Mr. Swensen as secretary of the international committee. The committee adopted resolutions calling for closer cooperation with the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the Office of War Information and other Government agencies. They also passed a resolution of thanks to Mr. Clark for his services.

Industry's USO Drive Postponed

Industry participation in the USO war fund drive for $32,000,000, scheduled to begin shortly after the theatre campaign for Army and Navy Emergency Relief was completed, will be postponed until September, it was decided last week at a meeting of the committee in New York. The date was set ahead, it was learned, to avoid conflict with other national fund-raising campaigns in which the industry is interested. Approximately $400,000 was the sum expected to be raised through the motion picture and amusement industries.

Chester I. Barnard, president of USO, reported to its board of directors in New York this week that the organization spent $1,765,328 in May to provide off-duty social and recreational services for men in the armed forces. USO-Camp Shows, Inc., spent $280,000; the administrative division, $21,847; overseas division which operated 33 units with a personnel of 90 professional workers, spent $85,477; the field service division, $46,529, and $49,412 went for program materials and service for the USO clubs. The organization is currently operating in 324 cities and towns in 45 states and nine possessions, territories and off-shore bases.

The final total in the Hollywood studios' drive for USO is $143,152, which is 40 per cent of the total amount in the Los Angeles area, it was reported this week.

Recent addition to the star roster appearing in USO-Camps Shows, is Jean Arthur, who joined the cast of "Going to Town," a Camp Show production, at the Naval Air Station. Lakehurst, N. J., on Monday. Miss Arthur will remain with the company for 10 days.

He also is publicity director for Oregon's war activities committee in Oregon and is member of the state's theatre committee for the War Bond drive.

On Tuesday, Jack Cohn, Columbia vice-president, opened the convention with a welcoming speech to the 90 delegates who were present. Harry Cohn, president of the company, arrived from Hollywood on Monday to attend the sales meetings. Robert Taplinger, his assistant, accompanied him.

That Columbia would top last season's domestic gross by at least $4,000,000 this year, was prophesied by A. Montague, general sales manager of the company, at Tuesday's session. The year ending June 30th, Mr. Montague declared, is not only Columbia's greatest year in dollars grossed, but also the greatest in number of accounts served and in number of pictures sold per each account, he said.

An "open door" policy, now new—"because it made our company a success"—but which is increasingly necessary, was reemphasized by Mr. Montague, in a special interview to the trade press Wednesday, closing day of the three day convention.

Mr. Montague said he wanted small town exhibitors to "come in and speak their piece," and said the company would even "seek them out."

"We know there's a shift in population," he said; "seventy-five men taken from a small town can mean a great deal."

Mr. Montague warned that adjustments of contracts must be individual; Columbia will not deal with third parties.

He also said Columbia's selling policy would remain the same because exhibitors wanted it. He added that the United Motion Picture Industry's selling plan would not be adopted because the "large majority" of exhibitors disliked it.

The selling method for the "Victory" films will be determined later, Mr. Montague said.

In addition to Mr. Cohn and Mr. Montague, other speakers were: Rube Jackter, assistant sales manager; A. Schneider, treasurer; Lou Weinberg and Lou Astor, circuit sales; Max Weisfeldt, sales executive, and David A. Lipton, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation.

Home office executives who were present included: Louis J. Barbano, Leo Jaffe, Irving Moross, Leonard Picker, Hank Kaufman, Maurice Grad, Mort Wormser, George Josephs, Bill Brennan, Bernie Zeeman, Hortense Schorr, Frank P. Rosenberg, Vincent Borrelli, Joe Freiberg, Nat Goldblatt, Seth Raisler, Al Seligman, Irving Sherman, Jack Segal, Arnold Picker, and Harold Sachs. Present from the field were the following:

Warners to Hold District Meeting

Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager for Warner Bros., announced in New York on Tuesday that a meeting of all the company's district managers will be held at the home office on July 2nd and 3rd, at which time plans for the 1942 sales sessions will be determined.

Among those expected to attend are: Sam Lefkowitz, metropolitan district; Norman Ayers, Eastern district, Boston; Robert Smeltaer, mid-Atlantic District, Washington; Harry Seed, Central district, Pittsburgh; William S. Shartin, midwest district, Chicago; Hall Walsh, Prairie district, St. Louis; R. L. Home office executives who will participate in the meeting, in addition to Mr. Kalmenson will be Roy Haines, Eastern and Canadian sales manager; Arthur Sachson, sales executive; A. W. Schwalberg, supervisor of exchanges; Norman H. Moray, short subjects sales manager, and others.

At a meeting of the New York metropolitan sales staff and bookers held at Warner's home office over the week-end, handling of the company's patriotic shorts and the Summer sales drive were discussed. Sam Lefkowitz, district manager, and Roger Mahan, New York branch manager, presided. Norman Moray, short subjects sales manager, spoke on the new season's shorts' schedule and reported it would include more musicals, comedies, adventure and sports reels to balance wartime subjects.

Play Date Drive for Blumberg

Universal launched a play date drive in the company's distribution department to honor Nate J. Blumberg, president. It will continue for the next 20 weeks. Approximately 2,500 persons comprising the sales force in the United States, Canada and 16 foreign countries, will share in the awards.

Under campaign rules, domestic exchanges will be set up into three groups, each containing exchanges of comparatively equal strength. The contest will be within such groups, rather than between them as customarily prevailed.

Prizes for the first five exchanges in each group will be posted. The first prize will be three weeks' salary to manager, salesmen and bookers; two weeks' salary to all front office employes and one and one-half weeks' salary to accessory managers, shippers and inspectors.

To those district managers whose exchanges lead at the end of the drive, three separate prizes will be awarded. Separate awards of approximately $2,000 will go to bookers, bookers' stenographers and clerks in domestic branches. The six Canadian and 16 foreign offices also will participate.

Republic Producer in Army

Hiram S. Brown, Jr., executive producer in charge of Westerns and serials for Republic, will report to Wright Field, Dayton, O., next Monday for service as an Army Lieutenant.

Trend to Comedy —and Escape

Though the background of war remains still the major canvas against which British producers continue to set their motion pictures, a gradually widening vein of escapism or distraction is discernible in the future plans of many of the companies now at work. The battle and the breeze are not likely to be abandoned as the principal inspiration and fount of the producers ideas. None the less, increasingly the view is gaining ground that picturehouse audiences may want to be helped to a little laughter, may even wish at times to have their attentions taken off the war for a brief hour or two, now and again.

British National, with their Flanagan and Allen musical now on the floor at Elstree, with a Max Miller extravaganza to follow; Two Cities with a Noel Coward subject written before the war, and another by "Tole" de Grunwald with a pre 1939 setting and theme; Gainsborough's Arthur Askey musical "King Arthur Was a Gentleman," are all based on the policy "C'est magnifique mais ce N'est pas la guerre."

Producers with such schedules on their tables and with money in their banks are not facing the immediate future without a sharp twinge of commercial neuralgia. Recent activities of the Ministry of Labor in calling up grades of technicians who, it was understood would be retained in employment by the process of continued deferment, have caused some consternation within and without the studios, and impelled the fear that the industry faces yet another manpower crisis, that unless these callups are halted and the Ministry of Labour branches made to fall into line with the expressed policy and promises of Whitehall officials, production may be reduced to a mere trickle even more infinitesimal than at the present moment. Among those affected are the producers of short films who, swamped with orders for propaganda films on behalf of the services, and other Government departments, are finding it next to impossible to carry out their commissions.

Thrills and Comedy on ABP Program

Almost entirely escapist in flavor is the programme of Associated British, whose Welwyn produced films are released by Pathe. Thrills and comedy would seem to be the policy which impresario W. J. Gell is bent on pursuing. With a thriller, "Suspected Person," now being made ready for trade show, on to the stocks has gone another Drayton-Hare comedy, "Women Aren't Angels," by Vernon Sylvaine, who likewise wrote "Aren't Men Beasts" and "Warn That Man." Bernard Mainwaring has written the scenario, with the author. Laurence Huntington directs. Second on the roster is "Thursday's Child," a family comedy with a middle class flavor by author Rodney Ackland. John Argyle will produce this. Third will be "48 Hours Leave," another comedy, and fourth of the quartette, "Quiet Weekend," by Esther McCracken, author of the highly successful "Quiet Wedding."

Ambitious Projects Announced

Despite these obstacles producers not only manage to carry on, but continue virtually to ignore the tangles ahead, and to announce ambitious programs for the forthcoming season. Among the companies whose purposes seem undeterred by manpower and other difficulties, is Two Cities whose Generalissimo Major A. M. Sassoon and General Manager Filippo del Giudice, have this week gone to town with a most imposing production pattern in hand. Two Cities, not content with capturing practically all the available newsprint of recent months with production stories of the Noel Coward film "In Which We Serve," intend going straight ahead with a string of other films aimed at the home and world markets.

Before the anchor will finally have been dropped on the naval epic they will have gone to work at their Highbury studio on a dramatization of British women's part in the war, in the shape of a story of seven women who join the A.T.S. (the Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service). Titled "We're Not Weeping,"—fanciful exploitation of Kingsley's "For men must work and women must weep"—the film is by Moie Charles, who looks after the Selznick interests at Denham. It will be made with War Office collaboration, and will have considerable name appeal here, with Joyce Howard, Rosamund John, Lilli Palmer, Joan Greenwood, Barbara Waring and Joan Gates as the women in khaki. Derrick de Marney will produce and Adrian Brunel will be director.

Noel Coward's contribution to the pattern will be a subject of pre war vintage, "This Happy Breed." Originally written in play form it has been reshaped for the screen by Coward, and will be directed as a film by David Lean, his co-director in "In Which We Serve." It will not be launched until October.

Anglo-Russian Friendship

Before it goes into production yet another Two Cities film will probably have been launched, also devoid of any war setting or subject matter. This will be Anatole de Grunwald's own "The Demi Paradise," a story with a moral, the moral of friendship between Britain and Russia, but a moral to be pointed only with reliance on comedy, satire, and dramatic action. De Grunwald, whose story achievements to date include "Pimpernel Smith," "The Day Will Dawn," "Jeannie" and "The First of the Few," is said to have another winner here. "Log Book" by seaman Frank Laskier, noted British broadcaster, will also be made by Two Cities later this year.

"Thunder Rock" On Way for MGM

Taking shape at Denham, currently, is what may well prove to be one of the year's outstanding production achievements, and which, it is hoped, will be worthy of American release by Metro. The film is "Thunder Rock" which the Boulting Brothers—Roy, director, and John, producer—are making for MGM, with a cast topped by Michael ("Kipps") Redgrave, James Mason, Lilli Palmer and Barbara ("Jeannie") Mullen. The subject is an intensely dramatic one, with a marked significance in regard to present day problems and conditions. Report has it that Redgrave's performance is likely to lift him way up high with critics and fans.

Comedian Tommy Trinder, who scored in Ealing's "The Foreman Went to France," is starred in another Ealing picture, with a war documentary flavor, "The Bells Go Down," a story of the work of the wartime Auxiliary Fire Service during the 1940 Blitz on London's Dockland.

Michael Balcon will later make, at Ealing, "San Demetrio," the tale of an oil tanker in the Jervis Bay convoy.

ADMISSION INCREASE CUTS BRITISH THEATRE GROSSES

Net Profits Decrease as New Tax Is Added; Public Buys Cheap Seats

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Early though it may be to take stock of the box-office situation as affected by the recent all-'round increase in picture house admissions, British exhibitors, with two weeks of the new scales gone into the ticket takers have come to a fear that the net result may well be less income rather than more for the trade exchequer, irrespective of what may go to the Chancellor as a result of the increased Entertainments Tax.

With the essential proviso that the two weeks during which the increased admissions have operated have been abnormal from the boxoffice viewpoint—one preceded the Whitsuntide holiday and the other followed it—the only conclusion possible is that so far net profits have appreciably decreased. It would be wrong to assess the whole trade year's workings on the strength of these two exceptional weeks, but the facts are there none the less.

Into the bargain it is apparent that the theorists who foresaw a possible change in the habits of picture house patrons in regard, at least, to which seats they pay for, may not have been far wrong. In many areas cinemagoers have been unwilling to pay the extra seat price and have gone back to the cheaper rows..

Cost of Living Increasing

A vital consideration in the situation is that not only have the price of picture house seats been raised, but other commodities, beer, tobacco, and cigarettes, for instance, have been affected by increased duties in the same Budget. The cost of living all around is rising at a brisk tempo, and economies are necessary to enable most working class patrons to carry on. The cinema seat has been chosen as the target for this economy, for the simple reason that its tariff is variable. Whilst cigarettes are generally sold at two shillings for twenty and bitter beer costs sixpence a half pint, there are seats at ninepence and tenpence if one shilling and threepence is too much to pay.

Unless there are more war bonuses for British workers, to enable them to face the increasing cost of living, the gross revenues of American companies operating here may well be affected.

Lancashire and Yorkshire, two of the industry's most valuable areas, both of them heavily industrialized in parts, have, during the first two weeks of the new admission scales, shown an appreciable drop in takings. To a great extent this has been a reflection of the general drop in expenditure following the Budget and the prohibitive cost of green vegetables, fish, clothing, etc.

The Whitsuntide holiday, with "Stay at Home!" as the national keyword, did not prove the profitable session which has been its wont of recent years. Good business was registered in many areas, but in few as good as was hoped for and expected, in some it was downright bad. London's West End reputedly took less than an average Sunday.

It is clear from Whitsun's experience and from the reports of exhibitors in the more working class districts, in London and the Provinces, that the most noticeable effect of the new scale has been that patrons are stepping down their cinema seats to the next lowest priced seat to that which they had been in the habit of previously occupying. In many cases this had happened before the new admission rates were enforced, a suggestion here that the whole problem is enwrapped with the broader economic problem of meeting the increasing cost of living, which was put up by the 1942 Budget.

An odd factor in the situation is that in most instances where the patron is paying less for his seat—and the exhibitor gross is suffering—the Exchequer is netting more in the form of tax.

The problem is exemplified by an analysis of figures registered by a Lancashire picture house:

Patrons	Gross Receipts	Tax
	April Period
3,546	£131. 12. 1.	£30. 9. 3.
	May Period
3,162	£130. 19. 6.	£55. 5. 4.

The figures show:

(1) A drop of patrons of 11 per cent—which may mean much or nothing, with

(2) Practically no change in receipts, and

(3) A rise in tax of 83 per cent.

Reduced to individual seats, it shows that patrons are paying a penny more for seats, 9.9 pence instead of 8.9. The significant and alarming fact, however, is that, whereas in April the exhibitor's net return, after deducting tax from total and dividing the remainder by the total patronage, was 6.8 pence per seat, the May net seat earning was only 5.7 pence, a loss of over a penny per seat.

Meanwhile exhibitors are watching the situation keenly and nervously. The circuits in particular refuse to commit themselves to any judgment based on the first two weeks under the new tax. At least a clear normal month will be needed ere any finite decision can be taken. The prospects are not pretty.

Charity Fund Reaches £2,000,000

Since 1932, when the Sunday Opening Act came into force, the industry has paid to charity, compulsorily under the terms of the license conditions, £1,813,460. This figure is deduced from the accounts published by the Cinematograph Fund. This fund is administered by the Privy Council.

Under the 1932 Act, it is required that of all money collected under the Charity Tax clause, five per cent must be allocated to this fund. Since the Act came into effect until the last published accounts, the sum received by the fund totalled £78,673. The accounts for this year have not yet been published, but on a conservative basis they will show at least the same figure as last year, which was just over £12,000. Adding this sum, and counting the result as 5 per cent of the charity tax, gives the result quoted of nearly £2,000,000.

Receipts by the Cinematograph Fund have mounted steadily from year to year as new districts were added. The only exception was in 1940, with a sharp drop of 17.4 per cent.

The following is a record of the total receipts to the Fund since its inception:

1934	£5,351
1935	£7,821
1936	£9,940
1937	£11,004
1938	£11,359
1939	£11,595
1940	£9,564
1941	£12,039

The money paid to the Cinematograph Fund goes almost exclusively to the British Film Institute.

The last published accounts of the Fund showed a balance brought in at April 1, 1940, of £10,180. A grant was made in that year of £9,750 to the British Film Institute, and administration expenses totalled £300, leaving a balance with which to start the year ended March 31, 1942, of £12,170.

BRITISH THEATRES PUSH WAR SHORTS

The general council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association last week decided to appeal to all exhibitors to abide by the agreement to show a five-minute propaganda subject of the Ministry of Information on each program, following discussion of Ministry allegations that the agreement was being evaded.

Subsequent to exhibitor explanations of distribution difficulties with the films, the council decided to ask the Ministry to discuss the situation. The council also will study the proposed plan for longer films to be played once each month, instead of the present five-minute subjects. Criticism was leveled against the physical distribution of the present subjects and it was suggested by Arthur Jarratt that the longer films would be more practicable.

Roy Rogers, Republic's singing cowboy star, appeared at the opening of the Tall Cedars Rodeo Friday night, in the Municipal Stadium, Baltimore. Mr. Rogers is scheduled to make personal appearances following the rodeo, at the National Theatre, Richmond, Va., and at Warners' Earle, Washington, D. C. Steve Edwards, of Republic's home office publicity department, was advance man for the star in all three cities.

Bert Ennis, motion picture writer, exploiteer and press agent almost from the beginning of the commercial screen in New York, tossed across the desk, the other morning, a little item from his collection of film-iana. It was a faded page from The Morning Telegraph of Sunday Morning, February 13, 1916.

The Morning Telegraph was quite a newspaper for amusements in those days, and it was the custom, for the benefit of its advertising columns, to conduct a Sunday page labeled: "Directory of Leading Photo-Players and Directors," at so much per listing. One hundred and twenty-one players and directors spread their record of the day across that Sunday morning page in 1916. But the names of only a bare dozen have lingered on in performance or memory.

One does remember Tom Terriss, and "Fat and Funny" George Bunny. Also Lambert Hillyer, Edwin Carewe, Anita Stewart and Wally Van, Pat O'Malley, Harry C. Myers, Paul Panzer and Charlie Murray, Oscar Apfel and Harry Beaumont. The names of the rest have faded as the newsprint on which they were spread has faded.

And the structures of the principal film companies under whose banners the stars and directors were grouped have also either long since passed or gone through such structural changes as to be unrecognizable from their original form. It was Metro 26 years ago, but transformations down through the years have led to the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization of today. And The Vitagraph of 1916 is but a style name now for a distribution division of Warner Brothers Pictures. The old Fox Film Corporation is no more. Instead, we now have Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation. The Universal of 1916's Carl Laemmle is now the Universal of J. Cheever Cowdin, et al. Gone entirely are Eastern Film Corporation, of which Bert Ennis was general manager, and which, in 1916 listed some offices at Providence, Rhode Island. It would be considered strange for a big picture company to headquarter there now. Now it's Hollywood or New York.

Gone, too, are Thanhauser Film Corporation, New Rochelle, N. Y., a mighty name a quarter of a century ago. And World Film, Selig, Mutual, Edison Company, and all the others mentioned on that Sunday morning of February 13, 1916.

NEW SALES PLAN WAITS ON LAWYERS' TINKERING

Unity Committee Studying Final Text of Plan Before Submitting It

The United Motion Picture Industry's new sales plan was still in the hands of the lawyers at midweek.

A drafting committee of exhibitor and distribution attorneys was still continuing search for the proper legal phrases for the selling plan. They sought also to iron out a number of minor objections raised by both distribution and exhibition.

Following a meeting on Tuesday at New York of the home office attorneys it was indicated that all parties had reached virtual agreement on a text for the plan. This, it was expected, would be sent to out-of-town members of the committee for their final approval.

Then the plan will be submitted to the Department of Justice for its examination. After which the proposal will be taken before Judge Henry Goddard at the New York district federal court with the request that he incorporate the changes in selling into the consent decree as a formal amendment.

Meanwhile most of the consenting distributors were completing their plans for 1942-43 without signs of undue worry over whether the pictures are to be sold in blocks of-12 or five or otherwise. See convention story on page 27.

Among details which the committee ironed out at meetings last week were a rephrasing of the blocks-of-12 provision to insure the right to sell pictures singly, or in smaller selections. This will protect the right of top first run theatres, such as the Radio City Music Hall, to buy pictures by special negotiation. Also it was agreed that the blocks need not be calculated on a quarterly basis. Producers making more than the 48 pictures a year which this would imply thus will be able to sell a fifth block of films should their total production reach 60 or more.

New Provisions For Spot Booking

Arrangements were also made for split or spot booking under the new plan. The lawyers were understood to have further elaborated the provisions covering resale of pictures cancelled from a block. These may not be included in subsequent blocks.

A margin of 21 to 30 days after first run showing in which exhibitors may cancel pictures on religious, moral or racial grounds was also agreed upon by the attorneys. The sales plan had agreed to an extension of the 10 days now allowed for cancellation.

Austin Keough, general counsel of Paramount and chairman of the committee working on the legal phrasing of the sales plan probably will name a delegation from the committee to present the plan to Robert Wright, of the Department of Justice motion picture anti-trust unit. He would not confirm predictions that the plan might be ready by this weekend, but said that work was still in progress.

JERSEY ALLIED HITS HIGHER RENTALS

A meeting of the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey at their New York City headquarters on Monday unanimously approved a resolution condemning high film rentals and supporting the National Allied stand on the question. Army dimout orders for 1/4 watt per square foot marquee illumination were explained and exhibitors told that they could keep lights burning until one hour after sunset.

The resolution declared:

"Resolved, that the Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey protest to the distributors against continued demands for increased film rentals already unjustifiably high, as revealed by the large increases in earnings reported by these distributors and that we point out to them that unless these demands are immediately discontinued we shall be forced to seek relief from our government and that such action will greatly endanger everything accomplished toward industrial unity."

Other attorneys from the home office who worked on the plan this week included J. Robert Rubin, and Stanley Thompson, MGM; Felix Jenkins and Richard Dwight of Fox; William Zimmerman, RKO; and Robert Perkins, Warners. The out-of-town members of the committee include Abram Myers, general counsel of national Allied, George P. Aarons, Philadelphia, and Robert Barton of Richmond, Va.

Action on the arbitration and conciliation plans proposed to the UMPI general committee remain in abeyance meanwhile until the sales formula is completed and approved by the court. When such approval is forthcoming it is understood that immediate steps will be taken to put unity conciliation mechanism into action and to draft changes in the decree for the improvement of arbitration. The committee of the whole also probably will meet within a week or two after approval of the selling plan.

MGM Sets Three Exhibitor Forums

Three more exhibitor forums to discuss advertising and promotion were announced this week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for late in June and in mid-July. All will be held in the midwest under the direction of Henderson Richey, exhibitor relations contact.

They will be held at the Nicollet Hotel, Minneapolis, on June 24th; at the Schroeder Hotel, Milwaukee on July 13th and at Lake Wawasee, Ind., on July 15th.

Similar in pattern to previous exhibitor gatherings sponsored by Metro, the meetings will feature discussions of showmanship and exploitation by theatre operators, newspaper advertising executives, and exploitation specialists. The MGM "Show Builder" will also visit the meeting.

Invitations have been sent to 600 northwest exhibitors for the Minneapolis meeting. William Ferguson, home office exploitation chief, Edward Salzberg, Bluefield, W. Va., exhibitor; Seymour Morris, advertising manager of the Schine circuit, and Ken Prickett, who has visited several hundred theatres with "The Show-Builder," will speak.

Forum Planned On Advertising

Harold E. Perkins, national advertising manager for the Minneapolis Star-Journal, will discuss newspaper advertising. Mike Simons will present a 35-minute slide presentation of material from the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Robert Workman, branch manager at Minneapolis, is in charge of local arrangements.

The same group of speakers are expected to appear at the Milwaukee meeting, with the exception of Mr. Perkins. He will be replaced by a leading Milwaukee newspaper advertising man. Sam Shurman, branch manager, is sending invitations to exhibitors in the area.

The Indiana meeting will be a one-day feature of the convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Indiana convention at the Lake Wawasee resort. Foster Gauker, Indianapolis, is in charge of arrangements.

Regional Allied Meet Called in New Haven

An eastern regional conference of national Allied will be held at New Haven some time during the week of July 6th Joseph Reed, regional vice-president, announced this week. He described the meeting as "an important one." The sessions will be held at the Hotel Garde. A number of national leaders of Allied are expected to attend and will participate in a general exhibitor discussion of industry problems.

Penn Allied Calls Pottsville Meeting

Upstate Pennsylvania independent exhibitors will meet at Pottsville on July 1st Eastern Pennsylvania Allied announced. The session will be held at the Necho-Allen Hotel and is intended as a partial solution for travel and gasoline rations. The activities of the Philadelphia Committee of 38 will be discussed.

The annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina scheduled for July 19th and 20th has been cancelled, Roye Rowe, president, announced on Tuesday. Directors voted unanimously to abandon the meeting because of the war and travel restrictions. A business meeting will be held at the call of the president, instead.

40 Chicago Theatres Now Using Triples

Competition Called Chief Reason for Policy; Lower Quality Pictures Used

More than 40 of Chicago's 350 motion picture theatres are running triple features during the week and several of them have adopted triple bills as a steady policy. The number has increased steadily in the past few weeks from 16 or 17 houses to the present amount, the highest it has yet reached. Some exhibitors are not stopping with three features but include several short subjects and giveaways besides, on the same program, resulting in four-hour shows.

A check-up of newspaper advertising over the week-end disclosed 20 theatres showing triple features on Saturday and Sunday. One theatre advertised three features, three short subjects and free candy for the children; another showed three features, short subjects and gave away War Bonds via Bingo.

Managers Cite Profitable Runs

Asked why triple features were being exhibited, managers and owners replied that they had been forced to by their competition and that they had been found profitable. Several explained that they used triple features to rid themselves of inferior product, figuring that the public, in their bargain hunting, would overlook the quality of three features as long as they got quantity.

One independent exhibitor said, "I don't want to run triple features but my nearest competitor is running them and taking some of my business away so I am compelled to fight fire with fire. I tried to effect an agreement with him but he wouldn't listen so all I could do was to follow suit. As soon as he abandons the policy I'll do likewise."

Arthur Schoenstadt of H. Schoenstadt & Sons circuit said, "We run triple features because we find it is good business. On days when double features leave plenty of vacant seats and we find that adding a feature will fill them, then we resort to triple features. It doesn't cost much more and gives us a chance to get rid of the poorer pictures."

Lays Blame on Competition

Edwin Silverman, head of the Essaness Theatres Corporation, said, "We only use triple features in a couple of spots and we wouldn't use them there but we are forced to. When the fellow around the corner or down the street puts on three features and lowers his admissions we have to protect ourselves. The whole thing is a mess and it will never be cleared up until there is complete unity within the industry."

One neighborhood circuit head said their reason for using triples was because most of the product was sold to other houses in the vicinity of their theatres and the only policy left was to bunch three pictures together on one program and give the customers quantity rather than quality.

Walter Immerman, general manager of Balaban & Katz when asked why his company pursued the triple policy at the circuit's Crystal and Biltmore theatres, said, "We do it because our competition does it; besides we find it a profitable policy at those houses."

Benefit for RCAF Grosses $100,000

The stage show which Herbert Wilcox produced and staged for the benefit of the Air Marshal Fund of the RCAF and which will tour Canada, grossed more than $100,000 at its premiere Monday night, at the Victoria Theatre, Toronto. The receipts are reported to have broken all records for a benefit performance in Canada. More than 400 men from the RCAF, the Northwest Mounted Police, the Army, Navy and Women's Air Service are in the show, appearing with screen stars Anna Neagle, C. Aubrey Smith, Colin Keith-Johnson, Lady Hardwicke, Robert Coote, Richard Gaines, Victor Carrell, Moyna McGill and David Tihmar. Famous Players Canadian donated the use of its theatres, equipment and personnel for the benefit performances.

Theatre Pool in Chicago

Under a pooling agreement between the Welsh-LaPlante-Lyons interests of Vincennes, Indiana, and the Alliance Theatre Corporation, Chicago, which becomes effective June 28, all theatres in Vincennes will be operated and managed by the Alliance company on and after that date. Houses involved are the Pantheon, Strand, Alice and Fort Sackville theatres, of the W-LaP-L company, and the New Moon Theatre, owned and operated by the Alliance company. Everette Sorenson, manager of the New Moon, becomes city manager of the pool under the new arrangement.

New Owners for Keith House

B. F. Keith's theatre building and property in Indianapolis were purchased last week from the United Theatres Company of Cincinnati, by the Keith Operating Company, organized this year by Anton Scibilia, Nicholas Boila and Sam Roberts. The long-term lease formerly held by United was acquired by the new owners. The Keith theatre has been presenting combination stage and screen shows for the past eight weeks and will continue its present policy through the summer, it was learned.

Double Bill for B & K House

Balaban & Katz inaugurated a double feature policy at the United Artists Theatre, in the Loop, recently making four of the circuit's six downtown theatres now on a dual feature policy. The only remaining single feature houses in the Loop now are the Chicago and State-Lake theatres. The company announced the move as an experiment.

Humberstone at Fox

The contract of H. Bruce Humberstone, director, was extended for one year this week by 20th Century-Fox, according to a company announcement. Mr. Humberstone directed "To the Shores of Tripoli."

Networks impede FCC Operations Fly charges

Lashing out at opposition to the FCC network regulations, Chairman James L. Fly on Wednesday charged that the Sanders bill for reorganization of the Commission had been supported only by "two or three special interests in the broadcasting field."

Resuming his testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, Mr. Fly was subjected to a barrage of questions by members apparently weary of his long drawn out explanation of the Commission's activities, who demanded that he get down to the bill.

The Chairman told the committee flatly that the Sanders bill was controversial and had consumed "a vast amount of time of an agency that is devoting itself to war work 24 hours a day." He declared that the present was not the time to disrupt that agency. However, he admitted, there might be need for some specific legislation, but he did not think anything he would propose would have the approval of the broadcasters.

Pressed for identification of the "two or three" special interests which he said made a "big noise" in support of the bill, Mr. Fly said they were Columbia, National Broadcasting and the National Association of Broadcasters. Mutual, he said did not support the bill, but was just as apt to oppose the Commission "tomorrow" as the other networks, which, he charged, exerted a great influence over public opinion "far beyond their size" because they had their hands "on the throat" of the microphone.

Mr. Fly had spent two hours last Friday, confining himself to a further explanation of war activities and the cooperation between the commission and the War, Navy and State Departments, civilian defense and other war agencies, sometimes "off the record" and finally in executive session where he gave members of the committee details of the work which could not be published for military reasons.

Mr. Fly indicated at last week's hearings his argument would stress the inopportunity of radio legislation in war time.

The Sanders Bill, upon which the House Committee hearings revolve, asks FCC reorganization, and that Congress alone should originate radio policies.

Mr. Fly told the press this week that smaller radio stations were suffering from labor shortages, and that requests for deferment might be requested of the Selective Service System.

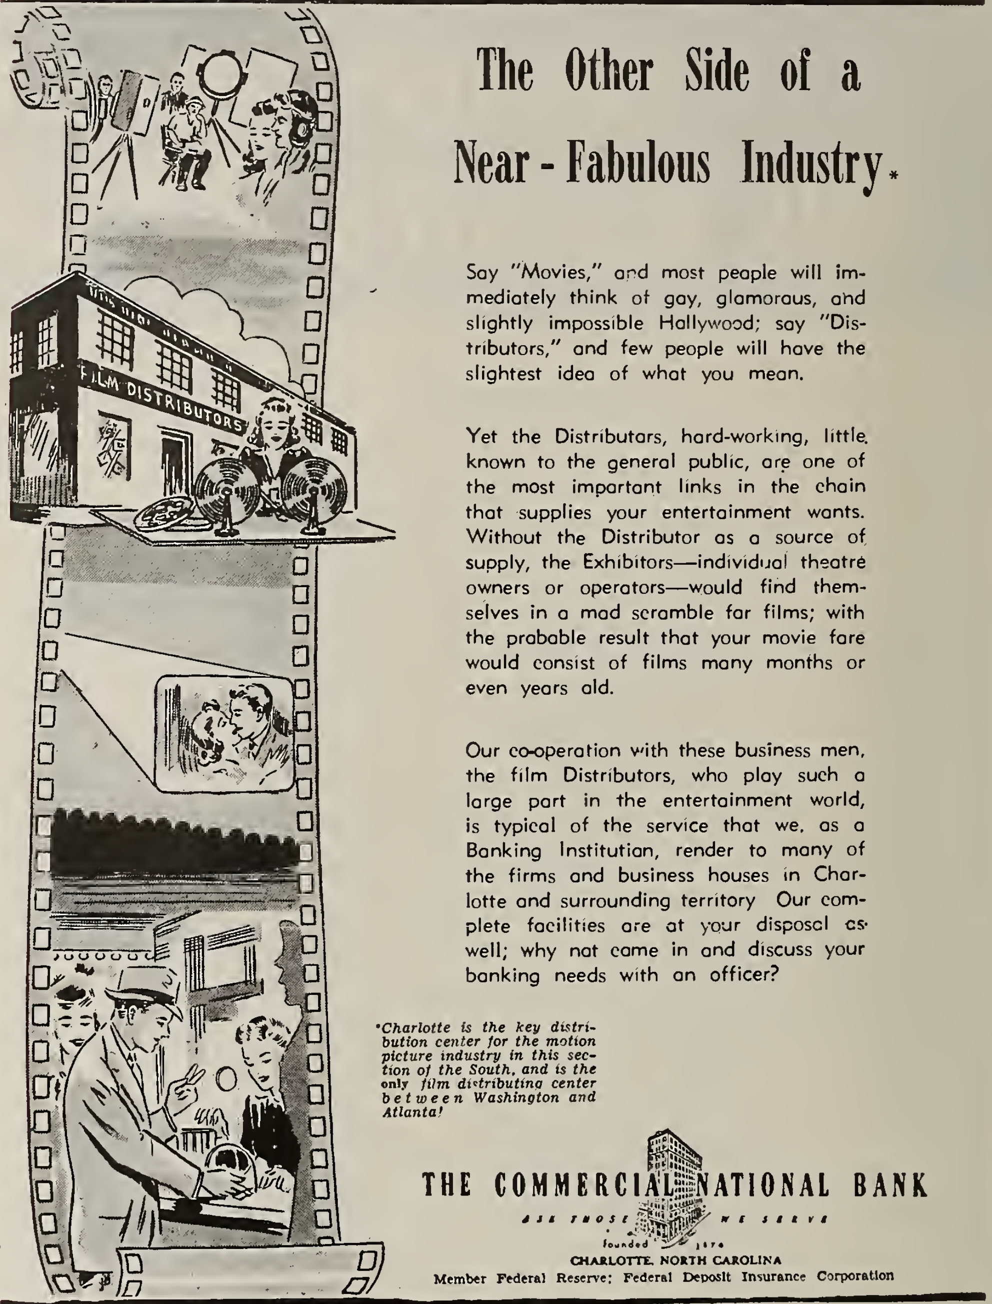
More Research Urged Upon Radio Makers

Radio manufacturers attending the 18th annual convention of the Radio Manufacturers Association at the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, last week were told to "perform and search out undreamed of discoveries" to permit the Jimmy Doolittles and the Colin Kellys of the army and navy to finish the battle with the Axis in shorter time.

The plea was made by William Batt, chairman of the Requirements Committee of the WPB who said: "No industry in the land should excel radio in searching out the hitherto unknown, undreamed of ways in which to hasten our winning of the war." He pointed out the need for more precision detection equipment and warned that many substitute materials would have to be uncovered.

All officers and executive personnel were reelected with the exception of H. E. Osmun, vice-president, who was replaced by Roy F. Sparrow. Mr. Henyon was elected an additional vice-president. New directors include J. J. Nance, W. P. Hilliard, L. L. Kelsey and Max F. Balcolm.

Bank Advertising Promotes Industry Public Relations



The Other Side of a Near-Fabulous Industry.*

Say "Movies," and most people will immediately think of gay, glamorous, and slightly impossible Hollywood; say "Distributors," and few people will have the slightest idea of what you mean.

Yet the Distributors, hard-working, little known to the general public, are one of the most important links in the chain that supplies your entertainment wants. Without the Distributor as a source of supply, the Exhibitors—individual theatre owners or operators—would find themselves in a mad scramble for films; with the probable result that your movie fare would consist of films many months or even years old.

Our co-operation with these business men, the film Distributors, who play such a large part in the entertainment world, is typical of the service that we, as a Banking Institution, render to many of the firms and business houses in Charlotte and surrounding territory Our complete facilities are at your disposal as well; why not come in and discuss your banking needs with an officer?

Charlotte is the key distribution center for the motion picture industry in this section of the South, and is the only film distributing center between Washington and Atlanta!*

Renovating Warner Theatres

Six Warner Bros. theatres in various Connecticut towns are undergoing improvements, it was learned this week. The 2,067-seat Roger Sherman in New Haven is in the process of re-seating; the 1,800-seat Garde of New London already has been re-seated. The 1,800-seat Warner, at Torrington, will be reseated, as well as the 1,297-seat Commodore. The Capitol, Danbury, a 1,300-seat house, will be completely re-decorated, Hull, in Derby. The Palace, Danbury, has had a complete lobby renovation with installation of new display frames.

Equipment Sought For Chinese Films

Documentaries, Features Being Made in Chungking Caves during Raids

Regardless of the current Japanese advance—which he admits is "critical"—China will proceed with its plans to educate and amuse its people, with films, according to T. Y. Lo, vice-president of the China Motion Picture Corporation.

T. Y. LO

Mr. Lo, interviewed in New York, said the Chinese Government was convinced that films were the desirable medium for quickly educating large masses of the people; and that they are a necessary medium for preserving morale.

Hence, the production which continues in underground studios at Chungking, much bombed Chinese capital, is of both documentary and dramatic films, which in most cases intermingle.

Five hundred theatres, as soon as possible, are wanted by the Chinese Government; and his company will erect them with Government financial aid, Mr. Lo said. The theatres will have 16 mm equipment because of the necessity of making it portable.

The difficulty, he emphasized, is first in transporting the 16 mm projection equipment to China. This must still be arranged and is one of his reasons for being here. Another reason is that he hopes to distribute here the Chinese features made by his company, among them "Lone Battalion," a thriller of the present war. The features are being edited, and will be supplied with English sub-titles. He hopes a major distributor will accept at least one for distribution; and he thinks that, with our entrance into the war, and the United Nations spirit, it should go well, even as a curiosity piece.

Wants American Product

Mr. Lo pointed out that his company was not directly a Governmental organization. Its capital is still 50 per cent from private sources. In erecting the theatres, it hopes to obtain American product because the product from the much hampered Chinese film industry is patently insufficient for such a circuit.

He said last week he was discussing 16 mm rights with American distributors. Barring military reverses more severe than those which have occurred and which may be reasonably expected, the theatres should undergo construction by January 1st, he said.

The United States is practically the only source of both films and equipment, Mr. Lo noted. Russia, he remarked, manufactures only 35 mm equipment; and, currently, is preoccupied with manufacture of war materiel.

Mr. Lo is in America on one additional project: the production, jointly, with his company, of a Sino-American picture, the story for which he has brought to the attention of producers here. It is "Four Millions in Migration," by Sun Yu, a Chinese author and director.

Mr. Lo cited some statistics anent Chinese film making. Average production cost is approximately $8,000 to $16,000, one third of which is for film stock. These sums represent from 150,000 to 300,000 Chinese dollars. Four hundred Chinese dollars per month is now considered good pay for a Chinese film star. Mr. Lo noted this as a contrast to American films, in which stars' salaries constitute a large part of production costs.

Mr. Lo pointed out that before the war, the majority of Chinese studios were in Shanghai. Exceptions were the China Motion Picture Corporation, at Hankow; and the Central Film Studio, at Nanking. These cities, too, have been taken by the Japanese.

The two latter studios were allied with the Government, and produced army training films, and educational films for the masses. Shanghai was China's "Hollywood."

Chungking Center of Film Activity

The war brought writers, actors, technicians from Shanghai to Hankow and Nanking; it then brought all to Chungking. Mr. Lo paid tribute to those from Shanghai who, he remarked, gave up the "easy life" in that city's International Settlement to work under hardship for the national idea.

The film industry in Chungking is probably the only one underground, Mr. Lo thinks. It comprises two units. Shooting, printing and developing are done in rock caverns, safe from the biggest bombs.

One studio has a staff of 500, he said, adding that, while most filming is done underground, between bombing raids the companies move to the open air. This means, however, he pointed out, that when raids occur, all the equipment must be conveyed to dugouts.

Among the films made in Chungking's studios have been "Fight to the Last," "The Light of East Asia," "Secret Agent of Japan," "Under the White Clouds," "Roar China," "A Blood Stained City," "The Devil's Paradise," "Protect Our Country," "The Fatherland Calls," "The Light of East Asia," "Defend Our Homes," all of which have patriotic themes. Production includes newsreel coverage of the war on many fronts.

Mr. Lo, in addition to being vice-president of the China Motion Picture Corporation, is a delegate of the political department, Military Affairs Commission, Chinese National Government; technical director of his company, member of the Visual Education Committee, Ministry of Education; director, Grandland Motion Picture Corporation; member of the Committee of Technical Experts, National Educational Film Studio; president, Society of Chinese Motion Picture Engineers; and vice-chairman, Preparatory Committee for the Formation of the China National Film Corporation.

His office is at 44 Chun Yank Tung, Chungking.

MIDNIGHT SHOW BAN EXPECTED IN CANADA

Recent action of the Police Commission in Hamilton, Ont., in banning carnival and all midnight shows, is viewed by exhibitors as the first official move towards banning midnight shows throughout Canada. The police granted permission to hold New Year's Eve shows and possibly late performances before Labor Day and Victoria Day, but other Sunday or holiday shows were forbidden.

Observers believe that the move is under way to prohibit late performances as a war measure. It expected the action will be made Dominion-wide by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board when the Canadian power controller deals with illuminated signs and marquees in a drive for power conservation.

"Hidden Hunger" Opens

The two-reel film on nutrition, "Hidden Hunger," which was made for the Federal Security Agency, produced by the American Film Center in Hollywood and sponsored by Swift and Company, had its premiere last Saturday, June 13th, at the Little Carnegie Playhouse, New York. The picture features Walter Brennan in the principal role. Mr. Brennan was loaned to the FSA by Samuel Goldwyn. The film was written and directed by Joseph Krumgold and Henwar Rodakiewicz of Film Associates, Inc.

Camera Units to South America

Scientific Films, Inc., which produces short subjects for Paramount, has sent a camera unit to South America and one to Canada. Three films of a series for Paramount are: "Speaking of Animals," "Popular Science" and "Unusual Occupations." Jerry Fairbanks is president of Scientific. The South American unit will work with the Office of Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and will make a six-month tour of Latin-American countries, with James B. Shackleford heading the group.

Schine Manager in Army

John Wolfberg, city manager of Schine theatres in Lexington, Ky., has been accepted for training in the Volunteer Officers Corps of the Army and reports this week for duty in Cincinnati. Mr. Wolfberg, formerly on the publicity staff at Warner Bros. home office, is the son of Harris P. Wolfberg, district manager for MGM in Lexington.

Cast for "Cargo of Innocents"

Robert Taylor, Charles Laughton, Brian Donlevy and Walter Brennan have been cast by MGM for prominent roles in "Cargo of Innocents," according to a company announcement in Hollywood. The film will be made in cooperation with the U. S. Navy and will be directed by Robert Z. Leonard, with O. O. Dull as producer. Commander Harvey Haislip and R. C. Sheriff have written the story.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

By WILLIAM R. WEAVER, Hollywood Editor

From Equalization to Defense Unit

William G. Bonelli, director of the California State Board of Equalization, has been made a member of the governing board of the Amusement Industries Committee of the Los Angeles Defense Council.

Amusement Industries Committee is the expanded title of the Los Angeles Theatre Defense Bureau, organized by B. V. Sturdivant of the Fox West Coast circuit, who resigned a fortnight back, and proceeding now under temporary directorship of Rodney Pantages. Night clubs, bowling alleys and ballrooms have been grouped in this organization's province from the start.

Mr. Bonelli's Board of Equalization is the agency in charge of licensing business enterprises which dispense intoxicants.

Merle L. Templeton, chief officer of liquor control in Los Angeles County, has been named a member of the cabaret defense division of the AIC.

It is an untold story that some of the niteries were dilatory about fireproofing the premises.

Signal Corps Builds Technical Library

Gordon S. Mitchell, executive secretary of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has been appointed West Coast member of the Advisory Board of the Army Signal Corps.

Mr. Mitchell's assignment is the making of arrangements for obtaining and transmitting to the Signal Corps Library in Washington reference works on motion picture photography and allied matters, a work in which the Research Council of the Academy has been active on an informal basis before now. Communications engineering societies have been performing a similar service to the Corps.

The announcement of Mr. Mitchell's appointment, issued by the Chief Signal Officer, states, "The assistance of these outside agencies has made it possible for the Signal Corps to assemble a working library much more rapidly than would be the case if the acquisition of books were confined solely to the regular commercial channels, and also has made available back numbers of trade journals and technical books."

Among the Academy's possessions of pertinence is the most complete file of MOTION PICTURE HERALD and other Quigley Publications to be found elsewhere than in the home office of the periodicals.

Credits Cut for Conservation

The conversations about conservation narrowed down to facts and figures last week Thursday when the Film Conservation Committee, under chairmanship of M. C. Levee, put the scissors to that stretch of credit-listings between the main title of the motion picture and the picture proper.

Statistics compiled by the Committee indicate that this paring off of informative but not entertaining adjunct to product will save 10,000,000 feet of positive film per year.

Guild and crafts executives in attendance at the meeting of the Committee, of which all are members, forecast immediate and uniform acceptance of the dictum—it has the technical status of a recommendation—in the interests of conservation and for the period of the duration.

Due to contractual clauses which in some cases bind producers to the screening of credits—a circumstance of long standing which may explain much to exhibitors who have perhaps wondered why—it is necessary that guild and craft memberships okay the proceeding.

By way of simplifying that detail, and also because the Committee considers the exception warranted, the recommendation provides that credit titles will continue to be used in prints exhibited in the Hollywood and Los Angeles areas, both for general exhibition and for previews, for reasons which are local and professional.

Trailers also came in for shortening.

The program submitted by National Screen Service, under directions from its New York office, calls for a limit of 250 feet for trailers on super-A pictures, 200 feet for A pictures and 150 for B's. (Interjection to exhibitors: Don't tip this to the customers or they'll clock the trailers and find out which pictures are which.)

Trailers have varied considerably in length up to now, according to a National Screen Service spokesman, but this set of limitations is counted upon to effect a 30 per cent saving of footage.

"Rhythm" Rolls

Paramount started "Star Spangled Rhythm" rolling and before it's through just about everybody on the studio list of personalities will appear in front of the camera for stints ranging from specialty sequences to walk-throughs.

Technically, the principals in this undertaking are Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, Walter Abel and Gil Lamb, but what showman wants to be technical when the supporting cast of a picture includes names that mean money on the marquee?

Supporting players in this enterprise are such as Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Dorothy Lamour, Paulette Goddard, Veronica Lake, Mary Martin, Ray Milland, Fred MacMurray, Lynne Overman, Zorina, Dona Drake, Alan Ladd, Betty Rhodes, Marjorie Reynolds, Cecile B. DeMille, Preston Sturges, all of whom appear as themselves, plus Eddie (Rochester) Anderson and Katherine Dunham—with other namefolk being added to the cast daily.

MUSICIANS AGAIN DEMAND 'LIVE' MUSIC IN THE THEATRE

AFM Convention Kills Resolution for Union Member in Each Booth

The nation's 15,000-odd wired film theatres apparently were undisturbed last week by the thunderous demand from Dallas, Texas, that they dismiss their "canned music" and reemploy the thousands of musicians they dropped when talking motion pictures arrived.

The demand was from the American Federation of Musicians, which convened last week, and adopted 91 other resolutions, many of which also had relation to motion pictures.

A resolution demanding a "musician in every booth" was voted down by the 700 delegates.

Contract Requiring Seal Requested

The Federation's executive board was asked to secure from studios a contract which would compel each picture to undergo Federation inspection and bear its seal, and the words, "music approved."

The request to the board followed adoption of a resolution asserting that the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, and the Screen Writers Guild enjoyed such privileges. The resolution cited "The practice of piracy and dubbing in connection with vitaphone and moving picture production"; and it said Federation inspection would add to its prestige and aid it to enforce union standards.

The delegates also demanded reestablishment of WPA orchestras; and responsibility of booking agents for the salaries of bands they place.

Transcription Fee To Be Exacted

The convention decided that musicians playing for a broadcast, of which a recording is made, must be paid a transcription fee.

James Caesar Petrillo, reelected president, declared that after August 1st no members would be allowed to make recordings or transcriptions the effect of which would be to create musicians' unemployment.

A resolution requiring members to strike at functions attended by Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia was killed. Mr. Byrd's attack on WPA orchestras is resented. However, the AFM will "answer" him, it was decided, through statements and action by Mr. Petrillo.

Expense Money To Buy Bonds

Also rejected were a resolution requiring each delegate to buy a $50 war bond out of his $22 daily convention expense allowance; and a proposal to limit the autonomy of locals. This was regarded a move for continuance of "stand-by" pay enforced by locals. Locals' delegates contended limitation of autonomy might deprive them of the right to set their own wage scales and conditions.

Reelected in addition to Mr. Petrillo, were C. L. Bagley, vice-president; Harry Brenton, financial secretary; Fred Birnbach, secretary.

Next year's convention site will be decided by the executive committee. Only Jacksonville, Florida, bid.

Publicists Nominate Rosenfield President

In New York, Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., advertising copy director for Twentieth Century Fox, was nominated to replace Joseph Gould as president of the Screen Publicists Guild. Mr. Gould is in the Army. Elections will be July 9th.

The Guild last week protested Attorney General Francis Biddle's order deporting Harry Bridges, labor organizer.

It also complained that producers were using non-union printing plants for press books and other publicity matter.

Ballots which will indicate whether members wish to join the CIO, are to be returned by June 20th. The projected affiliation would be with the CIO's United Office and Professional Workers New York film union, the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109.

IATSE to Organize Theatre Ushers

The IATSE is renewing efforts to organize ushers in New York through locals B-183, legitimate theatres; B-171, Manhattan film theatres; B-170, Brooklyn; B-172, the Bronx. Richard Scott, B-183 president, is directing the drive.

Next Monday, employees of Columbia, Monogram, Paramount, Producers Releasing Corporation, RKO, United Artists, and Vitagraph exchanges in St. Louis, will decide whether they wish to be represented by the American Federation of Labor's Stenographers, Typists, Bookkeepers, and Assistants union, local 17,707. The election is under the National Labor Relations Board.

The Board last week authorized an election in the RKO circuit home office publicity department, New York.

Court Orders Owner To Observe Contract

David Dubin, operator of the Grand Central Newsreel Theatre, New York City, last week was ordered by the New York Supreme Court to observe provisions of a contract with Local 306, the city's projectionists' union, until September 1st, 1946. The court ruled Mr. Dubin had no basis for voiding the contract. Mr. Dubin asserted there was no signed contract.

For damages to his theatre, for the burning of 4,000 feet of film, and for stoppage of a show, Rudolph Navari, operator of the Liberty Theatre, Verona, Pennsylvania, is suing the territory's projectionists' union, Local 171. It was asserted a union member, John Adams, on New Year's Eve, tore burning film from a projector, tossed it into the rewind room, where it damaged the 4,000 feet; and that the film also burned a woman who was in the booth without the management's knowledge.

Aid Sought for Service Men

A committee of trade paper publishers has undertaken to sponsor a drive for equipment and furnishings for the recreation hall provided for the men stationed at the Army Signal Corps Photographic Center, recently established in the Paramount Long Island City studios. Contributions of cash or equipment are sought from the industry.

More than 300 men are stationed at the center. When the studios were remodeled for the Army Center, transferred from Fort Monmouth, N. J., provision was made for a recreation hall, but the equipment for it has not been provided. Most of the personnel at the Center were identified with the industry before entering the service.

The publishers' committee, including Martin Quigley, Abel Green, Red Kann, Jay Emanuel, Chick Lewis and Jack Alicoate, has volunteered its services to Lt. Col. Melvin E. Gillette.

Initial pledges of equipment and furnishings already have been received. Warners is contributing ping-pong tables, MGM a piano, National Screen Service radio-phonograph, and United Artists four lounge chairs. However, it was pointed out that recreational facilities for 300 men require a great deal more than that. Games of all sorts are sought, for example, as well as records for the phonograph. Another necessity is a well-rounded library of books, and the committee suggests technical books on the industry, as well as novels, adventure books, biographical works and late magazines of all sorts.

Additional chairs of the lounge and club variety are needed, as well as tables and pictures for the walls. Film companies, it is said, are contributing specially designed posters for decorative purposes.

The committee requests that contributions from the industry, in the form of cash or items of equipment or furnishing, be sent to the Signal Corps Photographic Center Recreational Fund in care of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Paramount Acquires "Decoy"

Paramount announced in Hollywood this week acquisition of "Decoy" a story of submarine warfare in the Atlantic written by James Edward Grant. Fred MacMurray and Alan Ladd will head the cast.

5 Cases, 2 Awards on Arbitration Docket

Indianapolis Clearances Ruled Fair; Reduction Granted in Buffalo

Five new cases, all involving clearance, and two awards marked an increased activity in arbitration this week.

At Indianapolis Harold Bredell, arbitrator, ruled that the existing clearances between four theatres catering to city's Negro patronage were fair. He dismissed part of the complaint, the city's third filed by S. S. Stephens, operator of the subsequent Regal theatre, granting a partial definition of clearance on the second part of the complaint.

Mr. Bredell found the 30-day margin held by the first run Negro Walker theatre and 14 days in favor of the Park theatre were reasonable. Under agreements for the Regal to show pictures ahead of the Lido theatre he specified 14 days as a reasonable maximum, and said that one day should be the maximum clearance granted the Lido on pictures which it showed ahead of the Regal. Mr. Stephens had asked a 30-day margin over the Lido.

All of the Negro theatres are competitive for a limited clientele, Mr. Bredell found. He said that the variance in accommodations, prices, revenue to distributors and operation of the four theatres justified the maintenance of clearance margins which have been in existence from 13 to three years.

Filing costs were charged against each party and the complainant assessed arbitrator's fees. All five distributors were involved.

At Buffalo, Louis B. Dorr, arbitrator in the twelfth case reduced the clearance held over M. M. Konczakowski's Regent theatre by the Basil Brothers New Ariel from seven to three days on all films licensed by RKO, MGM and 20th Century-Fox.

A stipulation signed by all parties also set a three-day maximum clearance for the Apollo theatre over the Regent. The intervening Apollo is also operated by Basil Brothers. Costs were divided.

Boston

Boston's 12th case, a clearance action, was filed Thursday, June 11th, by Currie and Harmon, Inc., operators of the Darlton theatre in Pawtucket, R. I. All five consenting distributors were cited and 20 Pawtucket and Providence first run and subsequent houses named as interested parties.

The complaint charged that on MGM, Paramount and RKO pictures the Darlton must wait an unreasonable 30 days after the first run Strand in Pawtucket. On Warner and 20th-Fox product the Darlton complains against a 30-day margin granted the Le Roy in Pawtucket.

The demand seeks a maximum of seven days after first run Pawtucket and Providence theatres and requests a stipulation that pictures be made available not later than 30 days after the close of Providence first run.

Theatres named in Providence are the first run Loew State, Majestic, Strand, RKO-Albee, Fays and Carlton and the subsequent run Empire, Park, Palace, Liberty, Hollywood, Castle, Community and Avon. In Pawtucket the first run Leroy, Strand and Hope and subsequent Fairlawn, Capitol, Broadway and Lafayette theatres were cited.

Philadelphia

Joseph Engel, operating the Plains theatre in Plains, Pa., has filed a 19th case in the Philadelphia tribunal against Loew's, Paramount, and Warners. He charges arbitrary delays by prior runs and asks elimination of the clearance of the Parsons theatre and 28 days maximum clearance behind Wilkes-Barre. Philadelphia's 17th case, a similar action by Mr. Engels, was filed in January and withdrawn in April.

New York

At New York on Thursday Rhinehook Theatres, Inc., filed the city's 38th and 39th cases, clearance actions against All Five for the Star theatre, Rhinebeck, N. Y., and the Lyceum in Red Hook, N. Y.

Naming the Bardavon and Stratford theatres in Poughkeepsie, the Star asserted that their first run margin of 14 days was unreasonable. It asked a reduction to one day with a proviso protecting the Rhinebeck theatre against booking delays.

The complaint for the Lyceum was divided into five parts. It charged that (a) MGM licensed pictures 14 days after first run Poughkeepsie and one day after first run Hudson with a provision that if pictures are not dated by Hudson within 30 days of availability the clearance is waived; (b) clearance on Paramount product is 14 days after Poughkeepsie; (c) RKO grants 14 days to both Poughkeepsie and Hudson first runs; (d) it plays 20th-Fox 14 days after Poughkeepsie and immediately after Hudson with clearance waived if Hudson does not book within 30 days; and (e) Warners grant 14 days to Poughkeepsie and one to Hudson.

The Lyceum asks elimination of all the Hudson clearances and a cut of Poughkeepsie margins to one day. It also asks continuance of protection against Hudson booking delays. The Community, Warner and Star theatres, Hudson, and the Bardavon and Stratford in Poughkeepsie were cited.

Chicago

Reopening of the Freeport theatre, Freeport, Ill., clearance case at Chicago has been postponed until June 23rd. Arbitrator Arthur J. Goldberg is out of town.

Declarations of intervention have been filed in the Palace theatre, Gary, Ind., case by Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., in behalf of their Parthenon, Paramount and Orpheum theatres, Hammond, Ind., and by the Federal Theatre Corporation, a Warner subsidiary, operating the Capitol and Avalon theatres, Chicago. These theatres, while not named in the second complaint filed by the Gary theatre, would be affected by an award.

Two distributors have also filed lists of theatres whose business might be affected by a favorable award in the Palace Theatre, Gary, Ind., clearance case.

Paramount Pictures, Inc., named the Parthenon, Orpheum, Hohman, Rio and Calumet theatres, Hammond, Ind.; the State and Roseland, Palace and Piccadilly theatres, Chicago; two Balaban & Katz Southside houses, the Tower and Regal, and the circuit's six Loop theatres, the Chicago, United Artists, Apollo, Garrick, Roosevelt and State-Lake theatres.

20th Century-Fox listed Balaban & Katz' Tivoli and Southtown, Chicago; Warners' Capitol and Avalon, Chicago; the Grand and Lyric, Blue Island, Ill.; the Lincoln, Dixie and Rex, Chicago Heights, Ill.; State, Gary, Ind., and the Indiana-Illinois circuit's Hoosier and Capitol, Whiting, Ind.; Vogue and Forsythe, East Chicago, Ind., and Indiana Theatre, Indiana Harbor, Ind.

An intervention in the Gary case has been filed by G. G. Shauer & Sons, operating the Premier and Lincoln theatres, Valparaiso, Ind.

The Oriental Theatre case has been postponed again by request of the complainant. New date set is June 30th.

Los Angeles

John F. McCarthy, an attorney, is arbitrator of the 9th Los Angeles case, clearance and specific run action by the Monterey theatre, Los Angeles.

Richard T. Davis has been named secretary of the Appeal Board at New York to succeed Francis Swayze, who has entered the U. S. Army. Mr. Davis is a recent graduate of Harvard Law School.

J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the American Arbitration Association, and James J. Murphy, his assistant in charge of the administration of the motion picture arbitration tribunals, left this week on inspection visits to all tribunals. Mr. Braden will visit southern and midwestern cities while Mr. Murphy is checking Pacific Coast and western operations.

Jane Withers On Tour

Jane Withers left Hollywood on Monday for Philadelphia where she began a week of personal appearances at the Earl theatre. Following that engagement she was scheduled at the Stanley, Pittsburgh, for one week. She will vacation for a week in New York before returning to the West Coast.

Buying, Booking Service For Exhibitors in West

To the Editor of the Herald:

Upon reading the article "War, Decree Give Impetus to Co-operative Buying" in your issue of June 6th, we were disappointed that no mention was made of Exhibitors' Service, Inc., of Los Angeles, serving exhibitors in Southern California, Arizona and Nevada for the past six years, buying and booking for 40 theatres at the present time.

Our organization is not a "co-operative" organization in the strict sense because we operate on a fee basis. However, the exhibitors we represent are of necessity benefitted by our combined ability to buy and book. We buy film for twelve theatres on an individual basis and advise with the remainder. Besides booking, we pay film bills and other items for a considerable number of the accounts, buy advertising, equipment and supplies, place program copy with printers, write program copy, special heralds, etc., for some accounts, and in addition furnish such incidental services as notifying film delivery services of bookings, place ad copy in the various newspapers, etc.

This service was started in June, 1936, by Harry L. Rackin, simultaneously with the building of his Franklin Theatre in the Highland Park district of Los Angeles, which theatre he later sold to Max and Kurt Laemmle. Prior to this undertaking, Mr. Rackin was for six and one-half years assistant to Mike Rosenberg of Principal Theatres, a Fox West Coast partnership operating 20 theatres in California and Arizona. In August, 1941, Mr. Rackin resigned the presidency of Exhibitors' Service, Inc., to become general manager of Lou Metzger's Spreckels Theatre in San Diego and the Metzger-Srere Theatres in San Diego and Pasadena.

The business of Exhibitors' Service, Inc., has since been successfully carried on by Roy Dickson, president and buyer; James Rackin, vice-president; J. L. Stephens, booker; J. N. Finkler, booker, and two young lady office assistants.

BED TIME STORY: Loretta Young, Fredric March—A real good picture but for some reason did not do business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

GO WEST, YOUNG LADY: Penny Singleton, Glenn Ford—Played this with "Joe Smith, American" to a better crowd than I expected since college is closed. During the summer, if we do not go into the red, we consider it good. There actually was a small profit this time so they must have liked it. This film is a comedy western full of action and music. It should go over well with any crowd. Some were quite enthusiastic about it. Played June 4-5.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

ROYAL MOUNTED PATROL: Charles Starrett, Russell Hayden—This one pleased our western fans. Had plenty of action and laughs. Running time, 59 minutes. Played May 29-30.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

ROYAL MOUNTED PATROL: Charles Starrett, Russell Hayden—Nice picture for dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.. Can.

SHUT MY BIG MOUTH: Joe E. Brown, Adele Mara—A very fine Joe Brown picture. Well received. —Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont.. Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Played this late and did a fair business on it. It's still a good show. Running time, 118 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BABES ON BROADWAY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland—Good picture that drew better than average business, but not so good as the two previous Sunday programs. Seems like there is just too much Rooney in this picture. He needs another "Young Tom Edison" to break the monotony of his clowning. Played May 31-June 2.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—Good little picture which pleased on family night. Running time, 118 minutes. Played June 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—A good picture but not nearly as good as the reviews would lead you to believe. Our business was off both nights even with a good sized cash prize. Gave us the lowest Friday-Saturday receipts of the year. Played May 22-23.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

JOE SMITH, AMERICAN: Robert Young, Marsha Hunt—Even though college was closed, we ran this with "Go West, Young Lady" to a good turnout. It is a nice drama with patriotism brought in nicely. It held interest throughout and the cast did a good job. Should be played up especially near war industries. Played June 4-5.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner—A swell picture to big business. Running time, 107 minutes. Played May 10-11.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash.

LADY BE GOOD: Ann Sothern, Robert Young—A very smart musical enjoyed by all of my patrons, especially the negro dancers, elaborate sets, and good tunes. Good entertainment; would recommend this one for any point. Running time, 100 minutes. Played May 30.—A. L. Dove, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good jungle show which pleased the kids on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 81 minutes. Played May 22-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre. Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BUY ME THAT TOWN: Lloyd Nolan, Constance Moore--Very good picture. Lloyd Nolan is very popular here. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 6-7.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

LADY HAS PLANS, THE: Paulette Goddard, Ray Milland—Just a program picture which failed to draw average business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PACIFIC BLACKOUT: Robert Preston, Martha O'Driscoll—General comments were good and we had no complaints. Did considerably better than "Joe Smith, American" the previous week, same days. Martha O'Driscoll drew praise from our patrons. Hope to see more of her. Played May 29-30.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

PACIFIC BLACKOUT: Robert Preston, Martha O'Driscoll—Nice picture played on weekend to satisfactory business.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

REMARKABLE ANDREW, THE: William Holden, Ellen Drew—Box office flop for me. Played May 27-28.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn.

SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS: John Wayne, Betty Field, Harry Carey—After this had been shown by a traveling circuit all around my territory there was not much gravy left in it. Not the same story as the old production. My print was very poor and sound very spotty. Outdoor scenery good where it could be seen between the scratches. Very disappointed in this one. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 4.—A. L. Dove, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Rural and small town patronage.

SULLIVAN'S TRAVELS: Joel McCrea, Veronica Lake—Bad weather kept the attendance down to a lower level than we anticipated. The feature was spotty, ranging from good to indifferent. McCrea, while not classed as a top ranking box office attraction, performed creditably. As yet we have not been able to determine just whom Miss Lake appeals to. Running time, 91 minutes. Played May 24-25.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE, THE: Sylvia Sidney, Henry Fonda, Fred MacMurray—A fine color picture that we brought back with no regrets.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Republic

IN OLD CALIFORNIA: John Wayne, Binnie Barnes—Republic can be proud of this super western. It's good enough and long enough for Sunday date. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 5-6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM CHEYENNE: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—A typical Rogers western. Well received.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—Well received. Played against "How Green Was My Valley" and feel satisfied we got our share.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can.

RKO Radio

BALL OF FIRE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck—A natural for a college town, this one gets plenty of laughs and we managed to show it to quite a good sized crowd. Barbara Stanwyck does an extra good job of her part and altogether it should please anywhere. Running time, 111 minutes. Played May 26-27.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

FANTASIA: Disney, Stokowski—Even though it has been shortened for general use, this remains a real masterpiece of cartooning. I always do well with Disney features and this one was no exception. However, it has more limited appeal than the others and the college students were already leaving for home so business was not up to the others. The picture is still very, very good. Perhaps some of you will not do too well with this picture because of its class appeal but give me more like it. It is definitely not for young children. Played 81 minutes. Played May 28-29.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY: Roddy McDowall, Walter Pidgeon—One of the best pictures ever made. Drawing power limited. Running time, 118 minutes. Played May 28-29.—Abe Berenson, Hollywood Theatre, Gretna, La. Industrial, neighborhood patronage.

LONE STAR RANGER: John Kimbrough, Sheila Ryan—A fair western, though not in it with Cassidy or Autry.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE: George Montgomery, Mary Howard—Good western. Better than average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 3-4.—E. L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn.

RISE AND SHINE: Jack Oakie, Walter Brennan, Linda Darnell—Very, very funny. Our sympathy is extended to both Oakie and Brennan, but particularly to the latter as he was never before to our knowledge called upon to waste his splendid ability. Running time, 92 minutes. Played May 27-28.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

ROXIE HART: Ginger Rogers, George Montgomery, Adolphe Menjou.—Died with this one and don't know why. I personally thought it was a good show. Running time, 74 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—E L. Danielson, Castle Theatre, Mabel, Minn.

SONG OF THE ISLANDS: Betty Grable, Victor Mature—Very good musical in color. Did extra business and pleased all. Played May 24-26.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

YANK IN THE R.A.F.: Tyrone Power, Betty Grable—Good picture and it sure brought in the business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played May 8-9.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

United Artists

CORSICAN BROTHERS: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Akim Tamiroff—Good production. Did not produce at box office. Running time, 111 minutes. Played May 7-8.—Abe Berenson, Hollywood Theatre, Gretna, La. Industrial, neighborhood patronage.

Universal

HELLZAPOPPIN: Olsen & Johnson, Martha Raye—Fairly good but we do more business on Abbott and Costello. Running time, 84 minutes. Played May 3-4.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill worker patronage.

HELLZAPOPPIN: Olsen & Johnson, Martha Raye—Nice business but nothing to brag about.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

PARIS CALLING: Randolph Scott, Elisabeth Bergner—A real good picture. Give it the works.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

SOUTH OF TAHITI: Brian Donlevy, Brod Crawford—A real good program picture, well received. Could have been a big picture with stronger cast.—Harland Rankin, Centre Theatre, Chatham, Ont., Can. General patronage.

Warner Bros.-First National

BLUES IN THE NIGHT: Priscilla Lane, Richard Whorf—A sleeper. 100% entertainment. Advertise "My Mama Done Tole Me" especially if you have any Negro patronage. Running time, 88 minutes. Played April 19.—Abe Berenson, Hollywood Theatre, Gretna, La. Industrial, neighborhood patronage.

LAW OF THE TROPICS: Jeffrey Lynn, Constance Bennett—Fair "B" picture. Good for small town double feature only. Running time, 76 minutes. Played May 29-30.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

ONE FOOT IN HEAVEN: Fredric March, Martha Scott—This report comes from an old timer of many years experience. We need more pictures like "One Foot in Heaven." This picture will stand all you put behind it. I played it to extra business without a word of criticism. Pleased 100%. This is the first report I have sent in since 1928. Played May 30-June 1.—Roy E. Mitchell, Wallace Theatre, Andrews, Tex. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE IN THE ARMY NOW: Jimmy Durante, Jane Wyman—Slapstick comedy. Very funny. Great for kids and those who are looking for relaxation. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 24.—Abe Berenson, Hollywood Theatre, Gretna, La. Industrial, neighborhood patronage.

U.A. May Release Two From Rabinovitsch

United Artists may distribute two productions which Gregor Rabinovitsch plans to remake in Hollywood, it was learned in New York this week. Mr. Rabinovitsch will remake two French productions which he did several years ago, if the players being sought are available. The producer is now in Hollywood where he is trying to obtain the desired casts. UA has reserved the right to approve the casts before concluding distribution arrangements, it was reported.

Altec Signs 53 Houses In Los Angeles Area

Altec Service Corp. announced this week the expansion of its activities to the servicing of the 53 theatres, in Los Angeles and vicinity, formerly under the supervision of the Sound Maintenance Company. R. D. Barry, of the latter company, has been appointed to act as special representative for Altec in that area.

Ice Show Record in Seattle

One of the largest grosses ever registered by an indoor amusement attraction in the history of Seattle was recorded last month by the Ice Follies of 1942, in its 17-day engagement at the Civic Ice Arena. Playing one engagement daily at a top of $2.30, the show played to 82,500 paid admissions with a net take of approximately $123,000, not including $15,000 in federal and $7,500 in state taxes. Net receipts from one performance totaling approximately $7,000, were donated to the Navy Relief Fund. Local promoters of the engagement were Fred Hixen, manager of the Ice Arena, and Al Wilson, treasurer of the Metropolitan theatre.

What you do now, to forestall waste of war-irreplaceable materials in the projection room, is crucial to our National Defense Program. Altec's seasoned experience, and scientific knowledge, will bring to your theatre priceless weapons to give confidence that you are following a constructive program of conservation.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

HATS OFF

Some years ago it was said of a well known theatre circuit that to join it was to see the world. Its managers were transferred with a rapidity that kept their families continually a jump behind them. It was the custom for these men to come to the theatre from their hotels and open all the mail from the home office before removing their hats; it saved them the trouble of putting them on again when they went to make arrangements for moving.

But today a new era has not only dawned but is definitely a part of most theatre circuits' operating policies. Today, it is considered better for a man to remain at his post long enough so that he can become reasonably acquainted with his city and its people and that they in turn may come to know him. Of course, this policy is not intended to keep a man from advancing; given a reasonable chance to prove his ability in a small town, it is still possible for a man to advance to a larger theatre in a larger city.

Sometimes it's called decentralization, sometimes it has some other name; but whatever it's called, it's a far better shake for the theatre manager and his staff.

Those bygone days were productive of many an amusing anecdote; there's the one of the manager's little girl who asked her mother, "Who's that man, mommy? Every time we move I see him." There's also the experience of another man, probably often duplicated, who was beginning to feel secure after three months in a Texas city; one day a letter arrived almost at the same time as his successor, transferring him to one of the colder New England states. He left on schedule but spent several days draped in a blanket while his overcoats and heavy clothes were unearthed from the city where he had been three or four jobs ago.

A healthier condition prevails today. Instead of having a rack of timetables on his desk, today's manager can really plan next week's programs, relatively sure that he will still have the job then.

The theatres are the better for today's policy. Their physical condition is constantly under the manager's surveillance. This applies, too, to staffs which formerly got along as best they could with a manager knowing that a few months hence they'd have to unlearn his pet ideas and acquire those of others.

So today it's hats off for the theatre managers when they come to work and hats off to the circuit heads who let them do it.

Strangers to our business are frequently heard to remark, "That theatreman must certainly be coining money. There's always a line in front of his house."

There's no objection to such a remark but in times like these perhaps it is well for us to point out to the public the great measure of public service we perform without fanfare and without gain or credit.

A fine method for doing this has been found by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, whose cooperative ad headed, "The Movies Enlist," was reprinted in these pages last week. We are but echoing the sentiments of the recent Eastern Regional Conference of Independent Exhibitors in expressing the hope that other exhibitor organizations might do likewise.

REAL COOPERATION

Elsewhere in this issue is a detailed account of how the theatres in Greater Little Rock, Arkansas, cooperated in the War Bond Drive. This is an indication of the extent to which the showmen of the country will go to aid the war effort. The example of these fifteen theatres can be emulated elsewhere.

That the showmen of the country are practicing their craft for the furtherance of the war effort is amply demonstrated in the Round Table pages each week. War showmanship is as much in evidence as showmanship applied to the motion picture.

War showmanship is coming to the fore in other ways, too. For example, Paul Woods, manager of the Princess and Gem Theatres in Beardstown, Illinois, knowing that the boys in the service avidly read their home town newspapers, has obtained the birth date of every man from Beardstown with the forces. He greets them on their natal days in his theatre advertising. So even though they can't attend his shows, Beardstown's soldiers and sailors still read the theatre ads.

War showmanship is more than a patriotic duty, moreover. It is naturally easy to enlist the cooperation of the newspaper or merchants or any organization when the object is to sell War Stamps and Bonds. But a spirit—perhaps even a habit—of cooperation has been started by this means which can continue and spread to the commercial activities of the theatre, the newspaper and the merchants.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

BROADWAY (Universal): Having to do with gangster life of the speakeasy days, anything bearing the word "speakeasy" will put over the locale and period. For instance, a speakeasy door can be erected in the lobby complete with peephole, just as in the Twenties; a look inside shows a selection of scenes from the picture. The same idea can be put into an empty store window to attract attention. The title, "Broadway", can be plugged by asking restaurant proprietors, for example, to include a Broadway Special each day; another stunt would be to have a girl attired in showgirl regalia walk about bearing a sign, "Ask me about 'Broadway' at the Blank Theatre". Depending on the distance your theatre is from New York and Broadway, you can do one of two things the more readily: If you are far away, run an essay contest on "My Trip to Broadway". If near enough, a trip to New York, with a look at Broadway in war time, could be awarded as a prize in a contest. There's a contest suggested by the press book which calls for smart Broadway wisecracks.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES (United Artists): All selling of this picture has been along the comedy line before its release, and the subject matter indicates that to be the best line to pursue. Funny lines can be asked for in a pictorial contest to be inserted in your newspaper or program. Essay contests are suggested with "Loyalty" as a theme, for example, since the story deals with the fealty of a German-American to the United States during the last war. Another suggested contest calls for "Ten reasons why this war must be fought to a complete finish and complete victory". This is to point out that in this war there are no friendly enemies. There's somewhat of an "Abie's Irish Rose" angle in the courting of the daughter of one of the enemies by the son of the other. This can be exploited in the same old ways as used for the Montagues and the Capulets and all the plays since.

Chain Fun Letter Used By Longo for "Rio Rita"

One of the highlights of Joe Longo's camapign for "Rio Rita" at Loew's State, in Boston was a chain fun letter which was sent to about 1,000 professional men. The letter opened with a gag and asked the reader to write to five friends and then send a carbon copy of their letter to the theatre so that the gags could be compiled into a book and turned over to the service camps.

Promoting peanuts, they were inserted in imprinted envelopes and distributed in downtown area by an Abbott & Costello team. The same duo in costume rode around town on a bannered tanden bike, and a three day serialization was run in one of the dailies, complete with picture, theatre and playdate credits.

Anthony's Cooking Class

Through the cooperation of the local paper and sponsored by the municipal light company, Bob Anthony at Schine's Piqua, in Piqua, Ohio, recently conducted a three-week "Cooking for Victory" class on his stage. The paper came through with large ads and Bob promoted local merchants for prizes, which were also awarded.

Screening in Mayor's Office

Elmer Pickard, manager of Warners' Fox Theatre, Philadelphia, arranged a special screening of "Winning Your Wings" in the Mayor's reception room in City Hall. Officers and men of the Philadelphia recruiting and induction district attended.

Sanders' Homemade Display

Ingenious was the lobby display conceived and executed by J. A. Sanders ahead of "Ride Em Cowboy at the Colonial, in Junction City, Kans. Built from a saw horse with a broom stub for its tail, the head was made up like a gallon bucket. For its feet, Johnny used old shoes which attracted the anticipated attention. On the horse was an airbrush painting of Abbott & Costello in riding posture.

"Bick's" Atmospheric Effect

Reported to have created plenty of attention was Frank Bickerstaff's atmospheric lobby display ahead and during the run of "Jungle Book" at the L & J Palace Theatre, in Athens, Ga. Promoting mounted alligators, snake and other animals, "Bick" planted these in his lobby together with cutouts of the Wolf Boy.

Blumberg's "Hardy" Lobby

For "Courtship of Andy Hardy," Irving Blumberg, manager of Warners' Midway Theatre, Philadelphia, created a special lobby display of Mickey Rooney photos carrying through his theatrical career practically all of his 21 years.

National Want Ad Week

During the recent National Want Ad Week, Maurice Crew at the Strand, in Waterloo, Ia., secured free theatre ads for seven consecutive days through his offer of guest tickets to those placing seven-time paid in advance ads in the paper.

Rosenthal Gives Nuggets Ahead of "Gold Rush"

Several thousand pay envelopes containing small pebbles coated with gold paint were distributed on the streets of Bridgeport as an advance for Round Tabler Morris Rosenthal's date on "The Gold Rush" at Loew's Poli Majestic Theatre. Copy on the outside read: "Here's your gold Pardner. Spend it to see the world's greatest laughing picture. Charlie Chaplin in 'The Gold Rush' with words and music."

The entire staff ahead and during the run wore Chaplin derbies with appropriate tiein copy and for juvenile attention, Rosey distributed imprinted paper hats to the kids to wear on the streets. Through the cooperation of a local store selling artists' supplies, Morris planted a coloring contest. 5000 blanks were printed up and distributed to art classes and high school students as well as junior classes. The merchant came through with 28 prizes for giveaway to the best coloring jobs and also displayed the entries in his window. For his newspaper coverage, Rosenthal secured a special feature story built around Chaplin with a two-column art break the day before opening.

Friedman's "Wolf" Show

For his double horror show "The Wolf Man" and "The Mad Doctor of Market Street," Bud Friedman at the Warner Etna, in Etna, Pa., had a ballyhoo man tour the downtown streets wearing a "wolf" head and back banner with appropriate copy. Friedman further tied up with the local Wolf's Head motor oil agency for a giveaway of a drum of oil. This was advertised by the company and theatre. Gag lobby display featured spirits of ammonia for those who couldn't take it, etc.

Pival's "Smasher" Opening

To introduce his Republic serial "Spy Smasher" at the State, Detroit, John Pival ran a lucky number contest on the opening day with passes to three winners for a free speed boat ride on Lake St. Clair. In addition, Pival distributed colored portraits of "Spy Smasher," Victory Battalion cards and buttons and Whiz Comic books.

Fitzsimmons' "Butch" Lobby

At the Schine Temple Theatre, in Cortland, N. Y., Bill Fitzsimmons went to town for "Butch Minds the Baby" with some clever advertising. Five large white diapers were hung in the lobby and on each was painted a word of the title. On the fifth one, Bill printed the playdates, all of them were suspended from a clothes line for realistic effect.

Myer's "Row" Street Bally

Ray Myer, manager of Warners' 69th St. Theatre, Philadelphia, sent a pretty girl around the neighborhood's shopping district reading a giant-sized copy of "Kings Row," as a bally for the picture.

Neilson's Dancing Contest

A radio contest, asking listeners to send in lists of former Norma Shearer productions, was a highlight of the "We Were Dancing" promotion put over by R. Neilson, State, Johnston, Pa.

City's Theatres Cooperate

The fifteen theatres in Greater Little Rock, Arkansas, banded together in the first city-wide promotion of its kind, to put over the War Stamp and Bond Drive. The drive started on the same day as the national campaign (but it will be remembered that May 30th is of no significance in Arkansas). A committee was formed of the local theatremen and they bent their common efforts toward the single goal—to sell War Bonds and Stamps. That they were successful goes without saying; the measure of their success can be read in the fact that in the first two days alone they sold $13,927.60 worth of Stamps and Bonds. The committee, headed by M. S. McCord of Malco Theatres, state chairman, consisted of John Rowley, city manager of the Robb & Rowley Theatres; M. J. Pruniski, Malco Theatres, and Claude C. Mundo, Rex and Liberty Theatres. The publicity committee consisted of Robin Wightman, Robb & Rowley; Herod Jimerson, Rex and Liberty Theatres; Sam Kirby, Malco Theatres. The complete program follows:

Newspapers

Excellent cooperation was obtained from the morning Gazette and the evening Democrat. A slogan contest ran in both papers, with a $25 War Bond awarded to the writer of the best slogan for the theatres' campaign. A total of 182 column inches of free space was obtained. In addition, weekly papers cooperated fully, including the Camp Robinson News, with stories about the troops' participation in the parade.

Radio Stations

All three radio stations gave three five-minute periods a day for a week in advance, during which listeners were told about theatre participation in the sale of Bonds and Stamps.

Organizations

The state department of the American Legion, through the Committee on Americanism, helped stage the parade. Arthur Frankel, chairman of the Legion committee, served as Grand Marshal of the parade. Other organizations participating were: H. M. Eberts and Gordon Gale Posts of the American Legion; Little Rock and North Little Rock posts, Veterans of Foreign Wars; both posts of Spanish-American War Veterans; Civil Air Patrol and auxiliary; four USO clubs; Pulaski County chapters, American Red Cross; Salvation Army; Boy Scouts; Boys Clubs of both cities; American Legion Auxiliary; Central Trades and Labor Council; North Little Rock High School Band.

Governor's Proclamation

Governor Homer M. Adkins proclaimed Saturday, May 30th, as "Movie Stamp and Bond Day" in Arkansas. He also wrote a letter to General Francis B. Mallon, commander of Camp Joseph T. Robinson, requesting him to furnish troops for the parade.

Army Cooperation

General Mallon detailed Col. Samuel White, commander of the Second Army Field Forces, to participate in the parade. Fifteen officers and 350 combat troops in full field equipment, together with the 45-piece band from the Training Center, an Army color guard, field ambulances and troop carriers marched down the main street. Jeep cars from the 162nd Signal Photographic Company ran up and down the line of march making still and motion pictures of the parade.

The Parade

The parade was one of the largest ever held in the twin cities of Little Rock and North Little Rock. It was eight and a half blocks long. Its theme, "Buy Bonds and Stamps Now", was carried out by placards urging their purchase at Little Rock theatres. The Malco pick-up truck was converted into a float with public address system using only the recordings of "Any Bonds Today" and "We've Got to Slap the Dirty Little Jap". A sign said: "Buy a Stamp in Memory of Carole Lombard".

All 15 theatres cooperated in decorating a float mounted on a 24-foot trailer. On this float, carrying out a decorative scheme of red, white and blue, was mounted the latest type Simplex Projector, complete with sound head and high intensity lamp houses, as well as a screen on which was lettered: "Now you can buy U. S. War Stamps and Bonds at your favorite theatre, day or night, Sundays and holidays". A dozen of the new chairs to be installed in the Arkansas Theatre were mounted and 12 pretty girls occupied them.

Booth at Main Corner

A throwing game was installed at Little Rock's busiest corner. Balls were sold for a 10-cent Stamp or three for a 25-cent Stamp, giving each purchaser the right to throw them at pictures of the three Axis leaders. More than $60 worth of Stamps was sold at this booth alone.

Individual Theatre Work

Each of the 15 theatres has an identical booth from which War Stamps and Bonds are sold. Posters from the Treasury Department are utilized. Booths are manned by girls from various organizations.

All theatres held staff meetings in advance of the opening day of the drive to tell their employees the purpose of the campaign and they were told to contact their families, friends and relatives to purchase Stamps and Bonds.

Posters

The Little Rock Advertising & Posting Company supplied the committee with six 24-sheets, with the flag and copy: "We Can! We Will! We Must!" They were sniped with copy stating that War Bonds and Stamps were available at theatres.

A military band led the parade in Little Rock, Ark., on May 30th which inaugurated the War Stamp and Bond Drive. Fifteen theatres cooperated in arranging the campaign.

DOUBLE "V" CAMPAIGN SELLS

Varied Ideas Sell "Vanishing Virginian"

The two "V's" in the title, "Vanishing Virginian" intrigued many showmen, but their use of this twist varied widely. Here are some of the ideas used.

Tacked around the city on telephone poles by John Makemson of Schine's Van Wert, in Van Wert, Ohio, ahead of "Vanishing Virginian" were teaser cards bearing copy reading: "If V Stands for Victory, What Does VV Stand For?" The same copy was used on the barricade of an empty building lot, while the house artist made up a special 40 by 60 using lead copy: "What is a Sleeper? It is a picture that has no great stars or name, but which is so outstanding we feel we must endorse it ourselves." This was followed with show selling copy and planted in a main street window.

As a follow up, telephone hangers for public phones were used with copy: "You know that V stands for Victory, Now phone 3001 and find out what VV stands for."

In Philadelphia, Manager Joe Nevison and his assistant, Jo Oppenheim, tied up with the Victory Book campaign by promoting 10 copies of the book from the publisher and 10 letters from Frank Morgan as prizes for the largest contributions of books to the fund. The cooperation of the daily and weekly papers, plus the library, highschool library and paper were sought in this connection.

As an extra attention-getter, Bill Johnson at Smalley's Theatre in Dolgeville, N. Y., sniped teaser copy across the front of his house programs put out in advance of the regular advertising on the picture. The copy read: "By the Holy Henfish," cried Cap'n Yancey, "they won't get away with it! And off he went to battle the forces of evil. Don't fail to see'", etc.

Jack Thomas, at the Ritz, in Russellville, Ark., held a special screening for members of the bar association, presidents of the PTA, State Administrator of the N.Y.A. and other influential church workers. Comment cards were distributed and later used for endorsement ads.

Guest tickets were awarded to radio listeners submitting the largest lists of famous Virginians as part of the "Vanishing Virginian" campaign executed by Robert Wanamaker, Liberty, Sharon, Pa.

Graver's "Dumbo" Tieup

J. M. Graver, of Warner's Grove, Willow Grove, Pa., sold "Dumbo" with a tie-up of all local schools. He arranged with school heads to dismiss children early to see the film. The announcement was also listed on bulletin boards and made in all classrooms. Graver was also successful in planting a program on the bulletin board of the aeronautical plant in town.

Identification Contest

As part of his publicity on "Road to Happiness" at the Malco Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., J. R. MacEachron ran an identification contest in his local daily which included stills of John Boles with various leading ladies from his different pictures. To those properly listing the set of five, guest tickets were awarded.

Merrick Inaugurates Newsreel Contest

Duff Merrick at the City Newsreel Theatre, in New York City, has launched a contest in which patrons owning motion picture cameras are invited to participate in a weekly competition for the best newsreel subject filmed by an amateur.

A contest committee will pass on the merit of the submitted material and cash prizes will be awarded to the winners. Winning subjects will receive playing time for a week at the theatre and the work of potential newsreel photographers will be brought to the attention of the various newsreel executives, who will also sit on the judging board.

Cohn's Street Ballyhoo

A 1919 Model T Car was used by Ben Cohn at the Hamilton, in Chicago as part of the Memorial Day parade to open the sale of Defense Stamps and Bonds. The car with was driven about town with a plug for "Johnny Eager" and "Look Who's Laughing" was commandeered by a Legionnaire and then parked in front of the theatre.

Horton's Novelty Herald

Novelty herald giveaway as featured by Farol Horton for his date on "One Foot in Heaven" at the Lafayette Theatre in Lafayette, Ala., consisted of a 10-inch or one-foot ruler printed in red on white cardboard and carrying title, cast and playdates. Farol distributed these at local schools, clubs, restaurants and hotels.

Lobby Recruiting Depots Aid Members on "Tripoli"

To usher in his date on "Shores of Tripoli" at the Loew Poli, in Hartford, Conn., Lou Cohen stationed a recruiting station in his lobby with two men in constant attendance. The booth was appropriately decorated with Marine posters. One of the highlights of Cohen's campaign was the proclamation of the Mayor of Marine Recruiting Week to coincide with the playdates. The cooperating daily newspaper ran a two column cut of the proclamation.

In Harlan, Ky., Leon B. Scott at the Margie Grand also featured a recruiting booth, which featured medals, uniforms and Marine advertising material. For the entire run, the house staff wore lapel badges and Marine insignia, while the front was decorated with red, white and blue pennants.

To open his premiere on the date at the Kenosha, in Kenosha, Wis., Francis B. Schlax held a parade which was dedicated to the men at Wake Island. Starting at 8.15, the American Legion and the VFW Drum and Bugle Corps marched from their club houses to the theatre where they gave a concert out front before entering the house.

Among the lobby stunts featured by Schlax was a headless cutout figure of a Marine in dress blues; the patrons were invited to step up to the figure and see themselves as they would look in uniform.

Girl Assistant Builds Kid Show Patronage

Ruth Garrett, promoted from cashier to assistant at Warner's Laroy, in Portsmouth, Ohio, used to help put over "King of the Texas Rangers" serial, a tieup with one of the local merchants for merchandise to be given to the kids each week. One of the main prizes donated for presentation each week is a complete Ranger outfit. The cooperating store distributes lucky numbered cards and advertises the tieup storewide and in their windows.

Van Meter's Roving Cameraman

Dwight Van Meter, manager of the Strand Theatre, Pottstown, Pa., had a photographer roaming the streets and taking pictures of passersby in connection with "Woman of the Year." Photographers handed cards to those snapped advising that all those whose picture appeared in the lobby would be admitted free.

Berezin's Atmospheric Lobby

Taking out his regular standing posts in the lobby of the Elgin, in Ottawa, Bob Berezin for his date on "Jungle Book," replaced them with palm trees with a card on each tree with copy on the picture. Giant scene still blowup was also used.

Crew's "Cowboy" Bally

For his street bally on "Ride 'Em Cowboy," Maurice Crew at the Strand, in Waterloo, Ia., dressed one of his staff in cowboy attire with banner reading: "Just call me Bud and see," etc.

THEATRES AID WAR EFFORT AS SHOWMEN SELL BONDS

Stars In Person For the opening of the new Fremont Theatre, in San Luis Obispo, Charles P. Skouras, president of National Theatres, arranged for a comprehensive campaign which included the "Hollywood Caravan" parading across the street from Victory Square to his theatre. The entire proceeds of the opening night were donated to the USO. The Bond Sales Drive, worked out a week in advance of the opening by Henry Pines and Seymour Peiser, publicity and advertising head of Fox West Coast, included cooperation of schools and civic groups throughout the county. Army jeeps were stationed throughout the city and all men, women and children wore badges, "I Bought Mine." The "Hollywood Caravan" group was transported from Los Angeles via bannered busses to the city limits, where they were transferred to jeeps for a spectacular entrance to the city.

Institutional Slant Reported as finding considerable favor among his patrons is the 17 by 26 card being used by Merle R. Blair at the Regent Theatre, in Cedar Falls, Ia. Done on white and with red and blue print, the card features a full length cut of Uncle Sam pointing to copy reading: "Uncle Sam says, 'Keep 'Em Smiling'. Your local theatre is doing its part. Relax. Enjoy a good movie today."

Citywide Tieup In Lansing, Mich., the eight Butterfield houses and the two independents joined together in taking an opening day advertisement in the paper to announce the opening of their Bond and Stamp Drive. E. C. Beatty, president of the W. S. Butterfield Theatres of Michigan, heads the state committee, and Verne Trembley, Capitol manager; Harvey Cochrane, Plaza theatre manager, and Mrs. Muriel Russell of the Orpheum are chairman and co-chairman for the Lansing-East Lansing division.

Goodman Personal Through the efforts of Harry F. Shaw, Loew's Poli-New England division manager and publicity manager Lou Brown, arrangements were made to bring Benny Goodman and his entire band from the Lyric Theatre, in Bridgeport, to New Haven for a special rally on New Haven's famous Green. After introduction by the Mayor, the band played for a solid hour, auctioning off autographed phonograph records and photos to the highest bidder. The buildup for Goodman's appearance was handled through stories in the local newspapers and plugged over local radio stations as well.

"Bond Bombardiers" To stimulate the sales of Defense Bonds and Stamps at the Fox Glendale, in Glendale, Cal., Ed Harris has organized his theatre staff into Minute Men, headed by his assistant, Capt. Robert Pik, who named the staff "Bond Bombardiers." Each member who joined has signed a pledge in the presence of the Postmaster and Harris reports the first two weeks sales exceeding $1,500. To inspire enthusiasm, a luncheon is held monthly for all staff members with the Postmaster or other city officials as guest of honor. Tribute is paid to the Bombardiers through the award of a $25 defense bond to the staff member turning in the most sales. The cost of the luncheon is met by some merchant who is compensated by publicity of newspapers and lobby cards.

Civilian Defense To aid the local Civilian Defense in getting organized at Bellefontaine, Ohio, Fred L. Williams at Schine's Holland Theatre contacted the following groups: High School Band; American Legion, Boy and Girl Scouts, Red Cross, VFW, Air Raid Wardens, Auxiliary Police force, Firemen and Patrolmen, Demolition Squads and Auxiliary Nurse Corps. The groups marched to the theatre to the music of the school band with three sets of color guards and the various units participating in uniform.

Mayor Cook introduced the various leaders in the Civilian Defense, the band played "God Bless America," which was followed by the entire audience giving the Pledge of Allegiance. Marine 1st Lt. Frazer, home on leave, talked of the necessity of uniting for defense and asking for wholehearted cooperation. In advertising the program, Williams received free publicity in the Civilian Defense columns of the newspaper and at all C.D. meetings. The Round Tabler reports the theatre was packed to the rafters and the program lauded by all who attended.

Roulette Wheels The downtown and suburban Cincinnati theatres are featuring illuminated roulette wheels in their lobbies, which patrons are invited to spin. Every purchaser of a War Savings Stamp is entitled to a spin at one of four designated numbers spaced equidistantly around the circumference of the wheel. Those scoring win prizes.

Passes for Records Tying up with the record shop of a downtown department store, Manager George French and Publicist Bill Morton at the RKO Albee, in Providence, featured a "Victory Record Salvage" campaign. Guest tickets were offered to anyone bringing 10 old records to the theatre. A further tieup was then made with the Theatre Chairman of the R. I. Federation of Music Clubs, whereby they had the privilege of looking through the records to pick out any they thought suitable for entertainment for the boys in the armed service. This angle brought a story in the local paper. Morton reports all hands being pleased with the tieup, since the store needs the records to purchase new ones and they in turn give the theatre two cents for every record.

Victory Parade Contacting the local businessmen's association on his Bond Sale campaign at the Milwaukee Theatre, in Milwaukee, E. J. Friedwald induced them to stage a Victory Parade, headed by Acting Mayor Bonn, Frank J. Kuhl, State Administrator for the Sale of Bonds. Other city officials and members of patriotic organizations marched to the theatre preceded by local merchants' floats.

Stopping in front of the theatre, a salute was fired when the first bond was sold. Merchants' windows were decorated and sniped with "War Bonds and Stamps on Sales at the Milwaukee Theatre."

Eagle Squadron
(Universal-Wanger)

Americans in the RAF

Walter Wanger's account of the activities of American pilots in the RAF prior to America's entry into the war combines the essentials of documentary, tribute and fiction in a blending which makes in many respects a striking wartime subject. It is war, grim and stark, with but little relief.

The picture is at its best in the sequences which are in effect documentaries. Near the start a flight over the Channel, with the RAF planes engaging in battle with the enemy and returning to base after sustaining some losses and inflicting more, commands and holds attention and admiration. A Commando raid toward the end of the picture does likewise while it is being run off silently, but breaks down when the actors go into wordy dialogue. Still shots of bombed London pack great power, and some portions of the bombing sequences impress themselves upon memory. In this aspect of the picture the enterprise reflects directly the cooperation of the British Air Ministry and other agencies credited on the screen.

The picture in the opening sequence and restated briefly near the close is a direct paying of tribute to the members of the Eagle Squadron, living and dead, by individual name and portrait. This is in the form of a foreword spoken by Quentin Reynolds, somewhat in the "Target for Tonight" tone of voice, and it carries the throb of the reality of the doing and dying of the young men named and presented. This portion of the picture carries conviction even though Mr. Reynolds chooses to scold Americans generally for not having been like these men "who did not wait to be stabbed in the back" before doing their duty for democracy, and sets a pitch somewhat too high for the ensuing fictional melodrama to sustain.

The picture falls short of its lofty message, in sequences which are threaded through and spread over and against all the others. These concern some people who fall in love with each other, misunderstand and wax jealous of each other, and so on, while the big story is going on overhead. This ground story, a Cosmopolitan Magazine tale by C. S. Forester, put into screenplay form by Norman Reilly Raine, is no match for the documentary or the tribute, and it supplies the actors with no dialogue or business to make them seem at any time other than actors. Direction by Arthur Lubin does not overcome this deficiency.

Previewed at the Universal studio to some 75 or 100 ladies and gentlemen of the press, trade and lay, who emerged from the screening muttering mixed opinions.—William R. Weaver.

Pierre of the Plains
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Wilderness Gunplay

"Pierre, he ees wan fine fellow." But this film is a somewhat confused account of the shooting, fighting, likable French-Canadian trapper from Edgar Selwyn's play.

We meet Pierre as he swings a knife and handy fist on a trapper who has been selling firewater to the Indians. Then he lopes out of the woods just in time to produce the villain's squaw woman and prevent Durkin (Bruce Cabot) from marrying Daisy, played by Ruth Hussey.

This of course makes for a little bad will in a frontier sort of way and Durkin frames Daisy's brother for murder. His defense will cost money so Pierre hires out as guide for a poker playing easterner and his daughter. But he loses Daisy's bankroll for the gentleman cheats at cards. Pierre decides there is nothing to do but free Daisy's brother with a jail break. This he does and kid brother heads for the border. You never learn what happened to the murder charge.

Pierre is now a fugitive himself and he takes to the woods with Durkin and the Royal Mounted in pursuit. Durkin is killed by a bullet from the woods as he and Pierre fight on a river bank. (Crazy Loon, the Indian pal whom Pierre saved from drink, did it.) Pierre is held for Durkin's murder but evidence at the inquest is inconclusive and the police order him to leave the country. The picture dissolves with Pierre and Daisy riding away in the back seat of the card sharper's car.

It is all very confusing and episodic. But George Seitz directs the fights with lots of punch and the woodland scenes have a nice pictorial quality. Mr. Selwyn produced. Lawrence Kimble and Bertram Millhauser are responsible for the screenplay.

At the M-G-M New York projection room, a trade press audience was restless between the fight sequences.—John Stuart, Jr.

Calling Dr. Gillespie
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

A New Assistant

This is Metro's first Kildare film without Kildare. For the many patrons who flock to theatres to follow the series of adventures based on characters created by Max Brand, there are such familiar players as Lionel Barrymore, Alma Kruger, Nat Pendleton and Walter Kingsford in the respective roles of Dr. Gillespie, Molly Byrd, Joe Wayman and Dr. Carew. Minus popular Lew Ayres, who now is serving in the U. S. Army Medical Corps, in the established part of Dr. Kildare, the film introduces a new young medico, Dr. John Hunter Gerniede, played by Philip Dorn, whose performances in "Escape" and "Underground" won him praise from critics and public alike.

Unfortunately, the plot selected for this new screen adventure in the Blair General Hospital is not up to the story calibre to which Kildare audiences are accustomed.

At the instigation of Dr. Gillespie, a young surgeon from Holland on the hospital staff, Philip Dorn, is given the opportunity to pursue his first medical love, psychiatry, and to attempt to treat the mental aberrations of a college boy. During the course of events, the boy, played by Phil Brown, develops into a homicidal maniac, which manifestation of his mental disorder had been prophesied by Dorn, backed up by Gillespie, but contrary to the opinion of the lad's family and physician. He commits a series of gruesome murders and with the police right on his trail, makes for Blair General to attack Dr. Gillespie. The suspense element is introduced when Dorn endeavors to corner the boy in the hospital, aided by the staff and the police.

Too many long-winded attempts at psychiatric diagnosis and prognosis interfere with the action of the film. But there is the customary banter between Dr. Gillespie and Molly Byrd, superintendent of the hospital; the comic antics of Nat Pendleton, and the fresh, appealing MGM ingenue, Donna Reed who plays the fiancee of the boy, to relieve the sinister morbidity of the plot.

On the whole, however, the picture, directed by Harold S. Bucquet and given screen treatment by Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin from Kubec Glasmon's original story, is not up to MGM's former Kildare standards.

Previewed in MGM's New York exchange projection room before a gathering of trade press representatives.—J. E. Samuelson.

Jackass Mail

(MGM)

Beery and Main Do It Again

The Wallace Beery-Marjorie Main combination carries on this time against the terrain of the California of 1851, when a settler living a way out of the big city, which was Sacramento, had to pay as much as $7 delivery charge on a piece of mail brought out to him by wagon and team.

That's the point of novelty in this airing of the similar talents of the pair at top of the cast.

Apart from this spot of novelty, the film is another series of situations set up for Beery, in his blundering bandit characterization, and Miss Main, in her portrayal of rugged romanticist, to knock over in turn for as many laughs as the audience present sees fit to give up. Record is that a lot of audiences see fit to give up a lot of them, and a lot of money for the opportunity to do so.

The hero, who never wants to be one, enters the picture as horse thief and murderer, and attempts to rob the lady's mail wagon. She takes him in hand, gives him a job as driver, cajoles and kicks him into the position of civic leader and temperance worker, without for a moment abating his thirst, and sends his name down into posterity as that of a great and good California pioneer. It's satire laid on with a trowel, but mostly it's slapstick in thin disguise, and always it's Beery and Beeryisms for Beery clientele.

The credits include John W. Considine, Jr., as reproducer, Norman Z. McLeod as director, Lawrence Hazard as scenarist, and C. Gardner Sullivan as author, but it's a Beery attraction and nothing whatever more or less.

Previewed at the studio for the tradepress.—W. R. W.

She's in the Army

(Monogram)

Debutante Makes Good

There's nothing very novel about "She's in the Army." A debutante joins a worthy cause for an unworthy motive and learns to appreciate hard work and service. But Ted Richmond has produced it as light entertainment with accent on comedy, and the audience seemed to like it.

Veda Ann Borg is quite credible as the beautiful young heiress who joins the Women's Ambulance Corps as a publicity stunt, with a $5,000 bet on her ability to take it. Her fellow-volunteer, Marie Wilson, a hat-check girl, provides a good many of the laughs as the helpless rookie bewildered by Army discipline. For some reason, K. P. and clean-up duty seem twice as funny when the victim is feminine, just as new laughs can be wrung out of the "tough sergeant" when the uniform calls for skirts.

Interspersed with the training of twenty young girls to take their places alongside the armed forces is romance in the person of Lyle Talbot, captain of the post. It is to him and for him that the debutante must prove her mettle, after the usual misunderstandings and even an unusual mishap in which she unwittingly introduces his brother as her fiancee and entertains them both with the tales of their happy childhood together.

Director Jean Yarbrough should be commended for the brisk pace maintained, and the sequence in which a girl without voice or charm sings to no purpose can be overlooked.

Seen at the New York Theatre where a small afternoon audience laughed quite a bit.—E. A. Cunningham

ADVANCE SYNOPSES

ACROSS THE PACIFIC

(Warner Bros.)

Spy Drama

PRODUCERS: Jerry Wald and Jack Saper. Directed by John Huston.

PLAYERS: Humphrey Bogart, Mary Astor, Sydney Greenstreet, Charles Halton, Sen Yung.

SYNOPSIS

Humphrey Bogart, a captain dismissed from the Army by court-martial, and a member of the Secret Service, is a passenger on a Japanese freighter along with Sydney Greenstreet, a sociologist, and Mary Astor. Both display unusual interest in their fellow-passenger, the doctor hinting that he will pay for military information, and the girl asking, too casually, about a wealthy plantation owner in Panama. Bogart promises data on the Canal's defenses, but is suspected of double-dealing and taken prisoner. His fellow captives are the girl and her father, the ranch owner. When he learns of the doctor's plans to blow up the locks he escapes and causes the destruction of the torpedo plane which was about to take off on the mission. The sociologist is captured, and the girl and her father, innocent of any traitorous intent, are freed.

SOMEWHERE I'LL FIND YOU

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

War Drama

PRODUCER: Pandro Berman. Directed by Leslie Ruggles.

PLAYERS: Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Robert Sterling, Charles Dingle, Reginald Owen, Lee Patrick.

SYNOPSIS

The adventurous lives of newspaper correspondents in war times provide the drama for a story about two men and a girl, set in New York and on the Pacific battle-front. The men are brothers, both in love with a girl on the staff of their paper. Her disappearance in China on an assignment they coveted brings them to the Pacific in time for the Japanese invasion of the island territories. And the accident of war enables one of them to bow out a hero, leaving the girl to the man she loves.

Reviews received too late for this Section are printed in the regular news pages of the Herald and are reprinted the following week in Product Digest for their reference value.

APACHE TRAIL

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Western

PRODUCER: Samuel Marx. Directed by Richard Thorpe.

PLAYERS: Lloyd Nolan, Donna Reed, William Lundigan, Ann Ayars, Connie Gilchrist, Chill Wills, Gloria Holden, Grant Withers, Fuzzy Knight.

SYNOPSIS

Another drama of a stage-coach station features the enmity between two brothers and an Apache raid in which an outlaw shows his better nature. It is peopled with a cast of newcomers to the drama of the old West—the only old hand being Fuzzy Knight—and stresses characterization without seriously reducing the action expected from these features.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES

(United Artists)

War Comedy

PRODUCER: Edward Small. Directed by Allan Dwan

PLAYERS: Charles Winninger, Charles Ruggles, James Craig, Nancy Kelly, Otto Kruger, Ilka Gruning.

SYNOPSIS

The popular stage play of the last war has been filmed for audiences of World War II without much loss of point. The differences between two men of German stock over their loyalties during the crisis between their countries, old and new, have not been outdated by events. And the climax, reached in a recognition of the brutality of the German regime and the heartfelt patriotism of the adversaries, should stand on the same message today.

A YANK AT ETON

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

PRODUCER: John W. Considine, Jr. Directed by Norman Taurog.

PLAYERS: Mickey Rooney, Edmund Gwenn, Ian Hunter, Freddie Bartholomew, Marta Linden, Juanita Quigley, Alan Mowbray, Peter Lawford.

SYNOPSIS

Mickey Rooney, the typical American boy, gives up dreams of Notre Dame and enters Eton when his mother marries an Englishman. Rebelling against the age-old traditions of the institution, he tries to introduce "American" methods which fail to win him the respect of the headmaster or his classmates. At home he is slow to recognize the kindliness of his stepfather, but once this is accomplished he is willing to take the blame for a serious accident because he believes his foster-brother, Peter, responsible. A happy ending finds Mickey admitting that Eton might not be so bad.

THE SILVER BULLET

(Universal)

Western

ASSOCIATE PRODUCER: Oliver Drake. Directed by Joseph E. Lewis.

PLAYERS: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Jennifer Holt, William Farnum, Leroy Mason, Grace Lenard.

SYNOPSIS

Johnny Mack Brown carries a silver bullet on his watch chain as a reminder that he is looking for the man who killed his father. He arrives in a town where the mayoralty election is causing bitter rivalry. The backer of one of the candidates is the possessor of the scar which identifies the killer, but he forces the doctor to remove it and then shoots him. This is gradually revealed in the course of the election campaign, which brings success to the forces of good government, after Brown's duel with the outlaw ends in the latter's death.

Radio City Music Hall has announced that "Mrs. Miniver" has broken all ten-year records, having played to 318,245 persons and grossed $220,000 in seventy-two showings. Since the Music Hall is the largest motion-picture theater in the world, this is probably an all-time record for the film industry.

WAR ENTERTAINMENT

WAR worn Britain turns increasingly to the motion picture theatre as a house of refuge from the pressing, desperate concerns of the day.

England's picture production the while is turning more and more away from pictures of ordeal and war. This is succinctly reported in Mr. Aubrey Flanagan's London dispatch in this week's news pages.

This comes just as we have reported in this publication upon the sharp increase in Hollywood's war picture schedules for the season.

These precisely opposite trends are not, however, contradictory. They represent the judgments, in both instances, of showmen engaged in attentive service of their publics.

Britain has deep bitter experience of war over a long period. Dover is in cannon range of the Germans. Hell and devastation have poured down from the skies in all parts of England, and may pour again, any day anywhere. The pinch of drastic rationing is felt at every Englishman's table. They have lived so long in the reality of war that it is much more ordeal than adventure, a vivid reality which needs no exploration in a medium of make-believe. For them there is little emotional service in fiction that rehearses for them the life they live.

To most of us in this big America the war which comes so closely to us in print and radio is still remote. From the tall pile where this typewriter stands one can look down the bay and past the Statue of Liberty out to sea where the submarines lurk, but still the war is way off yonder. Our young men are going away. There are soldiers and sailors in the streets of our port cities. Payrolls rise, prices rise, taxes rise, alarms sound across the papers and the radio, but for the United States the war, for the vast majority, has still the quality of something new and adventuresome. We have little experience of war. It is still something for emotional exploration.

To us the war is dreadful and awesome—but we want to know about it.

To England the war is all that—and they do know about it.

Clearly here, by these contrasts, a function of entertainment, the nature of entertainment and its emotional basis, is illuminated.

HOW MUCH, NOW?

COME Tuesday next and the end of June, the motion picture industry's War Bond and Stamp Drive will have ended its first month. It is indicated in the flow of news reports across this desk that the United States have had sincere cooperation from the theatres and all the showmen of the land.

Now the War Activities Committee needs to hear, and almost immediately, right after June 30th, with "account number", what each theatre has so far accomplished. Report blanks have been supplied.

"Never before," observes Mr. Oscar A. Doob of public relations, "have some 15,000 exhibitors been asked to report to one headquarters in a matter of this kind, but never before have we had such a war crisis; never before has the nation so needed our theatres in a fight for survival." There's a problem for Mr. S. H. Fabian, treasurer and executive vice-chaiman. He just has to hear.

This obviously pertains not only first to the national cause, but also to the demonstration of what the theatres of the screen have done, are doing. There is much about the contemporary situation which makes this important to the motion picture.

CODE WORK

THE other day Mr. William R. Weaver went a-calling on Mr. Joseph I. Breen, now for a month returned to his post at the Production Code Administration, to see what might be the impact, if any, of wartime production on that office. There isn't any, as is reported in this issue. The answer is that the basic considerations of morals and propriety obtain alike in peace and war, attributes of the civilization that we are fighting for. It is significant of the progress that has been had, too, that Mr. Breen finds the organization, in these days of many social stresses, faced with neither new nor greater problems.

It may be observed, however, that certain manifestations here and there in the field of exploitation indicate that the same basic principles of common decency have not been sufficiently apparent to some of the promoters of product.

Lobbies bedecked with innuendo and advertising which flaunts false accents can be as invasive of the standing of the industry as anything on the screen.

ANY TIME now will be time to discard the fad verb, "to streamline". It began with boats and progressed to aircraft and thence to motor cars and trains. Now it is all over the language in misfit usages. About a century ago balloons were so impressive an invention that advertisements ventured even "balloon hairpins". More recently we have had the idiocy of "radio razor blades". Today's use of "streamlining" is most commonly in connection with reorganization where it means knocking off a few warts consisting of personnel.

DOWN where Rockefeller canyon opens on smart Fifth Avenue cabbages and broccoli and beets and egg plants are growing, row upon row, spoon-fed in orderly perfection. It is in land values perhaps the most costly garden in the world. There Mr. Merle Crowell, impresario of public relations for Rockefeller Center, arranger of the pageantry of floral expression from the crocuses of spring to the illumined tree at Christmastime, has in his subtle Yankee way slipped a bit of education to the pavement-bound sophisticates of New York. The vegetables are all unobtrusively labelled, so they can tell the squashes from the chives. The opening of the new bill played to standing room and the biggest audiences the Center gardens have ever had.

Trouble Brewing

A LEGAL spokesman for the major companies in New York disclosed on Tuesday that the distributors had been quietly preparing for months to undertake wholesale legal action against exhibitors whom they would accuse of falsely reporting on box-office returns on percentage-film engagements. The attorney said that the distributors believed hundreds of thousands of dollars were due them in rental overages.

The attack actually got under way last Friday, when suits alleging conspiracy to falsify reports of receipts on percentage bookings were filed against the E. M. Loew circuit at Boston, by Paramount, 20th Century-Fox and MGM. The actions, filed in U. S. District Court, seek an accounting of the books of 17 E. M. Loew operating subsidiaries, charging a conspiracy since July, 1929, to pay less than due on percentage pictures.

The complaint also asks the court to enjoin the circuit from altering or disposing of books in question. It states the overages due exceed $50,000.

The suit arose, it is understood, out of differences between distributors' records and books submitted by the Loew circuit during the course of a pending trust action.

Information Wanted

GOVERNMENT film makers and publicity men this week were awaiting the reshuffle which many feared was to follow the appointment of Elmer Davis as director of all war information.

It was not expected at Washington that any great changes would be made in the Government's motion picture management, under Lowell Mellett of the Office of Government Reports or the radio coordination of Archibald MacLeish's Office of Facts and Figures. Both are now under the control of Mr. Davis.

Among the momentarily homeless were Robert Collyer, formerly with Paramount and Herbert Miller, ex-Pathe news man, who had handled all non-military newsreel material for the OEM. It was pointed out that the two had developed much important newsreel coverage, including one of the few comprehensive reports on the rubber situation for the newsreels.

Mr. Davis was in Washington this week setting up his staff, which he declared would remain small. Milton S. Eisenhower, formerly chief of the War Relocation Authority, was named Mr. Davis' administrative deputy. He is described as a career government administrator and expert unraveller of red tape.

First act of Mr. Davis was to rap the magazine Broadcasting sharply over the knuckles Tuesday for a story which it was charged quoted from a confidential Office of Facts and Figures report on public reaction to war news. It appeared to be a warning that Mr. Davis would permit the dissemination of news only through official channels.

Censorship regulations for broadcasters were scheduled to be revised this week, but officials of the Censorship Office said no drastic new provisions were contemplated. The revision, it was explained, is to clarify a number of situations in the light of the experience. Some requirements may be stiffened and others relaxed.

Also planned was a similar revision of censorship regulations for the press.

'Tell the Whole Truth'

"OUR JOB was to give information about the war—every aspect of the war—to the people . . . to give them the news. Our job was to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth at all times." This was the mission outlined for the British Government's wartime film unit, Sidney Bernstein, advisor to the Ministry of Information told the members of AMPA on Thursday.

At a luncheon meeting at the Hotel Edison, New York, he described the significance and manner of the British Government's wartime entry into the motion picture business.

The wartime mission of the screen he described as an international project which could be the most effective agent in furthering unity and understanding among the United Nations. He called on America's industry to join not only in this informational function of the screen but to continue also its services to morale and spirits by the production of entertainment screenfare.

Skouras Gets 26 More

EXPANSION of George Skouras Theatres, New York, through the acquisition of J. J. Theatres, of which Julius Joelson is president and general manager, will soon take place. The Joelson group numbers 26 theatres, all in Manhattan and the Bronx, where Skouras already has a large number of houses, augmented but a few years ago by purchase of the Springer-Cocalis theatres.

Circuit expansion of this type has been rare in recent years. The Skouras Circuit in New York is not regarded as a producer-owned group under the terms of the Consent Decree since Twentieth Century-Fox has no interest in these theatres.

An arbitration hearing was held Tuesday in which the Jerome, Oxford and Kingsbridge Theatres of the Joelson Circuit sought to reduce the clearance enjoyed by the Skouras Valentine. It was observed that there was more than the usual heat at the hearing.

Paramount in New York this week finally signed a deal with the Century Circuit for its 1941-42 product. The circuit and the distributor have been arguing for nearly a year, unable to agree on terms for the showing of Paramount's pictures in 35 houses in Brooklyn and Long Island.

Though the season is nearly over, certain pictures already released will be used by some of the circuit's theatres.

With the closing of the Century contract, there is only one other New York circuit not on Paramount's books for 1941-42—the Skouras Circuit of 72 theatres.

Allied Training Films

INTEGRATION of American, British and Russian governmental activities in the field of training films was revealed by Colonel Darryl F. Zanuck, U.S.A., in Hollywood last Saturday, although extent and degree of the colaboration to be undertaken was described as a matter for Washington superiors to discuss.

Extent of the disclosure made in Hollywood was that Colonel Richard O. Schlossberg and Major Frank Capra are to be stationed there to work with Col. Zanuck on the production of an undetermined number of film projects and that Colonel Zanuck, who has had charge of training film production as chairman of the Research Counsel of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, conferred with the British Ministry of Information and the Soviet Film Bureau on his recent visit abroad, "on an official mission."

Meanwhile in Washington, it was understood that the whole subject of exchange of training film material between the United States and its allies was under deliberate consideration by the Department of State.

Add "aid-to-Russia" notes: Sergei Eisenstein's first book, "The Film Scene," will be published by Harcourt Brace and Company in August. Mr. Eisenstein, famous Russian film director, currently is the artistic supervisor of Mosfilm, largest Soviet film studio, and a professor in, and active head of, the State Institute of Cinematography, Moscow. He is now making "Ivan the Terrible."

Jay Leyda, now with Artkino, Russia's distributor in New York, has been editing and translating Mr. Eisenstein's book.

The book includes sequences from some of Mr. Eisenstein's scenarios, among them "An American Tragedy."

Calls 'em Dopes

HOLLYWOOD'S Walter Wanger told off the United States Government this week for tapping the supply of studio technicians for war-film work, calling "some" Federal officials "dopes." Names were not named.

Mr. Wanger's remarks, given wide circulation on Wednesday from Hollywood, by United Press, might be construed as giving more than a motion picture producer's observations, for he is the president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Mr. Wanger told the Government to give Hollywood back its technicians and let them make Government pictures on the site of film production. "When the Government wanted tanks, it did not move Detroit to Washington," the producer was quoted by United Press. "Yet, when the Government wanted movies it took some of our top experts, put them in pretty uniforms and stationed them in the Capital."

He criticized the Government's efforts to utilize Hollywood to date as "fumbling, cockeyed and full of fear of treading on somebody's toes."

An announcement to the press, this week, from Universal, in New York, said that Mr. Wanger, producer of "Eagle Squadron," which Universal is distributing, would present a check for $10,000 to the British Royal Air Force Benevolent Association on July 2nd, at the Globe Theatre, New York, on the occasion of the picture's opening.

Business Up 10%

A TEN PER CENT improvement in box-office business between March and April was indicated Tuesday by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau, Washington, in a report showing that April's Federal admission tax collections had hit a new high record at $11,803,922.

Collections for April, nearly $400,000 above the previous record of $11,412,679 recorded last December, were more than $1,000,000, or approximately ten per cent, greater than the $10,788,463 reported for April, 1941, and nearly $5,000,000 above the $6,955,991 collected in May, 1941.

For the first five months of 1942, admission tax collections totaled $54,309,877, compared with $32,766,903 for the corresponding 1941 period last year. The greater part of the increase in April was spread over the country as a whole.

Army Will Watch

AN ARMY motion picture registration bureau to clear all titles, stories and ideas for motion pictures about the U. S. Army has been established by Colonel Mason Wright, head of the pictorial division of the War Department public relations office, it was disclosed in Hollywood Wednesday. The project was unanimously approved by producers when submitted to them Tuesday night by Colonel Wright. He emphasized it carried no thought of censorship and was designed to see that the Army is correctly portrayed and to aid studios in making films about the Army.

Carnival in Rio

WAFTED UP FROM RIO as gently as the breath of frangipani in the breeze off the Celebes come tales of the party splendors and avid gallantry of utter genius which Orson Welles applies to his task of cultural relations in the making of a pseudo and semi-official US & RKO cinema production with the title, one almost might say working title, of "It's All True." There is, it seems, a full score and maybe more, of technical experts from Hollywood in attendance, air transported by U. S. bomber. A whole city has been bedecked with buntings with lessons to the Latins to show how gala they could be. Now Mr. Welles is said to be up the river, which is to say the Amazon, on errands of art, and as a good will ambassador. There is report, from the frangipani circuit, that he is yet to make a tour of the twenty-one republics, making South American relations. It has been said that the Federal, or cultural relations, participation in the project, has been slated at $300,000.

Whether that applies to all the costs, like three-point, Rio, New York and Hollywood telephone conferences at $400.00 plus per hook-up, and such like matters of incidental cost, is not set forth. Meanwhile the glamour in the breeze becomes internationally aromatic, because it has been ever so subtly indicated that the correspondence of one of the happy Hollywood participants, reporting home on the joyous magnificences, on its way out of Brazil, has passed under the eyes of an unappreciative censor for an Allied power who thought that mayhap a transcript would be of interest at the Office of Cultural Relations. That would put it under examination.

Morticians Get Ceiling

SERVICES involved in the motion picture, theatrical and broadcasting industries are excluded from maximum-price regulations for consumer services issued Tuesday by the U. S. Office of Price Administration, Washington, to become effective July 1st.

Under the regulation, nearly 1,000,000 establishments, ranging from shoe-shining parlors to morticians, doing an annual business in excess of $5,000,000,000, will be required to observe as maxima the highest prices charged by them during last March.

Price Administrator Leon Henderson pointed out that the Price Control Act itself specifically excluded motion pictures and broadcasting from regulation.

Under these exemptions, no attempt to control rates, fees, or charges will be made in the case of actors' and artists' agents; arbitration and conciliation services; theatrical booking agents; entertainers; motion picture or other theatre enterprises; radio and television stations, or ticket services.

DECREE SENDS INVENTORIES OF MAJORS UP $19,144,423

'Big 5's' Backlog of Film and Materials Jumped to $115,034,123 in Year

The consent decree imposed on the motion picture industry by the United States Government, through the Department of Justice's settlement of the New York anti-trust suit, caused the "Big Five" decree signers to spend an additional $19,114,423 to build up film inventories to meet the decree's requirements for selling in blocks-of five with showings of all product in advance.

Inventories listed by the five consent companies—Loew's, Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners—for 1941, totaled $115,034,123, nearly $20,000,000 more than the $95,889,700 of 1940. Decree selling became effective on September 1, 1941. Inventories soared in the months immediately preceding the effective date of the decree, when the five companies were building backlogs of blocks-of-five.

The $19,114,423 was, of course, not an additional expense per se, but, rather, a forced investment which required considerable banking activity; the 19-odd millions were not transformed directly from the nation's box offices, as is the case for normal production.

An industry spokesman, on Tuesday, estimated that the decree cost the "Big Five" distributors an additional $5,000,000 in actual expense for the new form of selling.

Trend Followed By "Little Three'

The backlog buildup by the "Big Five" and the rush to market which was witnessed at the beginning of consent decree selling in September was also reflected in a comparable increase in inventories by the "Little Three" distributors, which were not forced to abandon large-block selling, but which, nevertheless, acted to meet the new kind of competition from the larger companies. Columbia and Universal increased inventories by $2,344,418, from $18,604,005, as of 1940, to $20,948,423 for 1941. United Artists, with no direct producing, and being solely a "closed" distributing corporation, makes no figures of financial operations available.

Last week, Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, in reporting the company's financial status at the annual stockholders' meeting in New York, declared that Paramount's film inventory increased during the past 17 months by approximately $9,000,000. "This large increase," said Mr. Balaban, "is due principally to the provisions of the decree which require trade showings before the release of feature pictures, thereby making it necessary to carry in the inventory a greater number of these productions."

In April, when Twentieth Century-Fox issued its annual financial statement, the company reported that "inventories increased during the year by $5,986,180, occasioned principally by provisions of the consent decree."

EXECUTIVE GET ORDERS FOR INDUSTRY'S 'WAR-FOOTING'

Equipment Manufacture and Studio Usages Discussed at Capital

All branches of the industry were put on a war footing this week, being told precisely their duties and allowances under the war economy, at meetings at the War Production Board, Washington, between its U. S. officials and of the motion picture industry, and the makers of film equipment.

Representatives of the studios met with WPB officials Tuesday to submit their proposed "economy" program, following a meeting with the equipment manufacturers last Thursday at which an industry advisory committee was set up to cooperate with the board in the development of conservation orders.

Harold C. Hopper, head of the motion picture section of the board, presided at both meetings. He confirmed the previously-announced position of the war agency that the importance of the motion picture business as a medium of training, education, information and morale building, was recognized.

He told the theatre equipment men that it was intended to keep the theatres operating but warned that the manufacture of equipment used many critical materials, such as copper, nickel, aluminum and steel, and it was imperative that such materials be conserved for the war program.

The WPB Tuesday urged exhibitors to particularly conserve materials with copper. They were asked to save the copper residue from carbons. The request came from Christopher Dunphy, the WPB's film industry liaison.

Emphasis on Film, Set Materials

The producers' 13 point program was cordially received Tuesday, and Mr. Hopper bespoke the Government's cooperation by announcing establishment of a WPB branch at Los Angeles.

The producers' representatives told Mr. Hopper that major emphasis had been laid upon conservation of film and set materials, but that no other means of saving would be overlooked. They added that strict application of their program would save fully as much as could be saved by Government ukase.

Mr. Hopper called into the meeting other WPB officials, and those of the Office of Defense Transportation and the Office of Price Administration.

WPB men stressed the use of film materials in munitions manufacture, and said that, because those materials would become ever more scarce, conservation was most important.

Mr. Hopper told the film men he was satisfied at their progress, and noted that the Los Angeles office would enable them to have contact with the WPB in the shortest possible time.

IN WASHINGTON, SEE THE USIS

All you people who come to Washington to see persons in the Government will save yourselves much time by consulting first the United States Information Service, at 1,400 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., that city. So says the Service, a division of the Office of Government Reports—and which therefore ought to know. Its telephone is Executive 3300.

He was not able to disclose Tuesday what action, if any, the WPB would take on the producers' program; but it was considered unlikely there would be action soon.

Among those who participated in the conference were Gradwell Sears, United Artists; Edgar Mannix, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Alan F. Cummings, Loew's, Inc.; John J. O'Connor, Universal; A. Schneider, Columbia; Barney Balaban, Paramount; Earl I. Sponable, Fox Movietone; R. C. Barrows, Twentieth Century-Fox; Joe Robins, National Screen Service; Norton Richey, Monogram; Ray Klune, Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, and John Wolcott, March of Time.

Industry Advisory Committee Set Up

The equipment men attending the Thursday meeting constituted an industry committee of which Mr. Hopper will be Government presiding chairman. Members will be C. S. Ashcraft, president, Ashcraft Manufacturing Company, Long Island City, New York; Edward C. Cahill, general manager, RCA Manufacturing Company, Camden, N. J.; E. W. Hulett, president, E. W. Hulett Manufacturing Company, Chicago; Albert B. Hurley, president, Hurley Screen Company, Long Island City, New York. Also G. L. Carrington, vice president, Altec Service Corporation, New York; William A. Gedris, president, Ideal Seating Company, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Louis B. Goldberg, president, Goldberg Brothers, Denver; Walter E. Green, director, General Theatres Equipment Corporation, New York; J. E. Robin, president, J. E. Robin, Inc., New York; E. J. Ballen, president, Ballen, Inc., Akron, Ohio; E. Wagner, president, Wagner Sign Company, Chicago, and E. A. Williford, sales manager, National Carbon Company, New York.

Discussions at the meeting revolved around conservation of critical materials and conversion of certain plant facilities to war work, and a proposed limitation order curtailing the manufacture of motion picture theatre equipment.

Details of the proposed order were not made public, but it was understood to impose drastic restrictions on the use of critical materials for the production of equipment, but to provide for the manufacture of such replacement and repair parts as might be necessary to keep theatres operating.

The WPB shortly is expected to issue its limitation orders, but at midweek, date of the issuance could not be ascertained.

The 13 rules for conservation of material applied last week by the members of the Film Conservation Committee in Hollywood and presented Tuesday to WPB are:

1. Use stills instead of film for wardrobe and similar tests.

2. All trailers will be reduced in length, as previously specified.

3. A camera device to replace placards for numbering takes.

4. Eliminating of the reprinting of approved takes.

5. Salvaging of short ends.

6. Reduction of unnecessary setups.

7. Posting of a slogan, "Save Film—Save Your Job."

8. Salvaging of old film.

9. Collaboration with film cutters on script before production and postponement of negative cutting until after preview.

10. Reduction of reprinting due to black frames.

11. Limitation of script revisions on the set.

12. Use of single takes for rushes.

13. Elimination of all rehearsals with film.

These rules are the basis of the studios' economy report submitted by Mr. Klune. Incorporated also in his program were the economy rules drawn up by the distributors, who had met for several weeks in New York.

The Film Conservation Committee represents all branches of the Hollywood film industry: producers, unions, guilds.

It was noted the rules enumerated did not include elimination of screen credits, a step proposed two weeks ago but since opposed by the Screen Director Guild, and still argued by some members of the Screen Writers Guild, which this week polled its membership.

The elimination of screen credits, except for showings in the Hollywood area, was expected to save 10,000,000 feet of film yearly.

One of the Committee's first steps takes effect July 1st: a monthly report by studios, on film consumption. This will afford statistics upon effectiveness of conservation.

Distributors See Savings of 18%

The New York meetings between distributors' officials indicated last week that that branch of the companies, and the exhibitors, could save 15 to 18 per cent of raw stock by economies.

All non-essential use will be stopped, under the regimen submitted to the WPB Tuesday; and even the newsreel title frames, and trailers, will be shortened.

Whether to reduce the number of distributors' prints, was a point at issue; and it was decided to leave this step to the WPB. It was said print reduction would disrupt release schedules, and availability lists.

DELIVERY CUT HITS CARRIERS, THEATRES AND EXCHANGES

Three Branches Study Problems Created by ODT Limitations on Trucking

Film delivery services throughout the country are prepared to make a radical change in their delivery methods which may have a far-reaching effect on the entire industry. An order of the Office of Defense Transportation, promulgated this week restricts deliveries to one a day for theatres within a 25-mile radius of key centers and requires the carriers to reduce their mileage by 25 per cent per month.

This curtailment together with the reduction in the number of prints may have a serious effect on exhibitors. Conferences were being held this week in all exchange centers between distributors, exhibitors and film delivery services to work out schedules for picking up and dropping prints.

The problems faced by the carriers vary considerably. Film delivery services which have local routes are concerned over their ability to service certain accounts. For example, those theatres which have early morning shows might be required to make other arrangements for delivery or else pick up prints themselves. The only alternative is to get prints a day in advance for these theatres, a practical impossibility with existing schedules and an even more difficult task with the prospective curtailment of the number of prints.

The delivery services are also concerned with deliveries of the newsreels which are ordinarily not available at the same hours in the morning as prints on features and shorts. It may become increasingly difficult for theatres to obtain newsreels on the day of release.

Only One Trip Per Day Allowed

The ODT order prohibits special delivery by truck. Only one trip a day is permitted to any theatre. Films cannot be transported by common carrier; subways, buses, street cars and passenger trains of railroads bar messengers carrying film. There still remains the possibility of handling the prints by special messengers using taxicabs.

A delivery company's representative expressed concern over several other phases of the order. He foresaw a possibility that the ODT would compel the carriers to make pickups and deliveries at the same time, a virtual impossibility because of the limited capacity of the trucks which are now carrying full loads.

Ira Meinhardt, chairman of a sub-committee of film carriers of the War Activities Committee, who is associated with a group of carriers serving theatres in New Jersey and New York on the west side of the Hudson River, pointed out that out-of-town carriers' problems were considerably different. They are required to reduce mileage 25 per cent. Also, trucks are forbidden to make a return trip unless they have a pay load of at least 75 per cent. Of course, this seldom happens because of the methods worked out for deliveries upstate.

Prints for theatres more than 25 miles away are taken out by the carriers a day in advance. The trucks drop their loads on the way from the exchange center; routes are so established that it generally takes the truck a good part of the day to cover the territory. When the truck reaches the last theatre en route it picks up the outgoing show and starts the return trip, arriving back at the exchange center the following morning.

Combination Routes Being Worked Out

In the rare instances where a print goes directly from a theatre to another theatre on the same truck route, some time can be saved by transferring it directly without the print passing through the film inspectors in the exchange.

Mr. Meinhardt said combinations of routes were being worked out and that attempts were being made to make certain stops less often in order to save the 25 per cent mileage demanded of the carriers. Unless for emergency, trailers, premiums and advertising matter are held in the carriers' offices until a shipment of film is ready for the same theatre.

The carriers' position is that they are an essential part of the industry. In exhibitor-distributor relations, the carrier is regarded as the exhibitor's agent; when a print is turned over to the carrier the legal effect is the same as though the print were already in the exhibitors hands as far as the distributor is concerned.

The carriers' position is being borne out by the distributors and the exhibitors and all three parties are fully aware of the problems of each of the others. The conferences being held this week are to attempt to resolve the situation created by the ODT's order.

Shipping by train in most cases is impractical. For the many theatres within the city it is absolutely impossible since the Railway Express Agency is not equipped to handle so large a business all at once even if trains were used to certain points in Queens, for example. Upstate and New Jersey shipments by train are also impractical since railroad service has been practically eliminated in many towns, particularly west of the Hudson.

Government Calls Halt on Conventions for Duration

Conventions and meetings requiring travel probably will be abandoned for the duration of the war, following a request made this week by Joseph B. Eastman, director of Defense Transportation. Film sales conventions as well as exhibitor meetings are included in the probable ban.

Mr. Eastman asked that all conventions and meetings not closely related to the war effort be deferred and that those which did bear on the war program be "skeletonized" as much as possible.

The reasons given are the fact that troop movements and the normal flow of passenger traffic on the railroads have aggravated a problem already made severe by the increase in rail travel due to the gasoline shortage. Bus service has already been severely restricted to conserve tires as well as gasoline, and air travel is practically restricted to urgent civilian and military uses by the War Department which is now directing all airplane traffic. Delegates to some conventions would travel by automobile and this, too, is to be avoided to conform to the Government's general program of conservation of rubber even in those areas where gasoline is not rationed.

It is expected that such local meetings as MGM's Exhibitor Forums, one of which took place this week in Minneapolis, will not be regarded as a meeting or a convention within the purview of Mr. Eastman's request. The next Forum will be held in Milwaukee on July 15th and there are ten more tentatively scheduled.

Stage Charities Receive $20,000

The Theatre Authority last week distributed $20,000 among various theatrical charities, making a total of $150,000 disbursed in such a manner since its formation seven years ago, according to Alan Corelli, head of the TA. The money went to Actors Equity, Chorus Equity, Screen Actors Guild, American Guild of Musical Artists, American Federation of Radio Artists, American Guild of Variety Artists, League of New York Theatres and the Authors League, each receiving $1,875.

In addition $1,000 each was turned over to the Actors Fund, Stage Relief, Jewish Theatrical Guild, Episcopal Actors Guild and the Negro Actors Guild. The TA derives its income by deducting a percentage from the gross receipts of every authorized benefit.

JAP SHELLS BRING WAR TO EXHIBITORS' FRONT DOOR

Authorities Distributing Manual Detailing Technique for Gas Attack

Exhibitors in Washington and Oregon tasted this week the effects of enemy attack and consequent public alarums. The coastline of those two states was dimmed out Monday night, like that of California. The dimout followed a Japanese submarine attack Sunday night upon a woods area north of Seaside, Oregon. The submarine's shells apparently were aimed at Fort Stevens.

It was apparent that gas shells could be hurled upon any Coast point as well as high explosives; and exhibitors everywhere, and especially in Los Angeles, were studying their defense manuals anew, on precautions against gas.

Expected to be distributed in Los Angeles was a manual detailing theatre technique in gas attack. The manual was discussed by the Los Angeles Theatre Defense Bureau, which was informed by Francis Harmon, War Activities Committee Coordinator, of air raid and blackout measures adopted elsewhere.

Joseph Buxton, Los Angeles exhibitor, said theatres of the area were as fully protected as those in London.

Presiding was George Walters, assistant to Charles Skouras in National Theatres, and who was appointed director of the city's Defense Bureau to replace B. V. Sturdivant, transferred by Fox West Coast to San Francisco. Elected alternate director was Rodney Pantages.

Blackouts in Several Areas Vary in Effect

The third blackout in Springfield, Massachusetts, Saturday night, left theatre receipts uninjured. It occurred at 9:45, ended at 10:20. It was a "surprise."

Theatremen said business held up because of the lateness of the blackout.

Although civil defense officials complained the blackout was but partly successful, they commended theatres for complete cooperation.

Another practice blackout will occur in Tennessee shortly, state officials said this week. Sirens will be the only warning. The first blackout did not harm first evening shows, but did affect second shows.

Ottawa, Canada, experienced its third blackout last week. Theatres cooperated by boosting the test, urging citizens to make certain lights at home were extinguished.

Washington, D. C., had another blackout last week, for 30 minutes.

The Pennsylvania State Council of Defense has issued rules about dimouts and blackouts. During practice blackouts, theatres will be allowed to give a "slight" indication that lights are on inside. Interior lights over exits will be permitted, providing that it can not be seen from the outside, and that it be one red lamp of "not more than 15 watts."

ARMED FORCES PREFER DOUBLES

Service men prefer double features. This is inferred from examination of passes issued in May to them by Balaban and Katz, Chicago. Of 12,043 passes issued, most came back at double feature theatres. Among such were the Roosevelt, which received 2,094; the Garrick, with 2,064; the Apollo, with 1,427. The Chicago, with a single feature and stage show, received 2,687; the State-Lake, with single features, 1,468. The United Artists Theatre ran one double feature program, and two single, and collected 2,208 passes. In the circuit's houses outside the Loop, 1,095 passes came in.

All-night blackouts were to be tried this week in Eastern Pennsylvania Tuesday night, central Wednesday, and western Thursday.

The First Corps Area, Army, has advised Connecticut exhibitors dimout rules have been changed. Definitely dimmed are Stonington, Groton, New London, Waterford, East Lyme, Old Lyme and Old Saybrook.

A surprise blackout in Toronto last week hurt theatre business because it was called at 9:30 and lasted one hour. Attendance was reported much lower than at the last blackout, in April.

The Chicago City Council has ruled that blackout violators may be fined $200, or given six months in jail.

Expected passage of a New York City Council bill compeling property owners to have defense equipment available will have little effect upon theatres, it was said this week; for most have already complied with the law by their previous full fire fighting equipment, since agmented, especially by larger theatres, with much special air raid material.

Boston had its first daylight raid alert Monday, and it was termed a complete success. A few seconds after the alert, streets were deserted. Theatre cooperation, in warning patrons, and sheltering pedestrians, drew special praise from the Committee on Public Safety.

Tuesday night, the city underwent its first complete city-wide blackout.

Rationing Continues To Cut Attendance

Minneapolis suburban houses are feeling the effect of tire and automobile rationing. Several had always drawn heavily upon metropolitan audiences. They are suffering, and business from their own areas is not supporting them.

It is noted that in rural territories, the removal of labor to industrial centers, and conscription, are being felt at boxoffices.

Business at the Miami Drive-In theatre has decreased 40 per cent, W. D. McGee, its manager, said this week. The theatre's large sign, a means of drawing patronage, has been extinguished.

Priorities Situation Halts Detroit Jobs

The Rex, Detroit, owned by the Broder Circuit, is operating with temporary partitions, temporary flooring, and an exposed front. It explains to customers that the remodeling has been halted by a delay in securing priorities, but that it will be completed.

The Liberty, in Center Line, suburb, has been halted in construction.

The Crescent circuit's Melrose Theatre, Nashville, a new house on suburban Franklin Road, has been completed, but the War Production Board will not allow installation of seating and equipment. The circuit's new house at Hopkinsville, Kentucky, is also stopped, far from completion, by the WPB's construction ban. Although materials are available, remodeling of a building into a theatre, on another site, is being stopped.

Charles A. Smakwitz, assistant Albany zone manager for Warners, has been appointed to the New York State War Transportation Commission, by Governor Herbert H. Lehman.

Rural Exhibitors Still Suffering

Iowa and Nebraska rural exhibitors are reporting greatly decreased business, even though over-all statistics show record farm incomes. The theatre men say they are losing their customers to industry and to the armed forces.

Even widespread use of games has not overcome the drop.

Additionally feared are the traveling 16 mm circuits, in tents. Theatre men say they may be forced to adopt 16 mm.

The same difficulties are reported from small Illinois towns, where exhibitors also complain about high film rentals.

The famous Fair at Danbury, Connecticut, started in 1878, and an annual event drawing thousands from other states as well, has been dropped "for the duration."

Pennsylvania To Continue Fairs

Despite the Office of Defense Transportation appeal for deferment of all state and county fairs for the duration, Charles W. Swoyer, secretary of the Pennsylvania Association of County Fairs, announced the dates of 78 community fairs to be conducted this year. In ignoring the appeal of the ODT, Mr. Swoyer said that fair men had already gone to great expense to negotiate contracts, print premium books and advertising to promote their displays after receiving encouragement last February from Claude Wickard, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, and that the fairs would be held unless the Government formally requested cancellation or took over the fairgrounds for military purposes.

ALLIED HEAD CALLS FOR HALT ON 'NUISANCE' PRACTICES

Blind Checking, Increases on Special Films, Changing Policies Are Attacked

The time has come to correct the "nuisance" practices which are sources of irritation and ill will in the industry, if the unity program is to be completely successful, M. A. Rosenberg, the national president of Allied, warned in a bulletin from his Pittsburgh office on Monday.

"We must 'protect the good name and integrity of the industry as a whole' and 'provide for the adjustment or modification of the policies or practices of one branch or member of the industry which are opposed by any other branch or a substantial portion thereof,'" he warned.

These projects, specified as Points II and V of the program for the United Motion Picture Industry committee, should be speeded up at once, Mr. Rosenberg declared. Much time and effort has been spent on a new selling program and other trade practice changes, he said. But other "sore spots" must be corrected if they are to be successful, he warned.

"There are many sore spots in the industry that are itching and aching, and unless cured or relieved will never permit the whole to function properly," he wrote. "These aches and pains should be examined under point II and remedies effected."

Blind checking, price increases on special pictures, and "the continuous change of sales policies by the distributors" were cited by Mr. Rosenberg as matters needing quick attention.

"They are the external and internal nuisance ailments that directly affect our own relationships and reflect upon our good name and integrity to any outsiders who become aware of the condiitons. There are many such outsiders including cranks, propagandists and legislators who are on the alert for such condtions, to use them against us," he asserted.

"It is most important to maintain harmonious relations within this industry so as to avoid unfavorable reaction from the outside," he warned.

Submission of the UMPI sales plan to Judge Henry W. Goddard at New York for inclusion in the consent decree, following completion of a final text by the legal drafting committee, meanwhile awaited approval of the out-of-town members of the group. The plan has been sent to Colonel Robert Barton in Richmond, Abram F. Myers, Allied counsel, and George P. Aarons. If they return it without further change it will go to the Government at once.

Serve War Effort, or Else, Friedl Warns Northwest Exhibitors

"Cut out bickering and fighting among ourselves and get down to doing a job", 350 Minnesota theatre men were told at Minneapolis on Tuesday by John J. Friedl, president of the Minnesota Amusement Company at a regional War Activities Committee meeting.

Every exhibitor must get behind the industry's war effort, he warned. "Exhibitors must police themselves or the Government will step in and do the policing for them", Mr. Friedl said, asking full compliance with every Government request.

"The Government has been pretty good to us," he said. "None of us has come to the theatre to find we have no carbons, no tickets, or no film because of Government orders. We have been ranked as practically an essential industry, and we have our very definite job to do".

The meeting of county and zone WAC chairmen was called to spur the exhibition of Government short subjects distributed by the WAC and to launch war bond and stamp sales in all Northwest theatres. More than 800 theatres have signed pledges to show the pictures, Mr. Friedl said, with only 26 theatres in the area not participating.

Almost $60,000 was raised in 700 Minnesota theatres for the Army-Navy relief campaign, and theatremen aided in boosting receipts of the Hollywood Victory Caravan at St. Paul and Minneapolis to over $60,000. He urged even greater continuing effort in behalf of bond sales. A women's auxiliary of clerks and stenographers in the exchanges is assisting the War Activities Committee in keeping records of its Minnesota program.

E. S. Peaslee, president of Northwest Allied, followed Mr. Friedl's speech with a pledge from his organization to see "that every independent cooperates fully". He urged an end to dissension, adding, "We have a job to do. Any exhibitor reluctant to cooperate is simply foolish".

Arthur Mayer, assistant national WAC coordinator told the Minnesota meeting that approximately one Victory Short a week would be issued. He urged them to play the reels at every show, in full faith with pledges of cooperation. Other speakers included Dr. Walter Judd, Roy Miller and Edwin Ruben.

MGM Forum Opens in Minneapolis

MGM carried its goodwill campaign to the heart of the battleground of exhibitor opposition on Wednesday when it opened the first of three new Exhibitor Forums at the Nicollet Hotel in Minneapolis.

In an all-day session, starting at 10:30 A. M. and including luncheon, exhibitors discussed exploitation and selling methods with publicity and advertising experts gathered by Metro under the direction of Henderson M. Richey. Mr. Richey, chief of exhibitor relations for MGM, presided at the meetings.

On Monday Norman Pyle, director of MGM exploitation in the area, reported that over over 350 operators had accepted invitations to the meeting. The sessions concentrated on ways of increasing public awareness of motion pictures and attracting more persons to every box office.

Speakers included William R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation head; Ed Salzberg, West Virginia exhibitor; Seymour Morris, advertising manager of the Schine circuit, and Ken Prickett with the MGM "Show Builder" trailer.

John J. Friedl, manager of the Minnesota Amusement Company, with 60 of the circuit's managers, led the attendance of 265 exhibitors.

Better newspaper advertising, inexpensive but effective exploitation stunts and displays and the better handling of short subjects were among the topics discussed. Emphasis was placed on the theatre manager's community relationships and the importance of his participation in local activities as a representative of the industry.

Among specific suggestions from the floor was a plan to secure the participation of local wives, mothers, sisters and sweethearts of men in the armed services in war bond and stamp campaigns.

U. S. Action Against Percentage Sought

Asserting that "percentage contracts as a concerted policy are more vicious in effects on independent exhibitors than the abuses you have attempted to restrain," the ITPA of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, Inc., is petitioning Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general and the Department of Justice for relief.

The petition declares exhibitors now face the combined percentage demands of Loew's 20th Century-Fox, RKO, Vitagraph and Paramount. Distributors, according to the association, demand percentage contracts from 35 to 50 per cent, guaranteed minimums, preferred playing time and in some cases admission increases.

Our gratitude to the Honorable Howard E. Milliken, Mayor of Harrisburg, Pa., who wired the following message to Nate Blumberg, president of Universal Pictures:

"AFTER SEEING 'EAGLE SQUADRON' AT A SPECIAL PREVIEW TONIGHT, I MUST SAY THAT I HAVE NEVER SEEN SO STIRRING A MOTION PICTURE. WALTER WANGER OF YOUR COMPANY HAS UNDOUBTEDLY PRODUCED A MASTERPIECE THAT WILL LONG BE REMEMBERED BY THE MOTION PICTURE GOERS OF THE NATION."

P. S. – This is just one of the many unusual tributes that have been paid to the motion picture, "Eagle Squadron."

Permits Required to Hire Help in Canada

Theatres, Exchanges Affected by New Order to Stabilize Manpower

Canada's film industry faced another wartime restriction with the issuance last week of a new order by the National Selective Service prohibiting employers from hiring any person without a permit from the Federal Government. The new regulations were made public in Toronto by Elliot M. Little, director of the NSS and will effect motion picture theatres and exchanges among other business firms.

Mr. Little declared, "We have got to the stage where we must carefully measure our man-power on a priority basis, just as materials have to be rationed. This will ultimately lead to a rationing of labor by direction, not by compulsion."

Under the order, companies will continue to have the privilege of discharging any person and employes can resign, but indications are that pressure will be applied by the Canadian Government to have them take war industry jobs because of an acute shortage of labor said to exist in Toronto and other industrial cities. Employers also must notify the Government of approaching vacancies for the purpose of labor control. Mr. Little asserted that leniency in granting permits would depend on local conditions in different districts.

Agricultural workers are the largest group exempt from the new regulation while others included are scientific and technical personnel, employees of the Provinces and domestic help in homes.

Government Lauds Film Industry

Tribute to the motion picture exhibitors and distributors of Canada for their part in the war effort was paid this week by Herbert Lash, director of the Department of Public Information of the Canadian Government.

Mr. Lash, speaking at a special showing of "Mrs. Miniver" at the Capitol Theatre in Ottawa Sunday night, declared: "I should like to take advantage of this opportunity to pay public tribute to the motion picture exhibitors and distributors of Canada for their constant and generous contribution to the Canadian war effort.

The "Miniver" screening was arranged by Dewey D. Bloom, Canadian MGM representative and was attended by Government leaders, including Defense Minister Ralston.

Raise $2,800 for Red Cross

by VICTOR SERVICE

in St. Johns. N. B.

In a joint drive in behalf of the Red Cross, the exhibitors of Halifax, N. S., arranged for lobby collections for about a week. The yield totalled approximately $2,800. Members of the staffs and local Red Cross workers officiated as the collectors, and from bases in the theatre lobbies.

The meetings were held on Sunday afternoons.

Exhibitors in Halifax, N. S., who had to eliminate their merchandise vending machines recently when a sudden ban was imposed by the city council, are installing candy counters and showcases, the latter on the floors and walls, of the theatre lobbies. The marketing of candy, chocolate, gum, nuts, etc., had developed heavily at the venders, and efforts are being made to continue this side-line revenue. Placed in charge of sales at the sweets stands have been doormen and also girls hired exclusively to do duty at the stands. In emergencies, the girls can fill in at ushering, selling or collecting tickets, thus providing help insurance as well as cultivating the extra receipts.

FPC Officials on Tour

by ED BAKER

in Winnipeg

R. W. Bolstead, vice-president, Ben Goldsaler, chief booker, and F. H. Kershaw, Calgary district manager, all officials of Famous Players Canadian Corporation Limited, made an inspection tour of Western Canada last week. In Winnipeg, they were hosts at a luncheon held last Saturday afternoon to which members of the film industry here were invited.

Commenting on the tour of Canadian cities which Anna Neagle, famous British actress, is making on behalf of the Air Cadet League, Mr. Bolstead said all concerned with the undertaking were delighted at the enthusiasm of the star and Herbert Wilcox, director and producer of the show.

When Anna Neagle, star of British and American films, appeared at the Uptown theatre on Wednesday night at a special show in aid of the Air Cadet League of Canada she was accompanied by outstanding figures of the stage and screen, among them: C. Aubrey Smith, Helena Pickard, in private life the wife of Sir Cedric Hardwicke; Colin Keith-Johnston, Robert Coote, Richard Gaines, Davis Tihmar, Victor Carrell and Moyna McGill.

All are donating their services and the entire production will be under the direction of Herbert Wilcox, British film producer.

EBERSON TO DESIGN RECREATION CENTER

John Eberson, film theatre architect, this week volunteered his services to supervise the design and decoration of the recreation hall for soldiers at the Army's Signal Corps Photographic Section in Queens, New York, former site of Paramount's Long Island studio. Mr. Eberson also will design a library to be erected adjacent to the center.

An industry drive to obtain furnishings and equipment for the recreation hall to serve about 400 men, is being sponsored by trade paper publishers. The committee includes: Martin Quigley, Abel Green, Maurice Kann, Jay Emanuel, Charles E. Lewis and Jack Alicoate. They have sent out an appeal to the industry to contribute towards the furnishing and equipment of the recreation hall, books for the library or cash with which to purchase the materials needed for the Center's personnel.

Contributions may be sent to the Signal Corps Photographic Center Recreation Fund, in care of Motion Picture Herald.

David Loew and Albert Lewin End Organization

David Loew and Albert Lewin have suspended their producing organization for the duration. The announcement was made in Hollywood Tuesday. It stressed scarcity of materials, and casting difficulties.

The two men, whose pictures are released through United Artists, are currently completing "The Moon and Sixpence." Prior to their decision, they had been preparing to make "Landfall" and "Mating Call."

They are to leave Hollywood for New York July 15th, there to discuss releasing arrangements. Then Mr. Loew will offer himself to the Government. Mr. Lewin's plans were not disclosed.

471,845 See 'Miniver' in 21 Day Period

Music Hall Records Are Broken; "In This Our Life" Sets Mark

"Mrs. Miniver," MGM's film based on Jan Struther's book, was seen by 471,845 persons in 21 days at Radio City Music Hall, New York, and grossed $326,000 for the period, according to that theatre. It began its fourth week at the Music Hall on Thursday. No film in the theatre's 10-year history has stayed at "capacity level for so long a period," the management reports. Over the week-end, the third in "Mrs. Miniver's" run, 92,382 saw the picture, a greater attendance than was recorded the weekend before. For the first 72 showings, it grossed $220,000.

MGM, meanwhile, has scheduled a series of 15 test engagements in July for the film, on a single feature basis. Different admission prices will prevail. The company will not accept further bookings until the test runs have concluded, according to MGM.

A poll of New York theatre-goers to determine which films they consider the best 10 of all time is now in progress at the Music Hall. Balloting at the end of the second week's run revealed the following results:

"Mrs. Miniver," included by 83 per cent of all voters; "Gone With the Wind," 74 per cent; "How Green Was My Valley," 62.2 per cent; "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," 48.7 per cent; "Rebecca," 47.1 per cent; "Wuthering Heights," 37.4 per cent; "The Good Earth," 31.1 per cent; "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," 28.4 per cent; "The Philadelphia Story," 27.4, and "Citizen Kane," 24.4 per cent.

Situations and playdates for the "Miniver" test engagements are as follows:

St. Louis, State, July 1; New Orleans, State, July 1; Cincinnati, Capitol, July 2; Altoona, State, July 2; Cleveland, State, July 3; Kansas City, Midland, July 3; Tulsa, Ritz, July 3; San Francisco, Warfield, July 10; Denver, Orpheum, July 8; Atlanta, Grand, July 9; Des Moines, Des Moines, July 9; Portland, United Artists, July 9; Louisville, State, July 10; Jamestown, Shea's, July 11, and Manchester, State, July 12.

"In This Our Life" Sets Strand Record

Warner Bros.' "In This Our Life," which ended a six-week run at New York's Strand Theatre last Thursday night, grossed approximately $258,700 in the six weeks, running well ahead of "The Old Maid," another Warner film which was the only other picture to stay that long at the Strand.

Neil Agnew, Paramount sales manager, reaffirmed on Monday in New York his earlier announcement that "Holiday Inn," the Irving Berlin production, was being sold separately as a special and was not included in the company's seventh block. Mr. Agnew said some confusion had arisen among exhibitors, because "Holiday Inn" was trade screened at the same time that the three pictures in Paramount's next block were presented. The film, a Mark Sandrich production, is the company's third special, the others having been "Louisiana Purchase" and "Reap the Wild Wind."

Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush," a United Artists' release, now in its 10th week at the Globe Theatre, New York, "continues to attract capacity audiences," according to an announcement this week from UA.

Other holdover reports of current features include:

"Ship Ahoy," MGM; second week at the Paramount, Oakland; Esquire, Toledo and Loew's, Indianapolis.

"Tortilla Flat," MGM: fourth week, United Artists, Portland; second week, Orpheum, Denver.

"I Married an Angel," MGM: second week at the Grand, Cincinnati.

"Kings Row," Warner Bros.: fifth week, Roosevelt, Seattle.

Holdovers for "This Above All"

"This Above All," Fox: sixth week, Astor, New York; second week holdovers for Uptown and Esquire theatres, Kansas City; Fifth Avenue, Seattle; Fox and Adams theatres, San Diego.

Seven additional pre-release engagements were set for the film this week by 20th Century-Fox for the following cities: Houston, Topeka, Wichita, Lincoln, Portland, Ore., Springfield, Ill., and Oakland.

Gross business of the Astor engagement of the picture is reported to be 20 per cent better than for the same number of weeks played by any recent attraction at that theatre, according to 20th Century-Fox.

"Sergeant York," which played the RKO circuit for special engagements at advanced prices when it was first released by Warner Bros., has been set for repeat runs in these houses at their regular scales, beginning July 4th, general release date. "York" also will return to the Strand, New York, for a second engagement.

"York" Breaks Records Abroad

First engagements of "Sergeant York" in principal foreign cities have resulted in new long-run and gross records in seven capitals to date, according to a report this week from Warner Bros.

In London, the film ran eight weeks at the Warner Theatre, a run exceeded only by "Nazi Spy." It played seven weeks at the Regent, in Sydney, Australia. After three weeks at the Magerit, Mexico City, it moved over to the Colonial. "York" ran two weeks in San Juan, P. R.; 10 days at the Glober, Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, and seven days at the Tropical, Panama. A four-week pre-release run at advanced prices at the Ideal, Buenos Aires, is being followed by a regular first-run at the Normandie. According to Warners, Havana and Cairo reported "big business," while in Manila, the picture set a record in its pre-release run at the Lyric which was followed by a regular run at the same theatre. It had a 10-day run at the Metro Theatre, Bombay.

Paramount reports that Cecil B. DeMille's "Reap the Wild Wind" broke an "all-time house record" with its opening at the Denham Theatre, Denver. "Reap" is now running in its fifth week in Boston, three weeks at the Metropolitan and two at the Fenway. It played two weeks at the Newman, Kansas City, and is in its third week in Salt Lake City. At the Paramount, Nashville, the picture "topped a 12-year record."

War-Theme Films Open

Three special screenings were arranged this week for "Wings for the Eagle" by Warner Bros., a premiere was set for another war-theme picture, Universal's "Eagle Squadron," and the debut was scheduled for "The Pride of the Yankees," Samuel Goldwyn's production based on the life of Lou Gehrig. Other premiere dates announced included "United We Stand," the 20th Century-Fox film featuring the first full-length screen record of the historic events of the past 25 years which was produced by Edmund Reek, head of Movietone News.

In Washington, Thursday night, Warner Bros. held a special screening for "Wings for the Eagle," under sponsorship of 21 California members of the House of Representatives, in the auditorium of the Department of the Interior. On Friday night, at the National Theatre in the Capital, a press and radio audience viewed the film, and in New York the same night Warners held a preview of "Wings" at the home office for the press and aircraft officials.

Among the military and Government officials who were to attend the Washington preview Thursday night were: Postmaster General Frank C. Walker; Attorney General Francis Biddle; James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; J. J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War; Artemus L. Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy in charge of aviation; James M. Landis, director of Office of Civilian Defense; Milo Perkins of the Board of Economic Warfare, and Senator James Mead.

Before the home office screening, the Lockheed Aircraft Corp., at whose West Coast plant much of the film was shot, invited the press and aircraft officials to a dinner at Toots Shor's.

Military Debut "For Eagle Squadron"

Premiere of Walter Wanger's "Eagle Squadron," released by Universal, is set for the Globe Theatre, New York, July 2nd. The opening will be sponsored by the Eagle Squadron Fund and the R.A.F. Benevolent Fund of the U.S.A. A detachment of fighter pilots from Mitchell Field, L. I., will act as hosts to a group of R.A.F. fliers now in New York who will attend the debut. Officials of the British Embassy, British Air Ministry and the American Women's Volunteer Service also are expected to be present. "Eagle Squadron" features Robert Stack, Diana Barrymore, Lief Erikson, Jon Hall and John Loder in the principal roles.

Samuel Goldwyn's "The Pride of the Yankees" will be shown in 35 RKO and five Skouras neighborhood theatres in New York the night of July 15th, simultaneously with the opening at the Astor on Broadway, under arrangements made by RKO which is distributing the film. The neighborhood showings will be at zone first run houses in the Metropolitan area and will be only for the one performance starting at 9:00 P.M., with all seats reserved at $1.10.

"United We Stand," the Edmund Reek production for 20th Century-Fox, will open with "It Happened in Flatbush," another Fox film, at the RKO Palace, New York, July 2nd.

John LeRoy Johnston With Hunt Stromberg

Hunt Stromberg, who has leased space at the General Service Studios in Hollywood for the production of features for United Artists distribution, has employed as the first member of his permanent organization John LeRoy Johnston, director of publicity and advertising for Walter Wanger until the shutdown of the Wanger studio, and for the past 20 years prominent in Hollywood public relations work. Mr. Johnston joins Stromberg Productions July 6th.

RULES MAJORS CAN WRITE OWN CLEARANCE TICKET

Affiliated Theatres Allowed Privileges Over Competitive Independents

Distributors can write their own clearance tickets in favor of affiliated theatres, granting special privileges over competitive independents and exempt from Section VIII of the consent decree, the Appeal Board of the motion picture arbitration system ruled at New York on Monday.

In its 27th opinion on an appeal from the clearance award to the Dickinson theatre, Mission, Kansas, the high court of motion picture arbitration found that Section XVII of the decree guarantees to consenting distributors the right to license their affiliate theatres as they see fit. They may grant their own theatres any clearance terms they wish so long as another exhibitor's right to some run is not denied.

The ruling upheld arbitrator's slashes in the clearance given over the Dickinson to several of the first run downtown and key neighborhood by four of the distributors. But it granted Twentieth Century-Fox and its Fox Kansas City Corporation theatres exemption from the Dickinson award.

The maximum clearance, it found, which may be granted to the Aztec theatre by all five distributors over the Dickinson is one day. Otherwise the complaint against Fox was dismissed. MGM, Paramount, Warners and RKO were directed to grant a maximum of 14 days after last play date to the Plaza over the Dickinson and they were told that "no specific clearances shall be granted the Isis, Warwick, Brookside or Waldo theatres over the Dickinson." This does not prevent distributors from granting the theatres such availabilities after first run downtown or such runs in their respective zones as they may desire.

Overrules Prior Decision

The long awaited appeal ruling on this second Kansas City case overruled the liberal interpretation of Wendell Cloud, arbitrator, who, in cutting the Dickinson margin behind first run downtown from 56 to 28 days, found a close inter-relation between Section VIII and Section XVII. He held that exemptions to affiliate theatres should not be permitted to sanction a clearance which otherwise would be unreasonable.

Citing the portion of Section VIII which defines an arbitrator's powers and its reservation that the arbitrator may make an award subject to Section XVII the Appeal Board found that it neither creates nor enlarges jurisdiction. A clearance issue with respect to any theatre is to be decided on its own merits, without regard to the houses' circuit affiliation, the board said, but denied the section affects jurisdiction.

"Section XVII is unquestionably a definite withdrawal from the operation of Section VIII of a distributor's right to arrange for the exhibition of its pictures in theatres affiliated with it. The conclusion is inescapable that the language used is broad enough to cover so essential a subject as clearance, and that in the generality of its language it limits the effect of the prior clearance section as effectively as if it were expressly mentioned," it found.

Clearance, the board said, means the period of time prior to the expiration of which a feature licensed for prior exhibition in a theatre may not be exhibited in another theatre or theatres. As such it is necessarily a part of the contract for a prior run.

Affiliated Theatres Granted 'Protection'

"Accordingly, a distributor authorized, by virtue of Section XVI, to license its pictures to theatres affiliated with it upon such terms and subject to such conditions as may be satisfactory to it, may grant to its affiliated theatres such protection by way of clearance as may be satisfactory to it, provided that such clearance be not such as to deny an exhibitor the right to some run upon the terms specified in Section VI," the award said.

"Since Loew's, Paramount, RKO and Vitagraph are not affiliated in any way with the Aztec Plaza or Dickinson, a reduction in the clearance of the Aztec over the Dickinson to one day, and of the days on all pictures of these four distributors exhibited at the Aztec and Plaza, does not contravene the provisions of Section XVII.

"Fox is the only defendant affiliated with the Plaza. It is not affiliated with the Aztec. So far as Fox is concerned the provisions of Section XVII apply with respect to the Plaza. The existing clearance of the Plaza over the Dickinson granted by Fox may not be affected by an award in this proceeding. This does not apply to the existing clearance of the Aztec over the Dickinson granted by Fox."

The board ruled it was unnecessary to consider arguments raised by MGM, Paramount and RKO for exemption on the ground their first run affiliates were involved.

Case Illustrates Difficulties of Clearance

"This case illustrates the difficulties imposed upon arbitrators and upon this Board in applying the Decree to clearance arrangements and playing positions established without regard to the provisions of the Decree itself. Where possible the Board should, of course, adjust itself to such arrangements in effect in the industry as are not inconsistent with the Decree but not otherwise," the three judges wrote.

Discussing the Kansas City clearance system as fixed by distributors in 1935 the Appeal judges found that it was based on availabilities after first run downtown as in Columbus, Oakland and Chicago, where the board, in its 13th, 21st and 26th decisions (Matters of Rowlands, Piedmont and Pearl) held that the actual clearance was the number of days elapsed between last showing at a prior run and the time a picture became available to the subsequent.

They concurred in Mr. Cloud's reduction to one day of the Aztec's clearance and his ruling that the Dickinson was not competitive with the Isis, Brookside, Warwick or Waldo theatres. To hold that clearance is justified between these four theatres and the Dickinson would be unreasonable as to area, the board said.

Every theatre in a large city such as Kansas City may be said to compete with each other in the sense that patrons from one area sometimes attend a theatre in another, the board remarked. "But that is not the kind of competition which warrants clearance between theatres. It must be much more substantial," the three judges said.

Board Warns on Reasonable Interpretation

"Clearance between two theatres presupposes that one of the two has a prior run. If the two theatres do not compete no clearance between them is justified. An arbitrator may abolish it completely on the ground that any clearance between them is unreasonable as to area."

But the provision must be interpreted reasonably, the Appeal board warned, pointing out that in a large metropolitan area the whole section of city and suburbs may come within the competitive zone of downtown houses. However, the respective competitive areas of neighborhood theatres must be considered much more restricted to a limited vicinity. This is recognized in the Kansas City zone system, the judges said, where each neighborhood zone is treated as a separate competitive area and each competitive area granted availabilities and runs equal with but not subject to those of theatres in other zones.

The situation between the neighborhood Dickinson and de luxe second run Plaza was clearly competitive, the board found. The existing 28 day margin, the board admitted, was unreasonable but found Mr. Cloud has been unjustified in eliminating all Plaza clearance over the Dickinson. It set 14 days as a fair maximum.

No reference was made in the award to the oral hearings, the first, which the Appeal Board conducted at New York on April 29th. Costs were assessed one-ninth each against complainant, distributors and the intervening Fox Kansas City, Kansas City Operating and Missouri Orpheum corporations.

Actors Equity and Chorus Equity Buy $162,000 Bonds

Actors Equity and Chorus Equity will invest $162,000 in War Bonds. The unions commented Tuesday, in disclosing the move, that the sums each will invest represent approximately one-half their cash surpluses.

The council of Actors Equity that day granted Sunday performances in Boston on the terms such performances obtain in New York.

Arbitrator asked to Fix 'Fair' Rental

Three Complaints Ask Reduction in Clearance; Others on Zoning

An arbitrator was asked to determine a fair and reasonable film rental price for the first time this week when a Missouri exhibitor filed a some run complaint at St. Louis against Loew's, Inc. E. R. Gillette, operator of the Stadium theatre in Caruthersville, charged that MGM had defeated the purpose of Section VI of the consent decree by offering him product for his new theatre only at what he described as excessive prices.

Five new arbitration actions were instituted last week. Three were in quest of clearance reductions while two sought some run.

An appeal was also filed this week, at Philadelphia, by A. M. Ellis, operator of the Parkside theatre, Camden. He asked a modification of the award of Robert J. Callaghan in the city's 11th case. Mr. Callaghan granted a partial clearance on half of the complaint but dismissed the action as it applied to the Savar, Stanley and Grand theatres in Camden.

Boston

Frank M. Deane, operator of the Colonial theatre at Manchester Depot, Vt., won a partial clearance victory in the Boston tribunal's 11th case on Thursday. Frederick W. Bliss, the arbitrator, dismissed the portion of the complaint which named RKO but set a maximum on clearance for MGM pictures.

Mr. Deane charged that his theatre suffered from booking delays by the Paramount and Grand theatres, in Rutland, which book from Boston and by the General Stark theatre in Bennington, which books from Albany. The award directed that pictures be "available immediately after first run Rutland or Bennington, whichever plays last, as presently provided, but with the modification that the maximum waiting period shall be 14 days after availability to first run in Rutland."

Costs were divided equally.

Frank E. Corbera has been appointed clerk of the New Orleans tribunal. He succeeds Charles Blomquist.

New York

At New York the 41st case was filed Monday by the Feld Amusement Corporation for the Astor theatre in Newark, N. J. A clearance action, it named all five consenting distributors and the Warner circuit in New Jersey. The Castle and Sanford theatres in Irvington and the Ritz, Savoy, Stanley and Mayfair theatres in Newark are listed as interested parties.

The complaint, signed by Louis W. Feld, president, asserted that the distributors with the exception of MGM give the Castle 14 days over the Astor. MGM, it is said, gives priority of 14 days to all theatres named. He asks that the clearances be declared unreasonable except as to the Ritz, and eliminated, or reduced to one day.

Michael N. Chenalis, Newark lawyer, will arbitrate the 37th New York case, clearance action by the Dutchess Amusement Company's Beacon theatre against all five and the Netco circuit.

The Champion Amusements Company in Columbus, Ohio, filed the Cincinnati clearance complaint, the city's 8th, for its Champion theatre, against all five. The affiliated Drexel Amusement Company filed the ninth, parallel action for the Drexel theatre, Columbus. Both actions name Neth's Eastern theatre, charging its 21 day margin, comprised of 7 days to set and play and 14 days clearance, over the two theatres is unreasonable. Consolidation of the actions was reported as likely.

St. Louis

The twelfth case and the sixth some run complaint was filed in St. Louis last week by the Stadium Theatre Corporation, operators of the Stadium Theatre at Caruthersville, Mo., against Loew's, Inc. The Gem and Rodgers theatres, owned by the Rodgers Circuit, were named as interested parties. The Stadium was opened on December 2, 1941.

The Stadium petition, received in the mail, says it has offered to buy all features of Loew's, but the distributor has refused to sell except under prohibitive prices. "Loew's has knowingly tried to defeat the purpose of Section VI of the consent decree," reads the petition, which asks for the establishment of a fair and equitable price. The petition was signed by G. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the corporation.

Thomas C. Hennings, attorney and former judge, has been named arbitrator in the clearance complaint of Victor Thein's Palm theatre against Loew's. The hearing is to start next Friday. Will Rogers theatre has intervened in this case, St. Louis No. 11.

The hearing of the clearance complaint of the Beverly theatre, Case No. 10, against Warners, RKO, Paramount, Fox, will be resumed next Wednesday.

Chicago

Return Dimes to Twelve States

The states are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Nevada, Rhode Island, Oregon, South Dakota, Vermont and Georgia. Additional checks covering more states will go forward daily until the nation is covered.

Increases Admissions

The Playhouse, Portland, Ore., of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, is the second of smaller downtown houses to advance prices within the past month, it was reported recently. Admissions have been increased from 15 to 20 cents before 5 P. M., and from 25 to 30 cents after 5, daily; and to 30 cents on Sunday after 1 P. M.

Mexican Grosses Increase after War Declaration

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS

in Mexico City

Theatre gross business here and in other parts of Mexico, running from poor to fair since Christmas when the effects of the United States going to war and the recuperation of that action in this country were felt, is now decidedly improving as uncertainty about what attitude Mexico would take in the conflict has ended with this nation's declaration of a state of war against the Axis.

While the theatres have not yet begun to enjoy record breaking business, there is decidedly much more money pouring into their box offices. Exhibitors were quick to ascertain that the public wanted to be diverted, to enjoy pictures that can make them laugh and do that frequently. This fancy for fun is markedly for films that do not provoke much thinking.

Tragedy and realism are not wanted, but pictures of a war flavor, such as "The Invaders," now establishing a box office record at the Cine Olimpia, only American-managed theatre here, are liked and there is an eager interest in those news reels that do not show harrowing details.

To Produce Biography Of Priest-Patriot

What is claimed will be the most expensive picture ever produced in Mexico, the film biography of Generalissimo Don Jose Maria Morelos y Pavon, the Roman Catholic priest who took up the sword to fight for Mexican Independence, 1810-1821, but paid for his patriotism with his life before a royal Spanish firing squad about Christmas, 1815, is being prepared for production soon by Miquel Contreras Torres. This film is to cost $225,000—a new high cost production for this country.

Sr. Contreras Torres has worked in Hollywood and the Argentine and has just finished his first film biography, that of Simon Bolivar, the Venezuelan patriot, which he made in Mexico with Jesus Grovas, important producer, who was Paramount's manager here some years ago. He announces that his Morelos story, which is scheduled to be started about August 1st, has been approved by President Manuel Avila Camacho, ex-President Lazaro Cardenas, and Gen. Felix Ireta Viveros, governor of Michoacan state.

The Bolivar picture, to be released soon simultaneously here and in Bogota, Colombia, cost $210,000. Its running time is four hours.

A burlesque of "The Three Musketeers" has been started here by Posa Films, S. A., president of which is Santiago Reachi, brother of Manuel, the Mexican government's representative in Hollywood, who has also started production here on his own. "Cantinflas," in private life Mario Moreno, Mexico's hobo comedian, has the leading role, that of d'Artagnan, in "Musketeers," which is scheduled for release in the mid-fall.

Manuel Reachi, the Mexican Government's agent in Hollywood, who recently announced that he would produce a picture in Mexico, "El Mexicano" ("The Mexican") as an experiment, has organized a company, Promesa Films, with offices at Avenida Morelos, No. 102, here. He is to make three films instead of one and begin production about June 15th. The other two will be "Yolanda" and "La Jarocha" ("That Vera Cruz Girl").

Unusual...

Public interest in Samuel Goldwyn's forthcoming production "THE PRIDE OF THE YANKEES" starring Gary Cooper, is so intense that this film will be accorded the most unusual opening ever given a motion picture. RKO is proud to announce that on Wednesday evening, July 15, the World Premiere of "THE PRIDE OF THE YANKEES" will be held at 40 RKO theatres in the New York Metropolitan area simultaneously with the opening at the ASTOR Theatre. This will be for one performance only, with all seats reserved, after which the picture will continue its engagement at the ASTOR.

'Brain Trust' Radio Program Filmed

With "Hi Gang," "Yours Sincerely, Vera Lynn" and "ITMA," the three topline hit programs of Britain's wartime radio, shelved for the time being, most popular listening hour at present is probably either 8:15 p.m. on Tuesday evenings or 4 p.m. on Sunday afternoons, maybe both. At these times, "Any Questions" the B.B.C.'s "Brains Trust" progam, is transmitted over the National and Forces networks respectively. The program, which has nothing in common with the three features mentioned above, which is a most serious minded show, vaguely akin to "Information Please," is claimed to be the most popular radio feature in the current broadcast programs. It is now going to supply the material for a series of British short films.

Strand Film Co., among the leading producers of documentaries and shorts generally in Great Britain, will make a series of "Brains Trust," films with the residents of the Trust, and the resident question master before the camera. The B.B.C. producer, Howard Thomas, will be associated with the film productions.

"Any Questions" is a program during which, under the directorial eye of Question Master Donald McCullough—joint author with Fougasse of "You Have Been Warned"—the resident Brains Trusters, Doctor Cyril Joad, Professor Julian Huxley and Commander Campbell, with distinguished guests, answer spontaneously, and without previous rehearsal, questions submitted on almost any subject by B.B.C. listeners. An immensely wide range of culture, politics, philosophy, biology and human knowledge generally, is covered.

Launched in January 1941 with a six weeks run planned, the series has been such a sustained and progressively popular success, that it has continued ever since. It has a listening audience of between ten and twelve millions. 3000 letters are received by the residents every week. It is broadcast to the U. S. on the B.B.C. North American (Short Wave) Service.

The films will be one and a half reels each, and experimental efforts will be made to stage at least one spontaneous session. Donald Taylor, chief of Strand Films, will produce and direct. Anglo-American will distribute.

Calling a Halt On War Themes

Indications are not missing from British production circles that the forthcoming production year may yet see some deviation from war films. Escapism pure and simple may well prove to be a 1942-3 policy. Already at least one major distributor financing British productions of all calibres is said to have issued the order that there must be a halt on war subjects for the time being, has asked for comedies and musicals from his producers.

The fact is that some British war films have not been registering at the box office so considerably as their sponsors forecast. In some cases this has been due to the weather, in other cases to the films, despite the nobility of their subjects failing to reach an adequate entertainment standard. In most instances it has been traced to an emphatic ennui on the part of the paying public, who more often than not would rather have forgotten the war than been reminded of it on the picturehouse screen. This is not to suggest that the war film is dead. It is however, a persuasive suggestion to producers that they should go easy on the gunpowder, that greater discretion must be used all round.

Argyle Stresses Story Factor

One producer at least who has sensed a current disinclination on the part of the public to take war films because they are war films is John Argyle. Argyle, who has long been a successful producer of thrillers, domestic comedies, and the like, believes that though no contemporary story can escape the war as a background, it is the story which matters. He is going to work at Welwyn, for release by Pathe, on "Thursday's Child" which will be a screen adaptation of Donald Macardle's novel.

Producer Maurice Ostrer whose pictures for the most part are released by General Films, whilst he is making one war subject at Shepherds Bush—"We Dive At Dawn"—is at Islington making an honest comedy, the Askey extravaganza "King Arthur Was A Gentleman." This latter, though set against a wartime and army background, is inspired by comedy motives rather than by war documentation. Numerous radio and vaudeville stars—Max Bacon, Evelyn Dall, and Jack Train are examples—are in the film, which has a distinctly musical flavor at times.

Jack Train, one of the discoveries of British radio, who is revered by millions of radio fans for many voiced performances and imitations in the Tommy Handley program "It's That Man Again," has proved such a success as a screen artist that Ostrer has put him under long term contract to Gainsborough.

Comedies, Musicals On Schedules

The war, too, is a long way from Flanagan and Allen's "We'll Smile Again," which John Baxter is directing at Elstree. Here again comedy of the crazier variety is the substance of the film, the director of which made one of the hits of the last production year, the dramatic "Love On The Dole."

Keeping away from the war too, and exploiting radio popularity, is producer Ben Henry, George Formby's established impresario, who has now put Vera Lynn, one of wartime radio's most popular artistes, under contract, and will star her in a musical titled "We'll Meet Again." Vera Lynn, singer of unashamedly sentimental songs, is known in Britain as "Sweetheart of the Forces." Her Sunday program "Sincerely Yours—Vera Lynn" was one of the hits of last Autumn-Winter. In the film, too, another radio star band, Geraldo's Orchestra will be featured. Making his bow, incidentally, as an associate producer on the film is MOTION PICTURE HERALD's box office Poll Winner, George Formby.

Remote from the war, too, is the farce in production at Welwyn under the Associated British banner, "Women Aren't Angels," in which stage and screen comedians Robertson Hare and Alfred Drayton are stars. The subject is pure extravagant farce, though it has a wartime setting, and is not unconcerned with the adventures of wives in the A. T. S. Bernerd Mainwaring, author-director, wrote the script in collaboration with the author Vernon Sylvaine. Laurence Huntingdon directs.

Others Stress Battle Stories

None the less, in contrast to this inclination towards the less sombre moods of entertainment, the atmosphere of battle very markedly broods over many pictures in current production in British studios today. The Two Cities naval epic, "In Which We Serve," is currently in the location and exterior stage, and is still way ahead of schedule. Marcel Hellman's spy yarn, "Secret Mission," continues on another stage in the same studios, with Carla Lehmann, Hugh Williams, and James Mason working under director Harold French. Ealing's "The Bells Go Down" tells the story of the Volunteer Fire Service of Britain during the Blitz on London. The same studios "They Came In Khaki" unit, are at work on exteriors near London, with Cavalcanti directing. Submarine drama inspires "We Dive At Dawn" which Anthony Asquith is directing at Shepherds Bush.

Asher Returns To London

Back in London once again is Irving Asher, who spent some successful years here, first as production chief at Warners Teddington Studios, and later as an independent producer. He is here to supervise the production of a new Donat film which is to be made here by Metro British. The subject is "Sabotage Agent" and will be produced at the Gainsborough Studio at Islington by Harold Huth. Script was prepared in Hollywood by John Lee Mahin.

BRITISH ACT TO COORDINATE PROPAGANDA PRODUCTION

Crown, Army and RAF Units Use Common Services at Pinewood Studios

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Disdaining not to learn a lesson because its learning may be a little late, Government propagandists in Britain, using the screen to publicize and propagate the general war effort, and in particular the working of the fighting services, have, this Spring 1942, begun to learn the virtues of co-ordination. Since March this year a closer knitting of the pattern of State propaganda has been a feature of the war effort as it is expressed in terms of celluloid.

An immediate result of this closer policy has been the bringing together, under the Ministry of Information's Films Division, of the Crown Film Unit, the Army Film Unit, in its publicity and records activity, and the more recently formed but energetic R.A.F. Film Unit.

For the nurture, development and general housing of this treble child of British propaganda, the Pinewood Studios, claimed by their sponsors to be the most lavish and best equipped in Europe, have now been taken over. There directly Government made propaganda films are conceived, and, after their appropriate period of production gestation, brought spectacularly into the world.

Controlling Committee Coordinates Work

The essential factor about this condition is the central principle of coordination. Each of these three units is a distinct and separate entity, inspired by a different purpose, and aiming at a different target. All, however, work towards the same general end, the propagation of the national war purpose. All operate under the directive benison of the M. O. I.-Crown Film Unit production chief, Ian Dalrymple. All serve together on a controlling committee representing the M. O. I., the Public Relations Departments of the Service Units, and the Officers in charge thereof.

Physically the co-ordination is even more keen. A process of rationalisation operates at Pinewood, where individual units dip into the pool, use the same service departments, such as the art department, the sound recorders and stills section, each directed and operated by an individual unit, eat together, in uniform and in civvies, in the same canteen, R. A. F. men and women taking their sandwiches from civilian waitresses, Crown Film Unit technicians being served with beer by military police officers.

Pinewood, where "Pygmalion," "The Mikado," and other major opera of British production saw the first light of the arcs, where the British industry, in its most spectacular and lavish days of artificial boom, swaggered and exhibited its fleeting splendors, is today a uniformed centre with armed sentries, where doors bearing the sign "Sergeants' Mess" and "W. A. A. F. Personnel" are cheek by jowl with more nostalgic portals inscribed "Make Up Department" and "Crowd-Men."

BRITISH 'INVASION' TESTS HIT THEATRES

An occasional interference with the trade of British picture houses now takes the form of local "invasion exercises." These exercises, aimed to train the services and civil defense forces against enemy attack, have been launched in various parts of the country. In some areas the film houses have been compelled to close during the exercises, which sometimes last a whole day.

Under a special Government order Civil Commissioners have been given power to close picture houses during the "incident."

Fields of Operation For Units Differ

As already indicated, the operations of the three Units, though based on the same foundation, differ in certain regards. The Crown Film Unit concentrates upon the war in its civilian aspects and its productions are paid for by the Treasury. Its films are inspired by the war effort and aimed to assist the work of various Government departments and State purposes. Its producer acts as "Unit Producer" to the two Service Units. The Crown Film Unit, born as the G. P. O. Film Unit and later expanded under the Ministry of Information's wing, undertakes the physical operation of Pinewood Studios. The Crown Film Unit provides the art department and musical direction. The Army Film Unit is responsible for all the Western Electric sound apparatus and electrical gear. The R. A. F. Film Unit controls the "stills" department.

There is no profit made for the films produced and distributed; any revenue which accrues is returned to the Treasury.

Crown Films Oldest Unit

The Crown Film Unit, which in September, 1939, under its old form of the G. O. P. Film Unit, diverted its energies from publicizing the Post Office to observing a nation at war, has since then produced a highly creditable fresco of pictures which have included features of the caliber of "Target for Tonight" and "Wavell's 30,000," and a varied pattern of shorts dealing with lightships, factories, the Free French, public health, A. R. P., the Merchant Navy, ferry piloting and workers' welfare.

Its current activities include six further features, "We Search and Strike," dealing with the work of the Coastal Command; "I Was a Fireman," telling the story of Britain's volunteer firemen; "A. 1 Priority," the tale of American Aid to Britain, and three subjects concerned with the Western approaches to Britain (these in color), the Submarine Service, and Allied resistance throughout Europe.

Special attention is also being paid to the American market and films are currently being made—some already produced—for distribution exclusively in U. S. A. One of these, "America Moves Up," has already gone to New York, and another concerned with the American Troops in Northern Ireland, is in preparation.

Parenthetically, it is worthy of record here that up to January, 1942, the M. O. I. has sponsored no less than 201 films, two of them features, 75 made for gratuitous showing in British theatres, 20 for commercial release, 65 for non-theatrical release, 13 for overseas, 17 as trailers for newsreels and 11 Colonial films for Africa.

Army Unit to Make Features

The Army Film Unit, whose operations and activities have already been dealt with exhaustively in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, has another studio at Wembley, but its director and staff are stationed at Pinewood. Originally formed in November, 1940, the Army Film Unit has made shorts for the M. O. I., as well as numerous shorts for training, records and propaganda purposes. It has units abroad as well as at home and has sent cameramen on Commando Raids, such as those at Lofoten and Vaagso.

Among recent films completed, or near completion, are a film dealing with the machinery for selection of personnel, "The Right Man," and "Troopship," "Front Line Revisited" and "Tank Battle." The move to Pinewood in March has undoubtedly assisted the operations of the A. F. U. and it is about to produce pictures of feature length. One of these will show how the Army has been rebuilt since the days of the Fall of France.

Baby of the three Units is the R. A. F. Film Production Unit, which, while authorized in 1941, has only recently come into active operation. The organization consists of a headquarters' staff, four mobile shooting detachments in the Home Command, and a larger unit operating in the Middle East. Studios, library, and cutting work are carried out at the combined Services' studio at Pinewood. A flight of special aircraft has been assembled as camera planes for the purposes of aerial photography.

The main functions of the Unit are: (1) to record the work of the R. A. F. (2) to produce propaganda documentaries, (3) to make training films and experimental pictures which cannot be, for security reasons, entrusted to commercial companies, (4) to prepare films for official use and record, and (5) to assist commercial productions by supplying library material.

A Royal Canadian Air Force Unit is being attached to the R. A. F. Film Production Unit to cover the activities of the R. C. A. F. in Britain. (Already a Polish Film Unit is working at Pinewood). Under its charter the unit has a modest production program of three feature documentaries and six shorts. So far three films have been launched: "The Big Pack," a feature about the Commandos' Command, "Water Babies Mark 5," concerning waterborne balloons, and "Fly Away Peter," a short dealing with reinforcements to the Middle East.

Check 15,000 Theatres for Bond Drive

The first month of the industry's War Bond and Stamp campaign closed this week, and preparations were under way at national headquarters in New York for a nationwide tabulation system. The plan, being developed by Si Fabian, campaign director, and Arthur Mayer of the War Activities Committee, involves the recording and filing of a report from each of the 15,000 theatres participating in the drive, which will continue for the duration.

First of these monthly reports of bond and stamp sales will be due July 1st, covering the first month of the industry's campaign. International Business Machine service has been enlisted to set up the mechanics of the system and the Treasury Department is providing a staff of six to handle the reports.

It is planned to erect a bulletin board in Times Square on which the state totals and grand totals of theatre sales will be displayed, a spectacular method of dramatizing the war activities of the industry. Full cooperation of all exhibitors is necessary for the execution of the plan.

An account number is being assigned to each theatre and exhibitors are asked by War Activities to list their account numbers in making monthly reports to headquarters.

Star Tour Aids Bond Sales

Jane Withers, Republic star making personal appearances at the Earle Theatre in Philadelphia, toured the surrounding territory on behalf of War Bond Sales. Here she is shown with Jay King, manager of the Yorktown Theatre and chairman of the War Activities Committee of Montgomery County, and admirers.

WAC to Issue Monthly Bulletin

The theatre division of WAC, meanwhile, is planning a monthly publication, designed to inform and instruct exhibitors on the War Bond drive, according to an announcement made by Mr. Fabian on Monday. First issue of the publication, to be called "Showmen at War," is expected to appear about July 10th. It will be of tabloid size, and will contain eight pages, chiefly pictorial. Oscar A. Doob will be editor and the staff includes Harry Goldberg, Harry Mandel, Ernest Emerling and WAC field publicity men.

RKO announced this week that a total of $733,075 in War Bonds was pledged in the circuit's theatres in the New York metropolitan area during the first month of the campaign. A total of 29,323 bonds in $25 denominations were entered in the contest held in RKO houses to stimulate the sale of bonds.

Employes at 14 Twentieth Century-Fox branches throughout the country have subscribed 100 per cent for the War Bond payroll allotment plan, Tom J. Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution, reported last Saturday in New York. Mr. Connors said that 94 per cent of all U. S. branch employes have enrolled.

Hollywood To Pool Charities Funds

Because of the flood of war-fund appeals directed at the motion picture industry, Hollywood's Permanent Charities Committee is considering a proposal for the pooling of all charity drives into one yearly money-raising campaign, providing for deductions to be made from salaries of the industry's personnel. Whether the plan will go through depends upon the reaction of guilds, unions and associations whose members would be affected, it was said.

Under the plan, on annual incomes up to $2,500 the charity assessment would be 5 per cent; up to $7,500, 1 per cent; up to $15,000, 1.5 per cent; up to $30,000, 2 per cent; $50,000, 2.5 per cent; above $50,000, 3 per cent.

According to the committee which is sponsoring the plan, a single, concentrated, annual charity drive would save money, time and energy and would have the objective of lining up every person in the industry to sign a pledge authorizing weekly salary deductions for the purpose. The money raised by this method, it was said, would take care of all charity demands made upon Hollywood during a year's time. The only exception would be the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

"Hero Day" in Los Angeles

Next Monday, June 29th, is the day of Los Angeles' War Heroes Parade, for which Charles P. Skouras, president of National Theatres, is general coordinator. Sixteen American and British fighters who have been touring the country will appear at the Coliseum following the parade and other ceremonies marking the event.

The Army's limitation on the size of public gatherings will be suspended for the occasion, it was reported. Mayor Fletcher Bowron and Howard D. Mills of the Treasury Department will serve as honorary chairmen with Mr. Skouras.

$1,700,000 Passed In Army-Navy Drive

Theatre collections for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief passed the $1,700,000 mark last Friday, it was announced at national headquarters in New York this week. Among the remittances received were: George Mann (Redwood) theatres (California), $4,200; Blumenfeld Theatres, California, $8,442; Commonwealth Amusement Corp., Kansas City, $4,748; Meco Theatres Corp., Birmingham, Alabama, $3,317; Lebanon Theatres Corp., Lebanon, Pa., $1,437; Comerford Publix Theatres Corp., Scranton, Pa., $15,202.

Chicago Raises $3,225 for China

The Chicago motion picture division of United China Relief collected a total of $3,225 so far within the industry, Edwin Silverman, chairman, reported on Monday. Contributions to date are: Balaban & Katz, $500; Essaness Theatres, $500; John Balaban, $500; Harry & Elmer Balaban, $200; Warner Brothers Theatres, $300; Jules Rubens, $200; Jones, Linick & Schaefer, $200; Robert Michael, Argmore Theatre, $100; Schoenstadt Theatres, $200; Oriental Theatre, $100; Telenews Corp., $50; Four Star Theatre, $50; Leo Spitz, $100; Jack Kirsch, $75, and Thomas Flannery of the Whiteway Sign Co., $150. John Balaban, Jack Kirsch and James E. Coston are co-chairmen of the drive in Chicago.

Canadian Show Nets $200,000

The Herbert Wilcox-Anna Neagle Celebrity Parade, touring Canada for the benefit of the Air Cadet League, has raised $200,000 in three performances in Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. The Toronto opening at the Victoria Theatre last week netted $97,300 for the fund. Miss Neagle is the star of the show, which was produced and directed by Herbert Wilcox. The tour will include performances in eight other Canadian cities, with proceeds going to the League.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

If anyone believes that teachers of higher learning are not a busy lot these days, let them consider, for the nonce, certain evidence at hand as received in documentary form by the Warner home office in New York only this week.

Seems that Doctor S. I. Hayakawa, who is Japanese by ancestry, teaches English at the Illinois Institute of Technology, in Chicago, is a Canadian by birth and a citizen of these United States, by adoption, has analyzed the words: "Yankee Doodle Dandy," the same "Yankee Doodle Dandy" words of Warners' "Yankee Doodle Dandy" motion picture, and comes forth, with the following observations, reported partially, which would indicate that Warners were on the right track when they selected "Yankee Doodle Dandy":

> By DR. SAMUEL I. HAYAKAWA
> "There is a multiple appeal to the expression, 'Yankee Doodle Dandy.' I shall attempt to identify some of the factors
> "1. Its effective connotations (i.e., its 'oomph') arise first of all from its patriotic overtones—American Revolution, Spirit of '76, etc.
>
> "2. Said 'oomph' is reinforced by the fact that the words immediately recall the tune—a highly spirited tune, with a quick beat. I think especially of the ascending line, 'He put a feather in his hat,' followed by the emphatically affirmative 'And Called it Macaroni'—a proud, strutting spirit.
> "3. The words themselves have a cheerful beat, irrespective of the tune, which is an interesting and rapid one, known technically as a trochaic trimeter (i.e., oompa, oompa, oompa) . . ."

Not so many years ago, Hollywood studios boasted loudly of their ten-dollar-a-seat 'world premieres.' Kate Smith bought two tickets in New York, on Monday, at five thousand iron men per, paying $10,000, on the line, for a pair of seats for the premiere of the Irving Berlin soldier show, "This Is the Army," opening on Saturday evening, July 4th, at the Broadway Theatre, for the Army Emergency Relief Fund.

Rare, indeed, is the tribute carried away to war service such as that placed in writing by the foreign publicity directors of New York's distribution home offices, for Kenneth Woodyard Clark, who, the other day, went from a publicity post in the MPPDA under 'General' Will Harrison Hays, to a majorship in the Army under Colonel A. Robert Ginsburgh.

Major Clark received from his colleagues, a resolution on a scroll commending him for his "initiative, diplomacy, political sagacity and epistolary astuteness, not to mention horse sense."

Mike Hoffay, of RKO's export department at the New York office, tells us that it takes about a year for a letter to reach him from Spain and to get a reply back to the original destination.

J. Gallego, RKO publicity manager in the RKO office at Barcelona, posted a letter to Mike under date of last December 24th, sending greetings for last New Year's Day. He received it on Monday, June 22nd.

The Philadelphia Variety Club, like other Variety Clubs, has made contributions to maernity hospitals and to orphaned babies. This week the Philadelphia Variety Club bought a baby incubator.

The Wilby-Kincey circuit partnership in the southeast acquired property on the outskirts of Birmingham, Alabama, for a Drive-In theatre. Came the war and priorities on building materials, and, especially tire and gasoline rationing, bringing transportation curtailments. And plans for erection were called off. So Bob Wilby and partner H. F. Kincey changed the construction announcement sign on the property to give notice to the the public that, "After We Lick the Nazis and the Japs, a Modern Drive-In Theatre Will Be Built Here. Until Then, the Funds for Building Are Invested in U. S. Defense Bonds."

There'll be no more cut-rate embalming. The Government in Washington has even stopped that. The order announced last Tuesday night by the Office of Price Administrator Leon Henderson, imposing ceiling prices on all consumer services, effective July 1st, applies to services from shoe-shiners to morticians. But it specially excluded theatres, theatrical booking agents and ticket brokers.

It was almost unanimous among the City Council of Seattle on the vote on an ordinance requiring that all dogs during the duration should remain indoors from sunset 'till 7 A.M. The dissenting votes were from councilmen who insisted that it should be 'both a cat and dog curfew.' The balance of the Council overruled, with this observation: "Why take the romance out of a cat's life in the guise of a war emergency?"

John Ford, 20th Century-Fox director, left that company's studio, and Hollywood, last year, after "How Green Was My Valley," for service in the United States Navy, and some action. Apparently, he got same, at Midway, when the Japs attacked, and were routed.

The story of Commander John Ford, USN, at Midway, is only seeping through Navy censorship, and seeping in small seeps. Seems he was atop a powerhouse, one of the principal targets of the defeated raiders, with a motion picture camera, and 'shot' the picture of the Midway Battle. A machine-gun bullet wound in one arm interfered only slightly, so press wire dispatches reveal—dispatches passed by Navy Censors. At last report John Ford was due in Washington with his motion picture record of the battle.

The story of John Ford, Irish from Portland, Maine, 1895, also led inquisitive reporters to the fact that his real name is not John Ford, but Sean O'Fearna. He borrowed the name of Ford from one Francis Ford, of early silent-serial thriller days. The one using the name of Francis Ford is John Ford's brother.

The story of John Ford, now of the Navy, should also properly include mention of his production of "The Grapes of Wrath."

Robert Kevin, movie editor of the Montreal, Quebec, Star, reported, the other day, on a moontide wedding—a Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation "Moontide Wedding," as follows:

> There's a story going about today, in print, which states that Col. Marcel Lacasse and his lady, Lucille Robitaille, who were married this morning at Notre Dame des Neiges Church were inspired for the ceremony by seeing Jean Gabin, the French film star, portray a successful romance on the screen the other evening, at a special preview of "Moontide." This is definitely an over-statement. Mr. Lacasse and Miss Robitaille had the idea long before they saw "Moontide." They intended to be married in September. But an agent from 20th Century-Fox thought it would be a good idea to have a marriage ceremony to heighten the atmosphere of his advance publicity for "Moontide." Considering that he was willing to finance the idea, too, no one particularly blames the couple for taking advantage of the situation. Single concession is that they tell their grandchildren it was a "Moontide Wedding." Considering that none (not even the agent) knows what is particularly different about a "Moontide Wedding"—as compared to other weddings—this is a minor concession to make.

'KEOUGH SAVED PARAMOUNT BY PAYOFF TO BIOFF'

Officials Praise Course of Action in Payments to Union Representatives

A parade of Paramount officials and directors, called to the stand by minority stockholders in the second week of trial of their test suit to force an accounting of $100,000 in extortion money paid to Willie Bioff and George E. Browne, voiced the unanimous opinion that Austin C. Keough had saved his company from a second bankruptcy by complying with the demands of the now ex-labor leaders. That Mr. Keough had kept a secret well was also their unanimous opinion as each witness told N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Carroll G. Walter that they knew nothing of the extortion demands until long after they had been met.

Decision was reserved on Tuesday by Justice Walter as the trial ended. He announced that he would read his decision from the bench on Friday morning.

With similar actions pending against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp., Loew's, Inc., and Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., attorneys from those companies cocked an attentive ear to the developments of the Paramount trial. Attending all sessions of the court were Stanleigh P. Friedman and Robert W. Perkins of Warners, Leopold Freedman of Loew's and several attorneys for Twentieth-Fox.

Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of directors, who followed Mr. Keough, the opening witness on Thursday, said that the directors at a meeting held on July 31, 1941, considered the disclosures of the Browne-Bioff criminal trial and then voted its support of Mr. Keough's action without a dissenting voice. In doing so, Mr. Zukor added, the board absolved Mr. Keough from any possible legal or financial responsibilities which might be placed upon him.

Company "Wise" In Meeting Demands

The board felt, he continued, and in this he was supported by Stanton Griffis, the third witness, that Paramount was in a weakened financial position at the time of the demands and could not have withstood a widespread strike such as was threatened. Paramount was certainly wise in meeting the demands if other companies much stronger at that time considered it an unhappy necessity, Mr. Zukor claimed. The witness said that he first learned of the entire affair when he read of it in daily newspaper accounts of the federal indictment against Browne and Bioff.

Mr. Griffis sharply clashed with Alfred J. Talley, stockholders' counsel, over the ethics of the payments. The witness flared up when Mr. Talley sought to imply that the payments were not extortion but bribery. Asked what his opinion was, Mr. Griffis heatedly replied: "I am excessively proud of my friendship with Mr. Keough. He had the courage and the guts to do what he did to save this company. Had he done otherwise, there would be no stockholders left to sue."

Continued probing by Mr. Talley in an effort to learn whether any payments other than that of $100,000 had been made to union officials met uniform failure as the trial unwound. Mr. Zukor, Mr. Griffis and subsequent witnesses questioned on this point either flatly denied that there had been any other payments or disclaimed any knowledge of whether they had been made. Frequently, objections raised to this line of interrogation were sustained by Justice Walter, who blocked the questions as a form of "fishing."

Plaintiffs Fail in Move to Inspect Books

A move by the plaintiffs to amend the complaint by adding an allegation that Balaban & Katz, Chicago theatre affiliate of Paramount, had also paid tribute to Bioff was barred by the court. Denial of the motion followed an admission by Mr. Talley that he had no definite proof of such a payment.

As trial opened on Friday Justice Walter denied a request by stockholder attorneys for permission to inspect books and records of the company. The move was a further effort by the plaintiffs to learn whether any payments has been made which were still unknown. "You are trying a law suit, not trying to discover one," Judge Walter declared in refusing his permission.

Balaban and Former Officers Testify

In the course of the day's hearing, the plaintiffs called to the stand Barney Balaban, president of the company; John E. Otterson, a former president; George J. Schaefer, formerly a vice-president of Paramount, and Edwin L. Weisl, a director. Mr. Balaban said he knew nothing of the demands until long after the payments were made. In his opinion, Paramount had been saved from being forced anew into bankruptcy by compliance with Bioff and Browne. The witness said that he had no knowledge of any extortion tribute paid in Chicago to Nick Circella, alias Dean.

Otterson Calls Keough 'Loyal'

Mr. Otterson recalled that he had a number of discussions with Mr. Keough preliminary to the payments. The meetings held by industry executives with Browne and Bioff took place while he was on the coast, Mr. Otterson said, but he was constantly informed of developments by Mr. Keough. He characterized Mr. Keough as "completely loyal to the company." Both Mr. Schaefer and Mr. Weisl testified briefly during the day. Mr. Schaefer explained that he was unaware of the situation at the time. Mr. Weisl spoke of an investigation which he conducted last year in behalf of the board of directors. His detailed study of the entire matter led him to the inescapable conclusion that the best interests of the company had been served by Mr. Keough, the witness concluded.

Placed on the stand on Monday, Fred Mohrhardt, company comptroller, said that the Paramount theatres met annual fixed charges of $17,000,000 and an annual payroll of $15,000,000. His testimony was brought out on cross-examination by Louis Nizer, Paramount lawyer, to evidence the tremendous properties which were jeopardized by the threatened strike of the labor czars. To supplement this testimony, Neil F. Agnew, another witness called by the plaintiffs, testified that the sales department disbursed $2,280,000 annually as its payroll in servicing over 12,000 accounts which brought $600,000 weekly to Paramount.

Officials Deny Knowledge of Events

Questioned by Mr. Talley on Monday were also William S. Gray, Jr., John W. Hicks, Jr., and Norman Collyer. Each of these Paramount officials were asked to explain what they knew of the payments to Browne and Bioff. In each instance, all knowledge of the affair was disclaimed. None of the witnesses felt that it was improper for them to have been kept in the dark. The consensus of opinion was that in a matter as highly confidential in nature as the dealings with Browne and Bioff it would have been indiscreet to have informed too many officials.

The court day closed with Florence Rose, secretary to Louis Krouse, secretary-treasurer of the IATSE, on the stand. Miss Rose wrangled with Mr. Nizer on whether Bioff was a representative of the IATSE or rather the personal representative of the president, Browne. The witness insisted that Bioff was a representative of the union, but was unable to satisfy Mr. Nizer. The Paramount attorney, intent upon proving that the shakedown was a private and not a union affair, persisted in his stand that Bioff acted as Browne's representative.

Theatres Escape New Canadian Tax

Theatres and sports have escaped further taxation in Canada's third war budget, presented Wednesday at Ottawa by Finance Minister Ilsley. A new 20 per cent tax was placed upon charges to customers of night clubs, cabarets, and dance halls.

The Finance Minister said his country was faced with a general expenditure, for war and normal government, of $3,900,000,000 in the current fiscal year, and a likely deficit of $1,850,000,000. The new levies, on the above, and on commodities and services, will net the Government $377,850,000.

Also, the excess profits tax was increased from 75 to 100 per cent; 20 per cent is returnable after the war. And film theatres will be affected by a new compulsory savings plan, taking a percentage from weekly salaries of virtually all.

Field Leaders to Serve in Goodwill Posts

Response from leading film industry figures in the field to requests that they serve as regional representatives of the Eastern Public Relations Committee was reported at midweek by Glendon Allvine, secretary, in New York.

The speed with which replies have been received and the unanimous willingness of key circuit, distribution or exchange men to serve as "correspondents" for the industry was described by Mr. Allvine as a very concrete evidence of a new spirit of unity in the industry. The regional representatives will act as local advisers and agents for the public relations committee as need arises.

More than 21 replies were received within a few days of dispatch of the invitations, Mr. Allvine said. They all stressed willingness to join in cooperative endeavor for the good of the industry.

S. Barret McCormick, head of RKO advertising and publicity, was elected chairman of the eastern committee of publicity department chiefs on Thursday, June 19th, at a luncheon meeting at the New York Athletic Club. He succeeds Robert Gillham of Paramount and will serve for a six month term.

Mort Blumenstock, of Warners, was elected a new member of the executive committee, which will also serve for six months. Other members are Mr. McCormick, Mr. Gillham and Robert Trumbull of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Committee Program Gets Under Way

Action is already underway, Mr. Allvine said, to set in effect the committee program approved last week by the directors of the MPPDA. Work is nearing completion on the preparation of a master mailing list and an outline of the proposed periodic committee news letter is ready.

Among committee proposals which have been submitted to company heads recently is a suggestion that the industry as a whole receive credit for star radio appearances. The committee has suggested that instead of guest air appearances being credited to a particular company the players' air appearances, and the dramatization of film scripts on the radio, be announced as a "public service for your entertainment from the motion picture industry." Reference to a particular release or company would not be excluded.

IFRC Meets With Rockefeller Group

Representatives of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and members of the International Film Relations Committee held their second joint conference on Monday to discuss continuing collaboration. The Coordinator's office was represented by Charles E. McCarthy, director of publicity of the motion picture section; John M. Halpern of the radio division, and Harry Casler, photo editor.

Since February the IFRC has completed some 15 assignments for the Coordinator's office. Institutional feature material and photographs to be sent to Latin American newspapers through the Coordinator's channels are prepared by the IFRC through a system of rotating editors. Each is responsible for supplying institutional feature material for one month. Clarence J. Schneider of Columbia is the current editor. He will be succeeded by Dave Blum of Metro.

The groups discussed two new radio projects, details of which have not yet been worked out. The meeting was on the third anniversary of the International Film Relations Committee's shortwave broadcasts over NBC and CBS, which will continue.

PRAISE NEWSREELS FOR THE "FACTS"

The newsreels were the only medium which presented the facts about rubber without conflict, according to Robert Collyer, in charge of the newsreel section of the Office of Emergency Management. Mr. Collyer, Tuesday, in Washington, asserted newspapers and the radio publicized inconsistent reports, and that the newsreels gave the story "straight without any arguments." The public confusion over the need for rubber led President to order the scrap rubber collection, so that the amount available might be truly ascertained.

Victory Short Sales System Undetermined

Agreement on a general formula by all companies for the distribution of the 26 Victory Short subjects now in production at the instigation of Lowell Mellett, Coordinator of Government Films, has not yet been reached. The seven companies now at work on films for the project are all agreed in principle on the minimum cost, non-profit distribution suggestion, but the specific rental terms on which each company will distribute its pictures has not been decided.

Several companies plan to issue the pictures as supplements to their regular short subjects programs, while others, notably MGM and Fox, will include the pictures in their regular short subject series.

Members of the War Activities Committee subcommittee, which has been working on the program, will meet again soon to take final action on a unified system. They will also decide whether the pictures will be issued under the WAC seal of approval.

Lawrence Appoints Maurice Silverstein

Laudy Lawrence, Twentieth Century-Fox foreign distribution chief, in New York, has appointed Maurice Silverstein special home office representative for Cuba, Central America and several South American countries.

The new representative will make his first trip through his territory in August, visiting branches in Cuba, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Chile and Central American capitals.

Mr. Silverstein was with MGM's foreign department for 16 years and has been Far Eastern manager with headquarters in Singapore, and prior to this Far Eastern service spent two years in Colombia and one in Venezuela.

5-Year MGM-Hornblow Deal

Arthur Hornblow, producer, has signed a five-year contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He will begin work on the script for a revival of "Quo Vadis" following a two-weeks vacation. His most recent production is "The Major and the Minor," with Ginger Rogers and Ray Milland, at Paramount.

RKO Directors Reelected; Schaefer out

All RKO directors with the exception of George J. Schaefer, whose resignation as president and a director of the company became effective June 17th, were reelected to the company's board of directors at the annual meeting of stockholders in Dover, Del., last week.

The stockholders first approved an amendment to the company's by-laws reducing the authorized number of directors from the former 13 to 11. J. Miller Walker, secretary of the company, was elected to the board as the 11th director. It is understood that Mr. Walker will remain on the board until a new RKO president has been designated to succeed Mr. Schaefer.

The directors reelected are: Raymond Bill, Ned E. Depinet, Thomas P. Durell, Frederick L. Ehrman, L. Lawrence Green, DeWitt Millhauser, Richard C. Patterson, Jr., N. Peter Rathvon, John M. Whitaker and Lunsford P. Yandell.

The directors are scheduled to meet shortly in New York for a reorganization meeting. It now appears that the company will operate without a president until reorganization plans are complete.

The Securities and Exchange Commission at Philadelphia on Tuesday granted a joint petition of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Keith-Albee-Orpheum corporations for the sale by RKO to KAO of all or part of 700 shares of 7 per cent cumulative convertible preferred KAO stock for $95 a share. It exempted the sale from provisions of Section 17(A) of the investment company act.

The proposed sale meets a requirement in the KAO certificate of incorporation which stipulates that it retire 700 shares of preferred stock annually after 1941. It may do this by redemption or purchase with surplus or net profits remaining after all past quarterly preferred dividends have been met. There are 15,000 outstanding shares of KAO 7 per cent cumulative preferred. It has a par value of $100, callable at $110 a share, plus accrued dividends.

SEC Lists RKO 1941 Salaries

The Securities and Exchange Commission this week reported that Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation paid Mr. Schaefer $103,410 plus a weekly expense account of $250 in 1941.

Joseph I. Breen, under a five-year contract, was paid $104,000 as production manager of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., last year. Mr. Breen resigned from the company to return to his former post as head of the Production Code Administration.

Mr. Depinet, vice-president, earned $78,350, while Mr. Rathvon, chairman of the executive board, received $62,612.

Other salaries reported by the SEC included: Edgar Bergen, $282,000 for his radio work in 1941 by Standard Brands; and Ray Noble and his orchestra, $32,000 by the same company.

The SEC also reported 1941 earnings of officials of the General Aniline and Film Corporation, parent company of Agfa Ansco, as follows: R. Hutz, vice-president, $86,300; D. A. Schmitz, president, $68,250, and Ernest Schwartz, vice-president, $60,950. This company is now being operated by the U. S. Alien Property Custodian.

CIO Gets Industry Foothold in SPG

Publicists' Guild Approves Affiliation with Office Workers, 172 to 39

Philip Murray's C.I.O. has captured another film industry union—the Screen Publicists Guild, New York, which voted affiliation this week by a vote of 172 to 39. Ballots, in a mail poll, were counted Monday.

The union is the third to join. Already in were the Screen Readers Guild, and the clerical workers in the New York home offices of the distributors, represented by the Screen Office and Professional Employees Guild, Local 109, of the CIO's United Office and Professional Workers of America.

The Screen Publicists Guild will become a separate local of the UOPA.

The affiliation comes one year after it was rejected, and after months of wrangling with the distributors over a closed shop, which was finally accepted.

In Hollywood, wage scales were expected to be drawn this week for members of the Screen Office Employees Guild, at conferences between its representatives and those of the producers.

Meanwhile, Federal efforts to mediate the SPG dispute with Warners have failed, the Guild stating:

"Warners Brothers has once more refused . . . the company insists upon a position which would substantially undercut the standards set up in the motion picture industry by the SPG and the seven other major companies.

"The Guild cannot permit such lowering of standards. . . . It is expected that the matter will now in due course come before the National War Labor Board."

Projectionists' Union Re-Opens Negotiations

Meanwhile, also in New York, the long feud between the country's largest projectionists' union, Local 306, and its only established rival there, the Empire State Motion Picture Operators Union, may be settled soon. Negotiations for the latter's absorption have been reopened, through the offices of Father John P. Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Relations Board, it was learned.

One meeting was held two weeks ago and another was to be held this week. Conferees were Herman Gelber, Local 306 president; Abraham Kindler, Empire president; Father Boland; Nathan Frankel, and Allan Goodwin, attorneys.

Negotiations shattered last year over protection of Empire members in the Century circuit, New York. The circuit had an Empire contract. It was feared absorption of Empire by Local 306 would make Century drop the men. Local 306 offered to conduct a strike if this happened, but refused to guarantee the men jobs elsewhere. The circuit has since signed another 10 year contract with Empire.

In Hollywood, the Twentieth Century Fox Janitors and Matrons Guild has won from the National Labor Relations Board the right to a bargaining agency election at the studio. Company officials refused to negotiate with the Guild unless the Board certified it.

Junior members of the Screen Directors Guild have elected Horace Hough president; William Tummel, vice-president; Clem Jones, secretary; Eli Dunn, treasurer.

New season officers of the New Haven exchange employees' union, Local 41-B, are Samuel Zipkin, reelected; Marie Smith, vice-president; Fay Spadoni, treasurer; James Mahon, secretary; Robert Hoffman, business agent.

Local 702, Laboratory Technicians Union, New York, has signed a three year contract with the Paramount laboratory, Long Island City. Affected are 85 workers. The laboratory is the last in the East to be organized by Local 702.

A ruling by an officer of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees was noted last week, in Columbus, Ohio, by P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Mr. Wood pointed to the decision by William F. Raoul, assistant international vice-president of the IATSE, that all running of defense films for all shows of the day constitutes the amount of overtime for which credit should be given.

Louisiana Tax Bill Withdrawn

The Louisiana House of Representatives ways and means committee this week placed an unfavorable label on a series of bills designed to increase sharply the taxes on circuit theatres in the state and, immediately after, Representative Blanchard withdrew his proposed measure. Representative Blanchard also withdrew two other bills affecting the motion picture industry, including HB 708, which would have created a Louisiana motion picture license commission and HB 709 which would have banned "the practice known as compulsory block booking and blind selling." Representative Crais of New Orleans also withdrew a bill which would have sharply raised the license tax on chain retail stores.

The Louisiana House of Representatives on June 17th passed and sent to the Senate, after a five-hour debate, a statewide retail sales tax law of 2 per cent as a "two-year wartime revenue measure" estimated to yield about $12,500,000 annually. An amendment to the measure reducing the tax to one per cent was earlier defeated. Opponents of the law declared it was unfair in principle because it would tend to curtail "contributions of the state's citizenry to the federal war effort." Advocates of the bill, supported by the administration, maintained the tax was needed to offset loss of revenue from normal levies.

Alabama Sunday Shows Allowed

Attorney General Lawson of Alabama has ruled that operation of Sunday motion picture houses in that state in cities of less than 15,000 population is not prohibited under the 1940 Code which specifically provides that Sunday shows may be banned in cities of 15,000 and over when voters of such municipalities approve such a ban through a referendum.

New Delay on Minnesota's Anti-Five Law

Possible appeal of the ruling knocking out the Minnesota anti-block-of-five law before the expiration of stay of judgment Saturday appeared definitely remote this week.

A two weeks' extension of the original 60-day stay was granted to permit James F. Lynch, Ramsey county attorney in St. Paul, to file motions for amended findings and for a new trial. Arguments were made Saturday by William F. Desmond, Mr. Lynch's assistant, in his absence.

Mr. Desmond pleaded before Judge Albin S. Pearson in Ramsey county district court, St. Paul, that findings were contrary to the evidence and not justified. His arguments were opposed by David Shearer, Minneapolis attorney for the six majors which successfully fought the Minnesota law before Judge Pearson.

Judge Pearson took the motions under advisement. Meanwhile, Mr. Desmond indicated, the state, which already obtained one extension of the original stay of judgment, would not seek a further stay when the time expired Saturday.

No further action is planned except a possible appeal, he said, and that may be sought at any time up to six months after judgment is entered, probably next Monday.

Meanwhile Northwest Allied, which sponsored the law and defended it in two legal actions, indicated it would withhold action on an appeal pending decision on the unity program. Fred Strom, Allied secretary, was present in court when arguments on motions were presented.

He said Northwest Allied would undertake no action on the unity plan until it appeared that it was acceptable to the industry at large. Then it will either endorse it and join in the national movement, or reject it and seek to raise funds to finance an appeal of the decision concerning the Minnesota law, held unconstitutional by Judge Pearson.

Three More Houses Sold by Schine

Three more houses acquired by the Schine circuit and ordered back to their original owners by the settlement entered into by the Schine circuit and the Department of Justice, were to be given their owners shortly.

The settlement ended for the duration the anti-trust suit against the circuit, affiliates, and Columbia, United Artists, and Universal, by the Government.

On Monday, M. K. Murphy, Appalachia, Virginia, was to post $13,500 as evidence of good faith in repurchase of the Viv, Corbin, Kentucky, and the State and Appalachia, Appalachia, same state, which he formerly operated.

The Monday date was a time extension granted, although the circuit, in its agreement with the Government, was no obligated to offer the theatres to former owners after June 15th.

Eight other theatres remain for disposal to former owners, under the agreement which provides that such owners have interests in not more than 15 theatres.

They are the Strand, Cumberland, Md.; Plaza, Malone, N. Y.; Memorial, Mt. Vernon, O.; Opera House and Ada Meade, Lexington, Ky.; Scotia, Scotia, N. Y.; Liberty, Pikeville, Ky., and a 50 per cent interest in the Margie Grand, Harland, Ky.

Five others have been returned to owners. These are the Webster, Rochester, N. Y., for which a substantial deposit has been made and which is expected to be turned back as soon as the abstract of title is checked; the Paramount, Glens Falls, N. Y.; the Palace, Clifton Springs, N. Y., and the Cla-Zel and Lyric, Bowling Green, Ohio.

The deposit to be made by Mr. Murphy on Monday to was to grant him 10 additional days to close the deal.

The Webster, in Rochester, has already been reopened by Max Fogel, new owner.

The repurchaser of the Cla-Zel, Bowling Green, Ohio, is Clark Young. However, it is understood, the Schines have retained buying and booking privileges.

Succeeding the late Judge Charles Woodward, Federal Judge Michael T. Igoe has been assigned to hear the $300,000 anti-trust suit against the majors by the Ken Theatre, Chicago.

MORE WOMEN CALLED TO KEY POSTS IN THEATRES

Draft and War Industry Drain on Manpower Brings Replacements

Heading into the seventh month of the war, military services and war industries continue to draw more an dmore upon manpower in the exhibition field, resulting in an extension of circuit and independent theatremen's calls upon the distaff side to replace managers, assistant managers, bookers, ushers and even the more technical side—the projection booth.

During the last two months, exhibitors reported a steady, gradual increase in the number of the fair sex taking over posts left vacant by the men, with indications that before the end of the year, replacement will have been effected on a grand scale. An article about women in the exhibition field was published in the April 11th issue of Motion Picture Herald.

EDNA WEILER

MIRIAM DICKEY

DOROTHY MURPHY

Singular examples of ambitious young women now forging niches in the exhibition field are Edna Weiler, above left; Miriam Dickey, above right, and Dorothy Murphy, right. Miss Weiler, at 17, is assistant manager to M. Spragettis, owner of the State Theatre, Oregon City. She is becoming thoroughly familiar with all phases of theatre management. Miss Dickey, secretary to Captain A. E. Lathrop, operator of the Lathrop Theatres in Alaska, has been buying film in Seattle for the circuit these 11 years, in addition to her other duties. Still in her teens, Miss Murphy, former usherette at the Rainbo Theatre, Spokane, Wash., recently passed examinations qualifying her as a projection operator. She will spend part of her working day in the Rainbo's projection booth and the remainder as cashier.

Heavy Turnover in New England

Recent reports from New England are that theatremen in certain areas where war production plants are centered, are experiencing increasing difficulty in keeping girl ushers on the job. The lure of higher wages offered by industrial plants now converted to the war effort, is cited as the reason for the quick labor turnover among usherettes. One theatre manager, in discussing the situation recently, declared: "My staff changes so fast, I can't even remember their faces."

Replacement of women by the circuits continues at a steady pace. Loew's, for many years one of the few circuits to employ women in executive positions, recently announced three more feminine assistant managers: Ruth Bolton is the first woman assistant manager in Loew's Northeastern division under Charles Kurtzman. Miss Bolton has been named assistant to manager Frank Murphy at the State Theatre, Syracuse. She had been a secretary in the theatre for the past 11 years. Ruthe Parer, of Loew's Broad Theatre, Columbus, Ohio, and Matilda J. Pysyk, Loew's Poli, Norwalk, Conn., are additions to the circuit.

Since the beginning of the war, Warner Bros. has been putting women into positions vacated by men leaving for service in the armed forces. Recent additions are: Beatrice Cypert, Warner Theatre, Morgantown, W. Va., and Margaret Peltz, Ambridge Theatre, Ambridge, Pa. In the Pittsburgh area, 20th Century-Fox is reported training four of its feminine employes as bookers.

Four women have been appointed assistant managers by the United Detroit Theatres, in Detroit: Dorothy Rudine, at the Fisher; Dorothy Martin, Riviera; Mary Turrill, Cinderella, and Eleanor Stanton, Broadway-Capitol.

Loretta Cook has been named first woman assistant manager by the Harris Amusement Company in Pittsburgh, at the Manos Theatre, Jeannette, Pa. She formerly was cashier at the house.

One of the first women assistant managers in Providence, R. I., is Mildred Joyce, 20-year-old high school graduate, who is serving under manager Robert Grossman, at the Avon Theatre of the Louis Gordon circuit.

Lee Goldberg, PRC franchise holder in Cleveland, announced recently that he had employed girls as bookers in all of his exchanges. They are: Jeanette Vernick, Cleveland; Sylvia Gertzman, Cincinnati, and Helen Bohn, Indianapolis. Mr. Goldberg claims to have the first all-girl booking department in the field. Phyllis McCauley, former secretary to PRC branch manager William Flemion, in Detroit, was appointed booker last month.

Other women who are taking over key post in theatres include: Peggy Egbers, assistant, Fox, Spokane; Etta Claire Brackin, manager, Claire, Ozark, Ala.; Mary Jane Hartrich, manager, Trenton, Detroit, operated by Associated Theatres; Winifred Stump, manager, Lincoln Theatre, Goshen, Ind.; Louise Wilson, assistant manager, Palace, Fort Worth, and Mrs. Leon Task, manager of Keith's, Brockton, Mass.

Code Stands in War, Too, Says Breen

Administration Head Sees No New Problems Created by Emergency

from HOLLYWOOD BUREAU

In just one office of the motion picture industry the war presents no new problems. That is the office of the Production Code Administration in Hollywood, concerned with the moral content and implication of the content of the wares of the screen.

Joseph I. Breen, administrator, has now been back at his post, after a period away in production, for a month, a big war month.

"But the war," said Mr. Breen this week, "has brought us no issues or questions. The war simply does not affect the Code or its application. It has raised no issues or questions that were not present and covered by the Code in peace time."

He was asked, "Is the screen going to let down its standards a bit, as radio is doing, to permit a strewing of hells and damns through the dialogue of war subjects for purposes of patriotic emphasis?"

He said, "It is not," and cited consumer correspondence noting the letdown in the field of invisible entertainment.

"But doesn't this mushrooming crop of warfilms coming up present some questions of policy which you haven't had to deal with before?"

"Not at all. We have always had warfilms. We have always had soldiers, sailors and marines in pictures, and we have always had pictures utilizing training bases, battleships and military installations of all kinds as settings. There has always been a requirement for military approval of these pictures and a standing routine for meeting this requirement has been in effect for years. It does not parallel or conflict with our function. Today there are more films of this kind. That is the only difference."

Routine in War Films Unchanged

Standing routine for production of warfilms requires that producers supply five copies of each script to the Secretary of War or Navy, whichever is concerned, together with a specific description of military locations, equipment, personnel or operations for filming of which permission is sought.

Following approval of the request, the film is produced and a finished print is supplied for final approval prior to public exhibition.

A wartime modification of this routine is the stationing of Army and Navy liaison officers in Hollywood to expedite its operation.

Warfilms receive from the Production Code Administration the same inspection and handling accorded all others.

The function of Nelson D. Poynter, resident representative of the United States Coordinator of Films, does not conflict with or impinge upon the function or operation of the Production Code Administration.

The Poynter assignment, according to the official announcement issued at the time of his appointment and frequent public reiterations by the appointee, is to make available to producers data and background information in governmental possession and to suggest and advise regarding its use in films.

Up to now none of the films entailing use of material furnished producers in this manner have created what might be called a situation requiring definition of authority on the point of precedence and it is not foreseen or forecast that any will.

Neither does the Office of Censorship, represented in Hollywood by Watterson Rothacker, chairman, as concerns the censorship of films for export and import, conflict with or duplicate the Production Code Administration activity.

Code Handling 90 Scripts a Month

The single way in which the war may be said to have affected the Production Code Administration is by setting in motion just now a flood tide of production which might be considered as testing its capacity to perform under peak load.

Shooting scripts are coming up for handling at the rate of 90 per month, which is something like double the year-around average and is, directly and indirectly, a result of the war and war conditions.

But no additions to the Breen staff have been made and none are contemplated.

The Breen staff, which carried on the work in his absence under the acting directorship of Geoffrey Shurlock, senior member, includes Addison Durland, Arthur Houghton, T. A. Lynch, Charles R. Metzger, Charles Pettijohn, Jr., and Harry Zehner.

The current and war-induced peak load is not the first which the organization has shouldered and it's not much different from the others, say the members, except that there's more shootin' going on on the screen.

CONGRESSMAN REVIVES FLY'S 'DEAD MACKEREL' CHARGE

FCC Chairman Questioned on NAB Attack at Hearings on Sanders Bill

That "dead mackerel," buried among the memories of the 1941 St. Louis Convention of the National Association of Broadcasters, reared up in aromatic brilliance last week at Washington hearings on the Sanders bill, to plague FCC Chairman James L. Fly as he testified on the proposed reorganization of the Federal Communications Commission.

Mr. Fly's 1941 St. Louis speech in which he charged the affairs of the NAB "smelled" like the dead fish was recalled to the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee by Representative James P. McGranery of Pennsylvania.

In a spirited exchange with the Congressman, the FCC chairman declared that he had drawn a line between the NAB management and the NAB membership and his speech had been aimed at the former. He said he still thought it would be "a good idea" to have a change in the NAB management.

Mr. Fly charged that the radio association was dominated by National and Columbia broadcasting systems and belittled contentions that the votes at the St. Louis convention were on a five-to-one basis in favor of the networks, declaring that of the 500 members of the association less than 100 were present for the voting and on the last vote there were only 19.

Stresses "Public Interest" in Radio

At the same time, he said, the two networks are "splendid organizations" and are doing a vast public service. The differences between them and the commission, he claimed, are purely technical and on many matters networks and commission are cooperating closely.

Stressing the public interest in broadcasting, the FCC chairman asserted that all of the Commission's activities were approached from that angle. It is the basis of the network regulations. He suggested that members of the committee read the network report issued by the Commission a year ago, which he said would convince them of the need for the rules.

Mr. Fly failed to placate Mr. McGranery, who asserted he did not see how, in the face of the St. Louis speech, the networks could have confidence that they would get a square deal from the Commission.

"I think you have demonstrated a great deal of spleen right down the line against these fellows, and there is a cat and dog fight between you," he told Mr. Fly. "It is not going to be helped by some of these statements you have made."

When he discussed the Sanders bill which is the ostensible subject of hearings—although Representative Sanders of Louisiana admitted that his purpose was to get an investigation of the radio situation—Mr. Fly told Representative Carl Hinshaw of California that in the past eight years only 13 stations had been denied renewal of license and two had had their licenses finally revoked. Of the thirteen stations, he said, nine denials were on default or withdrawal of the applicants. Only four involved violations.

FCC REJECTS STATION BIDS

Strict adherence to its wartime policy of no new radio construction was seen this week as the FCC rejected construction or improvement applications from 20 standard stations, 17 FM stations and nine requests for power increases.

The applications were dismissed "without prejudice" on the grounds that they required the use of critical materials. This leaves the way open for appeal on the plea that the proposed project will meet an essential military or civilian need. The rejected requests for increases to 500 kilowatt super-power classification were from WJZ, New York; WGN, Chicago; KFI, Los Angeles; WJR, Detroit; WSM, Nashville, Tenn.; WOR, Newark; WGY, Schenectady; WSB, Atlanta; and WHO, Des Moines.

The bill, he said, would tend to create a network monopoly and he asserted that current FCC regulations were designed to insure free competition. Procedural changes proposed in the bill would slow the work of the Commission Mr. Fly asserted, declaring that the intervention measure would permit persons without relevant interest to participate in hearings. He also attacked limitations of Commission authority over the transfer of management of radio stations arguing that it was equally important for the FCC to be informed on a station's management as well as on the licensee.

He said that action would be taken soon in cooperation with the War Production Board on Defense Communications Board recommendations that a replacement parts pool be set up within the broadcasting industry.

Tuesday, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee reported favorably on President Roosevelt's renomination of Mr. Fly to a new seven-year term as FCC chairman, beginning July 1st. A pssible fight over his retention failed to develop.

FM Industry Carries On

Frequency Modulation broadcasters are making every effort to continue full time operation of existing stations during the war, and to complete stations under construction within present priority allocations, FM Broadcasters, Inc., the industry trade association, reported this week.

Almost half a million radio receivers in the United States are now capable of receiving FM programs it estimated. Less than 15 per cent are beyond the range of existing FM transmitters. FM stations will continue on the air with as complete a program series as possible for these listeners, despite the halt on new set construction the bulletin said.

New York City continues to lead in FM activity with 80,000 sets in use and seven stations on the air, four commercially. Chicago has about 42,000 in its service range while the New England area led by Boston with 10,000 sets has a total of 35,000 receivers within reach of Boston and Mt. Washington stations.

Philadelphia boasts about 17,000 sets. Pittsburgh claims 10,000. Detroit has around 16,000; Milwaukee, 13,000; Los Angeles, 13,000; San Francisco, 6,500; Kansas City, 3,000; Hartford and New Haven, 6,000; Providence, 4,000; Worcester, 3,000; Albany and Schenectady, 4,500; Rochester, 3,500; Cleveland, 5,500; Columbus, 2,200; Washington, 2,000.

Two new FM stations began operation this month in New York and in North Carolina. The Manhattan station is W63NY operated by the Marcus Loew Booking Agency in conjunction with WHN. It is located on a bluff in Palisades Park and uses a 1,000 watt transmitter pending acquisition of authorized 10,000 watt equipment. It transmits from 2 to 9 P.M.

W41MM is a 3,000 watt temporary transmitter for the authorized 50,000 watt super FM transmitter located at Clingman's Peak near Asheville, N. C. It is now transmitting program tests.

Television Cuts Program Time

WPTZ, Philco television station in Philadelphia has followed the example of New York stations by reducing program time to the four hour minimum recently authorized by the FCC. A letter from the station to listeners said, "Philco is as optimistic on the future of television as ever. As soon as the war is over, television will come into its own and realize the high promise that many have predicted for it. The number and length of the station's programs are being reduced only with great regret."

The station continues to relay civilian defense and air raid warden training courses originating over WNBT in New York.

A new television receiver patent (No. 2,285,509) was granted last week to Irl R. Goshaw, of Beverly Hills, Calif., for a design which superimposes sound and light waves to give closer correlation of visual and audio images. The receiver is of conventional cabinet type but uses a concave mirror in the top. Light and sound waves are both directed at the mirror and thence reflected outwards together. The sound is said to appear to originate in the image.

Columbia

CANAL ZONE: Chester Morris, John Hubbard—Had a hunch this was a natural so booked it for Sunday and Monday. Big business on this feature. Everyone enjoyed it. Showed a real profit. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 7-8.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex Small town patronage.

INVADERS, THE: Leslie Howard, Raymond Massey, Laurence Olivier—Business above average. Played May 1-3.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Me. Rural and urban patronage.

KING OF DODGE CITY: Bill Elliott, Tex Ritter—Went over strong with our western fans. Running time. 63 minutes. Played June 5-6.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif. Small lumber town patronage.

SUBMARINE RAIDER: John Howard, M Chapman—Biggest Friday, Saturday in months and how they cheered when the Jap aircraft carrier went down. Good entertainment. Running time, 59 minutes. Played June 12-13.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex Small town patronage

TWO YANKS IN TRINIDAD: Pat O'Brien, Brian Donlevy—Big crowd enjoyed this good action film. They must be tough to go over here. If they don't have guns or fights in them, they lay an egg. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 15-16.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

WIFE TAKES A FLYER, THE: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone—Say, here is a show. They died laughing when old Hitler got kicked. Anyway, big midweek crowd enjoyed this fine film. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 20-21.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BUGLE SOUNDS, THE: Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main—Another good Beery picture. Wallace Beery, Marjorie Main and Lewis Stone should have special mention in this one. It's hard to get business these days, with so many people gone to war, defense work and etc. Business just ordinary, but not the fault of the picture. Played May 31 - June 1.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla.

COURTSHIP OF ANDY HARDY, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone—Business above average. Played April 24-26.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Me. Rural and urban patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S VICTORY: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore—We are pleased to remark that apparently Lew Ayres' recent unfavorable publicity didn't hurt this series a bit. It drew extra business for Friday-Saturday and pleased everyone. Let's continue with more of them when Ayres is released from his ambulance service. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 5-6.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FEMININE TOUCH, THE: Rosalind Russell, Don Ameche—Business not so good. Unsuited for our trade. Running time, 95 minutes. Played May 31-June 1.—A. C. Edwards, Winema Theatre, Scotia, Calif Small lumber town patronage

JOHNNY EAGER: Robert Taylor, Lana Turner, Van Heflin—Two good stars in a good story. This picture is good for the small town and business held up well. Van Heflin is new but this one will bring his stock up. Played June 6-8.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOKEY: Dan Dailey, Jr., Donna Reed—A swell co-feature for any house. Highly approved by audience. Played with "We Were Dancing."—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Me. Rural and urban patronage.

MR. AND MRS. NORTH: Gracie Allen, William Post, Jr.—I would call this a flop, as far as business was concerned. The story is weak and thin. The stars did well with what material they had to work with. I believe what this industry needs is better stories and fewer pictures. Played June 9-11.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHIP AHOY: Eleanor Powell, Red Skelton—A musical without color today is just not a musical. And that is exactly what this is. The story is so time-worn that it has whiskers; and if this fellow Bert Lahr is a funny man the woods are full of them. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 14-15.—C. B. Carter, Clemson and Co-Ed Theatre, Brevard, N. C. Small town and tourist patronage.

TARZAN'S SECRET TREASURE: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good jungle show which pleased the kids on Friday-Saturday. Running time, 81 minutes. Played May 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson—Good picture, which satisfied everyone that came. The trailer helped the attendance by its saying that the picture was endorsed by the management. Played May 23-25.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

VANISHING VIRGINIAN, THE: Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson—Show business but the picture was excellent. Everyone praising it to the skies.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Me. Rural and urban patronage.

WE WERE DANCING: Norma Shearer, Melvyn Douglas—Not for a small town. So long between customers I wrote a letter in the box office on Sunday night! No sympathy for leading characters. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 7-9.—Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Rural and small town patronage

Paramount

BAHAMA PASSAGE: Madeleine Carroll, Stirling Hayden—This Carroll gal is too good looking to put her in "hi-brown." Give us another "Virginia." "Bahama" just fair here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 2-3.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Tex. Small town patronage.

FLY BY NIGHT: Nancy Kelly, Richard Carlson—My house was so empty on this one that Betty Grable could have walked through it in a cellophane bathing suit without getting a single whistle. The picture was not a bad programmer, however. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 2.—C. B. Carter, Clemson and Co-Ed Theatres, Brevard, N. C. Small town patronage

NEW YORK TOWN: Fred MacMurray, Mary Martin—Just a fair picture which failed to get expenses. Played June 2-4.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

Producers Releasing Corp.

MR. CELEBRITY: Doris Day, Buzzy Henry—Believe it pleased those who came; but with an unknown cast it couldn't even draw on Giveaway nights. It takes a lot to get them into our theatre these days. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 10-11.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA TERRORS: Don "Red" Barry, Lynn Merrick—Fair western, played ordinary business. Played May 22-23.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

LADY FOR A NIGHT: Joan Blondell, John Wayne—Didn't care for it myself, but customers seemed to. Played with "Cherokee Strip" and it seemingly made a good program. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 4-6.—Mrs. L. E Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

SLEEPYTIME GAL: Judy Canova—Good picture, but not as good as the previous ones. Judy should sing more and also yodle. Played May 29-30.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

TUXEDO JUNCTION: Weaver Brothers—This has some genuine human interest in it and it satisfied even those who do not as a general rule like the hill billy sort of story. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TUXEDO JUNCTION: Weaver Brothers—More story than recent Weaver pictures. Lots of fun and action. More like this are okay by me. Running time, 71 minutes. Played May 28-30.—Mrs. L. E. Spraker, Star Theatre, Stayton, Ore. Rural and small town patronage.

STEEL AGAINST THE SKY: Lloyd Nolan, Alexis Smith—Fair program picture. Played May 26-28.—Melville Danner, Kozy Theatre, Granite, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY DIED WITH THEIR BOOTS ON: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—A very good picture, with plenty of action in a picture that didn't drag in any one spot and one that did average business. It pleased our patrons, who want action or comedy and don't seem to want anything else. Some big battle scenes in this, something that will be quite a novelty in the newer picture. Buy this one, give it a boost and you will come out alright.—Mayme P. Musselman, Princess Theatre, Lincoln, Kan. Small town patronage.

WILD BILL HICKOK RIDES: Constance Bennett, Bruce Cabot—Folks, here is a picture. A big action special that warrants preferred playing time. Put everything you have behind it and it won't let you down.—W. A. Labarthe, Grant Theatre, Pond Creek, Okla. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOB WILE, Editor
GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

SELLING THE INDUSTRY

SHOWMEN have to work pretty hard these days. In addition to selling their shows, their theatres as institutions and sometimes themselves to their audiences, lately there have been other selling jobs piled on their well-burdened but still broad shoulders.

Showmen are selling War Bonds and Stamps. That this effort is successful has been demonstrated.

Two examples of the success of War Bond showmanship come readily to mind: Warner Brothers' campaign on "Yankee Doodle Dandy", with the seats sold for War Bonds, brought $5,750,000 into the Treasury and, as is often said from the screen, "That ain't hay"; a second and interesting example is the figures furnished by Bud Kornblite of the Capitol, Waverly, New York, whose efforts have resulted in the sale, through the theatre, of an average of more than 50 cents worth of stamps to each person in the town.

The industry, and therefore the showmen, are also doing another job of selling. Victory Films, newsreels, and even feature pictures themselves, are being made with a message. This, too, must be put across to the public.

There is still another job of selling for the showmen—selling the industry.

It is up to us showmen to tell the public as skillfully as we are able of the large part our industry is playing in the war effort — of the great part the industry plays in the annual Red Cross Drive, in the campaigns for the U.S.O. and for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief Funds. It takes considerable skill for a selling job of this kind, for we must show that we do these things without begrudging the effort, that we do them cheerfully and for the good of the commonwealth and not for any personal or business aggrandizement. But it is a definite part of our selling effort to show, however unobtrusively, to what a great extent our industry has aided in the war effort and how it has always demonstrated its willingness to aid any worthy cause.

As an earnest of our sincerity we must not apply this to obvious commonplaces. It should be reserved for the bigger things.

One of the best examples of this type of showmanship to have come to our attention recently was a carefully phrased editorial which Jack Matlack of the Hunt Theatres of Medford, Oregon, was able to sell to the editor of the Medford Mail-Tribune. We quote: "The motion picture industry, ever alert to opportunities for patriotic service, sees in this Army and Navy Relief campaign an avenue for direct assistance to America's fighting men on land, sea and in the air. Nearly 17,000 theatres have generously offered their facilities as receiving points for public contributions. Here in Medford the theatres are on the job in this worthy cause. . . . "

Mr. Matlack, sensing the opportunity for further selling the industry to the public, reprinted the editorial and distributed 5,000 copies as a herald.

The people of Medford were made aware of the contribution of the motion picture industry to this phase of the war effort. Mr. Matlack sold the industry to the public.

Boomerang Showmanship

EVERY once in a while some showman brings to the attention of this department a demonstration of what can best be called boomerang showmanship.

One of those pictures that is admittedly inferior is the subject. These showmen will then use every derogatory adjective in the book, and some not found there, to describe their "attraction". It strikes a lot of people, including the author of this misguided showmanship, as very funny. Maybe it is—up to a certain point. But one can hardly blame the public for soliloquizing thus: "I didn't think this picture was so bad. Now what sort of merchandising is it that tells me not to buy what I liked?"

Does the shoe merchant, the haberdasher, the clothier, the butcher, the baker or any other retailer, ever blatantly advise his patrons that what he has on sale today is poor merchandise?

Of the same kind is the practice of many showmen who agree with their patrons in sharp criticism of a picture or a player and not too infrequently the whole industry. It doesn't do to pick a fight with one's customers over the merits of a picture, but it would seem more discreet, better salesmanship and more tactful to reply somewhat in this manner: "I'm sorry you didn't like the picture. Some people thought it very entertaining. Don't you think it is wonderful that the motion picture industry is able to make so many pictures that entertain so many people?"

A tank replica made of compoboard was planted in the lobby of Loew's State, in Houston, by Francis Deering to put over the sale of War Bonds and Stamps. Volunteer workers are supplied by the Navy Sisters, a girl standing at attention next to the tank, while a second girl is seated inside the tank, making her sales from an open window. The glass compartment on the side of the tank is removable and when filled with paper money has proved quite an attention-getter.

Selling Points

ON THE NEW PRODUCT

THIS ABOVE ALL (20th Century-Fox): There are a number of points of view from which to sell this picture. It was adapted from a book, so tieups can be made with bookstores, circulating libraries, etc... A special movie edition has been published. The stars have considerable drawing power; Joan Fontaine won the Academy Award last year and this fact can be publicized extensively. In the picture she plays the role of a member of the WAAF, British counterpart of the WAAC and the AWVS. Recruiting booths can be set up for these organizations. They can also distribute literature with tie-up copy. A fashion show for uniforms only would be appropriate with the stores selling uniforms for the women's service organizations cooperating. The title is taken from a passage from Shakespeare's "Hamlet". It might be acceptable in some situations to use other passages from "Hamlet" from which titles of books or plays have been taken and together with the "This Above All" passage, stage a contest with prizes for those discerning the titles.

EAGLE SQUADRON (Universal): Anything to do with airplanes will sell this picture to the public and exploitation should center around the fliers and their machines. For instance, stage a guessing contest on the altitude of a particular plane of a commercial airplane flying over your city. Prizes can be awarded to the nearest correct guessers. With the cooperation of your newspaper run a silhouette of one of the types of planes used by the warring nations with a prize to those who identify the most. Real range-finders which have selling copy on their sides are available for giveaway purposes in limited quantities. A book called "The Eagles Roar" and on the same subject as the picture is being published and can be used for tieups. Any newspaper headlines about the Eagle Squadron can be used for blowups in the lobby. Perhaps the paper will refer to the picture in mentioning anything about the squadron.

MUSICAL WESTERN SERIES (Columbia): A series of eight will be made for the new season starring Charles Starrett and Jimmy Davis and His Boys. The Western musical numbers in each release offer an opportunity for many tieups. Many radio stations have Western musical programs. Music stores can be asked to cooperate by displaying title cards of the numbers played in each picture just before playdates. Western song contests can be conducted on the stage. A man dressed as a cowboy, strumming a guitar, would make an effective ballyhoo if properly placarded. A standard display of cowboy equipment could be put into the lobby ahead of each picture in the series, varied sufficiently so it didn't look the same. A stage coach ballyhoo is a good bet when the picture has one of these vehicles in it. With the return to importance of the horse, a hitching post could be put out, properly placarded, of course.

Neilson's "Animal" Teaser Helps Exploit Date

A series of three government postcard teasers were mailed out by Robert Neilson as his advance on "Male Animal" at the State Theatre, in Johnstown, Pa. The first card carried a cut of Fonda; the second a thumbnail of Fonda and Olivia de Havilland and the third carried an invitation to a private screening. The set of three cards were mailed out on different days to the city's beauty operators, Neilson figuring that the hairdressers would do the rest by selling the show to his customers.

Weinstein Promotes Talent Contest

With the best talent from the City College of New York and Hunter competing in an amateur stage show at the RKO 58th Street Theatre, Manager Ansel Weinstein reports on a successful tieup. Since 25 per cent of the proceeds went to the Student Council for the purpose of outfitting a recreation room at Fort Hamilton, the students sponsored the sale of tickets, erecting attractive booths for that purpose in each school. The screen fare featuring "Fantasia" and "Valley of the Sun," both pictures came in for plugs in all college bulletins, booths, and throughout the school.

To further put over his "Fantasia" engagement, Weinstein addressed personal letters to organization groups urging theatre parties, stickers were attached to shopping bags, laundry trucks carried cards and an automatic phonograph in the lobby played tunes from the picture.

Stallman's "Smith" Heralds

Lester Stallman, manager of Schad's Astor Theatre, Reading, Pa., distributed red, white and blue heralds at the war plants for "Joe Smith, American." The heralds announced awards of a $25 defense bond and 10 pairs of guest tickets for the best slogans persuading the public to "keep one's mouth shut."

Treasury Backs 'Eagle Squadron' Chicago Opening

The Midwest premiere of "Eagle Squadron" was held last week under the sponsorship of the Illinois War Stamp Division of the U. S. Treasury Department. Admission to the special showing was by the purchase of Bonds and Stamps.

Starting two weeks in advance of the film's opening, radio time was purchased on six of the leading stations for spot teaser announcements. Several days before the opening, transcriptions of Quentin Reynolds' picture foreword were spotted. Window cards were posted throughout the territory and the Chicago Herald-Tribune sponsored a five-day "Eagle Squadron" star identification and scrambled plane contest. Members of the press were invited to a special screening preceded by a cocktail party.

The Chicago opening was conducted by Ben Katz, newly appointed Universal Midwest exploitation man.

Ties "Pearl Harbor" To Local Celebration

A theatreman's dream came true recently for Jim Cattell at the Park in Mansfield, Ohio, who had booked "Remember Pearl Harbor" only to discover that his opening day had been civically designated as "Remember Pearl Harbor Day." Jim contacted the local committee and arranged to have the new recruits as guests of the theatre. The American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps led the march of the recruits from the scene of the induction ceremonies to the theatre with appropriate tiein banners.

Numerous merchants came through with window displays plugging the picture, usherettes became a walking advertisement by wearing toy soldier helmets with theatre banner, and the local papers came through with stories and art work.

Kornblite's Stamp-Bond Booth

Featured in the lobby of the Capitol Theatre, in Waverly, N. Y., Ted Kornblite has established a Defense Stamp booth. Attended every evening by Boy Scouts, copy overall reads: "War Stamp Bar. Our 19 employes buy War Stamps every pay day. Do you? Buy, Buy War Stamps and Bye, Bye, Hitler, Hirohito and Benito." Volunteers have signed up for regular shifts to attend the bar.

Horton's Novelty Herald

Novelty herald giveaway as featured by Farol Horton for his date on "One Foot in Heaven" at the Lafayette Theatre in Lafayette, Ala., consisted of a 10-inch or one-foot ruler printed in red on white cardboard and carrying title, cash and playdates. Farol distributed these at local schools, clubs, restaurants and hotels.

Cronin's "Fury" Lobby

For his advance lobby on "Son of Fury" at the Strand Theatre, in Portland, Maine, Round Tabler George Cronin erected a special setpiece which featured blowup cutouts of Gene Tierney and Tyrone Power.

Hamilton Inaugurates "Victory Matinee Club"

In Rochester, N. Y., Jack Hamilton at the Riviera has inaugurated what he calls a "Children's Victory Matinee Club." The ceremonies were started off by saluting the flag and pledging aid in the sale of defense stamps. Hamilton spoke to the kids and stressed their importance in the war effort through the sale of stamps. The idea of the plan is for the children to attend each matinee for 15 weeks and purchase a stamp as they enter.

Records will be kept and to the boys and girls who faithfully attend all matinees and buy a stamp each show, a free admission will be given to the following show in addition to prizes being awarded to those selling the greatest number of stamps. Jack reports great enthusiasm from the kids and anticipates excellent returns as a result.

In addition to this promotion, the Round Tabler is featuring a "Victory Movie Night Club." A table covered with red, white and blue paper with a large "V" on top carries copy: "War stamps and bonds on sale here." At the base of display the copy says: "Join Our Victory Movie Night Club. Purchase a defense stamp every Wednesday night."

Sklar Suggests Hanger Show

War or no, once a showman always a showman. Wil Sklar, formerly at the Warner Roxy Theatre, in Clearfield, Pa., writes us from the 1301st Service Unit, at New Cumberland, Pa., that he noticed a shortage of coat hangers in camp. The ingenious ex-theatreman contacted some of his friends back home with the suggestion that they sponsor a Coat Hanger Show for Kids. Other Round Tablers might consider Sklar's idea and put on similar shows, sending their collection to boys in nearby camp.

Conner's Lobby Stunt

As a teaser stunt to open his Bond sale campaign at the Capitol, in Madison, Wis., Marlowe Conner featured a large easel in his lobby which had a large red "'V" on it with cartoons of Hitler and a Jap. Copy at the top read: "Plaster them with planes. Buy a war stamp and add a plane sticker with your name on it." To each purchaser, a small sticker was given to which he affixed his name and plastered it on the easel. The stickers were printed gratis by a local merchant.

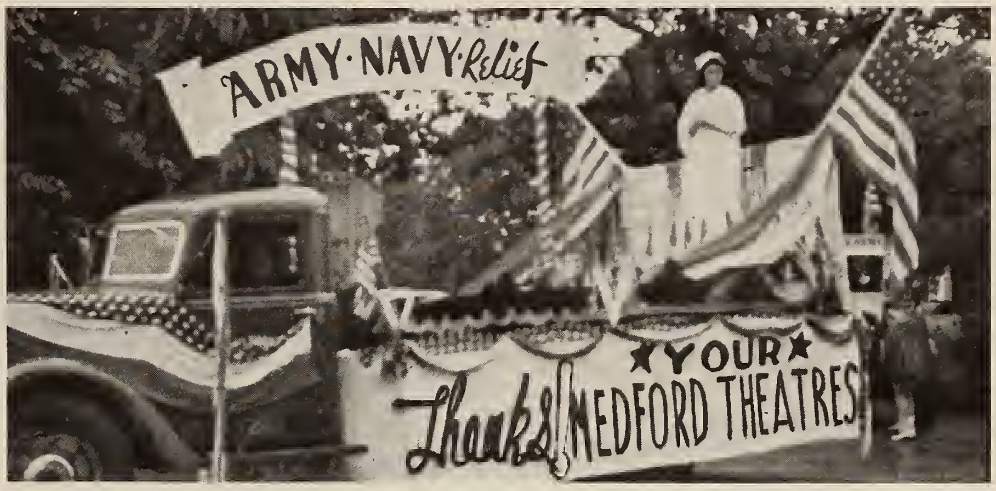
Program Sells "War Tonic"

Featuring a smiling cut of Uncle Sam, William Briemann's front page cover of the program for the Ambassador, in Baltimore, Md., carries appropriate tiein copy. With a catchline head "War Tonic," Uncle Sam is depicted reading a newspaper carrying Roosevelt's message: "Public entertainment is necessary to the winning of the war." The bottom stresses the purchase of bonds and stamps at the theatre.

Murphy Holds Community Sings

A new series of patriotic community sing programs under the sponsorship of the local Shriners has been inaugurated each Tuesday night by Frank Murphy at Loew's State, in Syracuse. Four Shriners have been appointed "singing minute men" so that there will always be a trained song leader. The opening show garnered a three-column cut in the dailies together with art.

Matlack Stages Comprehensive Drive for Army-Navy Relief



This float climaxed the huge parade of 165 units which opened the Army-Navy Emergency Fund Drive in Medford, Oregon. The theatres are G. A. Hunt's.

Last month the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry asked the theatres of the country to take up collections for the Army and Navy Emergency Relief Fund. Theatremen throughout the country responded with enthusiasm.

Here is the campaign staged by Jack Matlack, publicity head of the four George A. Hunt Theatres in Medford, Oregon (population 13,985)

First step was to visit the newspaper, the Medford Mail Tribune, where he sold the editor on the worthiness of the cause to the extent that a full column editorial appeared. Among the telling points made in this editorial was the fact that the motion picture industry "ever alert to opportunities for patriotic service, sees in this army and navy relief campaign an avenue for direct assistance to America's fighting men on land, sea and in the air." So Jack was selling the industry, too. He had 5,000 reprints of this editorial made and distributed as a herald.

The Mayor of Medford proclaimed the opening of the campaign and his proclamation was reprinted in the newspaper. Again the industry received acclaim.

Biggest thing of the whole campaign was the parade with 165 different units participating. Jack organized this parade himself. Lieut. Col. Frank N. Mallory, commanding nearby Camp White, wrote Jack, saying, in part, "The civic parade was especially well handled under your management and you are due a great deal of credit for the fine work you did in supervising that part of the activity. In my opinion, the success of that part of the program was due entirely to your untiring efforts and able direction."

Stories appeared in the newspaper daily during the week before the drive, including one with a banner line on the day of the drive. Cartoons and editorials were also given freely by the paper.

The radio station also cooperated freely with a donated broadcast two days before the parade and the start of the drive. The largest radio sponsor in Medford also gave over one whole program to the drive; it consisted of an interview between a prominent citizen and Col. Mallory. The Chamber of Commerce also gave over its programs for a week before the drive, too.

The theatres used copy in their ads plugging the parade and ran trailers a week in advance as well.

The merchants closed their stores the evening of the parade, having signed a petition asking the Mayor to request all stores to close. The Mayor, of course, acceded and the newspaper published the thanks of the stores and officials.

Jack received letters from Joseph W. Cushman, in charge of the Army Recruiting office in Medford, and from J. M. Carpenter, in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station thanking him for his efforts.

The test of any campaign is, of course, results. Medford's four theatres collected $2,329.94, which was 10% of all of Oregon's contribution. Medford's population is but 1.3% of that of the state.

Kessler Donates Marquee Sign

Walter Kessler at Loew's Theatre, in Canton, Ohio, cracked his daily with two-column art and stories by donating his old upright sign to the local high school Victory Week scrap collection. Weighing a couple of tons, photographers were on hand to take pictures of the sign being hauled down in sections, with students accepting the "gift" on behalf of the school body.

Burkhardt Offers Bond

Howard Burkhardt at Loew's, in Boston, has broken most of his dailies with stories on his twenty-five-dollar Bond award to any moviegoer who saves the greatest number of ticket stubs from Loew's State or Orpheum theatres between now and the opening of the new movie season in August.

Crossword Puzzle Slant Aids "Sullivan's Travels"

Arranging with his local paper, Jack Matlack at the Craterian, in Medford, Ore., ahead of "Sullivan's Travels" ran a crossword puzzle on the classified ad page. A three-column by 10-inch ad display with the puzzle was placed on the news page of the paper with instructions to look on the regular classified page for the key to the solution. The contestants were given three days to solve the puzzle, while on the fourth Matlack ran the answers together with the lucky winner's name.

As an advance plug for the picture a donkey paraded the main streets with large banner reading: "I'm the only one in town who isn't going to see 'Sullivan's Travels' and you know what I am."

Insignia Contest Sells "Flyer" for Trainor

Leo Trainor, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Allentown, Pa., highlighted his campaign for "The Wife Takes A Flyer" with a guessing contest for plane insignias with guest tickets to the first 25 correct answers. Taxicabs were stripped with bumper cards while 50 silk badges were worn by salesgirls at the five-and-dime store, which also promoted a Joan Bennett sundae. Window displays were arranged at the beauty shops and other stores while other displays were spotted in hotel lobbies. Two 24-sheets were mounted on a sound truck, which cruised the city and six suburban towns prior to the opening. A radio tie-up with WSAM resulted in spot announcements the day before and day of opening in connection with a limerick contest planted with the "Sunday Call," local newspaper.

Hevia Salutes Servicemen

For lobby interest, Guy W. Hevia at Schine's Hippodrome, in Gloversville, has erected an easel on which are planted photos of local boys in uniform who have recently gone into service. Disc overall reads: "The Hippodrome Theatre Salutes Gloversville's latest recruits to Uncle Sam's sea fighters." The base of the display plugged his current attractions.

Setron's Hitching Post

Sil Setron, manager of Warners' Uptown Theatre, Philadelphia, created extra attention by capitalizing on the publicity centered on transportation in view of gasoline and tire rationing. He installed a hitching post in front of the theatre and offered guest admissions to the first 10 families to drive up in any horse or mule-drawn vehicle.

Stearn's Teaser Stencil

As a street teaser stunt ahead of "Vanishing Virginian" at the Manring, in Middlesboro, Ky., Harry Stearn stencilled double "V's" on the sidewalk in front of his theatre with directional arrows leading straight to the box office.

Weiner's "Joe Smith" Week

Proclamations by the mayor of "Joe Smith, American" Week; insertion of thousands of pluggers in payrolls at defense factories, and a special screening for officials of these plants highlighted the "Joe Smith, American" campaign put over by Fred Weimer, Gopher, Minn.

GASOLINE SHORTAGE HELPS THEATRE GROSS

The gasoline shortage is helping the theatres in more ways than one. The West Wyoming High School of Wilkes-Barre, Penna., used to send its graduating class on a trip to Washington every year. That proved impractical this year, so the class held a dinner-dance and theatre party instead. The group went to the Comerford Theatre.

Rosenzweig's Shooting Gallery

To sell excitement in the lobby of the Manchester, in St. Louis, ahead of "All Through the Night", Jack Rosenzweig used a shooting gallery stunt well in advance. A regular three-sheet was erected showing a picture of Humphrey Bogart; patrons were supplied with rubber suction-capped "bullets" and invited to try their skill at landing a bull's-eye on the public enemy. Guest tickets were given to those scoring.

Berman's "Bugs" Contest

A full page of co-op ads was promoted by Mort Berman for his engagement of "Mr. Bugs" at the Orpheum, in Springfield, Ill. The layout included a coloring contest angle with guest tickets going to the juvenile winners.

King's Model Airplane Slant

To sell his date on "Captains of the Clouds" at the Ritz Theatre, in McGehee, Ark., Round Tabler C. B. King to attract his juvenile trade, billed a model airplane contest throughout the trade territory. Students in the local school were tied in on this defense effort with their endeavors being turned over for instruction purposes in training courses. The local papers came through with stories.

Samartano's "Dancing" Co-op

To aid in selling his opening of "We Were Dancing" at Loew's Poli Palace, in Meriden, Conn., Joe Samartano promoted one of the leading beauty salons for a two column co-op ad which featured a cut of Norma Shearer and her new hairdo in the picture.

Elder Promotes Ads

Through a tieup with his weekly paper, Bill Elder at Loew's, in Indianapolis, has promoted a two-column ad with an offer of guest tickets to folks who find their names, chosen at random from the city directory and scattered through the paper's want ad section. To receive tickets, winners must identify themselves at the paper.

Column Devoted to "Day"

Since "Remember the Day" offers a theme of remember your first kiss, long pants, etc., Charlie A. Zinn at the Century, in Minneapolis, sold one of the local columnists on the idea of devoting column to the picture. Defense Stamps in this connection were offered to the first 10 people sending in the best 25-word essays on some red letter days in their lives.

"Mooch of Time" Featured By Makeson for " 'Poppin"

The highlight of John Makeson's "Hellzapoppin' " engagement at the Van Wert Theatre, in Van Wert, Ohio, was a "Screwball Midnight Show," which featured an 18-minute reel made locally about three years ago as some sort of an advertising stunt. Dubbing the reel "The Mooch of Time," John cut all advertising from the subject and ordered special trailer captions. Out title frame read: "The Mooch of Time. If it's a good picture, it's a Miracle." Final frame read: "The End. Silly Wasn't it?" Clips were sandwiched in the reel, such as "Kids, Stop Whistling; Ladies Please Remove Your Hats," etc. The picture was cued and a constant patter over the public address system was run to get the audience in a receptive mood for the feature. Advertised as "Van Wert's Own Mooch of Time," the stunt attracted additional business to the boxoffice, says the Round Tabler.

Korman Invites Battalion to See Show at His Theatre

The whole Third Battalion of the Royal Canadian Engineers, stationed at Noranda, Quebec, was invited by Sam Korman, manager of the Capitol Theatre in nearby Rouyn, to attend a showing of "To the Shores of Tripoli." Sam invited not only all the men but the officers and non-commissioned officers as well. The band played the Marines song as the battalion marched to the theatre. A large crowd gathered and the theatre played to capacity business.

Sam received a letter shortly afterward from the commanding officer, thanking him on behalf of all officers and men.

Boyle Utilizes Theatre Wall

To sell his theatre's attractions, Joe Boyle at Loew's Poli, in Norwich, Conn., has utilized part of the side wall of his theatre with giant institutional copy reading: "Loew's Poli Broadway, Norwich's theatre of the stars. Always the best show in town".

Curtice's "Bugle" Setpiece

Eye-arresting was the lobby display used by Fred Curtice at the Uptown, in San Francisco ahead of "The Bugle Sounds." Blowup face photo of Wallace Beery was featured together with title letters along the entire side wall of his lobby. Curtice credits his house artist, Ken Purchase, with the execution of the display.

Matthews' "Moontide" Jury

Debutantes, stenographers, beauticians, soda clerks and others drawn from 25 varied occupations served as a jury at a special screening of "Moontide" to vote on the qualifications of Jean Gabin as "1942's biggest heart throb." The stunt was part of the campaign promoted for the picture by Haddon Matthews, manager of Warners' Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia.

Parker Hosts O'Hare

Since Edward O'Hare recently returned from a scrap with the Japs, is a local boy, Ray Parker, at the Avalon, in St. Louis, invited him and his family to attend his show which included a newsreel shot of the hero. In addition, the stunt was advertised in his newspapers.

NEW MEMBERS

Introduced to Round Tablers with sketches of their careers

From Usher to Manager in Two Years, Camp's Record

James Franklin Camp, who has been manager of the Ritz Theatre, Barnesville, Ga., for the past four years, started with the Lucas and Jenkins Circuit, of which the Ritz is a unit, back in 1936. His theatrical career started when he was 14 years old, in his native city of Covington, Georgia. He was then doorman at the Strand Theatre. For six years he worked in Covington, learning projection among other things. He joined Lucas and Jenkins as an usher at the Georgia Theatre in Atlanta, now the Roxy. He was shifted to the Fox and made chief of service about a year prior to his appointment to his present post.

15 Years with Circuit, Now Has Own Theatre

F. W. Hamilton started as a combination operator, sign painter and musician in his home town of Gallatin, Missouri, where he was born January 31, 1904, and named Francis Wayne. He went to Kirkesville, Missouri, as chief projectionist and lobby artist for the Mid-West Theatres. He remained 15 years (during that time the circuit became Fox-Midwest Theatres) under Elmer Rhoden and Edd Haas. Like many another circuit man, he always wanted a house of his own since in his own words, "I have worked from the basement to the attic." Francis reports that he is making out all right now at his Shelby Theatre, Shelbyville, Mo.

At 19, Horton Has Had 10 Years of Experience

Farol Horton was just 19 years old last April 5 but he has had 10 years of experience in the showbusiness. He started as a program boy at the tender age of nine. Then he was made relief doorman and finally doorman after three years. When he was a senior in high school he was made assistant manager of the DeSoto Theatre in Lake City, Fla., and after graduation manager of the Grand. Then he was transferred to Lafayette, Ala., by the R. E. Martin Circuit, where he is now manager of the Lafayette.

Bob Johnson Rose Rapidly With Fanchon & Marco

Bob Johnson, who will celebrate his 29th birthday on July 16, has had a meteoric rise in the showbusiness and if he remains in it, his rise should be equally rapid. Bob's entire career has been with the Fanchon and Marco Circuit, where he started in 1933 as an usher at the Shenandoah Theatre in South St. Louis. Promotion Number One came after one year, when he was made chief of service at the Granada. Another year brought another promotion for Bob—assistant manager at the Orpheum. He paused only briefly in this assignment and was soon at the downtown Capitol as assistant. His next promotion was to relief manager for the circuit. During the next three years he was manager of the Florrisant and Congress Theatres. For the past year he has been in charge of the Aubert.

Biamonte Climbs from Booth Apprentice to Manager

Starting from the top and working your way down is rather unusual but that's what Ralph Biamonte did. His first job was up in the booth as a motion picture projectionist's apprentice. Three years later he obtained his operator's license and worked in the booth as projectionist for two years. Five years ago he was promoted downstairs and made manager of the Hollywood Theatre, Niagara Falls, Ont. Ralph was born Nov. 18, 1911. He is married and is the proud father of two children.

Montizambert Started as Usher While at U. of Wyoming

Most biographies begin with the birth of the subject. So does this one. Jerry Montizambert was born Nov. 29, 1919, at Little Current, Ontario. He attended the University of Wyoming and while there became an usher for the Fox Intermountain Circuit. He'd intended to study law but the lure of the theatre was greater, so he stayed on, winning promotion to doorman, then chief of staff and finally publicity man, first under Sterling Way at Laramie, Wyoming, and later for Jack McGee. In September of last year, he took his present post as assistant manager and publicity man for the Napa Theatres of Napa, California.

Printer Liked Theatre Ads, So Now He Writes Them

Here's a man who was a printer and took so much pleasure in setting theatre ads that he decided to write them. So now he's a theatre manager. Irwin Frohman is 32 years old. He is a native of Toronto. About ten years ago he was working as a compositor on a Detroit newspaper. He was given all the theatre ads to handle and became so fascinated with the business he returned to Toronto and opened a theatrical advertising company, specializing in theatrical printing. That was in 1937. But Irwin wanted to manage a theatre. Firestone Theatres gave him the opportunity this year. He is now the skipper of the Avalon Theatre, Toronto, for the Odeon Circuit.

Keyes Back in Show Business; Started as Program Boy at 15

Douglas started in show business at the tender age of 15 as program boy and dresser in a road house show. He rose to the post of advertising manager but an accident forced him to relinquish his connection in 1930. Last year he returned to the business as assistant manager of the Grand Theatre, London, Ontario, one of the Twentieth Century Circuit. Early this year he was promoted to the managership.

Bernardi's Experience Mostly In Legitimate Theatre Field

Though only 38, Boris Bernardi has had 20 years' experience in the legitimate theatre field. He toured Europe and South America with stock companies back in the days when touring was still safe. Among the legitimate theatres he has managed are several well known showhouses. A Bostonian by nativity, Boris is now general manager of the Midwest Theatres of Detroit.

Rubber Racketeers

(Monogram)

Topical Melodrama

First picture dealing with the tire racket to reach the screen, Monogram's "Rubber Racketeers" is a timely crime melodrama whose contents make it worthy of extended exploitation. It is as topical as tomorrow's headlines, and has action, romance, and a message of patriotism packed together in such fashion as to deliver a terrific wallop.

Backgrounded against a defense industry, the story concerns a former bootlegger who gets out of prison just after the United States enters the war and who evolves a new racket—the stealing of new automobile tires and selling them, as well as the sale of unsafe recapped tires made with crude rubber they have stolen.

When a defense plant worker is killed in an accident caused by a tire blowout, his friends find that the tire, newly purchased, was remade from bad rubber. The lad's fellow workers investigate, and after a series of adventures, uncover the ring and capture the criminals.

Ricardo Cortez as the gang leader, Rochelle Hudson as his sweetheart and Bill Henry, who leads the workers in the expose of the criminals, are co-starred. Supporting them are Kam Tong, a Chinese who does an outstanding performance as a servant who enlists in the army; Barbara Read, Milburn Stone, Dewey Robinson, Pat Gleason, John Abbott and others.

Henry Blankfort wrote the original screenplay, making of it an exciting piece of cinema writing. Harold Young, in his direction, utilized every frame of film to advantage. The fourth production of the King Brothers, Maurice and Franklin, it is by far their best.

Previewed at the Filmarte Theatre, Hollywood, where a press and professional audience were greatly impressed. Applause punctuated the unfolding of the story.—V. K.

Flight Lieutenant

(Columbia)

Aviation Melodrama

There is no warring in this melodrama of aviation and aviators, which begins in 1932 and ends in 1941, although there is much about flying and the final involves the testing of an interceptor for the U. S. army.

The story concerns a flier, veteran of World War I, who is grounded by the Aeronautics Authority and goes to Dutch Guiana where he earns money by commercial flying to send back home for support of his son. The boy grows up in ignorance of his father's disgrace and is about to be married when he learns that his fiancee's father was killed in the crash for which his father was grounded. The father redeems himself by substituting for his son in a test flight which eventuates fatally after establishing the unworthiness of a new plan for army use. Pat O'Brien gives the principal role his usual vigorous performance, and Glenn Ford portrays the son with some effectiveness, but overdeliberation in all departments is a handicap which neither players nor plot manage to cope with.

Production is by B. P. Schulberg and direction by Sidney Salkow, from a script by Michael Blankfort.

Dieterle Ordered to Pay

William Dieterle was ordered on Wednesday by New York Supreme Court Justice J. Sidney Bernstein to pay $2,286 to Ida Coudenhove-Kalergi, continental actress, as partial judgment on a suit for $7,840 brought against the defendant. Complaint is based on an award granted by the Berlin courts for alleged breach of a contract made in May, 1924, which hired the plaintiff to perform in Dieterle's Berlin legitimate theatre. Trial was ordered by Justice Bernstein to determine whether the balance is due to the plaintiff.

Variety Clubs to Give Award

Variety Clubs of America will present the fourth annual Humanitarian Award at the organization's meeting to be held in Chicago in July.

A committee comprising 35 men and women in the writing, publishing and art fields will name the recipient of the award which was instituted in 1938 by the national organization. A. K. Rowswell of Pittsburgh heads the committee. A last call for nominations was circulated on June 1st to the various tents by John H. Harris, national chief barker.

In 1941 the award—a bronze tablet and a $1,000 honorarium—went to Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro scientist and educator. Recipient of the 1928 award was the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Edward J. Flanagan of Boys Town, Neb., and the following year Miss Martha Berry, of the Mt. Berry Schools, Ga., received Variety Clubs honor designation.

Tent No. 23 of New England issued a call last week for every Variety member to "sponsor" an underprivileged child for a vacation at a summer camp.

Cincinnati's Variety Club announced on Monday that the annual frolic and dance, scheduled for the Summit Hills Country Club, has been postponed until July 27th. The Minneapolis tent will hold its annual golf tournament on July 17th at the Oak Ridge Country Club.

Seeking Licenses for Sound Machines

Under provisions of a new city ordinance which becomes effective July 1st in Milwaukee, licenses are being sought for 25 sound film machines. Premise license fees are $5 for coin film machines, while distributors are required to pay a $25 fee plus $5 for each machine.

City officials expect to collect about $75,000 annually in fees as a result of the new ordinance, which prohibits the showing of vulgar, obscene or indecent reproductions or films. The measure also provides that no operator of any amusement device may permit any person to use such machines for gambling. Operation of slot machines also is prohibited.

Rationing Hits Drive-Ins

Albany exhibitors report that drive-in theatres in the territory have suffered a 50 per cent drop in grosses during the past week and approximately 20 per cent on weekends, as a result of gasoline and tire rationing. Exhibitors and distributors in Albany contend that autos are not being used at night during the week except for business purposes or to work. Neighborhood houses in towns of the territory declare that business is worse than last year.

Crossroads

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Psychiatric Blackmail

William Powell, Hedy Lamarr, Basil Rathbone and some others in the cast of this departure from routine furnish billing strength equal to the bringing in of crowds who have a surprise in store for them.

The picture is out of common in a number of ways.

It starts as a study in amnesia, Powell portraying a French diplomat (1935) who remembers nothing of his past before 1922. He is blackmailed, traps the blackmailer, then is on the point of being proved in court to have been a criminal in his forgotten past, when a volunteer witness clears him by supplying evidence of the criminal's death.

Later the surprise witness appears, claims to have lied to save him so that he can pay him his half of the swag collected in a murder during their joint robbery of a banker. Evidence piles up to convince he diplomat that he is in fact the criminal he has been absolved of being.

It is only in the final minutes that the diplomat becomes convinced that he is being victimized and trips up his blackmailers by resort to the kind of detection Powell employes in the "Thin Man" roles.

The screenplay by Guy Trosper provides a double-shuffle which tricks the audience into an effective and legitimate blind alley which makes the ending powerful.

Production by Edwin Knopf and direction by Jack Conway give the picture lustre, poise, polish and conviction.

Previewed at the studio.—William R. Weaver.

Apache Trail

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Lloyd Nolan in a Western

MGM has prepared a screen antidote for midsummer and war headline blues which film patrons are going to like. They've set producer Samuel Marx, director Richard Thorpe and a good cast of feature players to work on a fast-moving adventure picture with Lloyd Nolan, fugitive from a long series of thug and killer parts, in the role of a bad man of the West. This bit of casting will come as a surprise to the audience, accustomed to viewing Nolan either evading the law or occasionally acting as the tough D. A. or chief of homicide squad of some municipality. Nolan seems very much at home on the Western terrain.

In "Apache Trail" he plays "Trigger" Bill, outlaw and bandit who attempts to steal a gold shipment from a Wells Fargo stagecoach post situated in the heart of Apache Indian territory. Bill's brother, played by William Lundigan, is head of the post. The two, representing opposite poles of the social and moral code, are mutually distrustful of each other.

While Lundigan is out scouting for Apache trails in the hills surrounding the post, Bill stages the hold-up and is about to make off with his loot when Lundigan returns with the news that the Apaches are preparing to attack the post. It develops that the warring Indians are after "Trigger" Bill. Lundigan asks all the people in the settlement to vote on the issue of giving up Bill or taking their chances in an Indian raid. Bill's brother holds the deciding vote, but decides to cast it in Trigger's favor. The raid is on. Three of the defenders are killed. Bill, realizing the danger which exists for his brother and for the others, including one, Rosalia Martinez, the young girl who is in love with Lundigan, makes the supreme sacrifice. At the crucial moment, he rides out of the post and gives himself up to the Apaches who promptly kill him.

Nolan and Lundigan are good in their parts; Miss Reed does not have very much to do and is additionally impeded by a Spanish accent with which she struggles. Miss Ayars makes the most of her role and gives a creditable performance. Grant Withers, Fuzzy Knight, Miles Mander, Gloria Holden and Connie Gilchrist are among the good troupers who follow the Apache trail to its conclusion. An exceptionally good musical score by Sol Kaplan adds to the general entertainment features of the film.

Flying Fortress

(Warner Brothers)

War Drama

Probably the most expensively made of Warners British productions, and certainly the most possessed of established entertainment ingredients, this is something more than just a war film. It exploits the war—and the appeal of the R.A.F. plus U. S. aid—but its story values and its sallyings forth down the avenues of romance, thrill, gentle satire, and spectacular action give it something more than merely a war flavour. In Britain at any rate, with its saleable title and passages and people of the kind which provoke word-of-mouth publicity, the film should play right into the showman's hands. In the U. S. it should help to answer many questions about Britain at war.

The story is of an American playboy who finds his real self in flying bombers to Britain, and later in the R.A.F. itself. There is the girl newspaper reporter who housebreaks to get her story for the tabloid, misunderstandings, regrets —and of course an ultimate reunion. It has both an American and a British setting and the flavours on both sides of the Atlantic taste authentic. Richard Greene is the playboy, and a comparative newcomer, but a charming and intelligent one, Carla Lehmann, is partner in romance.

Though the heroic note is struck in places, with a rousing and exciting re-creation of a bombing raid on Berlin as the climax, with crazy flying, and the Blitz on London—this latter very well handled—there is, too, humour, with an excellent and satirical performance by Charles Heslop as a gentleman's gentleman who gets a Captaincy in the Army, tilts at food laws in Britain, and the fervent intentions of the wartime aristocracy. Lengthy as the whole picture is, such a variegated pattern, with dialogue at times particularly bright for a British picture, keeps the interest high for the most part. The flying sequences are well handled but the model work is deplorable.

Donald Stewart, a Canadian actor who has hitherto confined his talents to vaudeville and radio, probably overshadows Greene in the role of a tougher brand of a pilot. He is a new and welcome type for British pictures.

Technically the film is very competent and Walter Forde's direction extremely capable.

Previewed to the press in London under paying audience conditions the film, despite its length, held interest throughout, with the comedy flashes not least effective in their registering.—Aubrey Flanagan

Friendly Enemies

(UA-Small)

First World War Play

Memory takes many a showman and customer back to the stageplay of the same name which prospered in 1918 as a comedy-drama treating of the effects of the war upon two German-born American millionaires whose lifelong friendship split upon the issue of loyalty.

Producer Edward Small has filmed that play with little if any change.

It will be remembered that one of the millionaires retained his loyalty to Germany and disputed the issue through three acts with the millionaire who had become American in spirit and allegiance as well as in citizenship.

Charles Winninger and Charles Ruggles portray characters in the film, each duplicating on the screen the gift for comedy of dialogue, gesture and dialect which kept audiences laughing, as displayed by other players, in the difficult days of 1918. It kept the preview audience laughing in much the same tone of mirth.

Producer Small has not modernized the play to fit today's war. The period is 1918 and the war is the first world war, the Kaiser is the personalized foe and the plight of the German American is the matter in chief concern. Coming to screen in the flow of warfilms about today's war, this film confines itself to that other one entirely, and it is only after the picture's over that observers find themselves reflecting that the conflicts have much in common.

Emphasis is upon comedy, and mainly upon the comedy of dialogue and characterization, but there are moments of emotion and there is a background of melodrama. The millionaire loyal to Germany finances a countryman in what turns out to be a plot to sink the transport upon which his son is en route to France, and this brings about his renunciation of Germany.

Direction by Allan Dwan is straightforward, giving the script plenty of opportunity to catch the laughs it shoots for. Adaptation of the Samuel Shipman-Aaron Hoffman play is by Adelaide Heilbron.

Previewed at the Alex theatre, Glendale, to a midweek audience which found frequent occasion for hearty laughter and several times let go to the extent of drowning out stretches of dialogue.—W. R. W.

Submarine Raider

(Columbia)

Pearl Harbor Incident

A tense drama, filled with action, tells the story of one Japanese aircraft carrier on December sixth and seventh of last year. The fact that the Pearl Harbor attack was accomplished without warning does not detract from the suspense of the film, although the action centers about several characters who might have reached the proper authorities but for unfortunate accidents.

A pleasure yacht is sighted by the Hiranamu and mercilessly shelled. The carrier has received orders to proceed toward Hawaii unobserved. Only a girl survives, after a raft has been machine-gunned from the air, and she is picked up by an American submarine returning to its base in Honolulu. Efforts to reach the naval base by radio are jammed by the carrier which moves relentlessly on.

Meanwhile a government agent in Hawaii, brother of the submarine's commander, is reaching the conclusion that an attack is imminent when he is put out of the way by Japanese fifth columnists. Pearl Harbor is bombed while the helpless submarine crew listens over the radio to the tragedy it might have prevented. But the Hiranamu never returns to its base. In a dangerous manoeuvre, the undersea boat traps the vessel and sinks her with four torpedoes.

Producer Wallace MacDonald and Director Lew Landers should be commended for keeping the drama to its essentials of action and suspense.

A competent cast includes John Howard, Marguerite Chapman, Bruce Bennett, Warren Ashe, Eileen O'Hearn, Nino Pipitone and Philip Ahn.

Moonlight Masquerade

(Republic)

Farce Musical Comedy

Spritely, well dressed, and entertaining, Republic could well have issued this with a guarantee that the patron's mind would be taken away from the world's worries, and his own, for a solid hour.

The story is flimsy farce but the superlative photography and lighting, the expensive sets, the capable actors, and the effervescent lines, make the most of the idea.

Paul Harvey and Jed Prouty 21 years ago contracted that a one-third interest in their oil company should be given their offspring if Prouty's son and Harvey's daughter married within 30 days of the girl's birthday. Jane Frazee, Prouty's daughter, resents the deal; so does Dennis O'Keefe, Harvey's son. Not knowing the other, each determines to make the other refuse the marriage. Refusal means award of the one-third interest to the one not refusing. Each hires an impersonator who fall in love with each other, leading to countless complications before the principals discover they love each other, oil deal or no.

The producer-director was John H. Auer. Lawrence Kimble wrote the screen play, based upon Mr. Auer's story. John Alton was the photographer. Harry Revel and Mort Greene wrote the songs; Nick Castel directed the dancing.

Those East Side Kids

Those East Side Kids profit by improvement of script for this number in the Sam Katzman series, and their humour benefits from a background of seriousness which includes recognition of a code of honor. Which is not to say that the series has gone noble, but that it's acquired a tinge of nobility to give it substance beyond slang and the type of gutter comedy which has been its main content up to now.

The story and screenplay by Harvey Gates presents the kids in quest of money to buy baseball uniforms. One of their buddies shows up with so much of it that they assume it is dishonestly acquired and they banish him. Crooks who have been using him as lookout in their robberies are captured and, escaping, beat up one of the kids who they think is responsible for their apprehension. The kids go into action, obtain surgical aid which the injured boy requires, and recapture the crooks.

There's no less humour than in previous numbers and it looks better against the more substantial background.

Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz produced, with Barney A. Srecky as associate, and Wallace Fox directed.

United We Stand

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

History from the Newsreels

Out of its newsreel archives Fox Movietonenews compiled this feature-length record of the years since World War I ended at Versailles. It is a swiftly paced mosaic showing again the events and men that led the world toward the present conflict.

The picture is more than an album of newsreel recollections. It is a history. As such it deems to interpet men and motives and to draw a conclusion as to course. In frequently familiar flashbacks it shows the statesmen, soldiers, and politicians who struggled for power. It is a graphic record of why the men of good will did not prevail.

Disunity, ambition, selfish nationalism at the critical point are presented in the chronological record of the news cameraman as the weaknesses which again trapped free people in struggle with the believers in might. But it is not a record of despair. The picture closes with a hopeful message to free peoples. It reports, from recent newsreels, on their joint war effort. United, they shall prevail against the Axis, and in the establishment of just internationalism in the new peace, it asserts. But citing the 20 years after Versailles it demands a united stand.

Edmund Reek has skillfully edited some of the most memorable sequences from past Fox newsreels into his story. There is even a touch of grim humor in the posturings of a younger Duce, the ranting Hitler, and the democratic statesmen dandling grandchildren and reading hopeful statements. Chamberlain, Daladier and the appeasers are recorded, as was.

Lowell Thomas delivers the narration with his usual fluency and familiar voice, helping to smooth a necessarily episodic pattern.

The picture lends itself to comparison and exploitation, relative to current messages from political leaders and thinkers on post war action. The material relates to the Atlantic Charter, Sumner Welles' and Vice-president Wallace's speeches on peace aims and the just published summary of the inter-bellum era by former president Herbert Hoover and Hugh Gibson.

ANNOUNCING

The New Victory Carbons

Designed to Conserve Copper for War Needs

Winning this war is the first objective of every American. The will for Victory includes taking in stride whatever sacrifice or inconvenience may be occasioned by the demands of our war effort.

Government curtailment of copper necessitates reducing the thickness of copper coating on "National" copper coated high intensity projector carbons. This may result in a slightly longer spindle on the carbons, and in the case of the 7 mm — 6 mm combination, may result in some reduction in screen illumination, although there will still be sufficient light for satisfactory projection.

Fortunately, the culmination of research work on the 8 mm — 7 mm trim makes it possible to burn these new carbons, even with the thinner copper plating, and to obtain even more light with the same current formerly used (within limits of the new maximum). Savings as high as 30% in carbon consumption can be had for the same amount of light on the screen if the present light level is satisfactory. When using power sources designed for "Suprex" type lamps similar savings can be made, while retaining the same screen illumination as formerly, by shifting from 7 mm — 6 mm trims to the new 8 mm — 7 mm. To accomplish this may require enlarging present carbon holders, which can be done with little effort.

Operation at reduced arc current may also, in some instances, necessitate readjustment of the feed ratio of the projection lamps in order to maintain correct position of the carbons with a minimum of manual adjustment.

The trade-mark on these new Victory carbons is imprinted in white, instead of the familiar blue. Maximum allowable arc current is also stamped on each carbon. It is important that this current limitation be observed.

The words "National," "Suprex" and "Orotip" are trade-marks of National Carbon Company, Inc.

Save the Copper

Most of the copper used for plating copper coated projector carbons drops to the floor of the lamp house when the carbons are burned. Continue to save these copper drippings and turn them over to an authorized scrap dealer or to such other agency as may be designated by our government.

Versatile Blackout Cloth

A CLOTH into which is impregnated luminous powder, for blackout applications of various kinds has been marketed by the National Theatre Supply Company. The current issue of this distributor's house organ, in the course of discussing the various kinds of signs and markers for blackouts, has this to say concerning the new cloth, which is called Lumo Cloth:

"Lumo Cloth is easily activated by daylight or artificial light. When first placed in the dark, it emits a bluish white light. After five minutes the bluish tint disappears and the white light is emitted at a somewhat lower level. In the meantime, however, the eyes are getting accustomed to the darkness and this adjustment compensates for a decrease in level. It should be kept in mind that in many cases it takes the eyes 30 minutes to completely adjust themselves to the conditions. This cloth will, however, continue to emit its light from five to eight hours after activation ceases. Under no conditions can this light be seen over 75 feet from the cloth which means that the cloth can be used out-of-doors in a black-out without any danger of conflicting with Army and OCD regulations.

"For purposes of signs it is entirely practical to paint any color you desire on this cloth. Experiments indicate that 5-inch high letters with a ¾-inch stroke in black paint can be best deciphered up to a distance of 25 to 30 feet."

Suggested uses of the cloth include signs for the ticket booth during blackouts, indicating that the theatre is operating and where tickets may be purchased; directional signs; tape markers for obstructions; staff arm bands, etc.; and dimming out attraction board panels so that letters may be seen at least faintly.

Carrier Head Dies

J. Irving Lyle

J. IRVING LYLE, president of the Carrier Corporation and with Dr. Willis H Carrier, a founder of the pioneer air-conditioning concern, died in Syracuse, on June 7, at the age of 68.

Mr. Lyle was associated with Mr. Carrier, who is now chairman of the board, when the latter was developing his system of air-conditioning for industrial plants, later to be carried into the field of comfort cooling. He was general manager and treasurer of the company until 1930, when the firm became the Carrier Corporation, at which time he was named to the presidency.

Formica is a modern surfacing material, produced by chemical research to provide a combination of qualities that would meet and conquer conditions that have been fatal to most of the older materials.

A few of these hazards are illustrated, but there are others—such as alcohol, cosmetics, wet umbrellas, ink—all equally harmless to Formica.

This exceptionally sturdy finish comes in a wide range of deep beautiful colors, and patterns. Genuine wood veneers of fine woods, like mahogany, sapeli, avodire, and many others are introduced and in Formica "Realwood" attain the same indifference to abuse. Inlays of one color over another make a wide range of designs possible.

That's why Formica has been so widely used for tough jobs by leading designers of ships, trains, hotels, libraries, public buildings, restaurants, soda fountains.

Ideas Sought on Sound

A CONTEST among employes of the DeVry Corporation, Chicago, manufacturers of sound and projection equipment, has been started by W. C. DeVry, president, for the purpose of developing ideas for the betterment of sound equipment for the nation's armed forces. The contest is called the "Production for Victory Drive," and cash awards are offered.

The company also announces that production is now largely given over to Government orders, and that additional factory space has had to be acquired.

Booklet on Carpet Care

A HANDY BOOKLET, measuring 4x6¾ inches and containing twelve pages of text, has been issued by the Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Company, New York, as a guide in the maintenance of carpeting. Better Theatres

ISSUE OF JUNE 27, 1942 VOLUME 147, NUMBER 13

How to Try to Get What Your Theatre Needs!

THE WORKING space of the theatre business became still more cramped during the month of June, first with the installation of Government Order L-41, limiting construction in the amusement field to work costing no more than $5,000; and later with initial steps toward reducing yet further the manufacture of theatre equipment.

More or less in anticipation of the effect of these new restrictions upon theatre operation, the amusements and buildings sections of the WPB, instructed the operators of theatres, hotels and restaurants to address their appeals for materials in case of a breakdown, to their nearest WPB field office, rather than direct to Washington. Each field office is manned to have an intimate understanding of local conditions, and the inference is that to proceed through the district organization is to get faster action.

For the convenience of exhibitors and theatre managers, a list of all of the War Production Board field offices throughout the United States is published on page 24 of this issue of BETTER THEATRES.

The field office, after considering the merits of a request for emergency repair or maintenance materials, will forward the request to the proper department in Washington, and if the request is granted, a preference rating for the materials will be wired directly to the theatre management.

At a meeting of equipment manufacturers' representatives with WPB officials, the Government, through Harold Hopper of the WPB amusement section, took occasion to reiterate its recognition of the motion picture business as a "medium for training, education, information and morale building." And despite the burden of the message, the press release covering the meeting stated that "it is intended to keep theatres operating," adding:

"On the other hand, the manufacture of motion picture theatre equipment uses many critical materials, such as copper, nickel, aluminum and steel, and it is imperative that such materials be conserved for the war program."

Seating: L-41 or M-126?

Whether auditorium seating comes under the rules applying to construction, or those affecting equipment purchasing, remains a puzzler, at least for the WPB. Seating manufacturers have decided the matter, thus far, for themselves and are regarding their product as equipment, which is logical enough, since auditorium chairs are not legal fixtures—that is, they are not attachments of the building.

Nevertheless, the Buildings Branch of the WPB considers the installation, as opposed to manufacture, of seating a part of construction, therefore restricted by Order L-41 limiting remodeling expenditures to $5,000. The Amusements Section, however, advises that it is trying to obtain "liberalization" of this interpretation.

Under Order M-126, manufacture of auditorium seating using iron or steel became prohibited on June 19th, while assembly of chairs already manufactured must cease on August 3rd.

Copper Versus Picture

Elsewhere in this issue Charles E. Shultz asks, "How Much Can You Reduce Arc Current to Save Copper?" then proceeds to provide data which will permit the management and projectionists of each theatre to answer the question for themselves. This article is something of a sequel to Mr. Shultz's efforts in the May 2nd and 30th issues to aid wartime conservation by encouraging accurate measurement of projection lighting efficiency.

His present discussion has of course been prompted by recent suggestions that arc current be reduced 20%. The data reliably cover average conditions for various trims, and unless image quality is to be waived entirely as a factor, for the duration, they will show many a theatre that little or no reduction of arc current is feasible. And in this it is highly significant that Mr. Shultz has indicated the effect of screen deterioration on the limitations of the arc and lens system.

That theatre management and public alike should be satisfied with any kind of picture may of course be asserted with considerable conviction in these times. Still, there is a limit to the impairment of image quality if the play on the screen is to retain its effectiveness, and hundreds of theatres have never got close to what is today accepted as standard screen illumination.

Reduction of arc current also suggests the effect of the practice on post-war projection. Present-day standards of projection represent many years of technical advances in equipment and balesful of propaganda. Now it is well that we reduce arc current, when our projection setup permits, in order to save copper. After the war we could do so to save money, however little. Doggone if we aren't pessimistic today! Must be the weather—or Tobruk.

Don't be scared of Ol' Debbil L-41, says Mr. Friedman on the opposite page, for—

There Is Plenty You Can Do To Keep Your Theatre Smiling

MOST ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS STILL AVAILABLE

THE Government's limitation of expenditures for construction (new building, structural remodeling, etc.) to $5,000 in any twelve-month period, which has just gone into effect in the amusement and some other fields, represents the wartime policy of reducing to a minimum the manufacture and distribution of civilian goods, with their employment of men who might otherwise be engaged in the production of the implements of war.

This regulation, Order L-41, definitely prohibits new construction (except where a new theatre may be considered needed to serve war work communities), and narrowly restricts remodeling; but the sum of $5,000 can accomplish a great deal to correct faulty or rapidly deteriorating portions of a theatre building, and to prevent it from growing actually shabby, and the materials available are substantially those which have always been used in such work. Iron and steel products, and electrical supplies are the principal articles directly removed from the market; most other building and finishing materials are not on any critical list.

The situation in building materials remains essentially what it was when it was reviewed in the February issue of Better Theatres. The glass building products are obtainable in all of their variety. Most kinds of lumber are free of restrictions, while wood veneers, such as Flexwood, are readily available for finishing of existing structural members, and the same is true of plastic sheets like Formica, which is eminently suited to interior and certain types of outside finishing, as well as to use as a substitute for metal kick and hand plates.

Both vegetable and mineral fibre boards and tiles are readily available for straight interior finishing or decorative acoustical treatment. The Celotex group, which includes both kinds, offers a great variety of standard materials for decorative refurbishing and acoustical treatment needed now.

And while steel is banned, Portland cement, concrete and plaster are as accessible as ever, and so is the paint with which to finish plaster surfaces.

Thus far it is also possible to obtain the luminiscent paints and ultraviolet light sources for "black light" decoration, and according to the Continental Lithograph Corporation, the stock of these materials is still ample for a large number of applications and will continue to be available unless the Government specifically rules that they require a high priority rating.

While some plastics are on the critical list, and metal is for the most part banned from the production of lighting fixtures, inventories of luminaires are good, and those of glass are readily obtainable, and especially with the use of filament lamps, either in fixtures or coves, illumination can be modernized and renovated without appeal for priority privileges.

In general, maintenance of the theatre building and renovation of its appearance continues to have most of the regular and established materials to draw upon; the restrictions is almost entirely one of Government restriction upon the amount of money that may be spent. And the amount allowed is sufficient for effective improvements in plan, service and appearance.

By F. LOUIS FRIEDMAN

YOU CAN STILL KEEP your theatre looking fresh, inviting and prosperous, for the WPB $5,000 Limitation Order L-41 says nothing to the contrary.

Sure, you can't plan to enlarge the capacity of your house, or build a new marquee, or install new plumbing or ventilating beyond the $5,000 maximum. You probably couldn't get the critical materials, anyway. But dressing up your theatre isn't stopped; keeping it smart looking isn't stopped, and doing the needful to attract patrons isn't banned, by any means. On the contrary, Washington wants you to do everything necessary to keep customers coming to your theatre, because the public needs the lift to its morale that motion pictures will provide.

It may surprise you to discover that there are still many things that you can get for your theatre to make it say, "We're keeping up with the procession." Perhaps in more lavish times they were things you might consider rather unimportant. New sandurns, for example. How long has it been since you really looked at yours? Would newer, smarter ones help dress up your theatre? Most likely you can get them.

Or that candy corner, or popcorn machine corner . . . does it look a little dark and forgotten? Those new Wagner Lobby Display units with the four-inch colored plastic letters, nicely hung above your candy machine will pull your patrons' eyes over in that direction and sell more candy. That's showmanship, and that 'ol debbil L-41 certainly doesn't limit that.

If you don't own a candy machine and if you're still using an old-fashioned wooden candy counter, then it's time to change for a newer, smarter model. They're making them now as modern and as trim as a streamliner and just as inviting to the customer. These new candy display units use no critical material; they're made of wood in beautiful finishes and equipped with interior lighting for making more sales.

One of these new candy counters, with a Wagner Plastic Letter Lobby Display unit above it, makes a complete candy bar that will help dress up your theatre and make it look like a great deal more than it actually cost.

Then there are draperies and new decorative wall treatments. No priorities here, and certainly no priorities on the imagination and the technical skill of the decorative studios who can do this type of modernizing so well. Your own ideas and your pet color schemes can be developed in many striking ways through the cooperation of competent craftsmen who can carry out your wishes and give your theatre interior a new decor for less than you think possible.

There's even some new carpeting available. To be sure, quantities are limited, but some far-sighted dealers can probably take care of your needs in new carpet, if you don't wait too long.

And speaking of carpet, what about that vacuum cleaner of yours? Is it doing the sort of job it should do? Does it really clean efficiently? If it doesn't, you might think of getting a new one while they can still be had. You can still get delivery of vacuum cleaners from stock . . . and not the small household kind, but cleaners specially designed for heavy duty theatre cleaning.

No, you don't have to let your theatre get shabby. You can revitalize your lobby and front with new lobby display frames and new admission signs, and if you're using fluorescent lighting you can change the color scheme with "Plasticoils"—remarkably clever coils made of a special plastic known as Tenite that provide both color correction and light diffusion. "Plasticoils" fit tightly over the fluorescent tube and have a surprising decorative value. They come in clear, ivory, pink, yellow gold, green, blue and red. Red and clear strands are combined to "warm" white and daylight fluorescent light; pink coils "naturalize" the glow of daylight fluorescent lamps.

Now for a moment, let's just step outside. See that nice, clear space in front of your theatre, right at the curb? Maybe it does say "No Parking," but these days, with gas and tire rationing, the warning doesn't mean as much as it used to. But if there aren't so many cars pulling up in front of your theatre, there are probably a great many more bicycles, and a bicycle rack will do you and your patrons a lot of good.

The cyclists will like the parking space you provide for them, and you will like the customer good will that this little extra touch of service creates. What's more, you'll quickly see that your bicycle rack is an ideal advertising medium. Just add two short poles at each end of the rack, string a banner across, and you've got yourself a fine piece of publicity for your coming attractions.

Getting back into the interior of the theatre, there's a new and colorful flooring product called "Chromatile" that's particularly adaptable for new flooring installations in several places, such as rest rooms, candy rooms or corners, lobbies and offices.

This is a resilient new floor covering material in attractive tile designs and made in a wide range of textured colors. It's water-proof, easy to clean and comfortable to walk on. There are no critical materials such as cork or shellac used in making "Chromatile," which means that if you want to brighten up certain spots in your theatre with this new kind of tile-type flooring material, you can do it without hesitation.

There's lots more that you can do to keep your theatre marching right ahead, but the hints given you here will probably generate plenty of ideas in themselves. The big point is, don't let your theatre begin to look shabby, because there's such a thing as Conservation Order L-41 on the books. Remember the classic story about the Englishman living in the jungle who always dressed for dinner every night, even when there was no one around to see him except a bunch of natives? He kept up appearances in spite of everything. Theatres not only should keep up appearances; they must keep up appearances in these times . . . to serve the public better, to maintain their standing in the community and to keep ahead of competition.

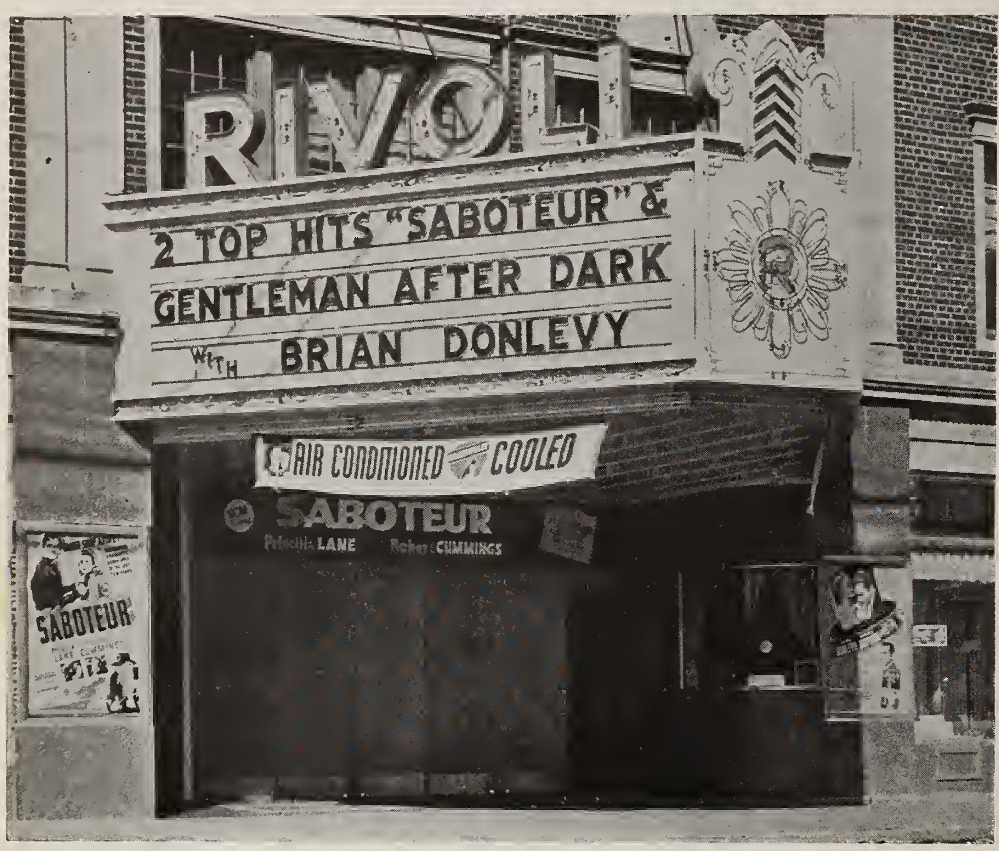
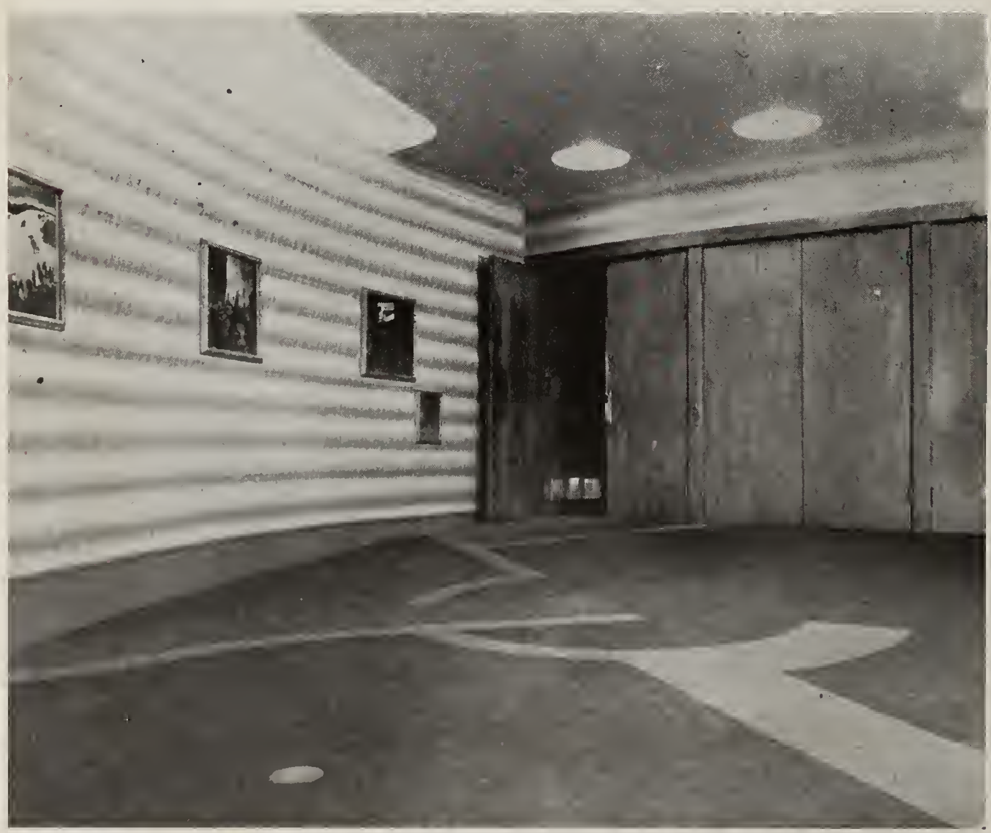
Functionally Revised While Being Enlarged

In the remodelling of the Rivoli theatre in West Haven, Conn., in order to increase the capacity from 900 to 1,200, advantage was taken of the necessary reconstruction to revise the entire seating and sight-line plan as well as to modernize acoustical and traffic conditions. The Rivoli, located in a suburb of New Haven, is owned and operated by Fishman Theatres. It was built about twelve years ago. Redesigning is by Ben Schlanger, New York theatre architect.



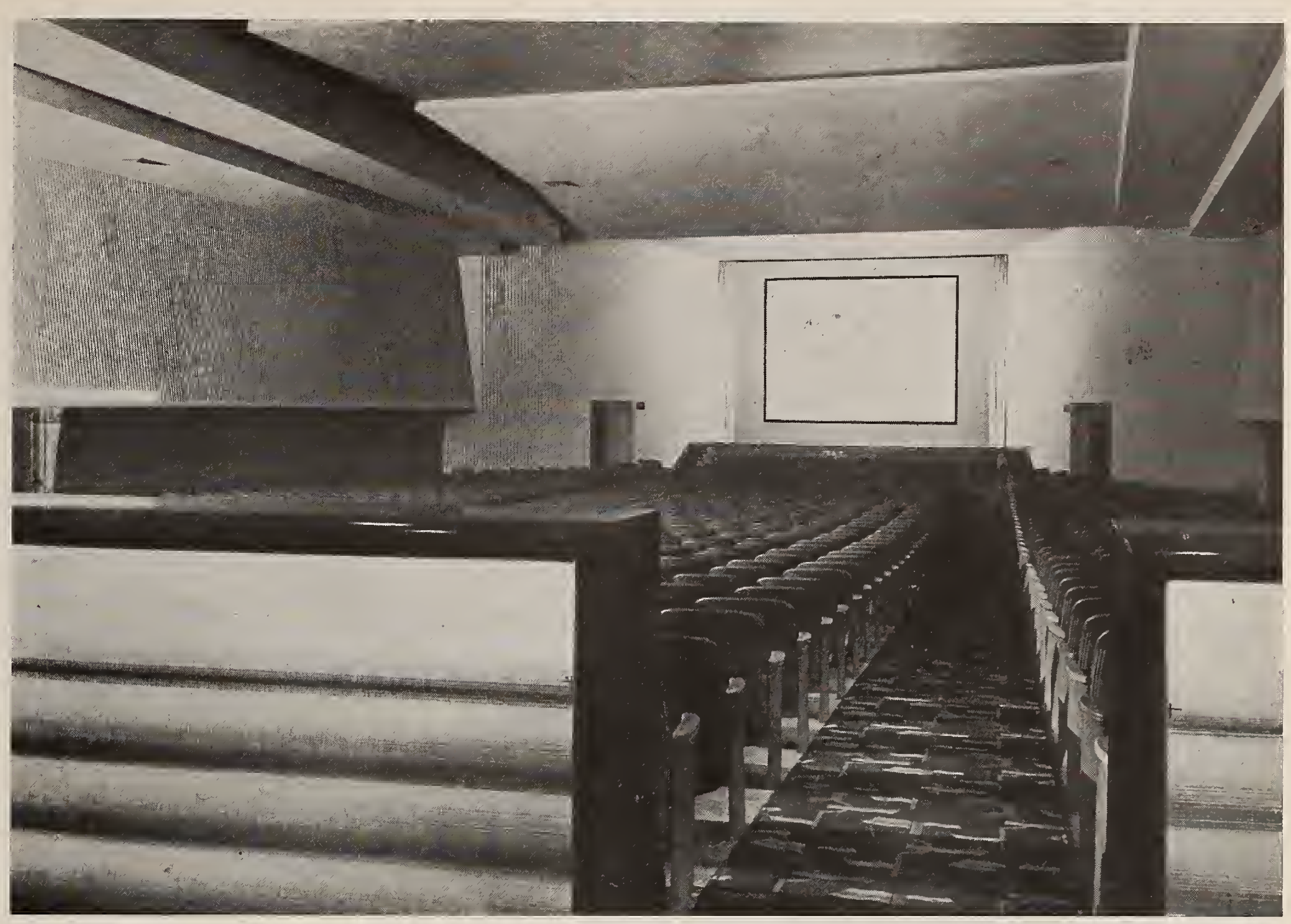
VIEW OF ENTRANCE AREA.

- The marquee was not changed, with the exception of a new soffit. This soffit holds a series of lines of white neon tubing. Cast granite was used as a basic exterior wall material. The color is a blending of black, grey and reddish brown. The doors are of the completely opaque flush type, of hardwood finished to show the natural graining. Although the main building facade is of a Georgian Colonial design, the new work blends with the whole because of its simplicity. Richness is obtained by the colorfulness of the materials and the expression of permanence obtained from them. The first set of doors has been brought within 6 feet of the street building line to create more inner lobby and foyer space which was needed in this case.

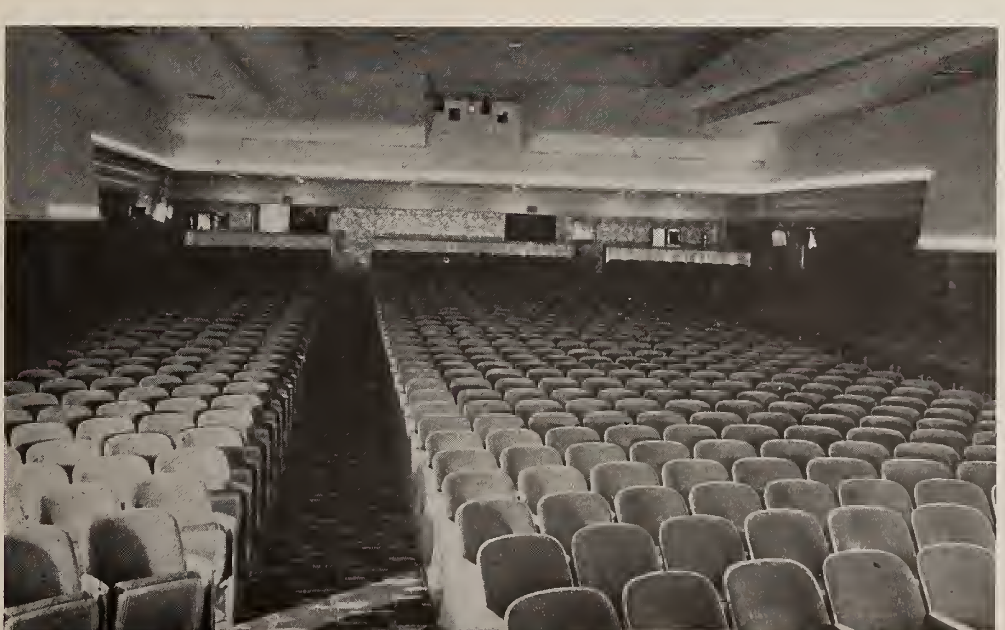


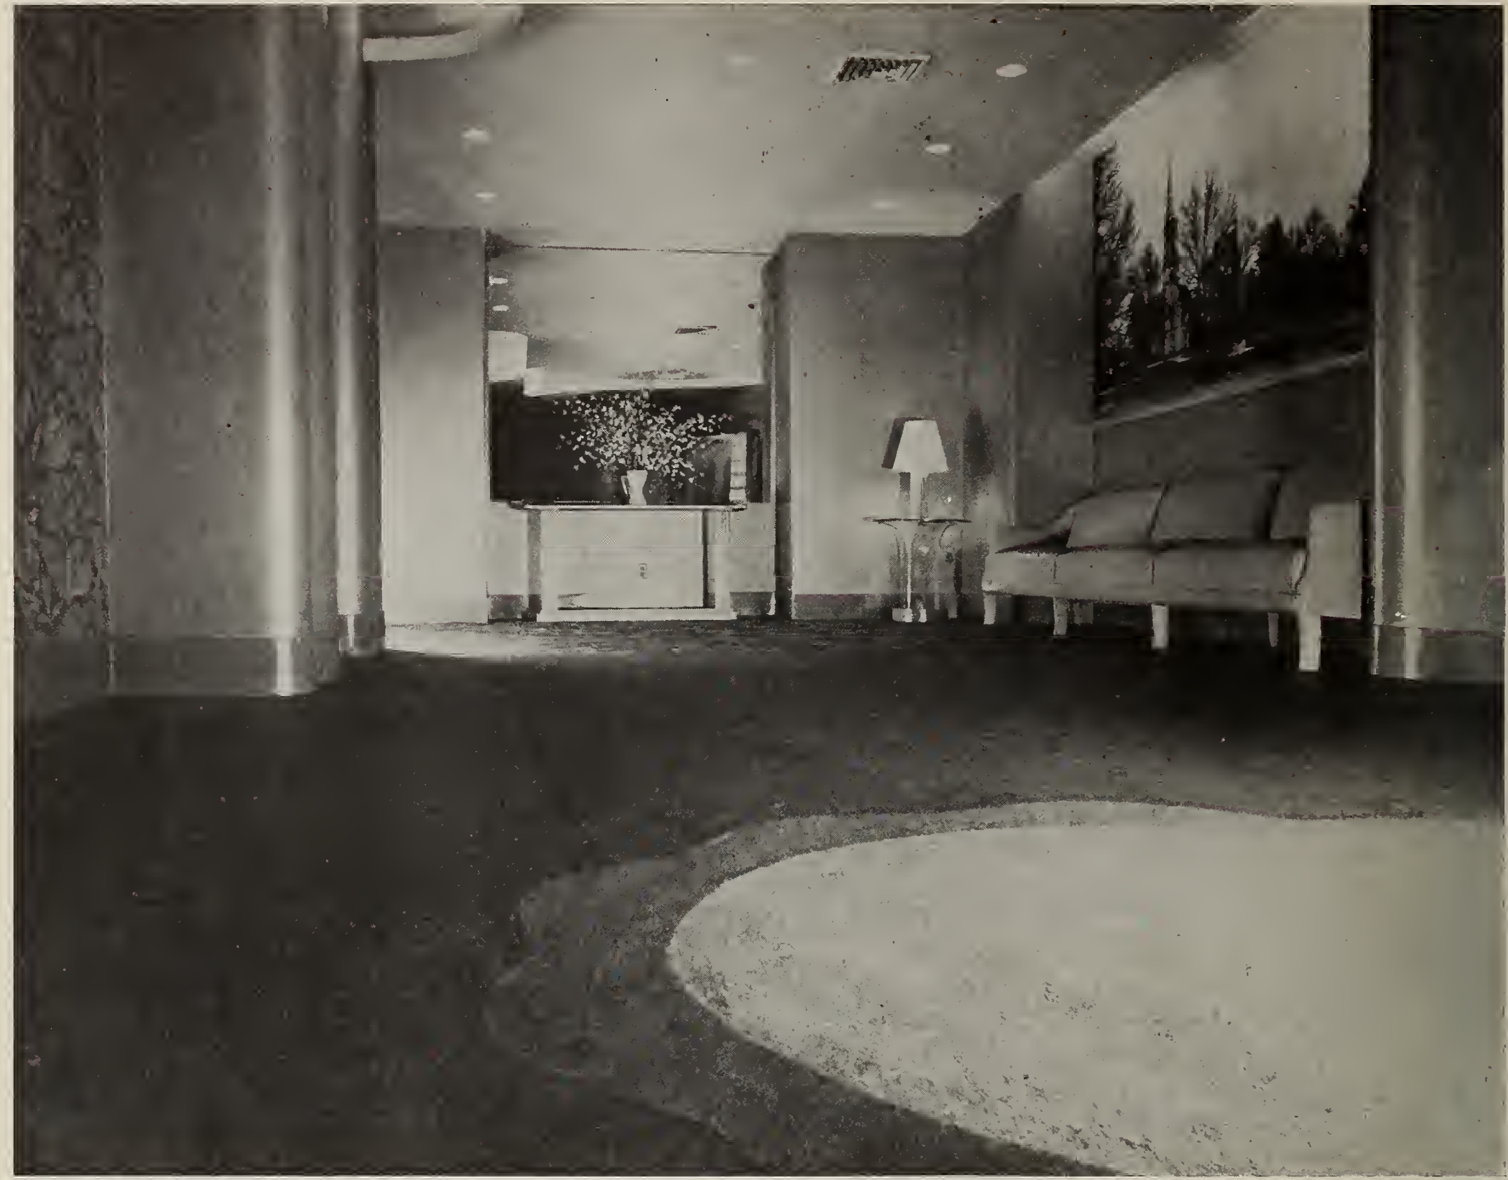
THE LOBBY, LOOKING TOWARD FOYER ENTRANCE.

- In the view of the lobby the open door shows the point for the collection of tickets. Note the built-in ticket collecting box to the left of the open door. The side wall is corrugated in bold curves which take on rich high lights and shadows from the cove light above. The corrugations are covered with the same metallized Fabron as was used on the illuminated standee wall. The pictures on the wall are original oil colors by Sol Wilson, depicting the development of the motion picture. The opposite wall has illuminated attraction displays. The carpet is a special design of Bigelow Sanford Lokweave. All of the carpeting has tones of blue, rose, tan and greys. The circular domes of light in the ceiling are plastered inverted bowls with silvered lamps in the center, using bottom silvering for the reflecting of the light upward. These lamps are standard type.



■ Two views of the Rivoli auditorium. In the view towards the screen, the line at which the screen curtain lighting comes from the ceiling shows where the old Rivoli theatre ended. The new portion is the brightly illuminated section in front of the screen, and the space behind the screen for the sound and air-conditioning equipment. Chairs are American "Bodiform." The new portion of the floor near the screen is of the reverse type, which made it possible to maintain the old floor slope basically, although the depth of the theatre was increased considerably. The photo shows the partial introduction of staggering of the chairs in positions that required it for eliminating obstruction of the view of the screen. The decorative wall covering on the lower part of the side walls, and on the rear portions of the main ceiling is Fabron. The finish on the illuminated side of the standee rail is a metallized engraved process cloth. All of the wall and ceiling surfaces not covered with Fabron are of a corrugated plaster run in place. These corrugations control screen light reflections and increase the level of the illumination of the auditorium during the projection period without any competition with the projected picture. Note the extremely narrow black masking around the screen. The standee wall is illuminated by a cove lighting concealed under the top of the rail; this is visible in the foreground. The entire auditorium is finished in hard plaster, depending on the fixed carpet and chair absorption, and the sloped and shaped surfaces for acoustical design. The acoustical work was done in consultation with the Erpi Research Department. Many of the original ideas of the late C. C. Potwin are incorporated. The standee area walls are covered with the same pattern of Fabron as used on the side walls. The continuous lines of light in the rear view are made of filament tube lighting in coves, which allow the light to spread into the auditorium but not on to the immediate surfaces above the lights. An interesting play of detail shadows on the corrugated surfaces would be washed out by too much light if the tube sources were not in open coves. The stepped portions of the ceiling near the side walls were introduced to conceal the lowest portion of the old curved roof trusses.





GENERAL VIEW OF THE FOYER.

■ The view of the Rivoli foyer above is as one comes from the lobby, looking towards one end of the foyer, which has an opening to the auditorium at the left of the mirror. Another opening to the auditorium is on the same wall at the end from which the photo is taken. The walls are all covered with Fabron. The pattern visible on the extreme left hand is that carried in from the lower portion of the auditorium side walls. Note the photo-mural on the right over the long settee. Furniture is made of glass and natural-finish woods. The carpet is a Lokweave special design. An indirect cove containing white fluorescent lamps lights the photo-mural and small concealed downlights light the carpet. The photo-mural is of the town square. It is by Bernice Abbott, who is famous for her photographic work of subjects of this type. The mural is 5 feet high and 12 feet long.

The Film Theatre On the Home Front

¶ Presenting, in a pictorial exhibit, an account of the work of the Forum theatre in Los Angeles for the protection of its patrons and in the service of its community

James E. Brinton, the Forum's manager.

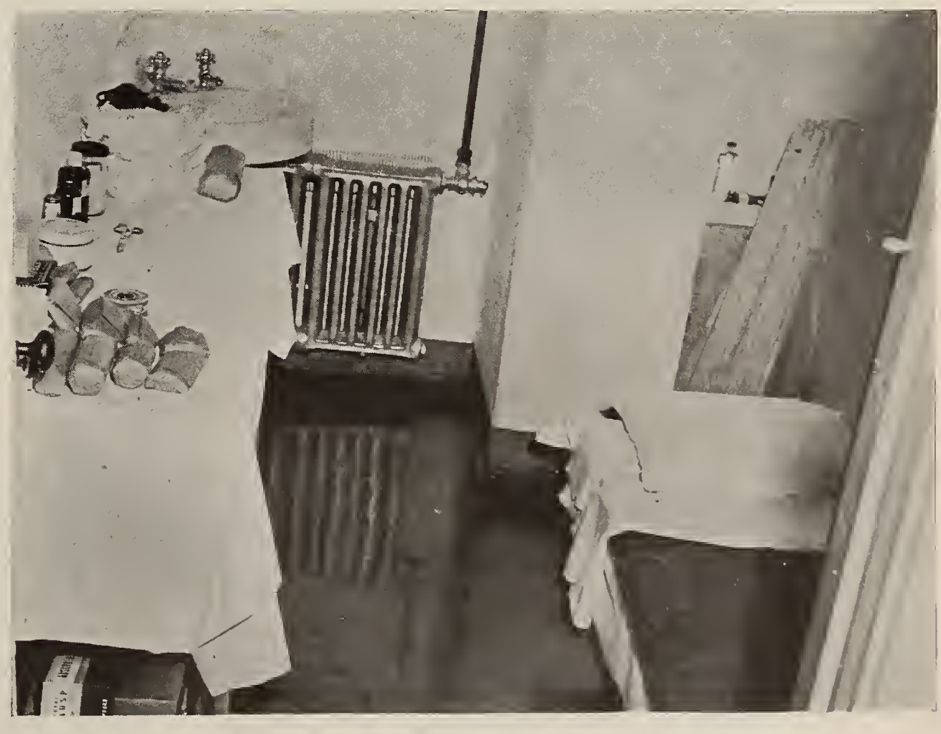
SINCE it was Japan that ultimately brought the United States militarily into World War II, the West Coast has regarded itself as closer to the immediate field of action than the rest of the country, and accordingly steps for the protection of the civilian population from air raids got underway quickly and by now have been carried out to the completion of a well organized defense program. In this effort, motion picture theatres have played an important part, demonstrating in an extreme emergency the consciousness of public interests that we in the industry have always known the theatre world to be possessed of.

Other theatre organizations than that of the Forum in Los Angeles have contributed to this demonstration; at the Forum, however, defense work has not only been carried to notable dimensions, but the material for its recording in such an exhibit as now appears in these pages has become uniquely available.

Details of this activity at the Forum, conducted under the inspiration and guidance of its manager, James E. Brinton, are well indicated in the pictures on this and the following two pages. The interests of Mr. Brinton and of his assistant, William Richardson, have gone, however, somewhat beyond the range of the camera. For example, both became senior air raid wardens, and are assigned to a populous district, in which the Forum is located and of which the Forum has been made an invaluable defense center. Los Angeles, it will be remembered, did have a genuine air raid alarm, and during it 1,200 pedestrians and motorists were quartered within the Forum theatre. And held there, they were entertained until the all-clear signal sounded. The accompanying pictures show how this may be promptly and efficiently accomplished.

In the May 30th issue of Better Theatres appeared a picture of the awarding to the Forum, of the first certificate of merit handed out for defense work by Los Angeles. The following views show how Mr. Brinton and his staff won it.

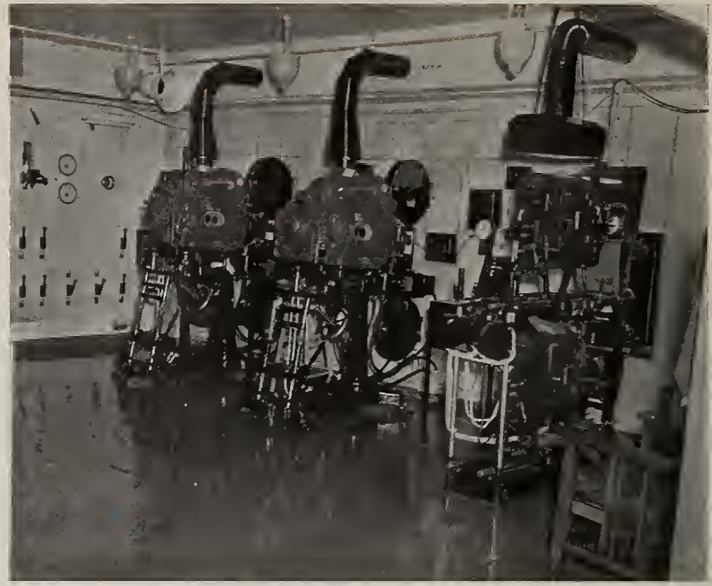
In addition to his managerial and air raid warden duties, Mr. Brinton is a member of the Los Angeles Auxiliary Fire Brigade and is active in the Red Cross, and to the latter organization have been turned over physical facilities of the Forum theatre. He is also a member of the Los Angeles price administration staff and of the local rationing board.



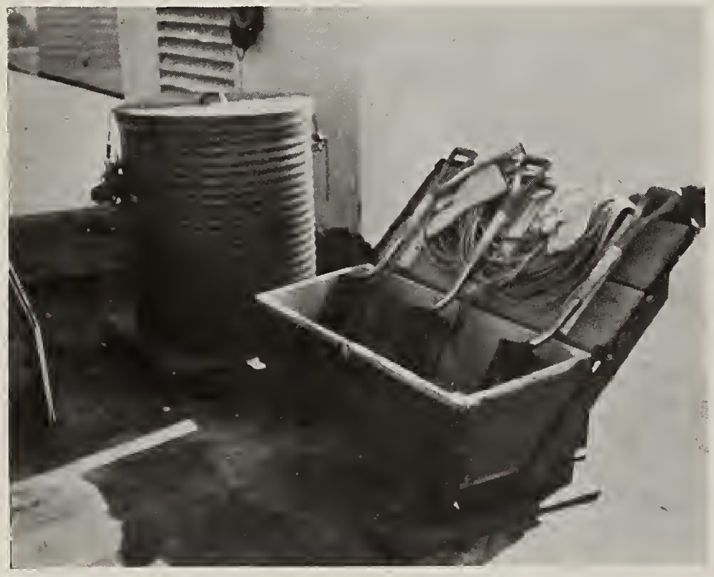
■ One of the first aid rooms in the Forum theatre. There are a number of such rooms located in the basement, each fully equipped for emergency care of injured persons, with cot and medical dressings kept ready for instant use.

OTHER PICTURES ON FOLLOWING TWO PAGES

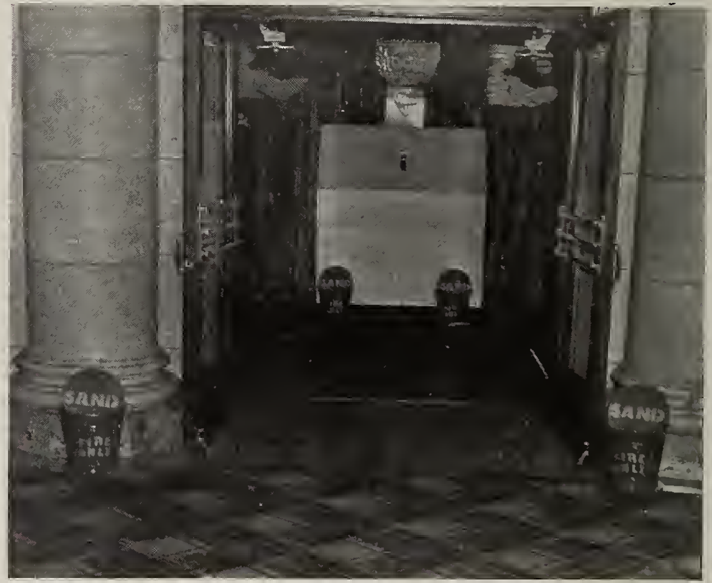
■ General view of large section of the Forum basement which has been repainted and decorated. This area is available for pedestrians as well as patrons in case of an air raid, and playing cards, magazines and a radio are provided.



■ Defense work at the Forum was carried even into the projection room, which was repainted, while all of the equipment was cleaned thoroughly and enameled. Additionally, emergency fire fighting equipment was installed.



■ The view above shows placement of dry sand in 150-gallon drum containers, shovels, handlines, asbestos gloves and a locked compartment, all kept in readiness for an emergency. This particular group of materials is on the stage roof, and one-third of the roof can be served from this location.



■ The above picture is of the entrance to the foyer from the outer lobby. The buckets shown are filled with sand, and each is painted and lettered appropriately with a number corresponding to one on a scale plan of the theatre in the hands of all staff members, and also of the fire department.

■ View of location backstage, showing emergency equipment consisting in dry sand in containers, shovels, wide scoops with sand-filled handles for close-in fire extinguishing; also axes, soda-and-acid extinguishers are located in such emergency places, and all such points are indicated on the staff maps.

■ A scene in the room in the basement of the Forum which has been placed at the disposal of the Red Cross and Women's Auxiliary Ambulance Defense Corps. The room is used as a first aid reception center for the Forum district and here members of the two organizations make surgical goods.

■ At right is a tyical scene as the first-aid class meets in the Forum basement, with Manager Brinton as instructor. Mr. Brinton has not only instructed his staff in first aid, but conducts classes for other workers in civilian defense.

■ A section of the Forum basement (right) has been set aside and equipped for emergency care of air raid victims, and even of those who become ill while taking refuge in the Forum. Besides cots, complete surgical equipment is provided — even a special room for the delivery of an infant.

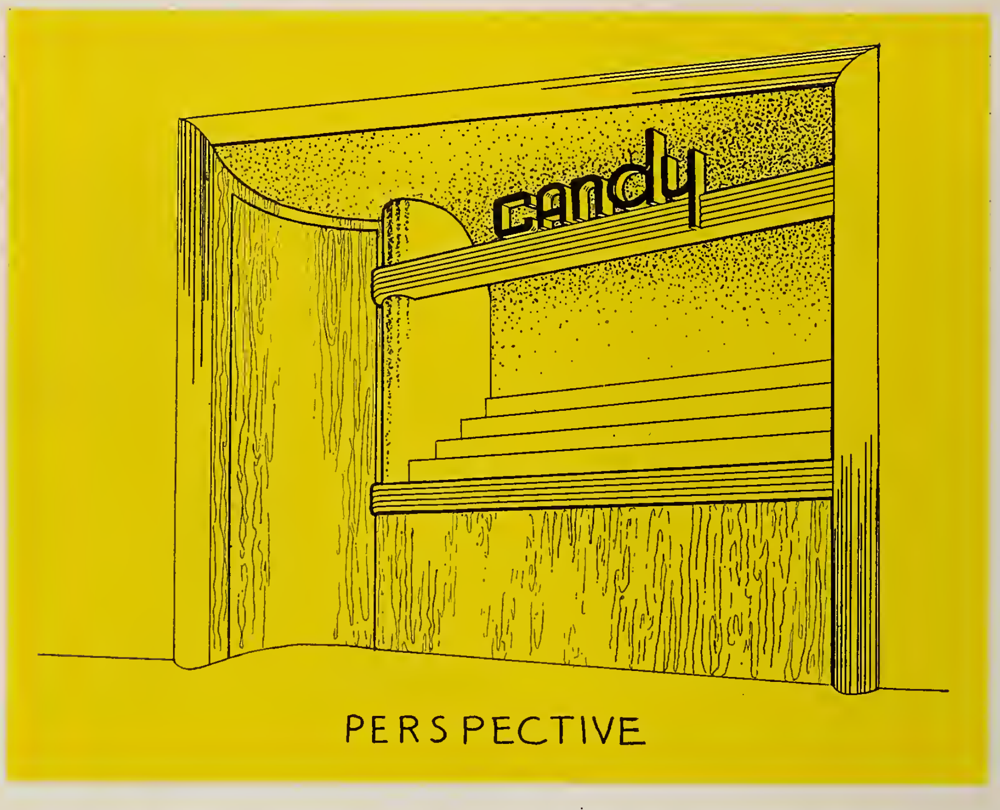
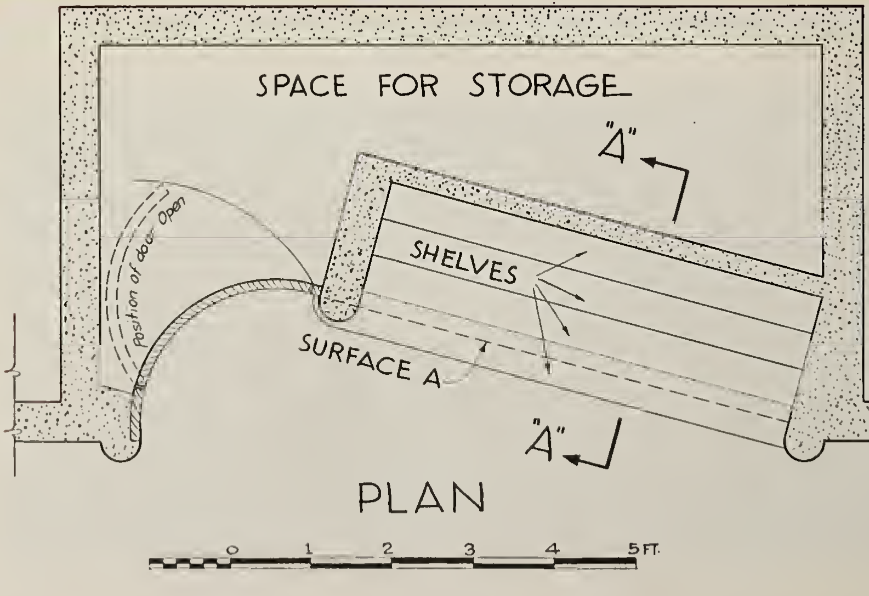
Planning the Candy Booth for Convenience

A Basic Scheme Emphasizing Architectural Unity and Maximum Operating Economy



PERSPECTIVE



PLAN

OUT OF THE increasing use of candy counters in motion picture theatres has grown the candy or refreshment booth, providing a place for candy selling as part of the architectural scheme of foyer or lobby. There have been many attractive treatments of this new aspect of the theatre interior; less often, however, have they included basic consideration of sales and operating functions. These have been primary in the development of the scheme presented here, which is flexible enough to be adapted, in its essentials, to the majority of situations.

The plan is shaped so that the seller can be sitting or standing in a space out of the line of traffic, yet be in proper position for observing the counter and waiting on trade. The purchaser is also placed so that he is out of the line of traffic. The candy shelves are located so that they will be in view from both sides of approach. This is accomplished by the angle at which the shelves are made to join the face of the main front wall. Recessing the shelves entirely would not be advisable, because it would obstruct the view of the merchandise.

ARRANGEMENT FOR STORAGE

The space behind the counter for storage is optional because the space under the shelves could be used for storage, in conjunction with some other space in another part of the theatre for bulk storage. If the space under the shelves is used, it will be necessary to use doors on the front face. These doors should be of the flush face, unpaneled kind to make them inconspicuous. Concealed hinges of the piano or "Soss" type should be used.

This counter can be placed in any location where it will be in clear view in the line of traffic. Its decorative quality gives ample assurance that it would not mar the architecture of the theatre in any location.

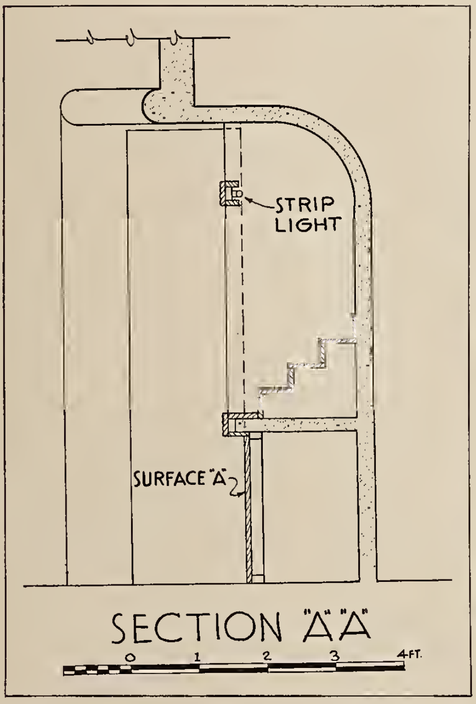
The indirect lighting indicated would supply sufficient illumination for transacting business, and also prevent stray light from hitting the motion picture screen should the counter be located in a standee-foyer more or less continuous with the auditorium.

FINISHING MATERIALS

All of the finishing materials, with the exception of the surfaces shown as a spotted texture, could be of plywood in attractive natural wood finishes. The bar under the lettering, candy and the bar at the bottom of the candy shelves, should be grooved or fluted for decorative effect.

Most wood veneers are more attractive when they are unstained, covered only with transparant protective coatings, such as shellac, clear varnish, etc. The candy shelves could be made of glass or Formica, for ease of dusting and cleaning.

The spotted texture surface shown on the perspective drawing may be painted plaster, Formica, or any of the decorative wall tiles, fabrics and papers available today. This surface should be of a fairly light color to reflect light efficiently, and it is always possible to reduce the lamp wattage if this surface reflects too much. Use of ordinary incandescent lamps, spaced about 8 inches on centers, would be most economical and also would allow for adjusting the lighting intensity to suit conditions.



To simplify construction as much as possible, one could use wood materials throughout, making it entirely a cabinetmaker's job. The curved mouldings could be of solid wood with a veneer of wood for finish. The curved ceiling over the shelves could be formed of ⅛-inch plywood bent in a curve over a skeleton framework of wood members.

REMODELING PRECAUTIONS

If remodeling, care should be taken to support properly any construction which may exist above the opening that is created by cutting through a wall to form this candy booth alcove. The top of this alcove is sufficiently low to allow for the placing of a support if it is needed. It is advisable to select a location which will offer the least structural difficulties; however the location of a candy booth is too important to let a few structural difficulties interfere.

A stool for the attendant to sit on can be designed to be part of the curved door. This would be less conspicuous than an isolated chair and make for one item less to keep track of.

An extra-heavy fabric shade, operated from a roller and guided in side tracks or grooves, could be installed to close off the candy shelves when the counter is not in use. This shade need not be any higher than the underside of the light trough, not any wider than the shelves.

The design illustrated for this candy alcove can be readily adapted to the use of a stock showcase. This would permit elimination of the candy shelves and solid apron below to the floor, thereby forming an alcove within an alcove. The showcase would set on the floor within the space (width) shown in the drawings for the shelves. The light trough and the rest of the design would be the same. The showcase should of course have doors of glass and be opened from the inside of the alcove. Nor should it be difficult to have the wood finish of the alcove adequately match or harmonize with the showcase.

9 Common Faults That Can Be Corrected Now

IN JUNE THE Government order went into effect limiting construction or structural remodeling in the theatre field to an amount costing no more than $5,000. This, however, still leaves the theatre operator quite a little that can be done to improve conditions in his theatre. Ample materials are readily available for work not requiring steel and substantial quantities of metallic products, so there is no reason based on wartime restrictions for allowing theatres to remain out-of-date in appearance, to become actually shabby, or to develop undue hazards.

ILL-FITTING DOORS

Let's take, for example, the exit doors—or, for that matter, all the doors in the auditorium. In these times when extra precautions are in order, utmost assurance must be had at all times that these doors are in first-class operating condition. Fire regulations make this mandatory, of course; nevertheless, in normal times we are more lenient in such matters than we can afford to be in times when emergencies must be specially prepared for.

Bad-fitting exit doors also allow the leakage of a considerable amount of cold air in winter—more than one can appreciate by merely holding a hand along the sides. Such infiltration of cold air has been counterbalanced to some degree simply by burning more fuel; now, with the supply of all fuels curtailed, there may be a serious heating problem next winter.

Still another thing that poorly fitted exit doors cause is the rapid deterioration of carpet—and carpet getting more and more difficult to replace every day. Deterioration of carpet directly result from saddles at the doors which permit the leakage of water into the theatre during a heavy rain. And a blocked or improper drain pipe in the exit area way will aggravate this condition by backing up the rain water until it flows easily under the loose fitting door saddle and then into the theatre. It is surprising how many are the theatres in which such conditions are allowed to persist, as if they were a necessary evil that had to be tolerated.

Now there are several causes of improper fitting of doors at the floor. It may be that the saddle was originally haphazardly installed, or is of the wrong type; also, it may be that the floor at the doors was laid unevenly, or that it has buckled due to expansion or contraction. In any case, the floor and the saddle, wherever they are bad at the exit doors, should be ripped out and a new floor laid.

In laying the new floor, the best method is to have the level about ¾-inch above the bottom of the doors when they are in the closed position, while the sockets at the floor and the head of the doors should be set so that when the bolts slip into them they will pull the doors tight against this ¾-inch offset at the floor and the stripping around the frame.

ASTRAGAL STRIPPING

Another thing that should be checked (it is so often improperly fitted on the exit doors) is the astragal stripping. This is the small convex moulding or bead of rounded or flat surface that is installed on the outside edge of one door, overlapping the other door both are in the closed position. This astragal strip should overlap the other door about ½-inch from top to bottom, and be fitted tightly against it when the doors are closed; in this way there will be no open space between the joint of the two doors, and as a result, no leakage of air or light between the inside and outside of the theatre.

SAFETY MEASURES

All panic bolts or push bars should be checked and repaired so that they worked easily and efficiently. No locks or "slip-in" crossbars should be tolerated on any exit door, especially on so-called emergency exit doors. In these times an extreme emergency may arise at any moment when all exit doors may have to be used in a hurry. Moreover, a lock or bar left at or near an exit door can be put to ill use by mischievous boys or unscrupulous persons.

Incidentally, all doors leading to "blind" enclosed areas and not used by the patrons, should be, in my opinion, kept locked at all times. This would include storage rooms, broom or waste closets, dressing rooms or areas under the stage, and boiler rooms having only one door. The reason for keeping these doors locked is that in case a general panic should develop, frantic patrons might rush to the nearest doors or be pushed into them, thus a person groping madly about for an exit might be trapped, and be suffocated under debris before his predicament became known.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR VACUUM CLEANERS IN SERVICE

Yes, your vacuum cleaner equipment is in the service, too. With wartime restrictions on new equipment and repair parts, you have to make it last. This means you have to take even better care of it.

These few, brief suggestions are made to help you get even more efficient service from your present equipment and to keep it serving. Of course, the operating and care instructions which come with the equipment should be followed carefully.

The motor should be sent to a reliable repair shop regularly for checking and overhauling, if necessary. If vacuum cleaner is used a great deal, have it checked once a year. Don't wait until something happens. It may be too late.

Clean the vacuum cleaner tank and bag daily. This will give you maximum efficiency and service. It will also reduce the running time to a minimum and prolong the life of the cleaner. Replace the bag, if possible, when it is well worn.

The carbon brushes are, of course, subjected to constant wear. These should be checked at regular intervals and replaced when worn down to a short length (about one-quarter inch). These are still obtainable and can be purchased as needed.

A few minutes a day spent in cleaning your equipment itself will not only keep it looking better but will make it work better and last longer. Dirt is an enemy to long life. Keep the attachments and tank clean.

While your equipment is built to "take it," you can't expect even the most rugged equipment to work most efficiently and last very long if it is used carelessly or "thrown" into any old storage space. Handle your equipment carefully and store your attachments properly.

the standpoint both of improvement and of safety, is the obsolete orchestra pit. Most of these pits are unsightly and are a definite hazard. In most motion picture theatres having these pits, the only protection are flimsy pipe rails, while the floor level of the pit is from 18 to 30 inches below the level of the auditorium floor. As in the case of the doors to "blind" areas, a rush of people in an emergency might tear loose this rail, or some persons might topple over a masonry rail. The first thing to do with an unused pit is to tear down the railing and build up the floor in this area to the level of the auditorium floor.

METHODS OF FILLING PIT

The cheapest way to do this is to install 2x6 joists on 16-inch centers, with the ends buried or fastened to the existing auditorium floor and the stage apron, and to lay flooring of 1x6-inch "roofers" over them (regular tongued-and-grooved flooring would be better if it is available).

The best job and a permanent one, would be to fill in the pit with dirt or stone—well tamped—to a height of 4 inches below the auditorium cement floor, and then pour a level concrete floor over this fill. There is no question that by doing this the appearance of the front of the auditorium would be improved, and at the same time add to the safety of patrons.

Windows in a theatre auditorium are a liability at any time, and in blackout areas today they are an expense and a serious hazard. If you have such windows, block them off. Their elimination will all save fuel money next winter, for glass lets through a lot of cold air—or rather lets heat through to the outside. And at the same time a better appearance will result.

The need for keeping immaculately clean all out-of-the-way areas and rooms in the theatre has been dealt with in other departments repeatedly. It has been pointed out that such rooms should be kept broom-clean and occasionally disinfected to avoid foul odors. Now another source of foul odors in the theatre is stagnant water that has backed up from floor drains under the stage and in the boiler room, and even from roof leaders. This happens after heavy storms, summer or winter. Stagnant water in these areas not only gives off bad odors into the theatre, but causes rotting and mildewing of all material near it. There are any number of theatres that tolerate this condition, when a little plumbing repair work will eliminate it, permanently.

ERADICATING DRAIN ODORS

Any basement drain that backs up water, as well as a drain in the outside exit areaway that causes rapid carpet deterioration at the exit doors, should be cleaned out, or if in bad condition, be completely dug-out. A new drain and pipe should be installed of the proper type to eliminate constant future trouble. The main reason for the backed-up water, especially in outside exit areaways, is that the drain in this area, as well as the roof downspout leader, freezes tight at the ground line, thus cracking the pipes and allowing large chunks of dirt and other foreign matter to accumulate inside; hence, it is a good idea, if repairs or new pipes and drains are installed at this time of the year, to frost-proof them while the ground is soft and exposed. To put this work off until fall is bad policy as then conditions will be more difficult.

The common practice in frost-proofing is to carry down into the ground, below the frost line, a quadruple box made of boards and ordinary tar paper, with a good tight joint made at the underside. This particular box may be made of ⅞-inch tongue and grooved sheathing in four separate square boxes having 2-inch air space between each one, and two thicknesses of five-ply tar paper applied to this sheathing on the outside of each box. The top of this box is also covered with this sheathing and with tar paper, except where the drain or pipe fits in. Then over the cover of the box concrete can be laid.

BLACKOUT MARKERS

In case the theatre must be prepared for blackouts and means must be established for allowing theatre wardens to be easily seen so as to direct air raid defense work, it would be well to identify all obstructions, exit passageways, aisles and exit doors with some sort of luminous markers. These are available in various types of signs, while luminescent paints and materials are obtainable for applying to objects and surfaces that must be seen in the dark. There is a luminous cloth that glows in the dark for several hours after exposure to natural or electric light. It can be applied in strips around exit doors, columns, piers and head of aisles, while the theatre wardens and ushers can wear luminous arm bands, hat ribbons, or lapel buttons.

Don't Spare Your Vacuum Cleaning Equipment—BUT USE IT WELL!

JUST when conservation of carpeting, and reduction in general of the wear and tear caused by dirt, makes the vacuum cleaner a more critical tool than ever, such equipment must be itself conserved. Therefore, the rule is: Don't spare your vacuum cleaner, but treat it well.

Used properly, and being of the proper type, vacuum cleaning equipment can be employed to clean the screen, walls, draperies, radiators, flues in tubular boilers, and so on. Another place where a vacuum cleaner can be used effectively is in the projection room, where cleanliness must now be maintained at all times and in such manner that particles of grit do not get into the machinery to increase wear. The vacuum cleaner should always be used in cleaning the projection room floor, for a broom causes flying dust, which may settle on and in the equipment. It also can be used very efficiently to clean out the lamphouses, including the exhaust ducts, of heavy accumulations of carbon dust and ash.

In cleaning carpet, the strong suction of a vacuum cleaner raises the trampled nap and draws out the dirt and grit from the warp where, if left, it cuts and discolors and in a short time makes the carpeting look old and dull looking.

Like other equipment in the theatre, vacuum cleaners need systematic maintenance and care to produce efficient results consistently over the period of its normal life. In using the cleaner, care should be taken that it is not pulled about roughly by the hose; the hose coupling, if not the hose itself, will thus be broken relatively soon. Also, the rubber power cord should be long enough to allow the cleaner a larger area to work in without putting a strain on the cord through stretching to the limit of its length. This cord, if yanked or pulled about carelessly, will develop breaks in the insulation, pitted or burnt prongs on the plug, and broken connection at the motor.

Make sure that the bag, hose or drum is always thoroughly cleaned after each day's use. A clean container, emptied frequently, will permit the cleaner to work faster and better as the strong suction pulls in the dirt very rapidly, especially if used on a very dirty floor. An important gadget on the cleaner is a safety trap for catching marble, buckshot and other hard and heavy articles. This trap should be always cleaned thoroughly and frequently, for when it is allowed to fillup level, these hard objects are carried into the fan and cause a breakdown. When storing the cleaner, always remove the metal tube from the end of the hose, for when they are joined together a sharp bend in the end of the hose will result, and a sharp bend in the rubber hose while it is stored away will cause a break. In cleaning also, do not bend this hose back on the metal handle, but keep it extended as straight as possible. When the hose is dirty or soiled, wash it with ordinary soap and water, but never use gasoline or other cleaning fluids.

Good care should be taken of the rubber bumper on the cleaner, as new bumpers are not available.

The ball-bearings of the cleaner should be greased about every three months in normal use, with special grease recommended by the manufacturer. This grease comes in tubes and is to be squeezed into the caps going to the bearings. Do not use oil as it does not mix well with any grease and does not last long.

To clean out the motor frame of the cleaner, remove the doors from the motor hood and use the hose for blowing out the accumulated dirt. Use light machine oil, a drop or two, in each wheel and castor, as well as area between wheel and castor.

Use only grease in the motor armature bearings, never oil. In checking the commutator, the copper part in the motor where the carbon brushes touch, open the doors in the frame at the end away from the hose and intake. If this commutator shows undue wear, have any good electrician turn down a very light cut, and have the mica insulating segments undercut so that they are a little below the commutator bars. A little sparking at the brushes when the cleaner is in operation need cause no alarm as every series-wound motor at high speeds gives out sparks. Also, the commutator need not be always shiny-bright as a commutator in good operating condition is of a rich chocolate brown color. When replacing carbon brushes in the cleaner always be sure they are of the proper type and as recommended by the manufacturer.

Systematic and intelligent care and use of vacuum cleaning equipment will be profitable in a lot of ways. The operating and cleaning overhead in the theatre will be decreased, the carpets, hangings, draperies, chairs, wall decorations and even the paint will last years longer, resulting in less time lost and money spent in redecoration.

MEMBER NEW YORK BAR

SOME CITIES have licensing officials to whom large powers have been given. Such a commissioner may have the right to open and close theatres by either refusing to issue a license or by his authority to revoke one.

New York City is a case in point. The administration of theatre licenses has been created by the legislature and is purely administrative in function. By that is meant that so long as the commissioner does not abuse his discretion, he has the absolute right in such matters.

His attitude must not be arbitrary or capricious, of course, and must have a basis in reason. If so, the courts cannot interfere with the judgment of the license commissioner.

An interesting conflict between the courts and the license commissioner occurred a short time ago. In this case (Small against Moss, reported in 277 N. Y. 501) it appears that one Frederick Small desired to build a theatre located in New York on Riverside Drive at 215th Street, in the County of the Bronx. The license commissioner refused to grant a license on the grounds that the building of theatre in that locality would increase the traffic problem to such an extent that it would affect the public health, safety and morals of the community.

The laws of the State of New York grant to the commissioner the power to pass on "the location" of any theatre for which a license is sought, and on his interpretation of the law the commissioner refused to grant the license.

The licensee sought relief in the courts and won his case. The court stated that the word "location" used in the ordinance, refers only to the presence in the neighborhood of other structures, or such matters relating to the use thereof as might affect the health and safety of theatre patrons. Said the court:

"If the power to issue an original license would include the right to consider, as a factor, traffic problems created by a theatre due to the good will of the patrons attending such theatre, then the commissioner must have the same rights as regards the issuance of renewal licenses, and such power would not have been conferred upon the commissioner without clear statutory provisions."

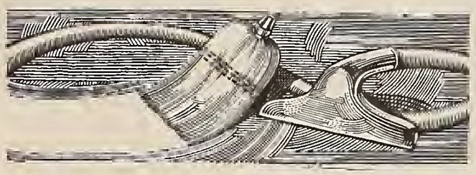
As is indictaed by the preparations of Warners' Forum theatre in Los Angeles, shown elsewhere in this issue, air raid precautions in West Coast theatres have been prompt and extensive. Above at left is a recent scene in the lobby of another Warner house, the Granada in Santa Barbara, as Manager J. R. Rodgers and staff get instruction on fire extinguishers from firemen. The right-hand picture shows H. H. Moyer, operator of the Sellwood theatre, Portland, Ore., with his layout of fire and bomb fighting equipment exhibited in the foyer of his theatre.



Summer is the Time To Guard Against Bad Odors

By SAMUEL BRAVERMAN

Special attention should be given to the toilets at this time due to climatic conditions. When temperature is high with excessive humidity, the odors in the toilets become stronger and check ups should be made during the day to remedy this condition. The trap in the urinals should be cleaned thoroughly with a long handled bowl brush and urinal solution so as to remove any incrustrations that may cling to the walls of the pipes.

The lips of the bowls and urinals should also be washed with a urinal solution. Check on floors and see that these are mopped and scrubbed daily and in some instances twice daily depending upon the traffic. Wash down walls, toilet stalls, check on condition of seats, see that same are not in a filthy condition and also wash daily.

Ventilation is extremely important so that no pockets of bad air will accumulate in the wash room. Waste receptacles should be provided for disposal for various types of waste that may casually be thrown on the floor or in the bowl causing bad odors, disagreeable sights and stuffed plumbing.

DEORDORIZING DOOR CHECK

There is a new product on the market known as a "Lavador Deodorizer." After numerous tests I have found this to be an excellent means of eliminating bad odors in the toilets. This is a device which acts as a door check and is placed on the door exactly in the same fashion as a door check which contains a high pressure cylinder pump which forces air through a chamber that emits a perfumed odor. It completely does away with the inefficient liquid sprays, drip machines and the antiquated wall containers. By simply attaching this unique device to the inside of a toilet room door, an automatic means of circulating fragrant, dry deodorant vapors is provided. It is the only deodorizer that neutralizes odor conditions by automatically acting both before and after they occur.

The Lavador is a durable all-metal dry vapor producing pump gun with a perforated metal chamber containing a special dry deodorant chemical block. It can easily be installed by anyone in a few minutes and becomes a permanent sanitation requisite connected to the inside of the rest-room door. The Lavador is a sanitary fixture of streamlined beauty in design—attractively finished—and fully guaranteed.

When the toilet room door is in a closed position, the dry chemical deodorant block evaporates slowly at room temperature, and emits a pleasant deodorant vapor, which being heavier than air, descends to breathing levels and neutralizes objectionable odors. When the door of the room is opened and closed, in normal usage, some of these deodorant vapors are thus allowed to escape.

DEODORANT ACTION AUTOMATIC

The Lavador is so constructed and so affixed to the door that in the normal usage of the door, the pump is automatically operated causing air under pressure to be forced through the hollow deodorant block. This action instantly generates additional deodorant vapors at the very time the room should be deodorized—that is, at the time the room has been used or is to be used. Thus offensive odors are neutralized both before and after they occur.

Lavador chemical blocks weigh about 13 ounces and are moulded under 80 tons of hydraulic pressure to intimately fuse rare aromatics and perfumes with paradichlorbenzene. Depending upon climatic conditions, these blocks last about 45 days before they completely disappear in the form of an invisible deodorant vapor.

WATCH FOR WASTE

Check your towel machines, soap dispensers, etc., to see that they are in working condition so that the patron is not fooled when he so desires a towel or soap—also as a source of eliminating waste such as a leaking soap valve or two, four or six towels coming out at one time.

If walls are scratched or spattered, by all means paint these immediately otherwise the rowdies will get an idea to continue on doing what some other mischievous person has already started.

How Much Can You Reduce Arc Current To Save Copper?

● In the urgency of wartime conservation, reduction of arc current has been suggested. Even if some compromise were to be made with image quality, there is, of course, a limit to which the theatre business can go in this direction, and accordingly the amount of reduction feasible will vary from theatre to theatre. This article submits tables prepared especially for the guidance of managers and projectionists in determining to what extent they may lower arc current as a practicable conservation measure.

By CHARLES E. SHULTZ

IT HAS recently been suggested that a reduction in arc power from maximum to minimum for all copper-coated carbons would result in considerable saving of the copper now consumed at the arc.

To bring about a still greater saving in copper, a new group of carbons known as "Victory" carbons is being supplied in place of the regular "suprex" trim. The "Victory" carbons have a lighter copper plate than the carbon which they replace. An increase of 20% is claimed by the manufacturers at corresponding arc current for the trim which replaces the 6.5-mm. x 8-mm. suprex combination. The new trim consists of 7-mm. Orotip "C" negative used with the "Victory" 8-mm. suprex positive.

The group of carbons directly effected are those used in the a.c. and d.c one-kilowatt arcs, and the entire suprex group, as shown in the following list:

Positives: 6-mm. Suprex, 6-mm. Pearlex, 7-mm. Suprex, 8-mm. Suprex, 7-mm. H.I.A.C., and the 6- and 7-mm. Suprex "Victory."

Negatives: 5-mm. Orotip C, 5.5-mm. Pearlex, 6-mm. Orotip C, 6-mm. Suprex, 6.5-mm. Suprex, 7-mm. Orotip C, 7-mm. Suprex, 5-mm. Suprex "Victory," 6-mm. Orotip C "Victory," and 6-mm. Suprex "Victory."

The surprex arc is most easily amenable to reduction, since most such lamps have sufficient flexibility of operation to permit the burning of several sizes of trims at a graduating scale of arc power, from maximum to minimum for each trim. The suprex arc also has a high light output and fast optical system.

The one-kilowatt arcs, however, can be operated over only a comparatively limited range of arc power, as the lamps and carbons allow a relatively small range within which the great efficiency which characterizes this type can be obtained. Because of the slow carbon consumption rate for this type arc, reduction in arc power results in very little retardation of carbon consumption, compared to the intensity change.

The 40-ampere, 27½-volt d.c., or the 66-ampere, 22-volt a.c., can illuminate a new screen 18 feet in width to the minimum screen brightness of 9 foot-lamberts at the screen center, as recommended by The Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It may be seen that this allows little or no latitude for arc power reduction unless an extremely small screen is being used.

Wartime arc power reduction may be accomplished with the least operating difficulty within the suprex group. The suprex type arc has the highest carbon consumption rate in inches consumed per hour for the arcs using copper-coated carbons.

The average suprex lamp has an optical speed of from f:2.2, to f:2.3, which is capable of filling the new higher-speed lenses. These lenses often increase the optical transmission sufficiently to offset the losses resulting from arc power reductions. The coating of your present lenses will, in some cases, accomplish a gain in transmission equal to the loss through arc power reduction.

The tables on this and the opposite page illustrate the screen sizes which can be illuminated to minimum brightness of 9 foot-lambers at center with a 90° shutter in operation, and no film in the projector.

The light is assumed to be distributed over the screen so that the sides are 70% as bright as the center, and the corners are 60% as bright as the center:

Center—9 foot-lamberts
Sides—6.3 foot-lamberts
Corners—5.4 foot-lamberts
Average—6.9 foot-lamberts

Two conditions for the reflectivity of the screen are shown: the first is for a new screen of 75% reflectivity, and the second is for a screen eighteen months old. The average loss for this period is 40%, thus the value for the reflectivity of the eighteen-month old screen is 60% of the original 75%, or 45%. This figure for screen depreciation is average and will vary according to atmospheric purity.

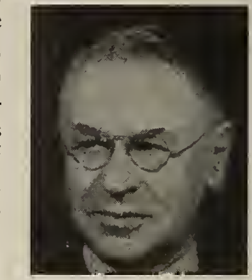
F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

The Opportunities for Young Men in Projection

THE FATHER of a fine young lad called on me recently for advice concerning the boy's vocation in life. He said his son was "technically inclined." Just now the boy is very much interested in motion pictures and feels he would like to become a projectionist. The father said that of course he wanted his boy to be happy in whatever he undertook, but would not like to see him spend years learning something only to find he has lost interest.

Projection is a peculiar craft inasmuch as the public in general appreciates only vaguely that such a thing exists in the theatre as a projection room, let alone a projectionist. The producer, the distributor and everyone down the line simply assume that sound and picture will be reproduced in a satisfactory manner. Of course, this may be construed as a compliment to present-day projectionists and equipment, since the work is usually so well done that everyone concerned considers it a matter of routine. But good projection is not routine—it is the result of skill conscientiously applied.



F. H. R.

In the last analysis, it is the projectionist who is responsible for the impression the public receives of the fine acting, the elaborate stage sets, and all that goes to make a modern motion picture. It takes many hundreds of people to produce a picture, but if a single projectionist on duty is not on his toes, does not know his business or does not care to exert his knowledge, he can greatly minimize all of their costly efforts.

A modern projection room is full of complicated equipment requiring considerable diversified knowledge in order to be handled efficiently. It is no place for a fool; quite the contrary, its processes are worthy of a high order of intelligence, and if a young chap is mechanically inclined he will find projection equal to his talents.

There is, of course, the job problem. I received a letter the other day from a man 30 years old who has had years of experience, he says, handling the equipment of the school where he is employed. He continues:

"I have been interested in projection ever since I was a boy and I take to it like a duck to water. I would like to make it my life's work. Could you give me a lead on how to obtain a start?"

And something reflecting the same situation, with certain significant embellishments, is the burden of another recent letter, this one from the West Coast.

The letter, in substance, says that this man has searched in vain for ten years for a solution to his problem, which is to get himself admitted to a local union and a regular position in a theatre. He has had ten years of practical experience and is in possession of high recommendations from employers. During all this period he has tried and tried again to become a member of a union, but has always been told that there was no room for him. Nevertheless, he says, during that period of time others have been taken in.

After first trying and being refused, he obtained work in an unorganized house in order to perfect his work. For this he received no remuneration. Since then he has worked in a theatre off and on, part of the time under permit from the union, and part of the time without a permit.

Projection needs intelligent, ambitious, conscientious workmen. There should be a way for the craft to build itself on that kind of material. My advice to those wishing to enter projection is always to see the business agent of the nearest local, but as the letter referred to above indicates, such advice is not of much help to the candidates these days. Some day, I believe, projection will be more accessible to young men of mechanical bent. Today one can only say that it is a craft worthy of them.

The Army Is Having Trouble in Projection

FROM AN unnameable private in an unnameable Army camp, comes a plea for advice on arc trouble. He writes:

"I am in the Army now and am finding the entire camp is full of hot water, which I am continually getting into clear up to my ears. The only experience I have ever had in the motion picture field is the occasional viewing of a not-too-well projected picture in the small town from which I came, yet I have been assigned to do the projecting in our camp down here. Needless to say, it is no snap for me and I stumble over what probably would be the simplest problems to a regular projectionist. However, I am doing my best to learn all I can in as short a time as possible.

"Away back in the good old days of peace I used to know a real projectionist and I wrote to him for information on various things that puzzled me. This projectionist has suggested that I procure your Bluebook and study that; however, I find this book costs $7.25—a lot of dough for a doughboy—so I am trying to get my superior officer to order it for me. In the meantime I hope you will be good enough to help me out when I get stuck. My friend told me you were a 'regular guy' and would answer the easy ones as well as the hard ones (they are all hard for me).

"I find that my carbon tip burns down to a long slim point, especially the positive one. I have a very bad light on the screen, so I assume the carbon is causing the trouble. Can you offer any suggestions that will help? Also I would appreciate it if you would not mention my name or the camp in which I am located."

There is more than one chap in the Army who has been assigned to handle projection in a Camp theatre, even though he has never touched projection equipment before; and since these columns do become accessible to quite a few of them, I am answering the inquiry in print.

The trouble referred to is, of course, "spindling." While other causes may help to make the light upon the screen bad, this is one sure result of improperly burning carbons. Spindling may be due to using amperage above the rated capacity of the carbons, though I would say this is not apt to happen in an Army camp. It also may be caused by an improper contact surface, and improper contact may be due to a loose contact, a dirty contact surface, or in some cases, by current entering the carbon too far away from the carbon tip. This latter, however, seldom occurs except in high-intensity lamps where the carbons are working above their rated capacity. In any event, spindling is definitely made worse by high temperatures in poorly ventilated lamphouses.

Thomas E. Colmell, member of Local 277, IATSE & MPMO, has sent in this snapshot of the projection room of the beautiful Klein Memorial theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., owned and operated by the city of Bridgeport. In an accompanying letter Brother Colmell says: "I have been a reader and owner of your Bluebooks since 1922. The good that has come from those pages could scarcely be expressed in words—and that also goes for your comments in BETTER THEATRES. I still have many pages torn from the old Moving Picture World containing your writings, and they come in mighty handy in refreshing my memory on many technical points which are all too often forgotten. The enclosed photo is one I snapped in the projection room of the Klein Memorial here in Bridgeport. I have had the privilege and pleasure of working here several times. The equipment consists of two E-7 Simplex projectors, Peerless Magnarc lamps, Hertner Transverter, Simplex sound and Bausch & Lomb Series No. 2 Cinephor lenses, E.F. 4¾ inches. The projection room is 36 feet long, 13 feet deep, and 10 feet high."

The first thing to do is make sure the carbons are not being forced above their rated capacity after which make sure the lamphouse has continuous and sufficient ventilation, and see that the carbon jaws are clean and not pitted, and that they clamp the carbon firmly through their entire contact area when tightened up.

The cause of poor illumination in the case of a spindling positive is reduction of the light source area and a reduction of the current flow, due to increased resistance offered by the pencil part of the carbon. Negative carbon penciling increases the arc resistance, decreases the amperage flow, and therefore decreases the screen illumination.

Spindling may or may not cause an unsteady arc.

Then the other day I had a letter signed Alec Campbell, who is with the Armed forces in Alaska, and apparently handling the projection at his camp. He wanted to know how to go about finding what is wrong when he and his helpers have trouble with their projectors. He also asked why at times the sound was all right, and at other times they cannot hear it, though conditions seem to be the same as far as he can tell. He said he never let anyone "monkey with the volume."

Well, to answer the last question first, Alec, right off the bat I'll say you had better "monkey" with the volume. Get one of your men to assist you by moving quietly around now and then in the auditorium and reporting back to you, then do not hesitate to change your volume as he directs.

As to how to go about finding trouble in your equipment—first try to find out where it is, not what it is. And since you apparently have no one competent to show you, get instruction books from the manufacturers of your equipment—and try to obtain a copy of my Bluebook—then study.

When a Switch Is Open Does the Current Flow?

HERE IS an inquiry fairly typical of letters I receive right along. I withhold the name of my correspondent for obvious reasons. He writes: "It has always been my idea that when a switch is left open no current can flow, but my brother projectionist tells me I am wrong. Can you tell us which is right?" I am comparatively new at this game and hesitate to ask you questions which you will consider dumb, but I honestly want to learn while I have the opportunity and I have been wondering why you do not help us new ones by starting a sort of questionnaire for beginners. There is much, I find, written for men who know what it is all about, but most of it is so far advanced I find I am just reading words that do not mean a thing."

I think you have something there. Yes, current does still flow even though a switch be open. The switch in a light circuit will extinguish the light, whether the power be a.c. or d.c., but if the lamp bulb be removed from the socket and a meter substituted, a very weak current continues to flow over the a.c. line, though the same does not hold true on a d.c. line.

Consider the switch in the d.c. line. The switch is open. Electrons from the negative source occupy the negative side of the switch. Free electrons from the positive blade have been drawn away toward the positive source of power. If the switch is partly closed there will be an additional flow, because, as the negative and positive charges come closer, more electrons will be attracted to the negative blade while a corresponding number of electrons will be repelled from the positive blade and will move back towards the positive source of power. During the course of this small change there is a slight movement of electrons, which is the same thing as a slight flow of current, in both wires.

However, if the switch is left alone and the d.c. voltage does not change, there is no reason for further movement of electrons, therefore there is no further flow of current.

It is easy to see than that when a.c. is connected to an open switch there is some slight flow of electrons in the wires at all times. The switch blades reverse polarity periodically, therefore electrons are consantly flowing into one and out the other, reversing this procedure so many times each second, according to the frequency of the alternating supply, and so there is a slight but continuous surging of current in the wires leading to the switch.

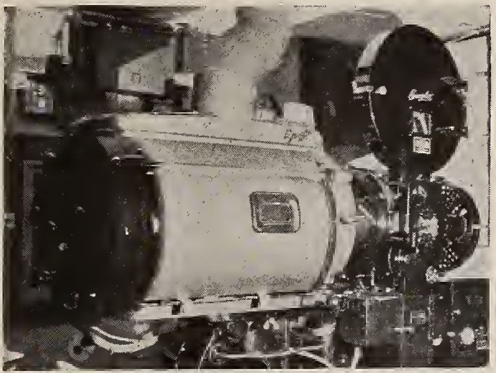
Of course, with a partially closed switch this flow of current will be increased because a greater number of negative electrons will be attracted to the positive blade, and a greater number of them repelled from the positive blade.

I will think over that idea of yours, of conducting a sort of question column on elementary matters for the newer men. Perhaps a series of questions would help.

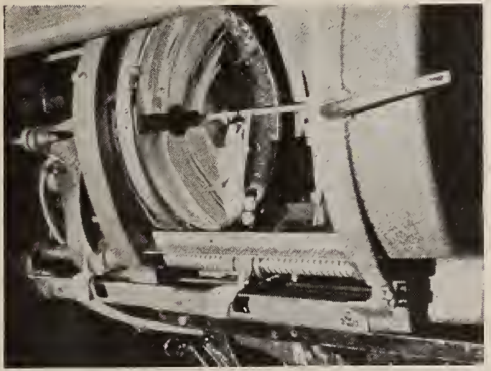
An Easy Way to Tell How Much Carbon Is Left

AN INTERESTING method of telling how much carbon is left at any time during projection has been sent in by Walter Dunkelberger, member of Local 510, Fargo, N. D. And he has included pictures taken by himself. He writes:

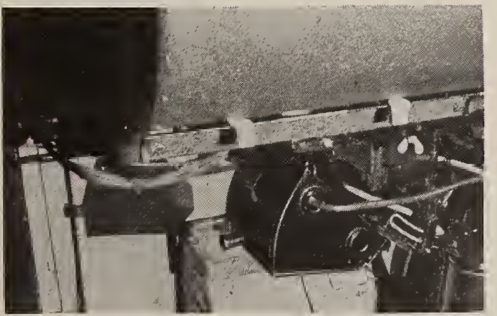
"Recently I hit on an idea to facilitate the determination of the length of carbon still left in the lamp without opening the lamphouse door. I think the idea is good and would like to pass it on to the boys.



1. Painted carbon holder handles.



2. Handles close together.



3. Black gap between handles.

"I went to a paint shop, bought a small amount of white gloss enamel, and painted the carbon holder handles which protrude from the lamphouse. I used a gloss paint so that the handles, which are used frequently, could be kept clean easily. After these dried I moved the handles as close together as they would go, marked the distance between the handles, and painted the area with the same glossy white enamel. As the carbons burn in the lamp, the holders and the handles move toward each other, therefore the black gap between the handles and the white area indicate the amount of useable carbon left in each holder, as you can see in picture No. 3.

"If one so desires, it is a very easy matter to mark off the black area into units—such as inches, or ones corresponding to the lengths of carbon used in so many minutes, or for short or long reels."

Magnetic Units and Magnetic Pressure

A YOUNG student 'way up in a small village in the Rocky Mountains writes as follows:

"I have had interesting talks with the man who runs our small theatre out here and because of these talks I find I am becoming very much interested in projection. The fact that I was loaned some of the more recent BETTER THEATRES magazines, with your column in them, prompts me to write and expose my ignorance. My friend

Heritage From Saratoga

OF all they faced that day at Saratoga, Burgoyne's Redcoats remembered longest the withering accuracy of Morgan's Virginia riflemen. So it was at the Cowpens. Later, at New Orleans, the deadliness of Kentucky sharpshooters moved Napoleon, himself, to write that it had changed the face of war. And all down the years through the Argonne, America's opponents learned a healthy respect for the armies of a nation of riflemen.

That skill was no accident. The colonists shot for prizes. The pioneers practised for their lives. Generation after generation, Americans grew up with the rifle. "Shooting at a mark" has been a great foundation of American readiness for war.

This vitally important hobby flourishes today. On hundreds of ranges across the nation, shooters strive to attain the skill that groups shots in a smaller and smaller circle. At their matches, you'll see a predominant use of Bausch & Lomb products. Ray-Ban Shooting Glasses, the safe, scientific glare protection. Spotting Scopes, with which the shooter dopes wind conditions and "mirage".

And the marksmanship of American naval gunners . . . the most accurate in the world . . . is due in no small measure to the excellence of optical gunfire control equipment—range finders, binoculars, aerial height finders—produced by Bausch & Lomb.

went into a long dissertation about magnetic units and magnetic pressure. I listened but learned little. Will you be good enough to tell me what magnetic unit and magnetic pressure mean?"

Well, it's like this: In order that magnetic forces may be calculated it is necessary for us to assume certain units. The total number of lines of force in a magnetic field are referred to as magnetic flux. Such a field is designated by the Greek letter ϕ. One line of force is termed a Maxwell. The magnetic field may be quite extensive and the density of lines of force may be at variance in different parts of this field. Therefore it is very necessary to know the density of the field (number of lines of force per sq. centimeter) at the point in which our interest is centered. We therefore make use of a unit of magnetic field intensity, the name of which is "gauss." One gauss equals one line of force per square centimeter, and we use the letter H as a symbol to represent it.

Assuming the intensity of a field to be uniform throughout its area, the total number of lines of force must equal the total area of the field, multiplied by its intensity —$\phi = AH$; $\phi =$ total number of lines of force in a magnetic field, where $A =$ area of field in square centimeters, and $H =$ number of lines of force per square centimeter (gausses).

Now as to magnetic pressure: In an electrical circuit a current flow is the result of applying an electrical potential (voltage) to a circuit which has a definite resistance. Without this pressure we could not, of course, have current flow. Likewise in a magnetic circuit we must apply a magnetic pressure before we can procure a flow of magnetic lines of force (called flux). The unit of magnetic pressure is called the Gilbert, being designated by the letter F. It is known as the unit of magneto-motive force.

There, my friend, you have it all in a nut shell. If you are interested in motion picture sound engineering you should procure at least two books. One is my own Bluebook of Projection, published by the Quigley Publishing Company; and the other, Motion Picture Sound Engineering, put out by D. Van Nostrand Co., Inc. For your uses I would suggest the former if a choice is to be made since I believe what you read there will be a bit easier for a new student to master.

SHORT AND SWEET—

FRANK DUNDON, member of I. A. Local 446, Astoria, Ore., does not mince words, nor does he use any unnecessary ones in this communication:

"Dear Sir: I wish to add my feeble voice in protest against the so-called projectionists who persist in marking cues with grease pencil, crayon or scratches. If an organized campaign is ever started against this malicious practice, consider me a charter member."

Okay, brother—your name is on the list —if and when.

The Commonwealth Amusement Company has completed plans for construction of a new theatre at Knobnoster, Mo., two miles from the site of a recently announced Government aviation training project.

For over 20 years the director of advertising for the International Projector Corporation, P. A. McGuire, has long been a widely known figure in projection circles. Not all of his activities in the interests of "Better Projection" have been those of the printed page; his hand has been in many of the successful projects of projection union and engineering organizations. Yet, with it all, he has been in the habit of seizing a moment or two now and then for the relaxation of versification. The following has been printed outside the theatre field, and recited on the radio.

KELLY'S JOB

Kelly is dead, as you surely have read—
Be thankful for men who can fight—
But if you're a man who serves where he can,
Then Kelly will know you're all right.

Kelly of course was fond of life,
Even as you and I;
Kelly loved his baby and wife—
He did not want to die.

Kelly knew the chances he took,
But off to death he flew
With no regret or backward look—
He had a job to do.

"Just a job" to Kelly, that's all—
Men like Kelly will work—
Any job is "their country's call"—
They don't know how to shirk.

Kelly still lives, and the message he gives—
Is one to remember today:
"Just do your work" and if you don't shirk—
Then Kelly will know you're O.K.

He made a mistake and dropped 26, the extra one containing $10 in cash, along with his driver's license and credit cards. P.S.—His own wallet was not among those returned to the box office.

A new marquee, purchased "prior to the priorities," has been installed on the Strand, a 1,200-seat downtown subsequent-run house in Hamilton, Ohio, purchased a few months ago by Associated Theatres, Inc., of Detroit. The original marquee will be turned over to the Government for salvaging the metal and other critical materials.

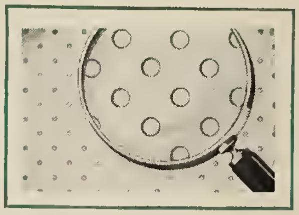
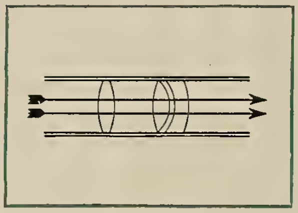
New RCA SNOWHITE SCREEN and RCA MAGICOTE LENS SERVICE give you whiter, more brilliant light with less amperage!

Carbons and power must be carefully conserved during this war period—and the RCA Manufacturing Co. offers you two splendid ways to conserve the light you need and give you better projection results.



Way number one, is the new Snowhite Screen that reflects brilliant white light without discrimination—as much as 85% of all the light projected. Controlled diffusion has been engineered right into the screen. And because the screens are scientifically perforated with an 8% open area, sound transmission is well above SMPE standards.



Second way to conserve light is with the RCA Magicote Lens Service. An extremely durable, transparent material developed by RCA is put on your projection lenses—with magic results. Now additional light, formerly lost by lens reflection, is directed onto the screen where it belongs. The result: greater picture brilliance and contrast.

Ask your RCA Theatre Supply Dealer for complete information about these two magic ways to conserve projection light. Or write RCA Manufacturing Co., Inc., Camden, N.J.
